What about original

I will certainly help with briefing paper, speech, press paper. I imagine Ceci will contribute. The directives have to be coordinated by OMB, but Ceci and I will push it along. If Becky, your office, and Bill White could figure out invites, that would be great.

I am out Monday unfortunately to sell my house....

that sounds about right. Diana you and I need to coordinate how we will proceed once Stephanie pulls the trigger. Jocelyn my assistant will help prepare the briefing paper with some guidance from you and others. The Directives will come from your shop? How many did we settle on? One or two? She can also deal with the room set/logistics with scheduling. I have also asked her to contact Bill White upon his return. Becky Ogle is Tony's and the Secretary's staff contact.

I will be out tomorrow -- Liaisoning to the Public...will catch up on Monday.

AMERICANS WITH DISABILITIES ACT ANNIVERSARY EVENT

DATE: July 29, 1998
LOCATION: Roosevelt Room
TIME: 1:15-1:30 pm
FROM: Minyon Moore, Bruce Reed, and Gene Sperling

I. PURPOSE

To sign an Executive Memorandum directing federal agencies to increase public outreach and education about important requirements within the Americans with Disabilities Act and the Medicaid buy-in option within the Balanced Budget Act of 1997. This event is also an opportunity to commemorate the 8th anniversary of the historic Americans with Disabilities Act, which was signed into law on July 26, 1990, and to further your commitment to the Task Force on Employment of Adults with Disabilities that you created this spring.

II. BACKGROUND

While the Americans with Disabilities Act makes it possible for millions of Americans to participate more fully in society, the unemployment rate among the 30 million working-age adults with disabilities continues to be significantly higher than that of the general population. For this reason, you signed an executive order in March establishing the Task Force on Employment of People with Disabilities. With Secretary Herman serving as Chair and Tony Coelho serving as Vice-Chair, the Task Force is charged with recommending policies to help increase the employment rate of adults with disabilities. Although the Task Force will not issue its first formal report until November, it already has identified actions that the Administration can take to begin reducing barriers to work. You will issue an Executive Memorandum tomorrow to direct these actions.

The Executive Memorandum will direct relevant agencies to take appropriate actions to expand public education and outreach about regulations within the ADA and the Medicaid buy-in option within the Balanced Budget Act of 1997. Specifically, you will:

- Direct the Attorney General, the Chair of the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, and the Administrator of the Small Business Administration to expand public education about the requirements of the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990 to employers, employees, and others whose rights may be affected -- including, in particular, small businesses and under-served populations.

- Direct the Secretary of Health and Human Services to inform governors, state legislators, state Medicaid directors, consumer organizations, and others about the new Medicaid buy-in option enacted as part of the Balanced Budget Act of 1997. This new option provides Medicaid coverage for individuals with disabilities who, because of their earnings, would not qualify for Medicaid under current law.

You also will announce your strong commitment to working with Senators Kennedy and Jeffords to pass affordable and feasible legislation that helps people with disabilities maintain their health care coverage and return to work. This legislation would extend Medicare for people with disabilities who return to work, eliminating a provision in current law that often requires people with disabilities to choose between work and health insurance. The legislation also would expand the class of people with disabilities able to buy into Medicaid by eliminating the requirement that they have income below 250 percent of poverty and giving state resources and bonuses for taking up this return-to-work option. Although a prior version of the Kennedy-Jeffords bill was not affordable -- costing $5 billion over 5 years -- we have worked hard with the Senators' staff to bring the pricetag down to about $1 billion.

Today, in commemoration of the eighth anniversary of the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA), the President is signing an Executive Memorandum aimed at increasing employment and health care options for people with disabilities. He is also announcing his commitment to work with Senator Jeffords and Senator Kennedy to pass affordable, feasible legislation to help people with disabilities maintain their health care coverage and return to work. Today, the President:

Signed A New Presidential Directive to Increase Employment and Health Care Options for People with Disabilities. While the ADA has been an extremely important law, significant challenges remain. Since 1993, 15 million new jobs have been created. But the unemployment rate among the 30 million working-age adults with disabilities continues to be significantly higher than that of the general population -- close to 75 percent for people with severe disabilities. Today, the President is signing an Executive Memorandum that will direct the relevant agencies to:

- Expand Public Education About the Americans with Disabilities Act. Although more and more Americans are becoming aware of the ADA, too many people still do not know what the ADA offers and requires. Today, the President is directing the Attorney General, the Chair of the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, and the Administrator of the Small Business Administration to expand public education about the requirements of the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990 to employers, employees, and others whose rights may be affected, with special attention to small businesses and under-served populations.
- Increase Information About New Medicaid Buy-in Option. Many people with disabilities are not able to leave Social Security programs to return to work because they will lose their health care coverage. As part of last year's Balanced Budget Act, the President first proposed and enacted a new state option to allow individuals with disabilities who, because of their earnings, do not qualify for Medicaid to purchase Medicaid coverage. Today, the President is directing the Secretary of the Department of Health and Human Services to inform Governors, state legislators, state Medicaid directors, and consumer organizations about this important option.

Issued Letter Clarifying That ADA Obligates States to Offer Appropriate Community Based Services. A recent court case, Helen L. Vs. DiDario, found that the ADA, requires states to provide Medicaid services in the "most integrated setting appropriate" to people with disabilities. Today, the Health Care Financing Administration (HCFA) is sending a letter to all State Medicaid Directors clarifying that under this standard, states must provide the support services that will allow individuals with disabilities to live in their communities rather than in institutional settings, provided that offering these services does not fundamentally alter the state program. Such services may include: home health aide services, nursing services, medical equipment, and personal care services.

Announced Support For Policies to Improve Health Options for Working Adults With Disabilities. The President also announced his strong commitment to work with Senator Kennedy, Senator Jeffords, and other Members of Congress, to pass affordable, feasible legislation that helps people with disabilities maintain their health care coverage and return to work. This legislation would allow Americans receiving Social Security Disability Insurance to retain their Medicare when they return to work, eliminating a provision in current law that often requires people with disabilities to choose between work and health insurance. The legislation also would increase the number of people with disabilities able to buy into Medicaid under the new state option by eliminating income and asset limits and giving states additional resources and bonuses to offer this option.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE ATTORNEY GENERAL
THE SECRETARY OF HEALTH AND HUMAN SERVICES
THE CHAIR OF THE EQUAL EMPLOYMENT
OPPORTUNITY COMMISSION
THE ADMINISTRATOR OF THE SMALL BUSINESS ADMINISTRATION

SUBJECT: Outreach Actions to Increase Employment of Adults with Disabilities

As we commemorate the eighth anniversary of the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990 (ADA), we have much to celebrate. This landmark civil rights law is making it possible for millions of Americans to participate more fully in society -- through employment, access to public facilities, and participation in community and leisure activities -- and to do their part to make us a stronger and better country. At the same time, we are reminded that significant challenges remain. Far too many of the 30 million working-age adults with disabilities are still unemployed, especially those with significant disabilities.

To address employment barriers for people with disabilities, I issued Executive Order 13078 on March 13, 1998, establishing the National Task Force on Employment of Adults with Disabilities. The Task Force will issue in November the first in a series of reports on what the Federal Government can do to help bring the employment rate of adults with disabilities into line with that of the general population. The Task Force already has identified important ways to reduce barriers to work for people with disabilities, and I hereby direct you to act on these findings.

First, although awareness of the ADA is increasing among persons with disabilities, employers, and the general public, too many people still are not aware of their rights and responsibilities under the ADA. There is a particular need to educate the small business community, which employs most of the private work force and includes the vast majority of employers.

I therefore direct the Attorney General, the Chair of the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, and the Administrator of the Small Business Administration to expand public education regarding the requirements of the ADA to employers, employees, and others whose rights may be affected, with special attention to small businesses and underserved communities, such as racial and language minorities that may not have ready access to information that is already available.

Second, lack of adequate private health insurance options is a disincentive to leave Social Security programs for work. Few private health plans cover the personal assistance and other types of services that make work possible for many people with disabilities. Recognizing this problem, I proposed and the Congress passed a new Medicaid option last year that allows people with disabilities to buy into Medicaid without having to receive cash assistance. A number of States have expressed an interest in offering this new option and the Secretary of Health and Human Services has been working with them to do so. Much more, however, needs to be done to increase the public outreach and education activities about these important laws and options.

I therefore direct the Secretary of Health and Human Services to continue to take all necessary actions to inform Governors, State legislators, State Medicaid directors, consumer organizations, employers, providers, and other interested parties about section 4733 of the Balanced Budget Act of 1997. Section 4733 allows States to provide Medicaid coverage for working individuals with disabilities who, because of their earnings, would not qualify for Medicaid under current law. Additional guidance, letters, technical assistance, and other efforts by the Department of Health and Human Services about the enormous benefits of this option can go a long way in encouraging States to adopt and use this Medicaid buy-in.

This memorandum is for the internal management of the executive branch and does not create any right or benefit, substantive or procedural, enforceable by a party against the United States, its agencies or instrumentalities, its officers or employees, or any other person.

WILLIAM J. CLINTON

THE PRESIDENT COMMEMORATES SIGNING OF THE AMERICANS WITH DISABILITIES ACT BY TAKING ACTIONS TO INCREASE EMPLOYMENT AND IMPROVE HEALTH CARE FOR PEOPLE WITH DISABILITIES

July 29, 1998

Today, in commemoration of the eighth anniversary of the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA), the President is signing an Executive Memorandum aimed at increasing employment and health care options for people with disabilities. He is also announcing the release of a letter to Medicaid Directors clarifying that the ADA obligates states to offer appropriate community based services. Finally, to build on these actions, the President is also announcing his commitment to work with Senator Jeffords and Senator Kennedy to pass affordable, feasible legislation to help people with disabilities maintain their health care coverage and return to work. Today, the President met with his Task Force on Employment of People with Disabilities and advocates of people with disabilities. In this meeting, the President is:

Signing A New Presidential Memorandum to Increase Employment and Health Care Options for People with Disabilities. While the ADA has been critically important to people with disabilities, significant challenges remain. Since 1993, 15 million new jobs have been created. But the unemployment rate among the 30 million working-age adults with disabilities continues to be much higher than that of the general population -- close to 75 percent for people with significant disabilities. The President signed an Executive Memorandum that will direct the relevant agencies to:

- Expand Public Education About the Americans with Disabilities Act. Although more and more Americans are becoming aware of the ADA, too many employers and employees do not know their rights and responsibilities under the ADA. Today, the President is directing the Attorney General, the Chair of the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, and the Administrator of the Small Business Administration to expand public education about the requirements of the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990 to employers, employees, and others whose rights may be affected, with special attention to small businesses and under-served populations.
- Increase Information About New Medicaid Buy-in Option. Many people with disabilities are not able to leave Social Security programs to return to work because they will lose their health care coverage. As part of last year's Balanced Budget Act, the President signed into law a new state option to allow individuals with disabilities who return to work, the ability to purchase critically necessary Medicaid coverage as their earnings increase. Today, the President is directing the Secretary of the Department of Health and Human Services to ensure that Governors, state legislators, and state Medicaid directors work with consumer organizations to take advantage of this important option.

Issuing Letter Clarifying That ADA Obligates States to Offer Appropriate Community Based Services. Recent court cases, including Helen L. vs. DiDario, have interpreted the ADA to require states to provide Medicaid services in the “most integrated setting appropriate” to people with disabilities. Today, the Health Care Financing Administration (HCFA) is sending a letter to all State Medicaid Directors clarifying that under these standards, if an individual living in a facility could live in a community with the right mix of support services, reasonable steps should be taken to provide community based services provided it does not fundamentally alter the state program.

Announcing Support For Policies to Improve Health Options for Working Adults With Disabilities. The President also announced his strong commitment to work with Senators Jeffords, Kennedy, and other Members of Congress to pass affordable, feasible legislation that helps people with disabilities maintain their health care coverage and return to work. The Jeffords-Kennedy proposal would increase Medicaid options and state resources for people with disabilities. It would also allow all Americans receiving Social Security Disability Insurance to retain their Medicare when they return to work, eliminating a provision in current law that often requires people with disabilities to choose between work and health insurance. The President directs the Administration to utilize all of its policy and budgetary expertise at HHS, the Office of Management and Budget, and the White House to work towards the passage of affordable legislation before the Congress adjourns this year, consistent with the Administration’s commitment to preserving the budget surplus.

TALKING POINTS FOR DROP BY MEETING
ANNIVERSARY OF AMERICANS WITH DISABILITIES ACT
THE WHITE HOUSE
July 28, 1998

Acks: Sec. Herman; Sec. Shalala; Sec. Slater; SBA Administrator Aida Alvarez; Social Security Commissioner Ken Apfel; Office of Personnel Management Janice Lachance; Becky Ogle, Exec. Dir., President's Task Force; Tony Coelho, Vice Chair, President's Task Force; Justin Dart; James Brady.

Today, I am proud to join you in celebrating the eighth anniversary of the Americans with Disabilities Act. I know I don't have to tell all of you what this historic law has meant for millions of adults and children with disabilities. It has opened doors that were closed for far too long -- from the workplace to the marketplace, from town halls to transportation systems, from restaurants to public restrooms, all across the country. But I can tell you what the ADA has meant to America. By helping to tap the incredible potential of people with disabilities, the ADA is helping us to build a stronger nation for the 21st Century.

For nearly six years, you and I have worked hard to expand opportunity for every American, leaving no one behind. Together, we fought to save the Medicaid program: we worked together to reauthorize the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act, insuring that all of our children can live up to their God-given potential. Now I am committed to working with you to save Social Security first, and to pass a strong enforceable Patients' Bill of Rights that gives all Americans the protections they need to assure high quality health care.

Today, people with disabilities are more fully a part of American life than ever before. But when the unemployment rate for adults with disabilities is many times higher than the national rate, when too many people with disabilities have to make an unthinkable choice between health care coverage and going to work, we must do more.

Last Spring, I appointed the President's Task Force on Employment of People with Disabilities. They have reported to me that far too many workers and employers are not aware of the rights, responsibilities, and legal requirements of the ADA. Few, if any, states are acting on the new provision I fought for in last year's Balanced Budget Act that enables people with disabilities to buy into Medicaid, and keep their health insurance when they return to work.

We must ensure that the laws that we have worked so hard to pass fully serve the millions of Americans with disabilities. Today, I am signing an Executive Memorandum that directs the Justice Department, the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, and the Small Business Administration to do everything in their power to insure that employers and workers across the country are fully aware of the ADA.

I am also directing the Department of Health and Human Services to work with the states and the disability community to take full advantage of the Medicaid disability buy-in provision.

I am committed to working with Senator Jeffords and Senator Kennedy to pass feasible, affordable legislation that builds on our efforts to help people with disabilities to keep their health insurance -- under Medicaid and Medicare -- when they return to work. I want to thank Senator Jeffords and Senator Kennedy for their leadership. I am hopeful that working together we can pass a strong bill this year.

Finally, we have to do more to make sure that our public programs help people with disabilities to live in their communities, not institutions. We believe that the ADA -- and recent court opinions -- require states to provide more services that help people with disabilities to live independently. Today, the Health Care Financing Administration is sending a letter to every state Medicaid director that says: if a person with a disability could live in a community with the right mix of support services, states should take reasonable steps to ensure they can.

With these steps, we will help to realize the full promise of the ADA for millions of Americans.

This month, Vice President Gore announced our plan to build at the FDR Memorial a new statue of President Franklin Roosevelt in the wheelchair from which he led our nation -- a wheelchair he felt he had to hide. We have come a long way since those days -- but you and I know that we still have much to do. We cannot rest until every American is measured not by their disabilities, but by their drive and their dreams. I am confident that working together, we will reach that day soon.

And now, I will sign the Executive Memorandum to improve health care and expand employment opportunities for thousands of Americans with disabilities.

TALKING POINTS FOR DROP BY MEETING
ANNIVERSARY OF AMERICANS WITH DISABILITIES ACT
THE WHITE HOUSE
July 28, 1998

Acks: Sec. Herman; Sec. Shalala; Sec. Slater; SBA Administrator Aida Alvarez; Social Security Commissioner Ken Apfel; Office of Personnel Management Janice Lachance; Becky Ogle, Exec. Dir., President's Task Force; Tony Coelho, Vice Chair, President's Task Force; Justin Dart; James Brady.

Today, I am proud to join you in celebrating the eighth anniversary of the Americans with Disabilities Act. I know I don't have to tell all of you what this historic law has meant for millions of adults and children with disabilities. It has opened doors that were closed for far too long -- from the workplace to the marketplace, from town halls to transportation systems, from restaurants to public restrooms, all across the country. But I can tell you what the ADA has meant to America. By helping to tap the incredible potential of people with disabilities, the ADA is helping us to build a stronger nation for the 21st Century.

For nearly six years, you and I have worked hard to expand opportunity for every American, leaving no one behind. Together, we fought to save the Medicaid program; we worked together to reauthorize the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act, insuring that all of our children can live up to their God-given potential. Now I am committed to working with you to save Social Security first, and to pass a strong enforceable Patients' Bill of Rights that gives all Americans the protections they need to assure high quality health care.

Today, people with disabilities are more fully a part of American life than ever before. But when the unemployment rate for adults with disabilities is many times higher than the national rate, when too many people with disabilities have to make an unthinkable choice between health care coverage and going to work, we must do more.

Last Spring, I appointed the President's Task Force on Employment of People with Disabilities. They have reported to me that far too many workers and employers are not aware of the rights, responsibilities, and legal requirements of the ADA. THE DIRECTOR

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRESIDENT

FROM: Jacob J. Lew
Acting Director

SUBJECT: Proposed Memorandum Entitled "Outreach Actions to Increase Employment of Adults with Disabilities"

SUMMARY: This memorandum forwards for your consideration a proposed memorandum that was prepared by the White House Office of Domestic Policy. The proposed memorandum would direct certain agencies to conduct additional educational outreach to other agencies and the public concerning the requirements of the Americans with Disabilities Act.

BACKGROUND: This Wednesday July 29, 1998 is the eighth anniversary of the Americans with Disabilities Act ("Act"). To commemorate the Act and acknowledge the efforts to date of the President's Task Force on Employment of Adults with Disabilities, the White House Office of Domestic Policy requests that you issue the attached memorandum at an event this Wednesday.

First, although awareness of the Act is increasing among persons with disabilities, employers, and the general public, many people are not aware of what the Act offers and requires. There is a particular need for education among small business, which employs most of the private work force and includes the majority of employers. Second, lack of adequate private health insurance options appear to be a disincentive to leave Social Security programs for work. Few private plans cover the personal assistance and other types of services that make it possible for many people with disabilities to work. As a result, Congress passed a new Medicaid option last year that allows people with disabilities to buy into Medicaid without having to receive cash assistance. Unfortunately, no states are taking advantage of this option.

Both of the problems could be significantly addressed through actions to increase public outreach and education activities about the Act and other legal options. As a result, the proposed memorandum would direct the Department of Justice, Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, and Small Business Administration to conduct additional outreach about the requirements of the Act, and direct the Department of Health and Human Services to conduct additional outreach about the Medicaid state option that, hopefully, would further the goal of increasing the employment of adult with disabilities.

None of the affected agencies objects to the proposed memorandum.

RECOMMENDATION: I recommend that you sign the proposed memorandum.

SUBJECT: OUTREACH ACTIONS TO INCREASE EMPLOYMENT OF ADULTS WITH DISABILITIES

As we commemorate the eighth anniversary of the Americans with Disabilities Act ("ADA"), we have much to celebrate. This landmark civil rights law is making it possible for millions of Americans to participate more fully in society, including employment, access to public facilities, and participation in community and leisure activities, and to do their part to make us a stronger and better country. At the same time, we are reminded that significant challenges remain. Far too many of the 30 million working-age adults with disabilities are still unemployed, especially those with significant disabilities.

To address barriers to work for people with disabilities, I issued Executive Order 13078 on March 13, 1998 establishing the Presidential Task Force on Employment of Adults with Disabilities. By November, it will issue the first in a series of reports on what the Federal Government can do to help bring the employment rate of adults with disabilities to a rate "as close as possible" to that of the general population. However, it has already identified important barriers for people with disabilities who want to return to work that could be addressed immediately. I have also asked the Task Force not to wait until November if they found ways to reduce barriers to work for people with disabilities that could be implemented immediately. Based on the preliminary work of the Task Force and my discussions with the Task Force Chair and Vice-Chair, the need to act in two areas is clear.

First, although awareness of the ADA is increasing among persons with disabilities, employers, and the general public, too many people still are not aware of their rights and responsibilities under the ADA. There is a particular need to educate small business, which employs most of the private work force and includes the vast majority of employers.

Second, lack of adequate private health insurance options appear to be a disincentive to leave Social Security programs for work. Few private health plans cover the personal assistance and other types of services that make it possible for many people with disabilities to work. Recognizing this problem, I proposed and the Congress passed a new Medicaid option last year that allows people with disabilities to buy into Medicaid without having to receive cash assistance. A number of states have expressed a strong interest in offering this new option and I have instructed the Secretary of Health and Human Services to work with them.

Still much more needs to be done to increase public outreach and education activities about these important laws and options. Therefore, I am directing the Attorney General, the Secretary of Health and Human Services, the Chairman of the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, and the Administrator of the Small Business Administration to take the following actions.

First, I direct the Attorney General, the Chair of the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission and the Administrator of the Small Business Administration to expand public education regarding the requirements of the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990 to employers, employees, and others whose rights may be affected, with special attention to small businesses and under-served communities, such as racial and language minorities that may not have ready access to information that is already available.

Second, I direct the Secretary of Health and Human Services ("HHS") to continue to take all necessary actions to inform Governors, state legislators, state Medicaid Directors, consumer organizations, employers, providers and other interested parties about Section 4733 of the Balanced Budget Act of 1997. Section 4733 allows states to provide Medicaid coverage for working individuals with disabilities who, because of their earnings, would not qualify for Medicaid under current law. Additional guidance, letters, technical assistance and other efforts by HHS about the enormous benefits of this option can go a long way in encouraging states to adopt and use this Medicaid buy-in.

This memorandum is for the internal management of the executive branch and does not create any right or benefit, substantive or procedural, enforceable by a party against the United States, its agencies or instrumentalities, its officers or employees, or any other person.

THE WHITE HOUSE,

ADA Anniversary Event
July 19, 1998
DRAFT

Thank you Tony for your introduction and leadership as Vice-Chair of the Presidential Task Force on the Employment of Adults with Disabilities. Let me also thank the White House staff for all of their assistance.

And, most of all, I want to thank everyone in this room for all you have done to expand opportunity for people with disabilities. That, of course, is the guiding spirit of the Americans with Disabilities Act which we celebrate today.

Senator Harkin has said that the ADA ought to stand for the American Dream for All--and that's true. Eight years ago, we as a nation, declared that disability is a natural part of life and the ADA has helped open the door to opportunity in the workforce for adults with disabilities.

But we know there is a great deal more we need to do to help people get through that door. That's what the President's Task Force is all about--and that's why we're here. Not just to commemorate the past, but to commit ourselves to the future. To build on progress.

I'd say there have been two stages leading up to the creation of the President's Task Force. The first came in the 1970s with enactment of the Rehabilitation Act & the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act. That sent the strong message that disabled individuals want to be and should be integrated into American society.

The second stage came with the enactment of the ADA. And since then, more than a million people with disabilities have entered the workforce.

And now, thanks to President Clinton, we are in the third stage--taking on the challenge of a coordinated national employment agenda for people with disabilities.

It won't be easy. We know we have our work cut out for us. We know that three out of four people with severe disabilities are not working. But we also know that people with disabilities want to be empowered--and we need to help make it happen.

And the President has made it clear: This Task Force is a high priority. It is a big deal--and the President wants results. Well, Mr. President, we intend to deliver.

We have been up and running for about six months, and the nitty gritty work is well underway. The announcement the President will make today is a tangible result of that--and a down payment on the work we have left to do.

Our challenge is to keep forging ahead and to stay focused on people-centered solutions. That's why we are looking inside our agencies and thinking outside the box. We understand that the challenges of employing people with disabilities cannot be fixed by one agency alone--it takes an aggressive, coordinated federal strategy. And one look around the room shows that while we come from different backgrounds and agencies, we are on common ground.

Eight years ago, the ADA helped make sure that Americans with disabilities don't face barriers in attitudes, structures, and policies. It's now our job to make sure that Americans with disabilities don't face barriers in institutions--that our policies are coordinated and that we keep working together to knock down obstacles to employment for adults with disabilities--whether it's job training, transportation, health care, technology or any other challenge.

And our President is providing the leadership and giving us the tools to develop policies and strategies to do just that. He truly is committed to putting ability to work, and making America work for all Americans. Ladies and gentlemen, the President of the United States.

Dear State Medicaid Director:

In the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA), Congress provided that "the Nation's proper goals regarding individuals with disabilities are to assure equality of opportunity, full participation, independent living, and economic self-sufficiency for such individuals." 42 U.S.C. § 12101(a)(8). Title II of the ADA further provides that "no qualified individual with a disability shall, by reason of such disability, be excluded from participation in or be denied the benefits of the services, programs or activities of a public entity, or be the subject of discrimination by any such entity." 42 U.S.C. § 12132. Department of Justice regulations implementing this provision require that "a public entity shall administer services, programs, and activities in the most integrated setting appropriate to the needs of qualified individuals with disabilities." 28 C.F.R. § 35.130(d).

We have summarized below three Medicaid cases related to the ADA to make you aware of recent trends involving Medicaid and the ADA.

In L.C. & E.W. v. Olmstead, patients in a State psychiatric hospital in Georgia challenged their placement in an institutional setting rather than in a community-based treatment program. The United States Court of Appeals for the Eleventh Circuit held that placement in an institutional setting appeared to violate the ADA because it constituted a segregated setting, and remanded the case for a determination of whether community placements could be made without fundamentally altering the State's programs. The court emphasized that a community placement could be required as a "reasonable accommodation" to the needs of disabled individuals, and that denial of community placements could not be justified simply by the State's fiscal concerns. However, the court recognized that the ADA does not necessarily require a State to serve everyone in the community but that decisions regarding services and where they are to be provided must be made based on whether community-based placement is appropriate for a particular individual in addition to whether such placement would fundamentally alter the program.

In Helen L. v. DiDario, a Medicaid nursing home resident who was paralyzed from the waist down sought services from a State-funded attendant care program which would allow her to receive services in her own home where she could reside with her children. The United States Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit held that the State's failure to provide services in the "most integrated setting appropriate" to this individual who was paralyzed from the waist down violated the ADA, and found that provision of attendant care would not fundamentally alter any State program because it was already within the scope of an existing State program. The Supreme Court declined to hear an appeal in this matter; thus, the Court of Appeals decision is final.

In Easley v. Snider, a lawsuit, filed by representatives of persons with disabilities deemed to be incapable of controlling their own legal and financial affairs, challenged a requirement that beneficiaries of their State's attendant care program must be mentally alert. The Third Circuit found that, because the essential nature of the program was to foster independence for individuals limited only by physical disabilities, inclusion of individuals incapable of controlling their own legal and financial affairs in the program would constitute a fundamental alteration of the program and was not required by the ADA. This is a final decision.

While these decisions are only binding in the affected circuits, the Attorney General has indicated that under the ADA States have an obligation to provide services to people with disabilities in the most integrated setting appropriate to their needs. Reasonable steps should be taken if the treating professional determines that an individual living in a facility could live in the community with the right mix of support services to enable them to do so. The Department of Justice recently reiterated that ADA's "most integrated setting" standard applies to States, including State Medicaid programs.

States were required to do a self-evaluation to ensure that their policies, practices and procedures promote, rather than hinder integration. This self-evaluation should have included consideration of the ADA's integration requirement. To the extent that any State Medicaid program has not fully completed its self-evaluation process, it should do so now, in conjunction with the disability community and its representatives to ensure that policies, practices and procedures meet the requirements of the ADA. We recognize that ADA issues are being clarified through administrative and judicial interpretations on a continual basis. We will provide you with additional guidance concerning ADA compliance as it becomes available.

I urge you also, as we approach the July 26 anniversary of the ADA, to strive to meet its objectives by continuing to develop home and community-based service options for persons with disabilities to live in integrated settings.

If you have any questions concerning this letter or require technical assistance, please contact Mary Jean Duckett at (410) 786-3294.

Sally K. Richardson

PRESIDENT PLEDGES SUPPORT FOR NEW HEALTH BENEFITS FOR WORKING ADULTS WITH DISABILITIES

On the eighth anniversary of the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA), President Bill Clinton met today with the Presidential Task Force on the Employment of Adults with Disabilities and announced his support for improved health benefits for employed adults with disabilities.

Clinton "I will work with Senators Kennedy and Jeffords to craft legislation which will extend Medicare coverage for low-wage workers, including those with disabilities," President Clinton told the task force. Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., and Sen. James Jeffords, R-Vt., have announced plans to introduce legislation which will expand health coverage under Medicare, Medicaid and Social Security, including coverage of prescription drugs.

President Clinton also directed the Department of Health and Human Services to make state officials aware of an existing Medicaid provision which allows states to continue Medicaid health insurance coverage for employed adults with disabilities whose income otherwise would disqualify them from coverage.

The task force chairperson, Secretary of Labor Alexis M. Herman, welcomed the President's actions. "The availability of adequate health care coverage is one of the major barriers to the employment of adults with disabilities," Secretary Herman said. "The President's commitment to addressing this issue is welcome news for the hundreds of thousands of Americans with disabilities who are ready and willing to go to work but cannot afford health care."

The President also signed an Executive Memorandum directing three federal agencies to increase awareness of the ADA among employers and workers. The ADA, signed into law in 1990, prohibits discrimination in employment against the disabled and requires employers to make certain accommodations if necessary to employ them.

"Education, awareness, and knowledge of the ADA --those are vital steps towards solving the problem of discrimination in the workplace," Secretary Herman said.

"Too many people are still unaware of their rights and responsibilities under ADA," said Becky Ogle, executive director of the task force. "This directive will ensure that more information is made available, especially to small businesses and workers." The Department of Justice, Equal Employment Opportunity Commission and Small Business Administration will be responsible for increasing education and outreach for the ADA.

In addition to Secretary Herman, the task force includes former Congressman Tony Coelho, vice chairperson, and the secretaries of Commerce, Education, Health and Human Services, Transportation, Treasury, and Veterans Affairs, the chair of the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, the director of the Office of Personnel Management, administrator of the Small Business Administration and the chair of the National Council on Disability

The task force was created in March. Vice chairman Coelho was one of the original sponsors of the ADA. The task force is charged with developing a coordinated and aggressive national policy to bring adults with disabilities into gainful employment at a rate as close as possible to that of the general population.

AMERICANS WITH DISABILITIES ACT ANNIVERSARY EVENT

DATE: July 29, 1998
LOCATION: Roosevelt Room
TIME: 1:15-1:30 pm
FROM: Minyon Moore, Bruce Reed, and Gene Sperling

I. PURPOSE

To sign an Executive Memorandum directing federal agencies to increase public outreach and education about important requirements within the Americans with Disabilities Act and the Medicaid buy-in option within the Balanced Budget Act of 1997. This event is also an opportunity to commemorate the 8th anniversary of the historic Americans with Disabilities Act, which was signed into law on July 26, 1990, and to further your commitment to the Task Force on Employment of Adults with Disabilities that you created this spring.

II. BACKGROUND

While the Americans with Disabilities Act makes it possible for millions of Americans to participate more fully in society, the unemployment rate among the 30 million working-age adults with disabilities continues to be significantly higher than that of the general population. For this reason, you signed an executive order in March establishing the Task Force on Employment of People with Disabilities. With Secretary Herman serving as Chair and Tony Coelho serving as Vice-Chair, the Task Force is charged with recommending policies to help increase the employment rate of adults with disabilities. Although the Task Force will not issue its first formal report until November, it already has identified actions that the Administration can take to begin reducing barriers to work. You will issue an Executive Memorandum tomorrow to direct these actions.

The Executive Memorandum will direct relevant agencies to take appropriate actions to expand public education and outreach about regulations within the ADA and the Medicaid buy-in option within the Balanced Budget Act of 1997. Specifically, you will:

- Direct the Attorney General, the Chair of the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, and the Administrator of the Small Business Administration to expand public education about the requirements of the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990 to employers, employees, and others whose rights may be affected -- including, in particular, small businesses and under-served populations.

- Direct the Secretary of Health and Human Services to inform governors, state legislators, state Medicaid directors, consumer organizations, and others about the new Medicaid buy-in option enacted as part of the Balanced Budget Act of 1997. This new option provides Medicaid coverage for individuals with disabilities who, because of their earnings, would not qualify for Medicaid under current law.

You also will announce your strong commitment to working with Senators Kennedy and Jeffords to pass affordable and feasible legislation that helps people with disabilities maintain their health care coverage and return to work. This legislation would extend Medicare for people with disabilities who return to work, eliminating a provision in current law that often requires people with disabilities to choose between work and health insurance. The legislation also would expand the class of people with disabilities able to buy into Medicaid by eliminating the requirement that they have income below 250 percent of poverty and giving state resources and bonuses for taking up this return-to-work option. Although a prior version of the Kennedy-Jeffords bill was not affordable -- costing $5 billion over 5 years -- we have worked hard with the Senators' staff to bring the pricetag down to about $1 billion.

Everyone in Erskine's scheduling meeting thinks this is an event for no more than 20-25 people so you should rank them in priority. I agree, the Roosevelt Room would be tight for Wheelchairs. Janet Murgia thinks MOCs should be invited. Do you have any thoughts on this?
