DATE: April 14, 1994
LOCATION: Roosevelt Room
TIME: 10:30 am
FROM: Alexis Herman
Jose Cerda

I. PURPOSE

Representatives from the Law Enforcement Steering Committee (LESC) will meet with you to discuss their views on the crime bill and other law enforcement issues. Afterwards, they will join you at the subsequent rally on the South Lawn, where more than 200 of their members will be in attendance.

II. BACKGROUND

Founded in 1985, the Law Enforcement Steering Committee (LESC) is a nonpartisan coalition consisting of the Federal Law Enforcement Officers Association (FLEOA), the Fraternal Order of Police (FOP), the International Brotherhood of Police Officers (IBPO), the Major City Chiefs (MCC), the National Association of Police Organizations (NAPO), the National Organization of Black Law Enforcement Executives (NOBLE), the National Sheriffs' Association (NSA), the National Troopers Coalition (NTC), the Police Executive Research Forum (PERF), and the Police Foundation. These groups represent over 500,000 law enforcement officers nationwide. The only major law enforcement group that is not part of the LESC is the International Association of Chiefs of Police, which resigned two years ago in a dispute over the LESC's gun policies.

The LESC will present you with a "Blue Print for Anti-Crime Legislation" that largely mirrors your own anti-crime plan. The "Blueprint" recognize that -- while the crime bill is not a panacea for the crime problem -- it is a solid beginning toward a comprehensive approach to making our nation's streets safe and secure. The LESC feels that the following items are key elements to any package of crime legislation:

- Funding for 100,000 additional police officers
- Community policing
- Funding for more prisons, jails and boot camps

- Protecting our youth
- Assault weapons prohibition
- National Commission to Support Law Enforcement
- Research on issues affecting the cop on the street

At the conclusion of the meeting, the LESC will pledge to work with you and members of the Administration in pressing for prompt enactment by the Congress of a bill crime bill with the aforementioned provisions.

BLUEPRINT FOR ANTI-CRIME LEGISLATION

Presented to
PRESIDENT BILL CLINTON
April 14, 1994

Founded in 1985, the Law Enforcement Steering Committee (LESC) is a nonpartisan coalition consisting of the Federal Law Enforcement Officers Association, the Fraternal Order of Police, the International Brotherhood of Police Officers, the Major City Chiefs, the National Association of Police Organizations, the National Organization of Black Law Enforcement Executives, the National Sheriffs' Association, the National Troopers Coalition, the Police Executive Research Forum, and the Police Foundation. These groups represent over 500,000 law enforcement officers nationwide. The LESC is a model of unprecedented cooperative effort between law enforcement research organizations, police management, and labor, dedicated to the advancement of legislation and policies that will ensure the safety and security of our country's people.

Representing Policing in America

Over the past eight years, LESC members have worked diligently on law enforcement issues of mutual concern and have been able to articulate to the White House, the Congress, and the American people our ideas for achieving a safer society. We have expressed our concerns over the increase in violence and crime, the easy access criminals have to weapons, and the need for more support for professional law enforcement.

For too many years, crime control--and legislative means of achieving it--has been undermined by partisan politics and pressure from special interest groups. In the meantime, violence has exploded in our communities, making peace officers' jobs increasingly dangerous and frustrating.

While we fully recognize that anti-crime initiatives in the legislation pending before Congress do not present a panacea for crime, they are a solid beginning toward a comprehensive approach to making our nation's streets safe and secure. The members of the LESC stand firmly behind many major provisions of the legislation, including those that would enhance police presence in the community and that would confine violent criminals until they are no longer a danger to our communities.

Members of the LESC met with congressional and Administration leaders in 1992 in an effort to forge a compromise and enact a comprehensive crime bill. We were very disappointed when that effort failed, and are committed to working with policy makers to ensure this crime bill does not suffer the same fate. This year, the case for strong, effective crime legislation is so compelling that no such effort should be needed. The nation's police and the citizens they are sworn to protect have no doubt that crime is threatening the quality of life in our communities. Nonetheless, the LESC offers its assistance in securing sensible, effective legislation to address what has become the public's number one concern. The LESC feels that the following items are key elements to any package of crime legislation:

● Funding for 100,000 additional police officers -- There is a broad consensus among the law enforcement community that additional personnel dedicated to community policing will assist some agencies in reducing crime, and is essential in our efforts towards working with the community to take back our streets.

INTRODUCTORY REMARKS
LAW ENFORCEMENT STEERING COMMITTEE MEETING
APRIL 14, 1994

- Thanks for joining me here today to talk about -- and push for -- a tough, smart crime bill. The Steering Committee has worked together for years to get a good crime bill passed, and my Administration has been the beneficiary of all the groundwork you've already done on the crime bill. Thanks for your work -- then and now.
- Though I've had the chance to visit with many of you separately, this is the first-time that I meet with the entire Steering Committee. I hope we can continue this dialogue -- perhaps after the crime bill passes -- and work together to make sure that we spend the $23 billion available in the crime bill as wisely -- and as effectively -- as possible.
- The LESC seems like a good forum for that type of exchange. Despite your members' differences -- you've put politics aside and come together for the good of all. I respect that. You've got police chiefs and rank-and-file officers; local police and federal law enforcement; and sheriffs and troopers all working together.
- I've tried to approach the crime issue in the same way -- by putting partisan differences aside and rejecting the old prevention vs. punishment debate. They're both a dead end. And I've reached out to Democrats and Republicans alike. Yesterday, we had more than a hundred constituents from the districts of Republican Members of Congress here to meet with members of my cabinet about crime and violence. And our rally today includes Mayors, police officers, and community leaders from across the political spectrum.
- Let me say one final thing. You and I know that neither crime bill is perfect, but -- if we borrow from the best of both packages -- we'll have the biggest and best crime bill ever: $9 billion in community policing funds; an assault weapons ban and federal firearms licensing reforms; substantial monies for more prison, boot camps, and drug courts; a targeted "three strikes" bill; and much more. Let's work together -- as best we can -- to make sure we get the best bill possible.
- Vic, as the current LESC chair, I understand you'll start with a statement on behalf of the group.
- Thanks, Vic. Matt, you're the Vice Chair. Would you like to add something?

INTRODUCTORY REMARKS
LAW ENFORCEMENT STEERING COMMITTEE MEETING
APRIL 14, 1994

- Thanks for joining me here today to talk about -- and push for -- a tough, smart crime bill. The Steering Committee has worked together for years to get a good crime bill passed, and my Administration has been the beneficiary of all the groundwork you've already done on the crime bill. Thanks for your work -- then and now.
- Though I've had the chance to visit with many of you separately, this is the first-time that I meet with the entire Steering Committee. I hope we can continue this dialogue -- perhaps after the crime bill passes -- and work together to make sure that we spend the $23 billion available in the crime bill as wisely -- and as effectively -- as possible.
- The LESC seems like a good forum for that type of exchange. Despite your members' differences -- you've put politics aside and come together for the good of all. I respect that. You've got police chiefs and rank-and-file officers; local police and federal law enforcement; and sheriffs and troopers all working together.
- I've tried to approach the crime issue in the same way -- by putting partisan differences aside and rejecting the old prevention vs. punishment debate. They're both a dead end. And I've reached out to Democrats and Republicans alike. Yesterday, we had more than a hundred constituents from the districts of Republican Members of Congress here to meet with members of my cabinet about crime and violence. And our rally today includes Mayors, police officers, and community leaders from across the political spectrum.
- Let me say one final thing. You and I know that neither crime bill is perfect, but -- if we borrow from the best of both packages -- we'll have the biggest and best crime bill ever: $9 billion in community policing funds; an assault weapons ban and federal firearms licensing reforms; substantial monies for more prison, boot camps, and drug courts; a targeted "three strikes" bill; and much more. Let's work together -- as best we can -- to make sure we get the best bill possible.
- Vic, as the current LESC chair, I understand you'll start with a statement on behalf of the group.
- Thanks, Vic. Matt, you're the Vice Chair. Would you like to add something?

POLICE, MAYOR MEET; 'SICKOUT' SEEMS UNLIKELY OFFICERS KEEP UP SALARY DEMANDS

Atlanta Journal (AJ) - Friday April 8, 1994

TEXT:

After a 3 1/2-hour meeting Thursday between disgruntled police officers and Atlanta Mayor Bill Campbell, both sides indicated they had made progress on a list of complaints, and a police union official said officers would hold off on further discussions of a threatened "sickout."

However, there seemed to be little headway on salary issues - a major sticking point. Participants at the meeting between about 50 officers and the mayor described the atmosphere as frank, and sometimes hostile, as they discussed 17 line items, including increased pension payments, overtime and compensation time owed, a lack of career development opportunities, uniforms, and Chief Eldrin Bell.

I do not have a magic wand," Campbell said. "I'm not able to create additional money on the spot. Progress was made, and I heard very clearly. I inherited a $36 million budget shortfall and we had to deal with it in this budget cycle."

Sgt. MARC LAWSON, president of the Local 623 International Brotherhood of Police Officers, said he is optimistic the mayor and police can reach agreement, although some officers left the meeting highly dissatisfied. He would not discuss specific proposals.

"The officers feel it is critical that compensation . . . be resolved," Lawson said. "But the commitment is to keep this city safe. We have to allow him to respond. Our officers are going to continue to report to work. We will not retreat unless some condition is presented to us to alter the commitment."

Although a police union official said earlier that some officers had cut back on traffic citations in protest, Campbell said there was no mention of a ticket slowdown or a "blue flu" sickout planned for the Freaknik celebration April 22-24, expected to bring 175,000 college students to the city.

"I never heard the officers say they were going to do anything less than . . . protect and serve," he said.

(C) 1994 ATLANTA NEWSPAPERS

Union members will meet among themselves April 13 and with Campbell on April 15 to weigh further progress.

While the union can't legally encourage job actions, Lawson said it also can't control what officers do.

"Desperate people do desperate things when reasonable solutions are not available," he said. "We have to operate under optimism because we operate under dire circumstances every day."

Fliers appeared on some police officers' windshields Thursday reading: "Blue Flu. Don't worry about being the only one out. Worry about being the only one in."

Bell, who said earlier Thursday he had proposed some resolutions to the mayor, was not at the meeting.

"He was not supposed to be, nor would he be (here) under any circumstances," Campbell said. "I think that an uninhibited flow of communication is productive."

Campbell said it was a "reasonable statement" that officers voiced complaints about Bell, but he wasn't the focus of the meeting.

"It's no secret (the officers) are overworked and underpaid," Campbell said. "I talked about that in the campaign and some officers felt I didn't live up to it. I hope this will restore their faith."

Officer C. A. Wicker, a 15-year veteran, summed up his frustrations as officers left the meeting - some convinced the "blue flu" is still imminent.

"We've been in there giving (the mayor) quite a bit of hell," Wicker said. "We're tired of being pushed back into a corner. I have kids in college. I have to go out and work double extra jobs to make money for the shortfall and we're not going to take it any more."

DRAFT

Thank you, Mayor _____.

Mr. President, I am honored to be here today with so many of my fellow officers in blue to urge Congress to pass a tough, smart crime bill. Your anti-crime plan gives those of us at the local level -- and on the front lines -- the resources we need to do our job -- and do it right. It proposes the largest increase ever for state and local law enforcement -- more than 300% -- and it does three things we need to do most: put more officers on the street in community policing; provide stiff punishments for repeat violent offenders; and put more money into programs to keep our kids from committing crimes in the first place. As a patrolman who has walked the beat for years and worked to make our streets safer, I'm proud to be here to day to help you pass this important crime legislation.

I joined the Atlanta Police Department as a Patrolman in 1973 and in 1975 became part of the Team Policing Project, developed by Atlanta officers and Lee Brown -- now your Drug Director, Mr. President. We combatted youth violence, gang violence, violence against women and the elderly. We worked with members of the community to make sure that they were safer -- whether that meant tracking down repeat offenders, closing down open-air drug markets, or making sure that bus stops were properly lit and patrolled, so that folks wouldn't be afraid to wait for the bus at night.

I'm proud of our work. The challenge of working to prevent crimes from ever taking place motivated us to come to work each day. We knew we were making a difference in people's lives -- and that made a difference in our own lives. For years I have spoken to neighborhood residents in Atlanta about crime, and the question that has been put to me is: "Sergeant Lawson, what are YOU going to do about the crime in our neighborhood?" And now, what I hear more and more is: "Sergeant Lawson, what can WE do TOGETHER to reduce crime in our neighborhood. With that question, we've already begun.

But my being here -- as well as the attendance of hundreds of my colleagues -- is about more than simply passing another crime bill; it's about our government's commitment to reinforce the "thin blue line" that separates a civilized society from one that has been overtaken by guns, gangs and drugs. You see, for us, crime and violence is not what we read about in the papers or see on the evening news -- and it's not partisan or ideological; it's what we deal with face-to-face every day.

In just a few moments, Mr. President, you will honor law enforcement heroes from across the country. Each of them have committed acts of heroism in the line of duty, and each of them, if asked, would say that they were just doing their job -- to protect and serve. Each of them would say that -- while they're proud of their accomplishments -- they know hundreds of others just like them. And they're right. For every police officer, every sheriff, and every correctional officer commits unnoticed acts of heroism each day. And -- with its unprecedented support for state and local law enforcement -- your crime plan further honors these officers with the resources they need to continue this important work.

And now, I have the profound honor of presenting to you _____.

In the last ten years the number of juveniles arrested for murder has more than doubled. [Bureau of Justice Statistics]

There were nearly 7 million violent crimes reported in this country in 1992. [FBI]

Between 1986 and 1991, nearly 20% of the nation's trauma centers were forced to close, largely due to the rise in gun-related violence.

According to the 1986 and 1987 National Crime Survey, nearly 3 million incidents of attempted or completed street crime took place inside schools or on school property. [Bureau of Justice Statistics]

According to the National Center on Health Statistics:

Homicide rates

1992: 26,570 people were murdered
510/week

9/92-9/93 24,596 murdered
473/week

1/93-9/93 18,590 murdered
516/week

My assessment is that we can say (conservatively), on average, that 500 people are murdered each week in America -- e.g., "The first week Congress went into recess, another 500 Americans were killed by a violent crime."

Only in the past five years has homicide been among the top ten causes of death [CDC]

Number of people killed last year by violence: 50,000

Number of AIDS-related deaths last year: 30,000

Number of deaths last year caused by drunk driving: 18,000

Percentage change in the number of 15-year-old males charged with murder from 1985 to 1991: +217

Percentage change in the number of teenagers murdered by guns since 1985: +100

Number of hours that go by before another child under 19 is killed by gunfire: 2

Leading cause of death among young African-Americans: Homicide

Percentage of increase in the last five years in handgun-related murders: 59

Number of unsupervised, elementary-school age children who have access to a gun in their home: 1.2 million

Number of guns carried to school every day: 270,000

Number of crimes committed every day in, or near America's public schools in 1993: 16,000

Chances that a violent offender will commit another crime: 1 in 2

Increase in the juvenile arrest rate for violent crime from 1970 to 1992: 90%

Percentage of Americans who are willing to pay higher taxes to get more police on the street: 80

Rank of the United States among all other countries in percentage of citizens incarcerated: 1

Number of Americans injured by criminals in the past 20 years: 37 million

Estimated cost of crime to the American people 1991: $19 billion

RE: CRIME STATISTICS RELATED TO EXECUTIVE ORDER:

Every day 13 children under the age of 19 are killed by gunfire - Educational Fund to End Handgun Violence, 1993, and CDF

A 1990 Center for Disease Control survey found that on an average day, one in 20 high school students carries a gun to school. (100,000 students)

Nearly 300,000 high school students are physically attacked each month -- Ad Hoc Committee on Violence, Rev. William Moore

46,000 juveniles were arrested on weapons charges in 1992 -- Congressional Record

90% of youth homicides in the industrialized world are committed in the United States. -- UNICEF report

In 1992, nearly 3,000 juveniles were arrested for murder -- more than 2.5 times the number arrested in 1984. -- ATF
