Summit Meetings Through February 1999

The table below lists information about upcoming meetings and events related to the Summit of the Americas. The column entitled "Direct Summit Relation" attempts to identify those meetings that are specifically intended to address an element of the Santiago Summit Plan of Action and/or require attendance by government officials from all Summit countries. It is meant for planning purposes only and not intended to indicate the importance of a particular meeting.

MEMORANDUM FOR VICTOR MARRERO, USOAS

FROM: AA/LAC Mark L. Schneider

SUBJECT: Funding support for Special Rapporteur for Freedom of Expression

This Memorandum informs you of the status of USAID's effort to garner financial support from the international donor community to supplement the United States' commitment to fund the Special Rapporteur for Freedom of Expression under the InterAmerican Commission on Human Rights of the Organization of American States (OAS).

I. COMMITMENT FROM THE UNITED STATES

As you know, USAID has a Memorandum of Agreement with the Department of State's Bureau of International Organization Affairs (IO) to allocate $150,000 from USAID's ESF account to State/IO which will subsequently obligate these funds by separate written agreement with the OAS to fund the activities of the Special Rapporteur. As I wrote you earlier, we are prepared to do the same in FY 1999 as well. Because this initiative should receive support from the international donor community, I have asked the Nordic countries whether they would be interested to help fund it.

II. FAVORABLE RESPONSE RECEIVED FROM THE SWEDES

On May 15, I sent a letter to Ms. Eivor Halljaer, Director of the Latin American Section of the Swedish International Development Cooperation Agency (SIDA) to inquire whether SIDA would be interested in helping fund the Special Rapporteur. I also spoke by telephone with Pierre Schori, the Swedish Minister for International Development Cooperation. I mentioned to him that USAID has committed $150,000 for the first year of this initiative and that we are seeking assistance from the international donor community.

On July 7, 1998, I received from SIDA a favorable response stating that SIDA is willing to make a contribution for the Special Rapporteur, although Sida did not mention how much it would contribute. SIDA's assistance, however, is contingent on another Nordic country joining them in supporting this initiative. I have informed Ms. Halkjaer that I am contacting Ms. Hilde Frafjord Johnson, Minister of Development Cooperation, Royal Ministry of Foreign Affairs for Norway, to inquire whether the Norwegians would be interested in joining the Swedes to help fund the Special Rapporteur.

Dear Ms. <sup>Eivor</sup>Halkjaer:

I am very pleased to learn that the Swedish International Development Cooperation Agency (SIDA) is willing to help fund the Special Rapporteur for Freedom of Expression under the InterAmerican Commission on Human Rights of the Organization of American States. I understand SIDA's willingness to participate in this initiative if joined by another Nordic country.

In order to garner support from other Nordic countries, I have informed Minister Johnson of the Norwegian Royal Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the important need to establish a Special Rapporteur and that funding must come from the international donor community and not from any one country if this hemispheric initiative is to carry forward the spirit of collaboration on a multinational basis. I also informed Minister Johnson of SIDA's willingness to participate in helping fund the Special Rapporteur if it were joined by another Nordic country.

I have enclosed material on the Special Rapporteur that was requested in your response. I will of course inform you of any news from the Norwegians. In the meantime, please do not hesitate to give me a call if you have any questions or would like to discuss how we may further collaborate on this important initiative.

Sincerely,

Mark L. Schneider

Dear Minister Johnson:

It was a pleasure to meet you during the recent Tidewater Meeting at the Wye Plantation in Maryland. I enjoyed our conversation regarding the need to find ways to increase the level of development assistance to the poorest countries, especially at a time when the world's economies continue to deepen the process of economic integration.

As you may have anticipated, I would like to bring a very important issue to your attention. As you know, the Santiago Summit called for the establishment of a Special Rapporteur for Freedom of Expression under the InterAmerican Commission on Human Rights of the Organization of American States. This important initiative is due, in large part, in response to the continuing threats against journalists and, unfortunately in many cases, killings as well.

We expect that a distinguished journalist or jurist from Latin America will be selected to fill this full time position and lead this important human rights initiative. The Commission has estimated a budget of $200,000-$250,000 each year.

I have committed $150,000 for the first year and stand ready to contribute significantly for the second and third years. However, I think it is critical that a hemispheric human rights initiative, such as the one contemplated here, receive support from the international donor community and not from any one nation.

President of the United States

Dear Mr. President:

At the Summit of the Americas in Santiago last April, you joined with other heads of state, to emphasize the vital importance of education in meeting critical, economic and social needs in the hemisphere.

I am writing now to invite your support for and participation in an initiative of the Inter-American Dialogue and CINDE designed to insure that the Summit's commitment to education is fully implemented in every country of the region.

As explained in the attached document, the initiative draws on the successful experience of building toward free trade in the Americas. We now propose to establish machinery--regular ministerial meetings, working groups, and an operational secretariat to meet the hemispheric educational goals to move forward.

I hope you will agree that the initiative holds promise for sustained progress in education. I would like the opportunity to talk with you to determine how you and others could contribute to this effort.

Very truly yours,

José Octavio Bordon

Programa de Promoción de la Reforma Educativa en América Latina y el Caribe
Programa for Educational Revitalization in the Americas

A Hemispheric Commitment to Education

At the April 1998 Summit of the Americas in Santiago, Chile, the assembled heads of state of the Americas committed themselves to revitalizing education and turning it into a sustained force for economic development and social equity. To achieve this goal, every head of state agreed to undertake four crucial measures:

- Establish national mechanisms to evaluate education and assess the performance of schools.
- Set national standards for reading, writing, mathematics, and science.
- Provide better training for teachers, and increased incentives for good performance.
- Actively involve parents and local communities in education.

These are all important initiatives. They give a new priority to education, according it the same importance as trade on the regional agenda.

In order to follow through on their Summit commitments, governments must take another critical step. They must take joint and mutual responsibility for promoting change in education. Like democracy and economic reform, education must be turned into a matter of region wide concern. This requires systematic gathering and sharing of information, the establishment of common norms, guidelines and targets, and joint monitoring of success or failure.

The model to follow has already been established. It is the hemisphere's efforts to build a free trade area of the Americas (FTAA). FTAA-like machinery now needs to be organized and put into operation to create quality education throughout the Americas.

Like the pursuit of free trade, governments should establish a series of high-level working groups that engage every country of the Americas, and address all of the key challenges to education reform. Working groups might, for example, be established on:

- finance, aimed at setting targets for investments in each level of education, and exploring new sources of funds;
- teacher preparation and motivation, designed to identify ways to strengthen the teaching profession, including attention to standards, salaries, training and accountability to parents and local communities;

- measurement and evaluation, including the setting of national and perhaps regional content and performance standards, and establishing national and regional tests to measure progress; and
- decentralization, aimed at developing effective approaches to giving schools more responsibility, and making them accountable to parents and local communities

Ministers of education from every nation should assemble once a year to gauge the progress of the working groups, consider proposals, and set the agenda for the coming period. Business forums, scheduled in tandem with the ministers' meetings, should bring together corporate and financial leaders from throughout the hemisphere, and involve them in the planning and programs for improving education. A secretariat for the process needs to be created, perhaps by pooling the resources of regional institutions, such as the Inter-American Development Bank (IDB), the Organization of American States (OAS), and the UN Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean (ECLAC), just as was done in the case of trade. And resources should be made available to provide technical assistance to those countries that need it.

Most important, the governments should set concrete goals for education, just as they did for the FTAA, and ensure useful monitoring of each country's progress toward meeting those goals. We recommend that, by 2005, every government have established:

- a modern system of education statistics and indicators (for example, one that is compatible with the OECD system of education indicators);
- national and regional content and performance standards that outline what students should know in math, science, and language when they complete each grade; and
- a regional testing system that generates comparable information on student performance in mathematics, science, and reading.

What would all this accomplish? At the outset it would require every government to collect information and report on the details of their educational systems--thereby creating comparative data on educational laws and policies, teacher training and salaries, budgets and expenditures, performance, and other key issues. Over time the working groups, with the aid of the secretariat, would begin to propose standards against which nations should judge and compare their performance, and to develop norms and guidelines for carrying out educational reform efforts. Later on a common test for schoolchildren of all nations would allow for comparative evaluations of performance. These initiatives would be reviewed and approved at the annual meetings of education ministers, and perhaps reviewed by finance ministers at their meetings. The idea is to make educational performance in every country open to regional review and judgment, as well as to stimulate hemispheric support to promote improvements. Only if education is transformed into a fully hemispheric issue will it get the attention and resources it needs.

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

Dear Mr. President:

It was a great pleasure to see you in Santiago for the second Summit of the Americas. There, we reaffirmed the goal set in Miami three years ago: a prosperous and peaceful hemisphere, united by a commitment to political and economic freedom.

When we gather again in Canada at the start of a new millenium, we will want to have turned the words of Santiago into deeds; made concrete progress toward a Free Trade Area of the Americas; created a Hemispheric Alliance against Drugs; established a Judicial Studies Center for the Americas; and, more broadly, expanded educational opportunity for all our children and lifted increasing numbers of our citizens out of poverty. With the invaluable contribution of my Special Envoy Mack McLarty, the United States has been an active partner in the work of hemispheric integration. Let me assure you that we will continue to be so in the future.

I have been following closely the continuing efforts of Ecuador and Peru to reach a prompt and definitive settlement of your border dispute. The United States will continue to work with the leaders of the other guarantor nations to promote a final agreement in the near future.

Free peoples and free markets have become the touchstone of hemispheric integration. The second generation of reforms upon which we are now embarked will help ensure the irreversibility of this hemisphere's progress, and demonstrate that democracy delivers for all our people.

Sincerely,

His Excellency
Fabián Alarcón Rivera
Interim President of the Republic of Ecuador
Quito

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

Dear Mr. President:

With the invaluable contribution of my Special Envoy Mack McLarty, the United States has been an active partner in the work of hemispheric integration. Let me assure you that we will continue to be so in the future.

Our meeting last May in San José made a significant contribution to hemispheric cooperation, and I am pleased that Madeleine Albright, Janet Reno, and Charlene Barshefsky have been able to follow up on our discussions with your Ministers. Our cooperation will continue to provide an important stimulus to progress across the hemisphere on trade, justice, the environment, and other concerns.

Free peoples and free markets have become the touchstone of hemispheric integration. The second generation of reforms upon which we are now embarked will help ensure the irreversibility of this hemisphere's progress, and demonstrate that democracy delivers for all our people.

On a personal note, let me also take this opportunity to thank you for the figurine and the compact disk. It was thoughtful of you to share these mementos with me.

Sincerely,

His Excellency
Arnoldo Alemán
President of the Republic of Nicaragua
Managua

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

Dear Mr. Prime Minister:

As you know, we have recently concluded the second Summit of the Americas in Santiago, Chile. I was sorry not to see you at the Summit, but you were ably represented by Foreign Minister Odlum. In Santiago, we reaffirmed the goal set in Miami three years ago: a prosperous and peaceful hemisphere, united by a commitment to political and economic freedom.

When we gather again in Canada at the start of a new millenium, we will want to have turned the words of Santiago into deeds; made concrete progress toward a Free Trade Area of the Americas; created a Hemispheric Alliance against Drugs; established a Judicial Studies Center for the Americas; and, more broadly, expanded educational opportunity for all our children and lifted increasing numbers of our citizens out of poverty. With the invaluable contribution of my Special Envoy Mack McLarty, the United States has been an active partner in the work of hemispheric integration. Let me assure you that we will continue to be so in the future.

The meeting last May in Bridgetown made a significant contribution to hemispheric cooperation. I am pleased that Madeleine Albright has been able to follow up on our discussions with your Foreign Minister and others in the region. We should sustain these efforts to build our Caribbean partnership, and contribute to the broader hemispheric process of integration in the coming years.

Free peoples and free markets have become the touchstone of hemispheric integration. The second generation of reforms upon which we are now embarked will help ensure the irreversibility of this hemisphere's progress, and demonstrate that democracy delivers for all our people.

Sincerely,

The Right Honorable

It was a great pleasure to see you in Santiago for the second Summit of the Americas. There, we reaffirmed the goal set in Miami three years ago: a prosperous and peaceful hemisphere, united by a commitment to political and economic freedom.

When we gather again in Canada at the start of a new millenium, we will want to have turned the words of Santiago into deeds; made concrete progress toward a Free Trade Area of the Americas; created a Hemispheric Alliance against Drugs; established a Judicial Studies Center for the Americas; and, more broadly, expanded educational opportunity for all our children and lifted increasing numbers of our citizens out of poverty.

I particularly appreciated your support for the hemispheric initiative on education. An educated citizenry is the basis upon which we will strengthen all our other institutions. With the invaluable contribution of my Special Envoy Mack McLarty, the United States has been an active partner in the work of hemispheric integration. Let me assure you that we will continue to be so in the future.

Our meeting last May in San José made a significant contribution to hemispheric cooperation, and I am pleased that Madeleine Albright, Janet Reno, and Charlene Barshefsky have been able to follow up on our discussions with your Ministers. Our cooperation will continue to provide an important stimulus to progress across the hemisphere on trade, justice, the environment, and other concerns.

Free peoples and free markets have become the touchstone of hemispheric integration. The second generation of reforms upon which we are now embarked will help ensure the irreversibility of this hemisphere's progress, and demonstrate that democracy delivers for all our people.

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

Dear Eduardo:

I want to express again my deep appreciation for your gracious hospitality during our productive state visit. Thank you very much for the special medallions, as well as the wine, the chess set, and the other fine gifts. Hillary and I are grateful for your generosity and will cherish these reminders of our visit. We had a wonderful time getting to know you and Martita better and experiencing first hand the beauty of your country and the warmth of its people. The bonds of friendship between our two countries across the entire range of our relations are stronger than ever. I am confident we have created the foundation for a close partnership into the 21st century, and I assure you that Chile will find the United States a reliable partner in our growing bilateral relationship.

I also want to say how full of admiration I am for your leadership of the second Summit of the Americas, where we significantly advanced the process of hemispheric integration. Your contribution will remain central over the next several years, as we work together under Canadian leadership to turn the words of Santiago into deeds.

When we gather again in Canada at the start of a new millenium, we will want to have made concrete progress toward a Free Trade Area of the Americas; created a Hemispheric Alliance against Drugs; established a Judicial Studies Center for the Americas; and, more broadly, expanded educational opportunity for all our children and lifted increasing numbers of our citizens out of poverty. With the invaluable contribution of my Special Envoy Mack McLarty, the United States has been an active partner in the work of hemispheric integration. We will continue to be so in the future.

Free peoples and free markets have become the touchstone of hemispheric integration. The second generation of reforms upon which we are now embarked, and for which Chile provides an admired model, will help ensure the irreversibility of this hemisphere's progress, and demonstrate that democracy delivers for all our people.

Sincerely,

His Excellency
Eduardo Frei Ruíz-Tagle
President of the Republic of Chile
Santiago

THE WHITE HOUSE

Dear Mr. President:

It was a great pleasure to see you in Santiago for the second Summit of the Americas. There, we reaffirmed the goal set in Miami three years ago: a prosperous and peaceful hemisphere, united by a commitment to political and economic freedom.

When we gather again in Canada at the start of a new millenium, we will want to have turned the words of Santiago into deeds; made concrete progress toward a Free Trade Area of the Americas; created a Hemispheric Alliance against Drugs; established a Judicial Studies Center for the Americas; and, more broadly, expanded educational opportunity for all our children and lifted increasing numbers of our citizens out of poverty. With the invaluable contribution of my Special Envoy Mack McLarty, the United States has been an active partner in the work of hemispheric integration. Let me assure you that we will continue to be so in the future.

I have been following closely the continuing efforts of Ecuador and Peru to reach a prompt and definitive settlement of your border dispute. The United States will continue to work with the leaders of the other guarantor nations to promote a final agreement in the near future.

Free peoples and free markets have become the touchstone of hemispheric integration. The second generation of reforms upon which we are now embarked will help ensure the irreversibility of this hemisphere's progress, and demonstrate that democracy delivers for all our people.

On a personal note, let me also take this opportunity to thank you for the silver medallion and the book. It was thoughtful of you to share these mementos with me.

Sincerely,

His Excellency
Alberto Fujimori
President of the Republic of Peru
Lima

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

Dear Mr. President:

It was a great pleasure to see you in Santiago for the second Summit of the Americas. There, we reaffirmed the goal set in Miami three years ago: a prosperous and peaceful hemisphere, united by a commitment to political and economic freedom.

When we gather again in Canada at the start of a new millenium, we will want to have turned the words of Santiago into deeds; made concrete progress toward a Free Trade Area of the Americas; created a Hemispheric Alliance against Drugs; established a Judicial Studies Center for the Americas; and, more broadly, expanded educational opportunity for all our children and lifted increasing numbers of our citizens out of poverty. With the invaluable contribution of my Special Envoy Mack McLarty, the United States has been an active partner in the work of hemispheric integration. Let me assure you that we will continue to be so in the future.

It was good to continue the conversation we had in March at the White House. The meeting with President Figueres and the other leaders of Central America last May in San José made a significant contribution to hemispheric cooperation, and I am pleased that Madeleine Albright, Janet Reno, and Charlene Barshefsky have been able to follow up on our discussions with Costa Rica's Ministers. Our cooperation will continue to provide an important stimulus to progress across the hemisphere on trade, justice, the environment, and other concerns.

Free peoples and free markets have become the touchstone of hemispheric integration. The second generation of reforms upon which we are now embarked will help ensure the irreversibility of this hemisphere's progress, and demonstrate that democracy delivers for all our people.

Sincerely,

His Excellency
Miguel Angel Rodríguez
President of the Republic of Costa Rica

Given Uruguay's record of reform of education and health care, I look forward to working with you closely on two important goals of the Summit Action Plan: to ensure universal access to and the completion of quality primary education for 100 percent of our children and access to secondary schooling for at least 75 percent of young people by 2010; and second, by the year 2002, to eradicate measles and reduce the incidence of pneumonia, meningitis, rubella and mumps.

Free peoples and free markets have become the touchstone of hemispheric integration. The second generation of reforms upon

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

Dear Mr. President:

It was a great pleasure to see you in Santiago for the second Summit of the Americas. There, we reaffirmed the goal set in Miami three years ago: a prosperous and peaceful hemisphere, united by a commitment to political and economic freedom.

When we gather again in Canada at the start of a new millenium, we will want to have turned the words of Santiago into deeds; made concrete progress toward a Free Trade Area of the Americas; created a Hemispheric Alliance against Drugs; established a Judicial Studies Center for the Americas; and, more broadly, expanded educational opportunity for all our children and lifted increasing numbers of our citizens out of poverty. With the invaluable contribution of my Special Envoy Mack McLarty, the United States has been an active partner in the work of hemispheric integration. Let me assure you that we will continue to be so in the future.

Our meeting last May in Bridgetown made a significant contribution to hemispheric cooperation. I am pleased that Madeleine Albright has been able to follow up on our discussions with your Foreign Minister and others in the region. We should sustain these efforts to build our Caribbean partnership, and contribute to the broader hemispheric process of integration in the coming years.

Free peoples and free markets have become the touchstone of hemispheric integration. The second generation of reforms upon which we are now embarked will help ensure the irreversibility of this hemisphere's progress, and demonstrate that democracy delivers for all our people.

Sincerely,

His Excellency
Jules Wijdenbosch
President of the Republic of Suriname
Paramaribo

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

Dear Ernesto:

It was a great pleasure to see you in Santiago for the second Summit of the Americas. There, we reaffirmed the goal set in Miami three years ago: a prosperous and peaceful hemisphere, united by a commitment to political and economic freedom.

When we gather again in Canada at the start of a new millenium, we will want to have turned the words of Santiago into deeds; made concrete progress toward a Free Trade Area of the Americas; created a Hemispheric Alliance against Drugs; established a Judicial Studies Center for the Americas; and, more broadly, expanded educational opportunity for all our children and lifted increasing numbers of our citizens out of poverty. With the invaluable contribution of my Special Envoy Mack McLarty, the United States has been an active partner in the work of hemispheric integration. Let me assure you that we will continue to be so in the future.

In the area of free trade, as in that of counternarcotics, the U.S.-Mexico partnership has provided a model and a stimulus for hemispheric action. I am pleased that we will be attending next month's United Nations Special Session on Narcotics Trafficking together and hope that we will have an opportunity to see each other again then.

On a personal note, thank you very much for the books. It was thoughtful of you to share these mementos with me.

Free peoples and free markets have become the touchstone of hemispheric integration. The second generation of reforms upon which we are now embarked will help ensure the irreversibility of this hemisphere's progress, and demonstrate that democracy delivers for all our people.

Sincerely,

His Excellency
Ernesto Zedillo Ponce de León
President of the United Mexican States
Mexico, D.F.

Dear Mr. President:

With the invaluable contribution of my Special Envoy Mack McLarty, the United States has been an active partner in the work of hemispheric integration. Let me assure you that we will continue to be so in the future.

Our meeting last May in San José made a significant contribution to hemispheric cooperation, and I am pleased that Madeleine Albright, Janet Reno, and Charlene Barshefsky have been able to follow up on our discussions with your Ministers. Our cooperation will continue to provide an important stimulus to progress across the hemisphere on trade, justice, the environment, and other concerns.

Free peoples and free markets have become the touchstone of hemispheric integration. The second generation of reforms upon which we are now embarked will help ensure the irreversibility of this hemisphere's progress, and demonstrate that democracy delivers for all our people.

Sincerely,

His Excellency
Jose María Figueres Olsen
Former President of the Republic of Costa Rica
San José
