Dear Sandy,

In additional to my previous E-mail, here is some more information for you.

A consequence from our meeting with Ms. Anne Harrington from State Department, which we had couple of months ago at your office, is that there will be a meeting sponsored by ISTC (International Science and Technology Center) in Brussels on May 31-June 2, 1999. The agenda involves HCV, tuberculosis and HIV/AIDS. I co-chair HIV/AIDS session with Dr. R. Hoff from NIAID.

May I ask you to send Todd either to both my conference and Brussels or to one those events?

Yours,

Andrei

Dear Ms. Pelosi,

I am writing you in relation to the further prospects of Russia-US collaboration in science. For several years I work in the field of Russian science policy as a Deputy Chairman of the Committee on Education and Science, State Duma (Russian Parliament) and presently as a Chairman of the Committee on Natural Resources and President of the Union of Scientific Societies of Russia.

I think, it is difficult to overestimate the importance of Russia-US collaboration in science, in particular in such areas as defence conversion and HIV vaccine development. In 1997 the Russian Parliament approved a Russian HIV vaccine project. In the same year the Denver G8 made a decision on international collaboration in HIV vaccine development. Since then an essential work has been done to establish active Russia-US collaboration in this field. There was a number of meetings of Russian and American scientists as well as scientific exchanges. Last year Mrs Sandra Thurman, Director of the Office of National AIDS Policy, visited Russia to discuss prospects of collaboration with the Russian Ministry of Science and Technology. On the 2nd March this year I had an interesting meeting with Mrs. Anne Harrington, Senior Coordinator, Nonproliferation/Science Cooperation Programs, the Department of State, and Dr. Andrei Kozlov, Coordinator of Russian HIV Vaccine Project. During this meeting some ideas have been suggested to support Russian-US collaboration in the field of HIV vaccine development and other areas through the Democracy Support Act.

May I suggest to organize a meeting of American Congressmen and Russian MPs to discuss approaches to the most efficient collaboration in this and other areas? We are ready to organize the first meeting in Russia in any time convenient to you and your colleagues.

With best regards, yours sincerely,

Prof. Mikhail Glubokovsky, Chairman,
Committee on Natural Resources,

Senator John McCain
241 Russell Senate Office Building
Washington, DC 20510

Dear Senator McCain:

I am pleased to invite you to serve as the keynote speaker for a Local-Global Health Forum on the issue of Cross-Border TB, to be held in San Diego, California, at the Hanalei Hotel Conference Center on March 3, 2000. Ideally, we would like you to speak at the luncheon plenary of the conference, between 12:30 pm and 2 pm, but understanding your demanding schedule in early March, we could accommodate our schedule to your availability any time during that day.

This forum is dedicated to exploration of the important issue of cross-border TB in the broader context of the global TB threat, which kills nearly 3 million people a year. The forum is hosted by the Global Health Council, the world's largest alliance of health professionals and organizations dedicated to improving global health. Co-sponsors include the American Lung Association of San Diego and Imperial Counties, the American Public Health Association, the Association of Academic Health Centers, the Migrant Clinicians Network and the Global Health Group of the Californias.

Your position on increasing access to health care and your knowledge of the challenges associated with border health issues are widely recognized. This forum would provide an opportunity to demonstrate your leadership on an issue important to the people of southern California, and deserving attention of all Americans.

We anticipate several hundred health professionals and community leaders from both sides of the border to be present, and are working with electronic and print media in southern California to make sure that the message from the conference reaches a wide audience throughout the state.

I hope you will be able to accept our invitation, and look forward to working with you and your staff to give this issue the prominence it deserves.

Sincerely,

Dear Ms. Thurman:

It was a pleasure meeting you at the National Summit on Africa at the panel on AIDS in Africa. At that time, I spoke with you briefly about the United Methodist Church's to mobilize the faith community around the issue of AIDS in Africa. As you are well aware, our Bishop, Felton E. In response, the Committee on Africa of the Baltimore-Washington United Methodist Church would like to invite you to serve as a speaker for our workshop, entitled, AIDS in Africa: the Response of the Faith Community. The workshop is May 20, 2000 from 9:00-4:00 at Wesley Theological Seminary in Washington, DC.

The Office of National AIDS Policy has played and continues to play a critical role in bringing national attention to this issue. We would invite you to present the programs and policies of the Office of National AIDS policy and to examine the ways in which faith community can further its efforts. We that your first-hand experiences will provide a realistic picture of the magnitude of the crises affecting Africa.

We hope that this workshop will be the beginning of an effort to assist our sister United Methodist churches in our African conferences. Our goal and hope is to take the experiences learned in this workshop develop an outreach program for our Conference.

If you, or someone from your Office is able to participate, please either send me an e-mail at Frazier.Myra@epamail.epa.gov or reach me by telephone at 202-260-2784. Thank you and we look forward to working with you.

Dear Dr. Thurman:

The members of The Association of Minority Health Professions Schools (AMHPS) and the Minority Health Professions Foundation (MHPF) would like to extend an invitation for your continued participation in the National Minority HIV/AIDS Prevention Campaign (NMHPC/Campaign). As you know, thirteen, national HIV/AIDS Town Hall Meetings and Briefings have been scheduled to drive the importance of the NMHPC. The third of these thirteen meetings has been scheduled for Friday, March 17, and Saturday, March 18, 2000, at the Omni At CNN Center, 100 CNN Center, Atlanta, Georgia. Morehouse School of Medicine will be the host institution for this event.

Specifically, your participation is requested for the HIV/AIDS Briefing Session to be held Friday, March 17, from 1:00 pm to 5:30 pm. You will be asked to make a ten-minute presentation related to the White House Office of National AIDS Policy and the various programs being implemented to respond to the Congressional Black Caucus (CBC) Initiative to eliminate racial and ethnic disparities related to HIV/AIDS. After the presentations, the session will be open for questions, comments, and further discussions related to the status of the HIV/AIDS epidemic in African American and Hispanic communities in the metropolitan Atlanta area.

Other invited guests include: Congressman John Lewis, 5th Congressional District of Georgia, Congresswoman Cynthia McKinney, 4th Congressional District of Georgia; Dr. Nathan Stinson, Jr., Deputy Assistant Secretary for Minority Health, Office of Minority Health; June Horner, Director, Office of Minority Health, Health Resources and Services Administration; Dr. H. Westley Clark, Director, Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration; and Dr. Eric Goosby, Director, Office of HIV/AIDS Policy, Department of Health and Human Services. An audience of two hundred (200) is anticipated for this event.

We would also like to have the White House Office of National AIDS Policy exhibit during the HIV/AIDS Briefing. Exhibiting federal agencies are asked to provide official agency information, materials on potential funding opportunities, workshop announcements, and/or grant applications for their tabletop displays. In addition, a special exhibit session for FY'99, CBC funding recipients will be included as a part of this event. We would like to solicit your assistance in identifying community-based organizations that have received CBC dollars during the last fiscal year.

Also if your schedule permits, we would like to have you participate in the Open Forum of the MATHM. The Forum is scheduled from 1:00 pm until 4:00 pm on Saturday, March 18. During this time, the audience will be permitted to ask questions related to the HIV/AIDS crisis in their communities and throughout the nation. Your input and expertise as a respondent/panelist during this session would be greatly appreciated. Approximately 1,000 guests are expected to attend. A draft agenda for the HIV/AIDS Briefing is enclosed for your review.

As always, thank you for your support.

An Appreciation / An Announcement / And An Invitation

Dear Ms. Thurmond:

One year ago Identity began as a community-based initiative for health education, community action, and leadership training within the Latino community. Thanks to you and the support of many people like you, Identity has been very successful in achieving its initial, twin goals of educating members of the Latino community in Metropolitan Washington in preventing the spread of HIV/AIDS and in developing leadership skills and attitudes among a cadre of committed volunteers.

Identity has received contracts to provide desperately needed HIV prevention and health education services for the Latino community from the health departments in Montgomery and Prince George's Counties in Maryland, and in the District of Columbia. In addition, Identity is a partner with La Clinica del Pueblo in a program of HIV education and training under a multi-year grant from the federal Centers for Disease Control. These resources have enabled Identity to have two full-time and three part-time staff members directing their efforts and talents in pursuit of Identity's mission.

We sincerely appreciate your faith and trust in our start-up efforts. We hope you share our pride and excitement about Identity's success and the services we have been able to bring to the Latino community of Metropolitan Washington.

We also have a very exciting announcement to share with you about a new program that will challenge Identity in the next two years. Last summer we applied for a grant from The Gill Foundation to assist Identity in creating and implementing its program of HIV education and volunteer recruitment and development in several smaller cities across the United States. In essence, this national project applies Identity's successful education and empowerment program in six to eight locations where the community-based providers need some assistance in reaching their isolated Latino neighbors. The Gill Foundation has agreed to fund Identity's national project over a two-year period, and has already sent us the first installment. In addition, Identity has received strong support for this project from the National Council of La Raza and from The AIDS Action Council.

(202) 797-8815 fax

Recent public health statistics confirm the rising incidence of HIV infection in minority populations that we have observed for many years. Identity's national project targets the most vulnerable populations, many of whom are in transition and have remained isolated from mainstream care-givers and HIV education agencies.

The mission of Identity's national project has three objectives. First, the project will actually deliver HIV education to the Latino community in these cities. Second, the project will train the local community-based HIV/AIDS organizations in culturally competent methods of reaching out to provide services to the local Latino population. Finally, the project engages the local providers in sharing their experiences in order to produce a guide to be used by other, similar agencies and volunteers throughout the United States. The national project also provides our wonderful volunteers with an opportunity to travel, assist their counterparts in other cities, and to develop their own leadership skills and confidence. This is a huge undertaking for Identity. We are very excited and challenged by the opportunity, but we readily recognize we need help to achieve our goals.

We simply need to go back to our core supporters, like you, and ask for your suggestions, enthusiasm, and financial support for Identity's national project. From the very beginning of Identity we have endorsed and lived by the notion that everyone has something valuable to contribute to our mission. We want you to become a partner with Identity, its staff and volunteers, our friends at The Gill Foundation, La Raza and AIDS Action in this national effort.

The national project will require us to raise an additional $25,000. We are therefore asking you to renew your interest and commitment to Identity and our program by joining us in this worthwhile national challenge. Whether you can support Identity's national project with a contribution of $1,000 or more, or $100 or less, or something in between, we will be encouraged by and grateful for your support.

We are grateful to Honorable Ambassador Guillermo Gonzalez for providing the opportunity to celebrate and kick-off Identity's national project at a reception on Friday, March 17, 2000 at The Embassy of the Argentine Republic, 1600 New Hampshire Avenue (at Q Street, one block from Dupont Circle Metro) from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. where all of us at Identity and all of our partners in this project can meet and renew our commitment to this mission. Like the swallows that will return to San Juan Capistrano every St. Joseph's Day, we want all the members of Identity's family to join in this celebration.

We sincerely invite you to attend the March 17th reception and bring your contribution for Identity with you. Feel free to invite others who would want to be our partners in this effort. Thank you for your vital support for Identity.

Very truly yours,

Dear Sandy,

I hope you'll forgive the personal tone of this letter, but I worked for you at the Democratic National Convention in Chicago in 1996 handling backstage and podium passes. I'm good friends and a former colleague of Eli Segal, Janet Green and Zoe Garmendia. And, in the isn't this a small town category, I have recently started working with Grayson Fowler because Tobacco Free Kids is now one my client accounts. So, I feel like I know you, even though you might have a hard time picking me out of a crowd. My last name is a bit unusual so you may remember seeing it one of your many clipboard lists!

The purpose of this letter relates to another of my clients, the Lesbian and Gay Community Services Center (the Center) in New York City. As you know, it is the second oldest and second largest facility of its kind in the country. The Center is used by 5,000 people each week for cultural, educational and social activities, and it also provides mental health and social services, and substance abuse and prevention programs that have achieved national recognition.

Last time the Center's staff was at the White House, Marsha Scott suggested that members of the Center's senior staff touch base with you and update you on some of their programs and services. We would also like to discuss a proposal we have developed to implement a health services information and referral network that offers a comprehensive approach to the health risks and concerns of lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender (lgbt) individuals. On her most recent visit to the Center, Julian Potter encouraged us to discuss sources of funding for this proposal with you.

You may know the Center is one of many groups that have expressed disappointment in the way Healthy People 2010 largely ignores the health needs of (lgbt) people. We are hopeful that Secretary Shalala will do everything possible to more appropriately represent our communities in the final release of the report. The implementation of our information and referral project would be a significant step toward addressing the shortcomings of Healthy People 2010.

Dear Sandy:

Thank you again for calling to recommend Heather Kaplan for a position here at the Department. I was impressed with her background and I have forwarded her resume to several offices for consideration. I will encourage them to contact you should they wish to discuss Heather's work history and abilities.

As I mentioned, I was so pleased when I saw your message as I was planning to invite you to speak to the staff here at the Department of Education. Our office holds a weekly staff meeting for political appointees and other staff on Wednesdays at 5:00pm. We frequently host guests from other agencies, the White House, as well as from outside of government to speak to the group on a wide range of topics (past speakers have included: Mike Dukakis, Jane Alexander, Gene Sperling, Vernon Jordan, and Walter Dellinger). We would be honored if you would agree to join us.

As a former AIDS Education Director, I would be particularly pleased to hear your perspective and I know that the staff at the Department would benefit greatly from an update on the Administration's initiatives in this area.

I will follow up with your office in the coming days and I hope that we may find a date that is suitable on your schedule. In the meantime, thank you for all you do to support the President's agenda in this vital area.

Dear Sandy:

Thank you so much for the stimulating, informative and fast moving interview last Saturday. I appreciate your frankness and understanding of the issues and of course the concerns of people in the gay community. The complexities of AIDS does not seem to be diminishing but fortunately there are substantive efforts to understand the importance of committing to is treatment and control.

Your concern for the next generation and the cavalier attitude that many have since the death rate has reduced is an important message to continue to verbalize. My own sense is that the lesbian community came to the support of the gay men once but I do not think the same response would occur a second time. It is frustrating to know people are exposing themselves to death by irresponsible behavior.

Thank you once again for the interview and the work that you do.

Subject: 1997-05/16 Remarks by President re: Tuskegee

THE WHITE HOUSE

Office of the Press Secretary

For Immediate Release

May 16, 1997

REMARKS BY THE PRESIDENT
IN APOLOGY FOR STUDY DONE IN TUSKEGEE

The East Room

2:26 P.M. EDT

THE PRESIDENT: Ladies and gentlemen, on Sunday, Mr. Shaw will celebrate his 95th birthday. (Applause.) I would like to recognize the other survivors who are here today and their families: Mr. Charlie Pollard is here. (Applause.) Mr. Carter Howard. (Applause.) Mr. Fred Simmons. (Applause.) Mr. Simmons just took his first airplane ride, and he reckons he's about 110 years old, so I think it's time for him to take a chance or two. (Laughter.) I'm glad he did. And Mr. Frederick Moss, thank you, sir. (Applause.)

I would also like to ask three family representatives who are here -- Sam Doner is represented by his daughter, Gwendolyn Cox. Thank you, Gwendolyn. (Applause.) Ernest Hendon, who is watching in Tuskegee, is represented by his brother, North Hendon. Thank you, sir, for being here. (Applause.) And George Key is represented by his grandson, Christopher Monroe. Thank you, Chris. (Applause.)

I also acknowledge the families, community leaders, teachers and students watching today by satellite from Tuskegee. The White House is the people's house; we are glad to have all of you here today. I thank Dr. David Satcher for his role in this. I thank Congresswoman Waters and Congressman Hilliard, Congressman Stokes, the entire Congressional Black Caucus. Dr. Satcher, members of the Cabinet who are here, Secretary Herman, Secretary Slater, members of the Cabinet who are here, Secretary Herman, Secretary Slater. A great friend of freedom, Fred Gray, thank you for fighting this long battle all these long years.

The eight men who are survivors of the syphilis study at Tuskegee are a living link to a time not so very long ago that many Americans would prefer not to remember, but we dare not forget. It was a time when our nation failed to live up to its ideals, when our nation broke the trust with our people that is the very foundation of our democracy. It is not only in remembering that shameful past that we can make amends and repair our nation, but it is in remembering that past that we can build a better present and a better future. And without remembering it, we cannot make amends and we cannot go forward.

So today America does remember the hundreds of men used in research without their knowledge and consent. We remember them and their family members. Men who were poor and African American, without resources and with few alternatives, they believed they had found hope when they were offered free medical care by the United States Public Health Service. They were betrayed.

Medical people are supposed to help when we need care, but even once a cure was discovered, they were denied help, and they were lied to by their government. Our government is supposed to protect the rights of its citizens; their rights were trampled upon. Forty years, hundreds of men betrayed, along with their wives and children, along with the community in Macon County, Alabama, the City of Tuskegee, the fine university there, and the larger African American community.

The United States government did something that was wrong -- deeply, profoundly, morally wrong. It was an outrage to our commitment to integrity and equality for all our citizens.

To the survivors, to the wives and family members, the children and the grandchildren, I say what you know: No power on Earth can give you back the lives lost, the pain suffered, the years of internal torment and anguish. What was done cannot be undone. But we can end the silence. We can stop turning our heads away. We can look at you in the eye and finally say on behalf of the American people, what the United States government did was shameful, and I am sorry. (Applause.)

The American people are sorry -- for the loss, for the years of hurt. You did nothing wrong, but you were grievously wronged. I apologize and I am sorry that this apology has been so long in coming. (Applause.)

To Macon County, to Tuskegee, to the doctors who have been wrongly associated with the events there, you have our apology, as well. To our African American citizens, I am sorry that your federal government orchestrated a study so clearly racist. That can never be allowed to happen again. It is against everything our country stands for and what we must stand against is what it was.

So let us resolve to hold forever in our hearts and minds the memory of a time not long ago in Macon County, Alabama, so that we can always see how adrift we can become when the rights of any citizens are neglected, ignored and betrayed. And let us resolve here and now to move forward together.

The legacy of the study at Tuskegee has reached far and deep, in ways that hurt our progress and divide our nation. We cannot be one America when a whole segment of our nation has no trust in America. An apology is the first step, and we take it with a commitment to rebuild that broken trust. We can begin by making sure there is never again another episode like this one. We need to do more to ensure that medical research practices are sound and ethical, and that researchers work more closely with communities.

Today I would like to announce several steps to help us achieve these goals. First, we will help to build that lasting memorial at Tuskegee. (Applause.) The school founded by Booker T. Washington, distinguished by the renowned scientist George Washington Carver and so many others who advanced the health and well-being of African Americans and all Americans, is a fitting site. The Department of Health and Human Services will award a planning grant so the school can pursue establishing a center for bioethics in research and health care. The center will serve as a museum of the study and support efforts to address its legacy and strengthen bioethics training.

Second, we commit to increase our community involvement so that we may begin restoring lost trust. The study at Tuskegee served to sow distrust of our medical institutions, especially where research is involved. Since the study was halted, abuses have been checked by making informed consent and local review mandatory in federally-funded and mandated research.

Still, 25 years later, many medical studies have little African American participation and African American organ donors are few. This impedes efforts to conduct promising research and to provide the best health care to all our people, including African Americans. So today, I'm directing the Secretary of Health and Human Services, Donna Shalala, to issue a report in 180 days about how we can best involve communities, especially minority communities, in research and health care. You must -- every American group must be involved in medical research in ways that are positive. We have put the curse behind us; now we must bring the benefits to all Americans. (Applause.)

Third, we commit to strengthen researchers' training in bioethics. We are constantly working on making breakthroughs in protecting the health of our people and in vanquishing diseases. But all our people must be assured that their rights and dignity will be respected as new drugs, treatments and therapies are tested and used. So I am directing Secretary Shalala to work in partnership with higher education to prepare training materials for medical researchers. They will be available in a year. They will help researchers build on core ethical principles of respect for individuals, justice and informed consent, and advise them on how to use these principles effectively in diverse populations.

Fourth, to increase and broaden our understanding of ethical issues and clinical research, we commit to providing postgraduate fellowships to train bioethicists especially among African Americans and other minority groups. HHS will offer these fellowships beginning in September of 1998 to promising students enrolled in bioethics graduate programs.

And, finally, by executive order I am also today extending the charter of the National Bioethics Advisory Commission to October of 1999. The need for this commission is clear. We must be able to call on the thoughtful, collective wisdom of experts and community representatives to find ways to further strengthen our protections for subjects in human research.

We face a challenge in our time. Science and technology are rapidly changing our lives with the promise of making us much healthier, much more productive and more prosperous. But with these changes we must work harder to see that as we advance we don't leave behind our conscience. No ground is gained and, indeed, much is lost if we lose our moral bearings in the name of progress.

The people who ran the study at Tuskegee diminished the stature of man by abandoning the most basic ethical precepts. They forgot their pledge to heal and repair. They had the power to heal the survivors and all the others and they did not. Today, all we can do is apologize. But you have the power, for only you -- Mr. Shaw, the others who are here, the family members who are with us in Tuskegee -- only you have the power to forgive. Your presence here shows us that you have chosen a better path than your government did so long ago. You have not withheld the power to forgive. I hope today and tomorrow every American will remember your lesson and live by it.

Thank you, and God bless you. (Applause.)

SUBJECT: Tuskegee Syphilis Experiments

Background. The study, sponsored by the Public Health Service, began in 1932 on 600 African-American males (400 who had syphilis and a control group of 200 who did not). Although it had its roots in a public health initiative, the study has since been discredited as a classic case of medical research gone wrong. Most objectionable, the men in the study went untreated well after penicillin had been discovered as a cure for syphilis. In 1972, the study was suspended after a New York Times exposé. Soon thereafter, HEW began to provide comprehensive medical care to the remaining study participants and certain members of their families. In 1973, HEW settled a class action lawsuit for $9 million.

Several matters have brought renewed interest to this issue. The Human Radiation Experiments investigation that led to your October 3, 1995, apology to victims of those experiments has given rise to a call for "equal treatment" in the Tuskegee experiments. Two members of the Congressional Black Caucus, Reps. Louis Stokes and Maxine Waters, wrote asking you to make this apology in conjunction with Black History Month (WH staff did not think that would have been appropriate timing). And, last month, HBO aired a movie about the experiments that provoked renewed media attention. You may recall that it surfaced during the nomination battle over Dr. Foster for Surgeon General.

Apology. The African-American community strongly supports an apology. Secretary Shalala, John Podesta, Ann Lewis, Maria Echaveste, Ben Johnson, Jack Gibbons, Bob Nash, Tracey Thornton, Kitty Higgins, among others, feel that it is appropriate and timely to apologize to participants in the experiments. There are eight survivors, 23 wives or widows of survivors, 15 children and two grandchildren.

Form of apology. If you approve offering an apology, two options are presented: 1) a written statement released under your name from the White House; or 2) a small, public event at the White House where you would make a statement and several survivors of the experiments would be present along with others as appropriate. There is a general inclination among WH staff that it would be better if you were personally involved in the apology. Ann Lewis, Maria Echaveste, Bob Nash, Tracey Thornton, Ben Johnson, among others, support this option. John Podesta defers to Ann Lewis and Rahm has no opinion.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRESIDENT

ISSUE:

Whether to issue a Presidential message on the Government's responsibility for the Tuskegee Syphilis Study to the surviving participants, their families, and the African American community.

BACKGROUND:

In 1932, Federal, State, and local officials, working with the Tuskegee Institute, began a long-term study of untreated syphilis in African-American males in Macon County, Alabama. The Study was established after surveys revealed a high prevalence of syphilis, particularly in rural areas of the South, and a high rate of untreated syphilis in African-American men. The Study was intended to justify a syphilis treatment program for African-Americans. Instead, it has become known as a classic case of medical research gone wrong.

That is because researchers enrolled about 400 African-American men with non-infectious syphilis and about 200 men without syphilis (the latter group for control purposes) in the Study and told them they were being treated for "bad blood" -- a local term used to describe a number of conditions, including syphilis. Men with infectious, early stage syphilis were treated and excluded from the Study; however, those with late term, non-infectious syphilis received no treatment and none was available at the time the Study was begun. Researchers actually were observing the natural progression of untreated syphilis in their bodies.

The project was scheduled to last for only six months, but it continued for 40 years -- even after penicillin became recognized as the standard of care for treating syphilis by the late 1940s. The Study was not ended until 1972, when a front-page story in the New York Times led to a public outcry and the government convened an advisory panel that declared the Study to be "ethically unjustified."

The Federal Government has tried to mitigate the damage since the study was ended. In 1973, HEW Secretary Weinberger directed the Public Health Service to provide Study participants and certain members of their families with comprehensive medical care for the rest of their lives. Also, in 1973, a class-action lawsuit was settled for $9 million. And, beginning in 1974, regulations for review and approval of experiments on human subjects were instituted to ensure that studies such as Tuskegee do not happen again:

- Since 1974, we have better instituted in research on human beings the practice of obtaining their voluntary informed consent.
- Also since 1974, all Federal studies using human subjects must be reviewed by Institutional Review Boards (IRBs) that are diverse and sensitive to community attitudes.
- In 1995, you created a National Bioethics Advisory Commission to review regulations and procedures, and to provide all possible safeguards for research volunteers.
- A 1996 meeting sponsored by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention and HHS led to the establishment of the Tuskegee Syphilis Study Legacy Committee, which studied ways to preserve the memory of the Study and to transform the legacy into renewed efforts to bridge the gap between the health conditions of African-Americans and white Americans.

Even so, the Federal Government has never adequately expressed its responsibility for failure to inform Study participants and their families when treatment became available. Many commentators believe that the government's failure to make such an acknowledgment has helped to perpetuate feelings of widespread distrust among African-Americans toward government health-related initiatives. For example, African-Americans are far less likely than any other ethnic group to receive influenza vaccines (33.1 percent in 1993, compared to 50.4 percent for the total population). Similar low participation rates among African-Americans also are evident in research trials, organ donation, accessing simple medical care, and accepting advice from public health officials regarding the prevention of diseases such as AIDS. Even though there are many complex reasons for these low participation rates, the Tuskegee Study is cited as one significant contributing reason.

CURRENT ACTIVITIES INVOLVING THE TUSKEGEE STUDY

The Tuskegee Syphilis Study Legacy Committee has urged you to make an apology, and has issued a number of recommendations that would help assure the nation that research like the Tuskegee Study would not be duplicated.

Page 3 - The President

You received last week a letter from two members of the Congressional Black Caucus -- Representative Louis Stokes, the Chairman of the Congressional Black Caucus Health Braintrust, and Representative Maxine Waters, Chairwoman of the Caucus -- requesting that you issue a formal apology on behalf of the United States for the Tuskegee Study, similar to the apology you issued to the so-called "atomic veterans." They note that Black History Month would be "a most appropriate time" to issue such a statement.

Home Box Office has produced a movie about the Tuskegee Study, entitled "Miss Evers' Boys," that is expected to receive substantial attention throughout the month of February, which is National African American History Month. Between February 11 and February 18, public screenings of "Miss Evers Boys" will be held in seven cities across the country -- Washington, New York, New Orleans, Los Angeles, Atlanta, Stamford, and San Francisco. The screenings and ensuing panel discussions will be attended by prominent African-American officials, including United Negro College Fund President William H. Gray III, Charles Drew University President Reed Tuckson, Former HHS Secretary Louis Sullivan, Emory School of Public Health Dean James Curran, Atlanta Journal-Constitution Editor Cynthia Tucker, "Our Common Welfare" Director Fay Brown-Sperling, and CDC Director David Satcher M.D. After the public screenings have been held, HBO will air the movie nationally on February 22.

There are eight participants of the Tuskegee Study still surviving, as well as 23 wives or widows, 15 children and two grandchildren.

RECOMMENDATIONS:

I recommend that you issue a statement similar to the one you made to atomic veterans -- one made on behalf of leaders from another time and era. You could either issue this statement as a written statement, or preferably, you could deliver it in person at an event coordinated to address participants and their families as well as African-American leaders.

In doing so, you would send a positive message that could help shift perceptions within the African-American community about medical research. You could add to your statement an announcement of additional steps you will take to further protect all human participants in research studies. Those steps would be as follows:

- Have HHS work with academic institutions and schools of public health to expand bioethics training, paying particular attention to minority perspectives and the needs of minority communities.

Page 4 - The President

- Have HHS offer fellowships to postgraduate students for training in bioethics, with the goal of creating a national cadre of individuals -- especially minorities -- who would serve as experts in the conduct of research involving human subjects and as future leaders in the field of bioethics.
- Extend for two years the charter of the National Bioethics Advisory Commission, which you created, and ask it to explore ways in which communities -- particularly minority communities -- can become more involved in the development, implementation, and analysis of medical research. (There are other reasons currently under consideration for extending the Charter for two additional years).

DECISIONS

- Issue a Presidential message on the Government's responsibility for the Tuskegee Study to the surviving participants, their families, and the African American community.

- Additional steps could be taken with academic insitutions and schools of public health, researchers, and the National Bioethics Advisory Commission to further protect human participants in research studies:

- HHS would expand bioethics training that are diverse and sensitive to minority communities.
- HHS would offer fellowships to postgraduate students, including minorities, who would serve as experts in research involving human subjects and in the field of bioethics.
- Extend the charter of the National Bioethics Advisory Commission for two more years and ask it to explore ways to better involve minorities in the mechanics of medical rsearch.

Pollard, et al. v. USA, et al., CV-4126-N
United States District Court for the Middle District of Alabama

Dear President Clinton:

I represent 623 African American men from Macon County, Alabama in what has become known as the Tuskegee Syphilis Study. They were solicited by United States Public Health Service officials and employees to participate in a health program financed by the United States government in 1932. The undisclosed medical purpose was to observe the effects of untreated syphilis on African American males. Poor, uneducated, misinformed African American men were persuaded to take part in a health program by officials who told them they were beneficiaries of a new health program wherein their illnesses would be cured and they would receive free medical examinations, free transportation to some appointments, free meals, and burial insurance.

Forty years after the initiation of the experiment, national news media exposed the Study. The men heard, for the first time, of the Study and that they had syphilis. They were used as human guinea pigs in a cruel, inhumane experiment conducted by the Public Health Service with the sanction of the United States government. Some died and all suffered as a result of penicillin not being administered. In 1973, I filed a lawsuit on behalf of these participants and the heirs of deceased participants in the United States District Court for the Middle District of Alabama seeking redress for injuries done to them. In 1974, the case was settled with the government paying certain designated amounts to the living participants and certain designated amounts to the heirs of deceased participants. Under the settlement, the United States was ordered to continue a health care program and death benefits for these participants.

Hon. William Jefferson Clinton

The United States government's active involvement in this tragedy is well documented. Defendants in the case included the United States of America; Casper Weinberger as Secretary of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, and others. The United States knew that the unwitting participants had syphilis and failed to treat them; the Public Health Service failed to fully disclose to the men that they had syphilis and failed to treat them, while misrepresenting to them that they were being properly treated for whatever diseases they had. Perhaps you are not aware, Mr. President, that over the years, the United States government has never expressed regret or remorse, sympathy, sorrow, or other sentiments to these citizens and the affected families for the government's role in the Study. You now have the opportunity to act.

As President, you have shown courage and commitment to right wrongs, making hard decisions such as decisive action with respect to welfare reform; you have successfully tackled difficult issues such as the process of negotiating peace in Middle East territories, and you recently awarded to African American servicemen the Medal of Honor for courageous acts in war dating to World War II. We believe you will do what is fitting, necessary, proper and appropriate in remedying this wrong and acknowledge the participants' contribution to the nation. I am informed that several persons and organizations have requested that an apology be made to the participants. We are further informed that you have discussed this matter or related matters with the Hon. Donna Shalala, Secretary of Health and Human Services. Proper action at this time will likely result in African Americans' viewing with less skepticism and apprehension requests to participate in legitimate medical programs which seek cures for illnesses and diseases. Aggressive action and appropriate assurances from your office could generate dialogue and improve confidence in various clinical trials that will result in an increase in minority participation in programs, tests and studies designed to bring an end to dreaded diseases such as cancer.

There are eight living participants, the youngest of whom is 87 years old. In view of the fact that these men and their heirs have suffered substantially, the remaining participants and I would consider it an honor to meet with you to discuss an appropriate manner to resolve the issue. On behalf of these men, we are ready, willing and able to share their views with you or your representatives at your convenience.

Incidentally, I appreciate the private audience with you at the conclusion of your rally at Birmingham-Southern in Birmingham, Alabama on Thursday, October 25, 1996. At that time I presented to you a copy of Bus Ride To Justice. Chapter 17 contains a true and accurate account of my clients' participation in the Tuskegee Syphilis Study.

Hon. William Jefferson Clinton

We look forward to hearing from you at your convenience with reference to this matter and pray that you continue to rapidly recover from your recent injury and resultant surgery.

Very truly yours,

Apology Due

Clinton Should Come To Tuskegee

FOR 40 YEARS the U.S. government conducted the now infamous Tuskegee syphilis experiment, leaving poor, semi-literate black males in rural Macon County to suffer the ravages of the disease untreated.

The time for the government to formally apologize to the surviving victims and their families is long past.

The U.S. Public Health Service began the so-called experiment in 1932. Treatment was withheld from 399 men with syphilis so the researchers could study how the disease spreads and kills. The men weren't told they had the disease nor were they given penicillin after it became the standard treatment in 1947.

It was not until 1972 that the study came to light. The government settled a lawsuit filed in 1974, paying $10 million to 6,000 victims of the experiment and their heirs.

IT IS NOT the first time the government has secretly used its own citizens as unknowing guinea pigs. President Clinton in 1995 issued an apology to the victims of secret Cold War-era radiation experiments.

Next week the remaining survivors of the experiment will gather at the Shiloh Baptist Church in Notasulga, one of the sites where the men gathered for the study, to demand a formal apology.

Despite our flaws, this is a great country. It remains great, though, only by acknowledging when it is wrong and by rectifying its mistakes.

An official apology should be forthcoming quickly. Tuskegee would be a good place for President Clinton to deliver it.

IN TUSKEGEE SYPHILIS STUDY?

Remaining participants in the Tuskegee Syphilis Study, the 40-year experiment financed by the United States government and conducted by the United States Public Health Service to observe the effects of untreated syphilis in African Americans, will seek an audience with the President and an apology from the government at a news conference on April 8, 1997, at 10 o'clock A.M., at Shiloh Baptist Church, Notasulga, Alabama, one of the collection sites for the participants in the Study.

Accompanied by Attorney Fred D. Gray, legal counsel for the participants in the Study, the men will also express their views and concerns in relation to injustices depicted in the recently aired HBO film, "Miss Evers Boys". "This movie is in no way representative of the actual events which I endured for 40 years", said Charlie Pollard, lead plaintiff in the lawsuit against the United States government and other entities for wrongful acts conducted during the Study.

"To allow men to suffer and die in the name of science is insidious and vile", said Gray.

"HBO's depiction of the men is equally disheartening. It is an intolerable distortion of history.

ronically, Miss Evans Boys was initially aired during Black History Month on February 22, President Lincoln's birthday. This movie has been shown repeatedly through the powerful means of television, stereotyping Black images even further before a mass audience. Not only is it a cruel affront to the survivors of the Tuskegee Syphilis Study and the descendants of all the men, but equally an affront to the entire African American community", Gray further stated.

"There is a reason that African Americans and other minorities do not participate in large numbers in test programs for cures of diseases and illnesses." Gray commented further, "aside from their frequently simply not being considered, many remember all too well the Tuskegee Syphilis Study and the inhuman treatment of the 600 plus African American men."

Dear Ms. Thurman:

I am writing to request an informal meeting between you and four members of the HIV/AIDS Program staff of the Food and Drug Administration (FDA). This staff is located within the FDA Office of Special Health Issues and serves as the primary office for community and inter-governmental issues related to HIV/AIDS. Our HIV/AIDS Program serves as the channel through which patient issues and viewpoints are brought to the attention of FDA medical and regulatory staff, and works with advocacy groups and individuals involved with HIV/AIDS, including issues related to special populations.

The staff of the Office of Special Health Issues has traditionally had a good working relationship with the Office of National AIDS Policy. I believe that an informal meeting with you and your staff would be beneficial to both of our offices. It would provide an opportunity to learn more about our respective goals, and discuss ways of working cooperatively to best serve the HIV/AIDS community.

I realize that this is a particularly busy period for you. Please let me know when you might have time on your calendar in the next few weeks that would be convenient for us and our staffs to meet. Dear Ms. Thurman:

I am writing at the suggestions of Daniel Montoya in your office as a means of bringing an important new policy initiative on access to HIV treatments in developing countries to your attention.

Since the beginning of 1996, we have been in close discussions with UNAIDS about a new model for facilitating access which we believe could mark a significant step forward on this seemingly intractable problem. This model has been adopted by UNAIDS as an official project and which has now been broadened to include participation from as many as eight other pharmaceutical and diagnostic manufacturers.

UNAIDS is currently planning a meeting and press conference to launch this initiative the week of June 16th. In anticipation of this, we had been liaising with the White House AIDS Office to arrange an advance briefing prior to your appointment, and in fact a scheduled meeting was superseded by the announcement of your appointment.

We and UNAIDS feel it is important that the White House understand and feel comfortable with the initiative before it becomes public, and it is with that aim that I am writing to see if we can find a convenient time to discuss it before mid-June.

If this would be possible, please let me know and we will organize the details with Daniel.

Sincerely,

Peter F. Young

Dear Sandra:

I don't know if you would remember me or not – I was the Director of Public Policy at AIDS Project Los Angeles after Phill Wilson and we met a few times. After I moved to work for Manning Selvage & Lee, we met again when you filmed a video for Roche.

I am writing to invite you as a speaker for another client to be held in January in New York. The event is an educational symposium on genotyping and will be hosted by Visible Genetics (VGI) for health care writers and other thought leaders.

What follows is an outline of the day as we see it now. I would be most grateful if you could review it and then advise at your earliest convenience whether or not you would be willing to be a speaker at the event.

You can reach me at 202-261-2861.

Best regards,

Mark Senak

Sr Vice President

National Director of Health Policy

SANDRA THURMAN SPEAKER REQUEST

The educational symposium is on genotyping and will be hosted by Visible Genetics (VGI) for health care writers and other thought leaders.

Here are the particulars:

Tentative Date: Tuesday, Jan. 9, 2000, 8am-12noon

The venue: We are still in the process of confirming location in New York.

Speakers:

The overall tone of your remarks should focus on the value of using HIV resistance testing in order to provide more effective anti-retroviral drug treatment regimens for patients with AIDS. It would be beneficial if you addressed both phenotyping and genotyping.

A proposed list of speakers and the tentative conference agenda is attached to show you who is speaking and on what topic. We are still in the process of confirming speakers.

Expenses:

VGI will cover your transportation and hotel expenses, and a standard honorarium.

Media:

As a NY-based event, we are focusing on inviting reporters from NY, NJ, CT, Phila. and perhaps Boston. We plan to invite health care media (including writers at publications that cover AIDS, as well as medical equipment publications, healthcare trades, healthcare business trades etc.), the medical and business writers at major national newspapers (e.g. NY Times, Wall Street Journal) and magazines, other New York Metro-area (NY, NJ, CT) print and broadcast media, and the major business and financial writers (including wire services, and the health care broadcast media (CBS Healthcare, etc.)

Additionally, we are planning a teleconference option for interested media who cannot attend. Our goal here will be to include other non-NY-based healthcare, genetic and biotech pubs, and city dailies. Presentations will be available on the VGI Web site following the symposium. We also are looking into the feasibility of having a live audio Web cast of symposium on VGI's Web site. See proposed agenda, below.

Hi Cheryl:

Attached is a copy of the letter that we sent from Dr. Healy to President Clinton requesting a meeting to brief him on Red Cross activities before he leaves office. I've also spoken directly to Steve Ricchetti, who thought this was a good idea, and indicated that he would speak to the President. Any support that Director Thurman could lend would be most appreciated.

As I mentioned during our conversation, the President is the Honorary Chairman of the Red Cross Board of Governors. Six members of his cabinet and the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs also serve on our board. Clearly, we have many mutual interests. The American Red Cross provides the President of the United States with a neutral platform to address humanitarian needs, such as the LIFE initiative that we discussed with Sandy. Appreciate your help with this!

Dear President Clinton:

I would like the opportunity to meet with you to share our vision for what the American Red Cross can and should be in its third century of service.

As you know as honorary chair of the American Red Cross, with the efforts of the cabinet and the Joint Chiefs of Staff who serve on the Red Cross Board of Governors, we have accomplished much. The American Red Cross is an essential American institution. We are stewards of the American blood supply, and provide congressionally chartered disaster relief on a mandated basis and international humanitarian assistance.

We have many mutual interests including top public policy issues that relate to our mission and services.

Jan Lane, Vice President for Government Relations, is available to work with your staff to arrange a mutually convenient time should such a meeting be possible.

Sincerely,

We'll be there.

Dear Friends:

I was pleased to learn that Cable Positive is honoring Marc Nathanson, Vice Chairman of Charter Communications, Chairman of the Broadcasting Board of Governors, and a true leader in the battle against HIV/AIDS.

Working with organizations like Cable Positive, and through their personal actions, Marc, and his wife, Jane, demonstrate the opportunity each of us has to work together in our shared struggle against HIV/AIDS. More than just a health issue – Marc approaches it as a human rights issue, a development issue, a trade and investment issue, and a security and civil society issue. I encourage you to follow his example and unite your resources to empower those affected by HIV/AIDS. It is my hope that each of you will continue to support Marc and Jane and those like them who put spirit into action.

I applaud Cable Positive for honoring Marc Nathanson. It is with pleasure, I send my greetings and best wishes to him and all in attendance at your tribute dinner.

Sincerely,

Sandra Thurman

Dear Dr Thurman

You may recall a brief interaction at the Ambassador's reception during the Durban conference. I am the International Health Programme Consultant for The Salvation Army and you may remember the brief meeting because I was in Salvation Army uniform. You welcomed some future interaction and so because I will be in Washington from the 24th – 28th September, along with two other team members, I write to enquire into the possibility of a brief discussion.

It may be of interest for us to reflect on the development of capacity for care, support and behaviour change in local communities in multiple countries.

In our view and experience, there is enormous potential for South-North mutual learning and application.

We have discussed this theme to some extent with Dr Joseph O'Neill and his colleagues, and we will find it helpful to extend this reflection.

I look forward to your advice.

Yours sincerely
