HEADLINE: First lady again dons protector role for husband;
Hillary in battle mode,' associate says

BYLINE: From Wire Reports

DATELINE: WASHINGTON

BODY:

WASHINGTON - No one had ever gone through what Hillary Rodham Clinton went through last week - no one, of course, except Hillary Rodham Clinton.

Once again, Mrs. Clinton found herself at the center of the most public of storms while confronting the most intimate of allegations, that her husband had committed adultery.

... family home, the White House, with a 21-year-old intern.

Just as she responded in the case of Ms. Flowers, Mrs. Clinton never hesitated last week, associates of the first lady said. She rushed to her husband's defense - while his longtime aides hung ...

One associate said that she was "in battle mode."

Some allies expressed concern about Mrs. Clinton's role in managing the crisis. One former aide said sympathetically that her "first instincts are to put up the sandbags." But ...

... situations, he said, "it's better to be forthright."

Mandy Grunwald, a former media strategist for the Clintons, said that while Mrs. Clinton believes her husband was not involved with the intern, she knows that he was unfaithful in the past. But, she said, "I think she loves him the way ...

... saying Poor Hillary, poor Hillary,' " adding, "Hillary's just fine."

After six years as a national figure, Mrs. Clinton remains a puzzle to her critics and her supporters. She is an anti-war organizer who said she wanted to join the Marines. She is a ...

One former Clinton campaign aide said he worried about Mrs. Clinton stepping into the role of Mr. Clinton's protector - but worried for Mrs. Clinton's sake. "She's done it time and time again," the aide said. "She's dipping into the reservoir of credibility, but I hope it doesn't come up dry for her."

"You know, I wouldn't say that it's not hard," Mrs. Clinton calmly acknowledged to reporters on Wednesday as the story broke like a tidal wave over her, "because it is difficult and painful ...

HEADLINE: In latest presidential crisis, first lady again takes role as defender

BYLINE: James Bennet

BODY:

No one ever had gone through what Hillary Rodham Clinton went through last week -- no one, of course, except Hillary Rodham Clinton.

Once again, the first lady found herself at the center of the most public of storms while confronting the most intimate of ...

... within the family home, the White House, with a 21-year-old intern.

Just as she responded in the case of Flowers, Hillary Clinton never hesitated last week, associates of the first lady said. She rushed to her husband's defense -- while his longtime aides hung ...

... old Clinton loyalists, rallying them to his defense while bypassing the president's political strategists in the West Wing of the White House. Hillary Clinton consulted with the president's lawyers. Within the White House, she urged staff members to stay at their tasks.

One associate said that she was " ...

... Clintons expressed concern about the first lady's role in managing the crisis. One former aide who is very familiar with Hillary Clinton's approach to past scandals said sympathetically that her "first instincts are to put up the sandbags." But in such situations, he said, "it's better to be forthright."

Mandy Grunwald, a former media strategist for the Clintons, said that while Hillary Clinton believes her husband was not involved with the intern, she knows that he was unfaithful in the past. But, she said, "I think she loves him the way ...

... saying Poor Hillary, poor Hillary," " adding, "Hillary's just fine."

After six years as a national figure, Hillary Clinton remains a puzzle to her critics and her supporters, her public image shifting as swiftly as her hairstyle. She is an anti-war organizer who ...

... focus on public figures leaves them "hollowed out."

One former Clinton campaign aide said he worried about Hillary Clinton stepping into the role of Clinton's protector -- but worried for the first lady's sake.

"She's done it time and time again," this ...

... I hope it doesn't come up dry for her."

"You know, I wouldn't say that it's not hard," Hillary Clinton calmly told reporters Wednesday as the story broke, "because it is difficult and painful any time someone you care about, you love and you ...

... gosh, more than six years, and I have seen how these charges and accusations evaporate and disappear if they're ever given the light of day."

Hillary Clinton always has been aggressive in rejecting such accusations, at times even more so than their target, her husband. When tales of womanizing by ...

... time, throughout the rest of the campaign, that was sort of the tactic that she adopted."

After Flowers held a news conference to announce her affair with Clinton, Hillary Clinton told her husband it was time to tackle the issue head-on, former campaign aides said. But, at least ...

... Clinton interrupted, repeating that phrase twice more. "You're looking at two people who love each other."

Hillary Clinton added: "You know, I'm not sitting here as some little woman standing by my man like Tammy Wynette. ...

... don't vote for him."

Another scandal -- accusations that Clinton had dodged the draft -- broke just days later. Once again, Hillary Clinton helped rally dispirited aides, a role she would play again and again.

Ann Lewis, a longtime friend of the first lady who is the White House communications director, said Hillary Clinton played that role for her Thursday in a telephone conversation.

"We were joking that she and I have some experience now and have a perspective," ...
