Dear Ms Thurman

Re: 3rd International HIV Prevention Works Symposium - Invitation to the Opening Plenary.
8th July 2000

We are delighted to hear from Paul Gaist that you have accepted our invitation to deliver a 15 minute address at the opening ceremony of the 3rd International HIV Prevention Works Symposium.

The Prevention Works Symposium provides a unique opportunity for in-depth and focused attention on prevention research, policy formulation and implementation. Previous symposia held in Vancouver and Geneva provided a useful platform to discuss best practices and model programmes in HIV prevention throughout the world.

The format for the 3rd Symposium is similar to that of the first 2 viz an opening and closing plenary with 30 concurrent sessions over one and a half days. The opening session is critical to setting the scene for the rest of the conference and is usually attended by key policy and decision makers, scientists, AIDS service organisations, donors and AIDS Programme staff.

As this is the first international AIDS conference taking place in a developing country, and in Africa, we want to ensure that the symposium profiles more strongly challenges facing developing countries in the context of HIV prevention while not losing sight of the international component of the meeting.

The opening plenary is scheduled to take place on July 8th from 8H30 – 10H30 and will include inputs from a number of representatives of co-sponsoring organisations, a few cultural items and the key note address.

Should you require any additional information, please do not hesitate to contact me further.

Dear Ms Thurman

INVITATION TO RECEIVE A MEMORANDUM FROM THE GLOBAL MARCH FOR ACCESS TO HIV/AIDS TREATMENT

On July 9th 2000, a few hours before the opening of the International AIDS Conference in Durban, people will be gathering from all around the world and from all over South Africa in a protest march to highlight the urgent need for access to affordable and effective treatments for people with HIV/AIDS – particularly in developing countries.

At the time of writing, this march has already been endorsed by 200 organisations from around the world, representing many millions of concerned people. A list of current endorsements as well as the official call for this march is attached for your information.

We would like to request that you receive the memorandum and to translate it into the public policies of the United States Government, and particularly stop pressurising poor countries on behalf of drug companies.

If you are available, the memorandum will be presented at the conclusion of the march at Kingsmead Stadium at 17h30 by the march leadership, which will include the Archbishop of Cape Town and the Vice-President of the Congress of South African Trade Unions.

Please could you urgently respond to this letter concerning your availability to receive the memorandum.

We look forward to hearing from you and hope that you will join us in this historic endeavour to improve, prolong and save the lives of millions of people living with HIV or affected by HIV all around the world.

Yours sincerely

The organisers of the Global March for HIV/AIDS Treatment Access are committed to a peaceful event. Success of this march depends on the people and organisations who support and endorse the global call for treatment access. We also critically support the International AIDS Conference despite its exclusionary cost structure and support given by the drug companies and wish that it will be successful. This will be the first international conference in a country where a significant part of the population have HIV/AIDS and where treatment is unaffordable. Any attempt to boycott the conference or to create a climate of fear and violence will only serve the drug companies who wish to deflect attention from profiteering.

Back to Top

of security: the townships and rural villages of KwaZulu/Natal have been rocked by sporadic political violence over recent years. But working in pairs also means that volunteers give each other moral support and share the emotional burden of care. Besides encouraging strong bonds with the team, the key to self-reliance and self-confidence, says Liz Towell, is to let things develop in their own time and to resist the pressure from funders to set inflexible timetables for the achievement of targets. "If you rush volunteers, the programme will fail," she says. "If you let things happen in Africa Time, they will actually work well."

Sinosizo's core funder, Caritas, has taken a close interest in the programme and spent time with staff in the field. "They see every area we work in; they see the terrain that people are walking up and down; they see the level of education our volunteers have; they have a chance to speak to whoever they want. So they leave with a nice clear vision, and as a result it has made life so much easier for us, it really has."

Record-keeping is an important activity at Sinosizo, and literate volunteers who wish are given a two-day training course. Liz Towell has a record card for every patient, which she enters onto a computerized database and which includes details of dependants; support systems, if any; whether there are children at risk of being orphaned; the patient's financial situation; who is looking after them as primary carer; as well as details of their medical condition. "At all times I can look and see exactly where the patients are, who's looking after them and how many patients each volunteer has, how many deaths they have experienced and how many orphaned children they have in their area," she says. "For me it's a monitoring tool, to make sure we aren't overloading anybody emotionally. It also helps to have the statistics so that you can see where the growth areas are and where you might need to recruit more volunteers. You wouldn't necessarily know if you didn't have a database."

Without constant commitment even good schemes will fail: South Africa's mentoring programme for counsellors

There are no records of the number of people involved in counselling in South Africa, nor of the drop-out rate, but there is a wealth of anecdotal evidence that counselling is an unstable profession. Experience shows that burnout and the decision to quit are often the result of lack of support once a trained counsellor gets out into the field. The HIV/AIDS Directorate in South Africa's Department of Health decided, therefore, to set up a mentoring programme.

Mentors, explained Thembela Kwitshana who devised the programme, are people with counselling skills and long experience themselves who look after counsellors working on the front line. They are different from supervisors in that their responsibility is the welfare of the counsellors, not the quality or style of their work. "Supervisors often take on this role too, but there can be a conflict of interests, so that a counsellor may feel that her job will be on the line if she admits to the supervisor that she's struggling or has done something wrong," said Ms Kwitshana. "However with a mentor the counsellor should have absolute trust and know she can discuss any of her professional problems without feeling she's threatening her position." In addition, the job of a mentor is to be an advocate for counsellors' rights at every level, from the government to the organizations and institutions for which they work.

The programme was conceived in 1995, and the initial plan was to train people put forward by the provincial administrations, who would then employ them to support the counsellors in all organizations throughout the province. It was piloted successfully in KwaZulu/Natal, where four mentors were trained and subsequently provided support to a total of 900 counsellors across the province who came together regularly in small groups at a time, at local hospitals nearest to their places of work. They would spend a few hours with the mentor, going over cases, discussing work-related issues and problems, and perhaps having an expert give a talk on some relevant topic.

In KwaZulu/Natal the mentors were paid by the province but were seconded to the local non-governmental AIDS Training and Information Centres (ATICs), which had good contacts in the field. It was an inexpensive programme because of using hospital premises, said Ms Kwitshana. But it collapsed very suddenly when the budget for paying the mentors ran out after a year and their contracts were terminated. It was a bitter blow to all who had invested so much hope and energy in the programme – and especially so since it was just about to be launched nationally.

"But I don't give up," commented Ms Kwitshana. "I try to understand why progress is slow, and see if there are ways round the obstacles." Today she is working on the idea of bypassing local government and training mentors to work directly for a whole range of organizations. The new programme will offer training to people who are already working as nurses or counsellors or are in some other relevant profession, and who are therefore already receiving a salary from the hospital or NGO for which they work. She is aware of the danger that they might not have time to devote to another task, or to be able to keep up the commitment. But this is the best way at present of continuing with a programme which has already proved its worth, and Ms Kwitshana says she will address problems if and when they arise.

The Ark: caring for South Africa's "shadow people"

The Ark is a barracks of a place standing among elegant but derelict colonial buildings in Durban's old dockland area. Once a hostel for stevedores, it is now a shelter for destitute people and home to a thousand men, women and children at any time. These are South Africa's "shadow people", says Alan, a resident who came to The Ark five years ago as an alcoholic who had lost his family, his friends and his job. "There are so many homeless people out there, it's unreal. But they're not seen. People walk past us and they don't care."

Two years ago The Ark opened a hospice for terminally ill AIDS patients, and today the 77 beds in seven small wards are mostly full. Care is given by residents of the Ark who have been rehabilitated and trained by Shirley Pretorius, who runs the shelter's general clinic. A pastor of the independent church that founded The Ark in the early 1980s, she believes no one is beyond having something to give to society. And when AIDS began to manifest itself more and more strongly among the people who came in for shelter, Pastor Shirley, a registered nurse with specialist psychiatric qualifications, looked no further than the corridors and crowded dormitories of the hostel for people who could help her look after them.

"In 1998 the hospitals were becoming overwhelmed with terminally ill patients. People with AIDS were being discharged; many were too sick to get home, often to distant rural villages; others were being rejected by their families, and they were ending up on the streets," Pastor Shirley explains. "We had a meeting at The Ark and we decided this was a 'gap' that needed filling. It goes against our Christian beliefs that anyone should have to die in the gutter without dignity. So it was given to me to set up the unit."

The Ark's clinic is now a registered primary health care unit. Pastor Shirley has six people, trained by herself, to help her run the clinic and the hospice. "My six core members move from bay to bay in shifts throughout the day and night. In each bay I have a monitor, who lives with the patients and is there to give help where it's needed. The staff check every morning that everyone's bathed and dressed and clean. And if someone has an accident or a bed needs to be changed inbetween times, the monitor comes and calls the staff members on duty."

As well as basic health and nursing care, the clinic staff are trained in counselling of people with HIV and AIDS. Many patients have been rejected by their families, so reconciliation is one of the major objectives of counselling. "When somebody reaches the point of dying, it gives them great peace of mind if they have been reconciled with their families," comments Pastor Shirley. "We have several people who are 'outside patients' – they just come in once or twice a week for medication and extra feeding. But they've gone home to their families when they thought they never would. Once the families have understood the problem, the fact that they're not going to catch AIDS from nursing, then they've wanted the patient home. And as a result they've been prepared to be trained. What usually happens is that the patient selects a family member who comes in, does two to three weeks' training, and then we send them home with the patient."

Recognizing that many of her staff have struggled mightily with their own personal problems, Pastor Shirley spends a great deal of time with them looking at stress and how to manage it. "I find the more you involve people in the decision-making that's relevant to them, the more they feel they've got control of what they're doing and their lives," she says. "If a problem arises in a sick bay – and we do get some very, very difficult patients – I'll get the monitors and the staff for that particular bay and say: 'Right, what are the problems? We're going to brainstorm. Write down everything you can think of to solve those problems, and we'll see if they're practical. And if they are, we'll do them'. I find that because they feel they're in control of the situation, the stress level goes down."

Besides involving everyone concerned in the decisions about how the AIDS units are run, Pastor Shirley frequently starts the day with a short training session on stress management. "We deal with anger, we deal with shame, we deal with guilt. And we deal with 'getting tired of trying to measure up'," she says. "This is a course I've put together, for people who are constantly feeling they've got to achieve someone else's standard because they don't feel good enough. We deal with all those types of things together."

The premise of this ministry is taken from Math: 19 v14
"Suffer the little children and forbid them not to come unto me, for such is the Kingdom of Heaven"

We give God all the glory for his mercies which are new every morning, for his amazing love in this work and humbly recognise our own shortcomings and weaknesses, as we lean heavily on Him each day.

Thank You, every donor, sponsor, intercessor and friend- we cannot do without each and every one of you
God Bless You All

Harvard AIDS Institute

The Harvard AIDS Institute is dedicated to conducting and catalyzing research to end the worldwide AIDS epidemic (<http://aids.harvard.edu>).

The Enhancing Care Initiative of the Harvard AIDS Institute, a multidisciplinary, multinational program, aims to enhance the care of people living with HIV/AIDS in resource-scarce countries. The program is made possible by a grant from the Merck Company Foundation (<http://eci.harvard.edu>).

The Health Resources and Services Administration's HIV/AIDS Bureau (HAB) provides leadership in HIV/AIDS care and training. Through the programs of the Ryan White CARE Act, HAB supports services to underserved individuals and communities disproportionately affected by HIV or AIDS in the United States (<http://hrsa.gov/hab>).

The National Minority AIDS Council (NMAC) is the premier organization in the U.S. dedicated to developing leadership within communities of color to address the challenge of HIV/AIDS (<http://nmac.org>).

Hey -- For the meeting with Senator Durban -- the person is Achmat Dangor - the CEO of the Nelson Mandela Children's Fund - he can be reached at 011 27 11 786 9140. His secretary's name is Winnie. He will be in DC on the 24 & 25 July with the whole day of the 24 free. Can we arrange something, please. thanks

Hi Caroline!

Could you please reserve 4 rooms at a hotel in Jo'burg (Sandy mentioned a great hotel - 'Sterne' something?) for the night of the 13th - just in case the Mandela event happens there.

And for site visits, Sandy is, I think, too tired to focus on it at the moment. She said she'd like to think about it so hopefully I'll be able to get back to you tomorrow. . . . she hasn't slowed down since she got back on Monday.

Thank you!

Subject: UP-DATE

I just spoke with Achmet -- Here is the deal -- Mandela now has two dates open for Sandy in July during the conference -- the mountain will have to go to Mohammed - wherever Mohammed might be. The dates are the morning of the 13 and morning of the 14th July. These dates will only be held for the next 24 hours - no longer. I don't think we will get another shot at it! But I will always try!

He also stressed that it is a great and unique honor to get invited to his home -- and it is youth day here in South Africa - think of all that we could present. We would pull together a great SHOW - babies, Madiba and Summers!! WOW!!

Let me know if you get this, please due to the fact that it can take forever to get things!!!

Take care!

Mr. Michael Iskowitz
Office of National AIDS Policy
Executive Office of the President
736 Jackson Place, N.W.
Washington, DC 20503

Dear Mr. Iskowitz:

I am in the process of finalizing all arrangements that the Office of AIDS Research has made for participation in the XIII International Conference on AIDS. Unfortunately, despite our greatest efforts, we have been unable to secure your room at the Royal Hotel for check in prior to Friday, July 7. Our contract with the hotel is for rooms from July 7 through July 15, and the hotel has made commitments to other groups and individuals that they must honor for dates outside of our contracted dates. We are trying to resolve this issue and hope to be successful. However, as a precaution, we have made alternate lodging arrangements on your behalf. We have reserved a single room in your name at the Durban Hilton Hotel from July 5 until July 7. On July 7 you will be able to access your room at the Royal Hotel. The Durban Hilton is located directly adjacent to the ICC and the Durban Exhibition Center. If you do not receive any further communications from me, please plan to check in at the Durban Hilton Hotel.

Information on the Durban Hilton Hotel is as follows:

Durban Hilton Hotel
12-14 Walnut Road
Durban 4001, SA
Telephone: +27-31-336-8100
Fax: +27-31-336-8200

We will do our best to assist you in the transition from the Durban Hilton to the Royal Hotel on July 7. Following the conference, you will be credited for any difference in the cost of your room. I leave to travel to Durban on Monday, July 3. Prior to that date you may contact me at 301-402-3357 or fax, 301-402-3360. Beginning Tuesday, July 4, I may be reached at the Durban Hilton Hotel at the numbers provided above. I will be monitoring my e-mail without interruption. Please send any pertinent information to me by e-mail, cspecially regarding changes to your arrival or departure, so we may adjust our arrangements. My e-mail address is lj1a@nih.gov. On July 5, I can be reached on my cell phone at 27-82-858-1162.

I am hopeful that a satisfactory resolution will be reached.

Sincerely,

Daily Updates

GENERAL INFO

- Daily updates will occur once daily July 10-13 and will focus on a major conference topic of that day.
  - Each update will be ten (10) minutes in length and audio-streamed live on the internet.
  - A host will guide guests providing the updates with questions regarding the topic.
  - Guests will be at a central location, and the update will be conducted over the phone on a conference line. Technical production staff will be on the line to pick up the audio for live streaming.
  - Guests are to be on location fifteen (15) minutes before scheduled air time and dialed into the conference bridge ten (10) minutes before air time. Please refer to the "Call Sheet" for location and exact times.

PREPARATION

Guest should be knowledgeable of topic and should keep in mind the time limitations of the daily update (10 minutes) when responding to questions. We want to focus on the latest news versus general information. Keep in mind that the audience base will consist mainly of people living with HIV/AIDS, activists, and community organizers. For identification purposes during the audiocast, guest should precede each response with his/her name.

For preparation, guest should be familiar with:

- Why is this topic important?
  - What relevance does it have to the HIV/AIDS epidemic?
  - What significance does it have for HIV/AIDS in the United States?
  - What is the current situation in regards to the topic?
  - What are new/upcoming developments, and who are involved?

Questions regarding your participation should be directed to:
