HEADLINE: Whitewater jury hears first lady on videotape

BYLINE: BY JAMES JEFFERSON

DATELINE: LITTLE ROCK, Ark.

The Whitewater grand jury has heard plenty from other people about Hillary Rodham Clinton. Today, it hears from the first lady herself, via videotape.

Mrs. Clinton's testimony, taped over five hours Saturday at the White House, focuses on her work at the Rose Law ...

In her videotaped testimony, Mrs. Clinton declined to answer two questions that dealt with conversations she may have had with the president that were protected from disclosure by the marital privilege, David Kendall, Mrs. Clinton's lawyer, said today.

The grand jury went into closed session this morning. It normally would not meet this week but, with its dissolution scheduled for May 7, it made special provisions to hear Mrs. Clinton's videotaped testimony today.

It could also give Mrs. McDougal another chance to answer Whitewater prosecutors' questions. She refused last ...

... risks criminal contempt charges.

Mark Geragos, Mrs. McDougal's lawyer, said earlier that he expected the grand jury to view Mrs. Clinton's testimony before Whitewater prosecutor Kenneth Starr calls his client back before the panel.

"If they plan on calling Susan ...

... call the grand jury back and show them the videotape (first)," Geragos said, without elaborating.

The grand jury has been investigating the roles of Mrs. Clinton and her former law partner, Webster Hubbell, in a failing Arkansas savings and loan owned by Jim McDougal.

... jury.

The session at the White House residence, held in lieu of a formal grand jury appearance by Mrs. Clinton, marks the sixth time since June 1994 that the first lady has been questioned by prosecutors in the wide-ranging Whitewater inquiry.

Saturday's testimony was negotiated over several days after Whitewater Independent Counsel Kenneth Starr contacted Mrs. Clinton's private attorney, David Kendall, according to sources familiar with the investigation. The sources spoke only on condition of anonymity.

... Counsel Charles F.C. Ruff said in a statement.

Mr. Ruff said the questions generally focused on Mrs. Clinton's legal work in the mid-1980s for Madison Guaranty Savings and Loan, which was owned by her Whitewater business partners and eventually failed. At the time, the first lady worked for the Rose Law Firm in Arkansas.

He did not say whether Mrs. Clinton answered all questions posed to her. The session began about 1 p.m. Independent Counsel Kenneth Starr and other lawyers ...
