1994-05-27

In my letter to you of 19 May, I asked you to bring an important new development in the DPRK to the attention of the Security Council. This was that, despite Agency requests to the contrary, the DPRK had started operations relating to the refuelling of its 5 MW Experimental Nuclear Power Reactor without enabling safeguards activities stated by the Agency as being indispensable at the time of the refuelling. I explained inter alia in my letter our conclusion, based on reports received about the discharge operation from Agency inspectors in the DPRK, that a further discharge of fuel rods from the reactor without enabling the Agency to select, segregate and secure fuel rods for later measurements, as requested, would result in irreparable loss of the Agency's ability to verify whether all nuclear material subject to safeguards in the DPRK is in fact under safeguards and has not been diverted. I also said that the Agency had proposed to the DPRK to send a team of officials there immediately to discuss arrangements necessary for the implementation of the safeguards measures required.

Mr. Boutros Boutros-Ghali
Secretary-General
United Nations
New York, N.Y. 10017
USA

.../2

A team of two Agency officials left Vienna on 22 May arriving in the DPRK on 24 May. Over a three day period i.e. from 25-27 May, the team had extensive discussions with DPRK officials in Pyongyang and with operators of the Experimental Nuclear Power Reactor at Nyongbyon in an attempt to reach agreement about how to proceed with the implementation of the safeguards measures required. Unfortunately no agreement was reached. During the discussions, DPRK representatives declined to address the matter of Agency selection and securing of fuel rods from reactor core channels for later measurements. They did so on the grounds that measures such as these came within the scope of inspection activities which did not apply to the DPRK in view of its "unique" status which means, in its view, that it is not obliged to accept inspection activities designed to verify whether diversion of fuel has taken place in the past. A DPRK proposal to preserve for the Agency the possibility of later measurements of fuel rods was examined carefully by the Agency but, for important technical reasons, could not be accepted. This was because this particular proposal would prevent the Agency from being able to measure, with sufficient confidence, whether nuclear material from the reactor has ever been diverted, the more so because no adequate and verifiable records are being kept.

The inadequacy of the DPRK's proposal was made clear to their representatives. During the final round of discussions which took place on 27 May and in order to make progress, the Agency team put forward an alternative proposal which accommodated DPRK technical requirements relating to the refuelling but which nevertheless preserved Agency requirements. However, the DPRK declined to accept the Agency's proposal on the grounds that this type of discharge would constitute selection and segregation of fuel which would not meet their "political constraints". They did so even though the Agency had again pointed out that the DPRK proposal would not guarantee the preservation of data required to permit fulfilment of the Agency requirements for the verification of the history of the reactor core. The DPRK representatives also declined to accept the Agency team's suggestion to defer the discharge operation temporarily.

The Agency team had also reported that the fuel discharge operation at the reactor was proceeding at a very fast pace which was not in line with information previously conveyed to the Agency and which did not appear to be dictated by any compelling safety consideration. At the time of writing this report, almost half of the fuel in the reactor core has been discharged and in a pattern that has precluded the Agency's ability to implement the full range of the safeguards measures required.

The Agency assesses that if the discharge operation continues at the same rate, as the operator has confirmed will be so, the Agency's opportunity to select, segregate and secure fuel rods for later measurements in accordance with Agency standards will be lost within days. Should this be the case, the Agency will not be in a position to verify, with any degree of confidence, that all nuclear material in the DPRK that is subject to safeguards is in fact under safeguards. Specifically, the Agency will not be in a position to verify the amount of plutonium produced in the DPRK.

I shall keep you informed about any further developments. The Agency officials who arrived in the DPRK on 24 May will return to Vienna tomorrow, 28 May. Two of the inspectors engaged in completing activities at the Radiochemical Laboratory will remain in the DPRK to report to the Agency further on the situation.

I should be grateful if you would bring this letter to the attention of the Security Council.

Yours sincerely,

A handwritten signature in dark ink, appearing to read 'Hans Blix', with a stylized flourish at the end.

Hans Blix
