One former White House official said that, in a way, Mrs. Clinton has become "numb" to the allegations against her husband. "You recognize that this is part of life in Washington, and you develop a mind-set where you put it in a box," the former aide said, describing Mrs. Clinton's practice of compartmentalizing controversies and going on with her work.

This latest episode has again raised questions about the nature of the Clintons' marriage, described by aides as alternately loving and affectionate and combative. Their marriage has been a subject of scrutiny and speculation ever since 1992 when Mrs. Clinton sat by her husband's side on "60 Minutes" as he answered questions about Gennifer Flowers and admitted having "caused pain"

"You know, I'm not sitting here as some little woman standing by my man like Tammy Wynette," Mrs. Clinton said in a performance many believe saved her husband's candidacy. "I'm sitting here because I love him and respect him and I honor what he's been through and what we've been through together, and you know, if that's not enough for people, then, heck, don't vote for him."

Mrs. Clinton, in essence, told the nation that she accepted him, infidelity and all, so the public should. "Her faith in him and her pride in him is very powerful," said Lewis.

Asked if there was any part of Mrs. Clinton that questioned whether her husband was telling the truth in his denial of a sexual relationship with Lewinsky, Lewis said: "I don't do psychology. ...

... tape from this morning."

Other friends say a combination of factors -- chief among them, her genuine love for her husband -- keep Mrs. Clinton at her husband's side.

"She's crazy about him and takes very seriously the commitment of marriage," said a longtime friend of Mrs. Clinton's. "For better and for worse, in good times and bad times, she's there for the duration."

The confidante said Mrs. Clinton's religious convictions as a Methodist also afford her much strength and consolation, as does her belief in her husband's political agenda.

"She believes he is a very ...

CORRECTION-DATE: January 27, 1998

CORRECTION:

CORRECTION: The Dallas Morning News reported in early editions today that independent counsel Kenneth Starr's staff had spoken with a Secret Service agent who was prepared to testify that he saw President Clinton and Monica Lewinsky in a compromising position. But the source for the story, a longtime Washington lawyer familiar with the case, later said the information provided for that report was inaccurate. The source is not affiliated with Starr's office. Correction published 1/28/98.

One associate said that she was " ...

... Clintons expressed concern about the first lady's role in managing the crisis. One former aide who is very familiar with Hillary Clinton's approach to past scandals said sympathetically that her "first instincts are to put up the sandbags." But in such situations, he said, "it's better to be forthright."

Mandy Grunwald, a former media strategist for the Clintons, said that while Hillary Clinton believes her husband was not involved with the intern, she knows that he was unfaithful in the past. But, she said, "I think she loves him the way ...
