Ready Racer

Tumble Forms Ready Racer Ready Racer is recommended for children age 18 months to 5 years (approximately 43" 110 cm tall). It has a weight limit 55 lbs. (25 kg).

Ready Racer is a pre-wheelchair pediatric mobility aid that combines high-performance wheelchair handling with sports-car styling. It will improve perceptual-motor skills, strengthen the arms and upper trunk and allow the child to play at peer level. Designed for indoor use, the Ready Racer maneuvers in tight places, moves easily over carpet and rough surfaces and requires minimal arm strength.

The lightweight, high-density foam chassis is covered with moisture-proof, easy-to-clean Tumble Forms coating. Other features include: an ergonomic seat with 15 degree knee flexion and 90 degree seat-to-back relationship; pneumatic tires and a front swivel caster for smooth ease of steering; leg and trunk supports; low-front design for easy self-transfer; 45 degree hip strap belt.

Ready Racer measures 35" x 20" (89 x 51 cm). Inner seat dimensions: 9 1/2"W x 23"L x 13 1/2"H (24 x 58 x 34 cm). Adjustable-Height Handle adjusts in height 24" - 36" (61 - 91 cm).

COMMUNITY TECHNOLOGY

A.1

Product Name: NCR 7401, Accessibly Designed, Web-Based Kiosk

Company Name: NCR Corporation, isSound Corporation, Smithsonian Institution National Museum of American History and Trace Research and Development Center - University of Wisconsin.

Product Category: Community Technology

Product Description: The product is an accessible web-based kiosk identical to the ones being used in support of the Smithsonian Institution's National Museum of American History showcase exhibition. The exhibition commemorates the tenth anniversary of the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) by examining the history of activism by those who have fought for the civil rights of people with disabilities.

See: <http://americanhistory.si.edu/ve/index.htm>

Cost: TBD

Type of Disability Addressed: Cross-disability -- low vision or blindness, physical disabilities, reading disabilities, some cognitive disabilities. These machines do not use sounds, so those with hard-of-hearing or deafness have no difficulty accessing information -- they simply use their vision.

Government Role: The Trace R&D Center serves as the Rehabilitation Engineering Research Center (RERC) covering the area of disability access to information technologies. Funding for the RERC is provided by a five-year grant from the United States Department of Education's Office of Special Education and Rehabilitative Services (OSERS), through its National Institute on Disability and Rehabilitation Research (NIDRR). The grant runs from June 12, 1998 through June 11, 2003. This RERC is part of a network of 15 Centers provided for in the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, as amended. Each RERC focuses on a different topic or disability area.

This RERC covers access by individuals with all types, degrees, and combinations of disabilities to a wide range of new and emerging information technologies, including:

- Computers
- Information transaction machines (e.g., ATMs, kiosks, fare machines, point-of-sale devices and smart cards)
- Home and pocket information appliances (e.g., Personal Digital Assistants)
- Internet technologies (XML, XSL, DHTML, CSS, SMIL, etc.)
- Intranets
- 3-D and immersive environments

Demonstration Description: Visitors will be provided the opportunity to access and use an accessibly designed, web-based, kiosk. The kiosk incorporates the use of Trace R&D Center's EZ Access™ interface techniques. These techniques were implemented into NCR 7401 kiosks by isSound Corporation. EZ Access is a flexible but standard set of interface strategies for allowing people to access and use electronic devices even when they are operating under constrained conditions. The constrained conditions might result from their having a disability or from environmental factors. EZ Access is a set of features that can change the way electronic devices operate to make them easier to use for everybody. The EZ Access package includes features for people with low vision, blindness, reduced hearing, deafness, physical disabilities, reading problems, inability to read, and more. EZ Access is not necessarily complex or expensive to implement, but does provide a standard way for people with disabilities to use all manner of electronic devices, Automated Teller Machines to microwave ovens, to cellular phones, to interactive multimedia kiosks, to coffee vending machines.

Product Name: Virtual Golf

Company Name: Madentec Limited

Product Category: Community Technology

Product Description: Allows people with quadriplegia to golf right beside their able-bodied counterparts on an actual course using a wheelchair mounted computer running Microsoft's Links LS 2000 golf software. The replica of the Pelican Hill golf course is stored in the computer software down to every detail. People with disabilities will golf virtually, using the computer software and assisted technology. These people can participate on the same teams as able-bodied golfers. Golfers with disabilities can drive from hole to hole on the real course in their powered wheelchairs, following the shots they're making on the computer mounted in front of them.

A.6

Product Name: Digital Talking Book

Company Name: NCR Corporation, IDEAL at NCR, American Printing House for the Blind, isSound Corporation

Product Category: Community Technology

Product Description: Digital Talking Books are the next-generation "books-on-tape." These digitally based audio books greatly enhance the sound quality, navigation, and searching capabilities of today's "book-on-tape" technologies.

Demonstration Description: A PC-based Digital Talking Book (DTB) entitled, "Equality of Opportunity: The Making of the Americans with Disabilities Act" by Jonathan M. Young will be available for listening enjoyment by any visitor interested in learning more about this new technology.

Cost: varies with production

Government Role: Currently, talking books for the visually impaired are distributed on audiocassettes. The next-generation technology for this application will be digitally-based, bringing many improvements in sound quality, document navigation, and searching. Under the leadership of the National Library Service for the Blind and Physically Handicapped [Division of The Library of Congress] took a leadership role in developing performance criteria and development standards for next-generation digital talking books (DTB) through the use of the National Information Standards Organization (NISO) standardization process. This standard will ensure compatibility among the many DTB systems expected to be developed.

Type of Disability Addressed: Low-vision, blindness, cognitive and mobility disabilities.

Video description (?)

The National Center for Accessible Media, which invented closed captioning and descriptive video service DVS, would like to be on hand at the VP's residence event. They would bring a video of the Arthur show described and closed captioned, as well as other kids shows and Mystery and Masterpiece Theater. They are the only programs, save Turner Classic Movies that are described now. They would also bring a prototype of the Arthur show that has closed captions at kids' reading levels and that has a sign language interpreter. Their exhibiting needs are pretty simple: VHS monitor, VHS player for 1/2 inch tape, outlet for these and a laptop.

Product Name: Aeron Chair

Company Name: Herman Miller

Product Category: Ergonomic Equipment

Product Description: The Aeron chair's broad range of seat height adjustment allows its user to choose either the forward-bias or semi-reclined position – or anywhere in between – over the course of a long day and through a variety of tasks. With its two-stage pneumatic lift, the Aeron chair has an unprecedented seat-height range. The patented Kinemat tilt mechanism allows the body to pivot naturally and simultaneously at the ankle, knees, and hips – providing a smooth ride and proper support from forward leaning to reclining postures.

Product Name: "POTS on a Pole"

Company Name: National Rehabilitation Hospital

Product Category: Communications Device

Product Description: This is a mobile wireless videophone developed from several commercially-available subsystems under NIDRR Telerehabilitation RERC funding. It permits application of standard computer-free videophones which use everyday analog phone lines (POTS: Plain Old Telephone Service) in a variety of settings where mobility and freedom from cords and cables matters. For example, putting such a system in the home of an outpatient after s/he leaves NRH would allow follow-up rehab consultations (telerehabilitation) between home (or community hospital) and our professionals. Unlike out-of-the-box videophones which are relatively immobile since they're tethered by the power cord and the phone wire, this system places an electronic two-way-window between client (and family) and provider to be rolled about the house so that functional challenges can be demonstrated as well as described. Or imagine having such a unit in a vocational setting where there are several workers with disabilities. POTS on a Pole would make it convenient to set up a mobile video/audio link between workers and employees (and supervisors) and remote vocational counselors who otherwise don't get together anywhere near often enough. This is a project NRH is working on and it is near ready for commercialization, probably coupled with related service.

Product Name: WyndTell Pager

Company Name: WYND Communications Corp

Product Category: Communications Device

Product Description: The WyndTell Pager offers complete wireless communication for people who are deaf or hard of hearing. It operates on a small, palm-sized pager, allowing people who are deaf or hard of hearing to communicate instantly with anyone regardless of hearing level. The pager also gives users the most complete set of communication options, including e-mail, TTY, fax, voice, and alpha paging. The WyndTell pager can demonstrate Text (with pager) to voice (phone) or voice (phone) to text (pager).

Cost:

INPUT DEVICES

D.1

Product Name: Eyegaze System

Company Name: LC Technologies

Product Category: Input Device

Product Description: A communication and control system for people with complex physical disabilities that is run with the eyes. By looking at control keys displayed on a screen, a person can synthesize speech, control the environment (lights, appliances, etc.), type, operate a telephone, run computer software, and access the Internet and e-mail. As a user sits in front of the Eyegaze monitor, a video camera mounted below the camera observes one of the user's eyes. The Eyegaze software continually analyzes the video image of the eye and determines where the user is looking on the screen. (This product is different from Quick Glance System as it allows access to more features.) Can provide examples of how this technology has helped people in employment (e.g. Nations Bank Vice President).

Product Name: Tongue Touch

Company Name: Equipment Company Unlimited (New Abilities)

Product Category: Input Device

Product Description: The Tongue Touch, TTK palate switch array, is an amazingly small solid-state device that places a set of eight tiny switches on the roof of the user's mouth. It is similar to a dental "retainer," which doesn't interfere with speech but can be accessed very easily with the tip of the tongue. This makes control of computers, Adaptable Augmentative Communication devices, powered chairs, etc. possible – wirelessly! – for people with quadriplegia.

Product Name: "Naturally Speaking"

Company Name: Dragon

Product Category: Input Device

Product Description: A speech recognition system for general computer use by people who can't or choose not to use conventional keyboards and other interfaces. This technology is considered nothing short of a revolution. Even at MIT in the early 90's, "continuous" speech recognition was the stuff of doctoral dissertations and scholarly articles. A fine example of "universal" design, i.e. a product which can make sense for people with and without "disabilities" and which gets to take advantage of mass market economy of scale.

Product Name: Total Access System (Archimedes Project)

Company Name: Synapse Adaptive

Product Category: Input Device

Product Description: Synapse Adaptive develops cross-platform solutions that address the requirements of people with a variety of computer input accommodation needs. The Total Access System (TAS) is a universal access environment that seamlessly provides people with disabilities continuous speech recognition and other methods of input across all computer platforms and operating systems. These accommodations can be configured to work on all computer platforms including UNIX, PC, NT, Linux, midrange, mainframe and Macintosh computers. Central to the Synapse Total Access System (TAS) technology is the Synapse Total Access Port (TAP) interface. The Synapse TAP's Switch permits a user to address as many as four computers simultaneously, even if they operate on different platforms. Synapse TAS facilitates speech input without modification of the target computer, without affecting its performance, configuration, or security. Network compliant, the Synapse TAS collaborates and integrates all input modalities - continuous speech recognition, keyboard, mouse, head-tracking, eye-tracking, foot and single switches with the same level of compatibility and flexibility.

COMPUTER HARDWARE

E.1

Product Name: BrailleNote

Company Name: HumanWare, Inc.

Product Category: Computer Hardware

Product Description: BrailleNote is a two-pound portable device that provides breakthrough technology for personal note-taker users, offering global accessibility and connectivity never before available. The goal of BrailleNote is to provide an environment in which users can be every bit as productive as sighted people, without restricting the user's ability to share files with standard Windows applications. Based on the Microsoft Windows CE operating system, the BrailleNote combines a Windows-CE based suite of personal applications like word processing, email, a daily planner, a scheduler and a phone directory with a relational database that can interface with mainstream computing. With the friendly e-mail package and internal modem, one can send and receive messages in a flash. Since it is fully compatible with Windows, users can share Microsoft Word files and keep the format intact. BrailleNote's unique calendar and scheduler, address-list manager, and scientific calculator not only offer powerful individual applications, but allow the user to merge data from one application to another or with its word processor.

Product Name: TouchSense

Company Name: Immersion Corp.

Product Category: Computer Hardware

Product Description: TouchSense allows people to experience the sense of touch while interfacing with a PC -- a sense that has been missing from computing until now. This makes the Internet more accessible to the 6.5 million visually impaired Americans who have encountered barriers while navigating the Internet. Through these joint technologies, a person who is visually impaired is able to navigate the computer environment by "feeling" buttons, menus, and icons, while being guided simultaneously by voice commands.

Product Name: GPS-Talk

Company Name: Sendero

Product Category:

Product Description: Sendero GPS-Talk is the first fully accessible GPS information system for persons who are blind or visually impaired. GPS-Talk is designed for the blind traveler to access street and point of interest information while in a personal car, taxi, bus, train or motor home. Instead of relying on a sighted driver for information about your surroundings, Sendero GPS-Talk gives you independent access to information about nearby streets, addresses, cities and hundreds of thousands of points of interest. GPS-Talk consists of a specially designed talking user interface, digital maps, a GPS antenna and a talking notebook computer. You can use your own computer or purchase one recommended by a Sendero dealer. GPS-Talk is well-suited for use in a vehicle, or, for pedestrian use when configured in a proper carrying case. GPS-Talk software includes Atlas talking map software. It has all the functionality of Atlas plus the benefit of GPS location information. You can find out things like:

- Your direction of travel.
- Heading and distance to your destination.
- Heading and distance to a waypoint or turn.
- Points of interest sorted by proximity to your position.
- Speed of travel.
- Nearest address to your GPS position or your Atlas Explore position.

Atlas is a talking digital map consisting of most addresses and street intersections, nation wide, with a specially designed user interface to navigate and describe this map data verbally using right/left, front/back, the clock face, compass or 360 degree headings. Arrow keys are used to navigate around the map while a speech synthesizer announces as much or little information as the user wants to hear.

Atlas conveys far more than print or tactile maps, such as:

- The length of each block in imperial or metric units
- The heading and distance to a way point or destination
- Points of interest sorted by proximity or alphabetically
- Each block and turn of a route from your current position to a destination.

The size of the GPS-Talk is simply the size of your notebook computer plus a small GPS antenna/receiver. The antenna plugs into the serial or PCMCIA port of your notebook.

COMPUTER SOFTWARE

F.1

Product Name: Verbal-Eyes

Company Name: Future Forms

Product Category: Computer Software

Product Description: Creates accessible electronic forms. When a user opens an electronic form containing the Verbal-eyes control, Verbal-eyes looks at the user's computer to determine if a screen reader is in use by a blind user. If not, the software is quiet and the form is completed as normal. However, if a screen reader is found to be running, Verbal-eyes determines the format for which that screen reader needs to deliver speech and begins speaking to the user. This product is beneficial for any organization that uses forms.

Product Name: Kurzweil 1000 scanning software

Company Name: Columbia Lighthouse for the Blind

Product Category: Computer Software

Product Description: Allows a blind person or a person with low vision to have printed material scanned and read aloud.

OVERVIEW KURZWEIL 3000

The written word is the gateway to extraordinary knowledge. It bridges time, geography, culture, language, and it unlocks some of life's most exquisite treasures. But for those with reading difficulties such as dyslexia or attention deficit disorder (ADD), the simple act of reading becomes a challenge for many, an insurmountable obstacle for some. L&H™ Kurzweil 3000 is helping to meet the challenge and overcome that obstacle.

L&H™ Kurzweil 3000 reads scanned or electronic text aloud using human sounding synthetic speech (L&H™ RealSpeak™). Words are highlighted in contrast as they are spoken. This patented auditory and visual presentation of information helps increase reading accuracy, speed and comprehension for struggling readers. A language module provides additional support for people whose first language is not English.

USE OF THE KURZWEIL 3000 IN K-12

One of the most powerful lessons for a child in the early grades is the thrill of learning -- the energy of art and music, the challenge of numbers, and the infinite possibilities of reading. With L&H™ Kurzweil 3000 reading software, a child struggling to read can share in the magic of reading with full color page scans of any text, adjustable reading speeds, and dual highlighting to engage the student in the reading process. The result is a child that sees reading as a joy, not a chore, and a student empowered with one of the greatest learning tools -- the ability to read well and the desire to read often.

The challenge to excel in the high school years demands a complex mix of discipline, self-esteem, and confidence in one's own abilities. Teenagers face peer pressure, time pressure, and academic pressure, all while struggling with who they are and what they can accomplish. Slow and troubled readers in the high school years can fall behind in academic subjects that require more and more reading, comprehension, analysis, and writing. L&H™ Kurzweil 3000 reading tools help students quicken the pace of their reading, improve comprehension, and develop the confidence to compete...and succeed.
