North KoreaNew Developments:

- North Koreans agree to meet South Korean representatives on June 28 to work out details for a summit.
- North Korea contacted yesterday through New York channel as part of effort to verify assurances.
- Christopher meets Kozyrev today in Brussels.

Key Themes:

- We are resolved to meet the North Korean nuclear challenge with firmness and steadiness.
- We have been building an international consensus to meet this challenge and must work to sustain it as we move toward UN sanctions.
- There is no daylight between us and our treaty allies, South Korea and Japan. Coordination with Russia has been good. Like Russia, China shares our interests in a nonnuclear Korean peninsula and peace and stability in the region; we have consulted extensively with the Chinese and urge them to join the international community in a firm response to the North Korean challenge.
- The door remains open to North Korea to better relations with the outside world, but only if it acts to restore the basis of dialogue.
- President Carter has reported that the North Koreans offered new steps to resolve the international community's concerns. In this connection we note North Korea's assurances that IAEA inspectors and monitoring equipment would be kept in place.
- The basis for a resumption of dialogue would be restored if these statements mean that North Korea is committed to freezing the major elements of its nuclear programs while new talks took place, that it is not refueling the reactor nor reprocessing the spent fuel and is maintaining continuity of IAEA safeguards.
- We are in the process of determining their meaning in this regard.
- In the meantime, we are continuing to consult on a sanctions resolution at the UN Security Council.
- Our security commitment to South Korea and Japan is unshakable. We will take whatever prudent measures are necessary for the defense of our forces in South Korea and to assist in the defense of that nation.

PointsOn Kim-Kim Summit

- There have been positive indications that the North Koreans have agreed to meet with the South next week in order to lay the groundwork for a summit meeting between North and South.
- We fully support the initiative of President Kim Young Sam of South Korea to resume North-South dialogue.

On Message to North Korea

- Earlier this week, we sent a letter to the North Koreans through the New York channel which referred to indications that North Korea's leader gave former President Carter.
- The message asked for verification that they will freeze major elements of their nuclear program while talks are underway.

-- We anticipate an answer to our letter soon.

On the North Korea Experts Seminar

-- The meeting provided the President with a range of expert opinion on the situation in Korea. Planning for the seminar began some time ago, well before President Carter's trip to North Korea.

On IAEA Inspectors' Visa Extension

-- We understand North Korea extended the IAEA inspectors' visas recently and told them they could stay at the Yongbyon nuclear facility for as long as they need to.

-- We would hope that inspectors also be granted the access to those facilities that they need to ensure continuity of safeguards.

On Sanctions

-- As the President has said, consultations on sanctions are continuing in New York.

-- The purpose of UN sanctions is to increase the pressure on North Korea to return to compliance with international nonproliferation norms.

-- Our approach is a phased, step-by-step approach to resolve the situation. It is important not only to act with regard to past actions and behavior but also to create leverage for possible future actions by the North, such as further actions to impede the activity of the IAEA or withdrawal from the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty.

-- We must determine whether North Korean is committed to freezing the major elements of its nuclear programs while new talks took place that it is not refueling the reactor or reprocessing the spent fuel and is maintaining continuity of IAEA safeguards.

-- If that is the case, we would be willing to resume high-level talks and our focus would move away from a UN sanctions resolution.

-- We would continue those talks only as long as they were productive.

-- The question is whether North Korea is willing to take real steps to restore the basis for dialogue. If it is not, then if anything it will reinforce the case for sanctions.

-- If there is a basis for dialogue, however, we have always said we would be willing to pursue it.

On Status of Sanctions Consultations

-- We are informally circulating a draft resolution and consulting with allies and Security Council members on the substance of possible sanctions and their timing.

-- (ON CONSULTATIONS WITH RUSSIA) Ambassador Albright continues to consult with her Russian counterpart in New York. Christopher is meeting in Brussels to meet Kozyrev to discuss North Korean issues.

-- (ON CONSULTATIONS WITH CHINA) We continue to consult with the Chinese and note they share our interest in a nonnuclear peninsula. We continue to work to enlist their support in the international effort to resolve the nuclear problem in North Korea. (IF PRESSED) The Chinese have always been clear that they could prefer to solve this issue through dialogue. If a sanctions resolution were to come to a vote in the Security Council, however, we cannot predict how they would vote.

On Consultations about Providing North Korea with Light Water Reactor

-- We have had preliminary consultations with Japan, South Korea, and other allies on the issue.

- Any details on the provision of light water reactor technology to North Korea would have to be worked out as part of a broad and thorough approach to resolving the nuclear issue in a third round of high-level talks.
- Last July, we said that we want to be helpful in replacing North Korea's graphite-moderated reactors with light water reactors, but we have made no commitments with respect to financing or provision of this technology.

On Nuclear Security Assurances

- We have said we would be willing to discuss nuclear security assurances as part of a broad and thorough approach to resolving the North Korean nuclear issue.
- Assurance about no first use and nondeployment of nuclear weapons would be part of that discussion, if there is a third round of high level talks.

On Need to Account for Past Nuclear Activities

- We need to account for past nuclear activities. Now that North Korea has destroyed one method for doing that -- nondestructive analysis -- they need to agree with the IAEA on an alternative, such as special inspections.
- That will be a subject of the third round, as it has always been.
- We told North Korea from the start that if they defueled the reactor outside of agreed IAEA procedures, we would not go to a third round. When the IAEA reported that North Korea had irretrievably damaged its ability to perform its historical analysis, we called off the third round.
- But we never said we would define the problem in such a way that there was no solution. That is why, in canceling the third round, we said that it was up to North Korea to restore the basis for a dialogue.
- Again, we are in the process of determining whether North Korea is committed to freezing the major elements of its nuclear program while new talks take place; that is, not refueling the reactor, or reprocessing the spent fuel that was just removed and permitting the IAEA to maintain a continuity of safeguards.

On Jimmy Carter Meeting

- As the President has said, Carter's trip offers "hopeful signs". Carter travelled to North Korea as a private citizen. We briefed him before he departed, so that he could communicate the U.S. position clearly. We have always believed it important that our position get through to the top levels of North Korea's government.
- President Carter has reported that the North Koreans promised to freeze their nuclear program during further talks with the United States.
- We need confirmation and clarification of these remarks directly from North Korean authorities.
- If North Korea's statements to President Carter mean that they are willing not to reprocess their spent fuel or refuel their reactor and allow IAEA inspectors to continue activities needed to maintain continuity of safeguards, then this would restore the basis for U.S.-DPRK dialogue.
- If talks with North Korea resume, we would expect the principal focus of our efforts to resolve the North Korean nuclear situation to be placed on those talks.
- (IF PRESSED) President Carter has said that he clearly understands US policy on this.

On IAEA Concerns

- IAEA Director General Blix has called on North Korea to resume cooperation with the Agency. We will not go to a third round unless North Korea is committed to freezing the major elements of its nuclear program while new talks take place; that is, not refueling the reactor, or reprocessing the spent fuel that was just removed and permitting the IAEA to maintain a continuity of safeguards.

On Troop Deployment

- I will not comment on the specifics of any such actions.
- We will take whatever prudent measures are necessary for the defense of our forces in South Korea and to assist in the defense of that nation.
- We will keep under review any further measures necessary.

On International Conference

- (IF ASKED) We believe that President Yeltsin's proposal for an international conference can be useful at some point but should not delay a serious international response to the problem. Secretary Christopher and FM Kozyrev met in Brussels. They are expected to consult on the North Korean nuclear issue.

UNCLASSIFIED

MEMORANDUM FOR:

Daniel B. Poneman

(PONEMAN)

FROM:

Thomas B. Ross
(ROSS)

SUBJECT:

HERE'S WHAT IT LOOKS LIKE..

NORTH KOREA

- The North Korean nuclear program poses a serious threat to:
 - our allies, South Korea and Japan
 - our troops in South Korea
 - peace and stability in Asia
 - the international nonproliferation regime
- North Korea poses other serious threats:
 - one million troops, most positioned close to DMZ
 - exporter of ballistic missiles to rogue regimes
- We have had clear goals from the beginning: to promote a non-nuclear Korean Peninsula and to prevent the spread of nuclear weapons elsewhere.
 - We have been steady and determined in pursuit of those goals. U.S. leadership has built a strong international consensus behind them.
 - We have maintained an unshakable security commitment to our allies, Japan and South Korea. We have consulted closely with our allies, with China and Russia, and with others. I have spoken repeatedly with President Kim Young Sam and with other world leaders about this problem.
- Tonight, I would like to address the people and the leaders of North Korea directly. You have said that we wish to strangle your country. This is not true. We wish you no harm. We do offer you a clear choice.
 - If you honor your non-proliferation commitments, doors will open to improved relations with the United States, South Korea and all other nations.
 - If you do not, you will face only increased isolation from the international community.

- We hope you choose the first path. If you do, the United States is ready to sit down and talk with you about the whole range of issues dividing North Korea from the international community. All issues would be on the table.
- If you meet your commitments for international inspections and dialogue with the South, progress could come quickly.
- You will find that the richest rewards come not from defying the international community but from joining it. It is in all of our interests that North Korea join that community.
- But do not mistake our willingness to talk about the issues for weakness. If you choose the other path, of dangerous nuclear development and military aggression, you will find us and our allies well prepared to deter and defend against any hostile action.
- I have been to the DMZ. I have stood on the Bridge of No Return and seen the reality of the threat, the dedication of our servicemen and women, the close partnership between Americans and South Koreans.
- I have also seen the reality of the dynamic economic growth throughout the region, the spread of democracy, and understand how much is at stake here.
- We will not provoke aggression, but we will not invite it by neglecting to take prudent steps to ensure that we can fulfill our security commitments to defend South Korea.
- The choice is up to North Korea.

Nuclear Weapons Already in North Korea

- We don't know for sure whether North Korea has any nuclear weapons or not.
- The immediate problem is to prevent diversion of any more plutonium. That's why IAEA inspections are so important.
- If it turns out North Korea already has a weapon, obviously we want them to give it up, as they must under the NPT and the North-South denuclearization agreement.

China's Role

- China says it does not want a nuclear-armed North Korea, and joined in the recent UN Security Council statement calling on North Korea to resume IAEA inspections and North-South talks.
- We've kept in close touch with the Chinese about the North Korean situation, and urged them to help convince North Korea to make the right choice.
- (IF NEEDED) Non-proliferation, together with human rights, has been one of the top priorities in our bilateral dialogue with China. This is an area where the U.S. and China have parallel interests.

Supposed Neglect of Issue

- I have been working this issue from the start.
- Last July I visited Korea and addressed this issue. I've spoken repeatedly about it in public and raised it in talks with many world leaders, in order to keep the international consensus strong.

Supposed Concessions

- We have made no concessions on our fundamental goals or interests.
- We have said that we are ready for better relations with North Korea, but only if North Korea resolves the nuclear issue.
- We have offered to talk to North Korea, but only if they continue IAEA inspections and to talk to the South.
- Where we have shown flexibility -- and where it was right to do so -- has been on questions of form rather than substance.
- The important thing is not the precise sequencing of one meeting or another, but rather whether we resolve the fundamental issues.

Patriots and Team Spirit

- North Korea threatens South Korea with a million-man army and ballistic missiles, as well as with its nuclear program.
- Our commitment to South Korea's security is unshakable. Our forces are ready.

- We will continue to take prudent steps to ensure our ability to defend our allies. This includes the deployment of Patriot missiles, a purely defensive system.
- We will not provoke a military confrontation, but we also will not invite one by lack of readiness.

North Korea's Withdrawal from the Military Armistice Commission

- As far as we are concerned, the armistice remains in full force and effect.

Allowing IAEA Inspections

- We welcome North Korea's willingness to have the IAEA present. It is up to North Korea and the IAEA to work out the details.
- Of course, if North Korea refueled the reactor without the IAEA present, that would end our dialogue and send the issue back to the Security Council.
