MEMORANDUM FROM SECRETARY RUBIN

DEPARTMENT OF THE TREASURY
WASHINGTON, D.C.

SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY

April 14, 1998

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRESIDENT

FROM: Robert E. Rubin RES

SUBJECT: Finance Ministers Agenda to Support the Summit of the Americas

As you travel to Santiago to meet with other leaders of the Hemisphere, I wanted to tell you briefly what Finance Ministers are doing to advance our Summit of the Americas (SOA) goals of economic and social integration -- in particular through strengthening financial systems and supporting education.

Strengthening Financial Systems

Finance Ministers have worked steadily since the Miami Summit to build the kind of financial infrastructure that we need to support increased trade and investment in the region. Throughout our discussions, I have been impressed by the growing spirit of collegiality and cooperation and the deepening ties between our Finance Ministries, which is itself an achievement. The Asian financial crisis gave new urgency to our joint efforts, as Ministers realized that relatively healthy financial systems in Latin countries were a key factor in distinguishing the region from Asia and shielding it from contagion. The Ministers also realized that they needed to do more to create truly sound and transparent financial systems.

Against the background of global financial turmoil, the Ministers agreed last December in Santiago to an ambitious program to strengthen and modernize financial systems in the hemisphere. At the core of that program was an agreement that the Western Hemisphere would be the first region in the world to implement the Basle Committee's Core Principles for Effective Banking Supervision -- which are a model of modern and high quality standards for banking supervision. We are now working hard to make implementation of the Basle Core Principles a reality, with Chile and Mexico joining us in leading that effort.

At one level, sound banking supervision is a technical matter, relating to capital adequacy, risk management, and auditing practices. At another, it can make the difference between economic growth and financial crisis. Ultimately, it is about rule of law, transparency, accountability, and good governance. In that sense, it is a prime example of the second generation of reforms that Latin American nations must tackle to achieve higher growth and better living standards for their people.

Education

Finance Ministers have also thrown their weight behind the SOA education goals. They have called on the Inter-American Development Bank to double its spending on primary and secondary education over the next three years to one billion dollars a year. In addition, they are working to create a regional education fund to finance cross-border projects. Finally, Finance Ministers will be working closely with their Education Ministry colleagues to ensure that there is adequate financing in national budgets for the education goals of the SOA.
