Dear Alexis:

As I depart I want you to know how much your friendship has meant to me this past year. I learned a lot from you, and you made my work so much easier.

I'm going to miss all those battles you will be fighting in '94- it will be a great year. I hope we can stay in touch.

Sincerely,

Dear Ms. Herman:

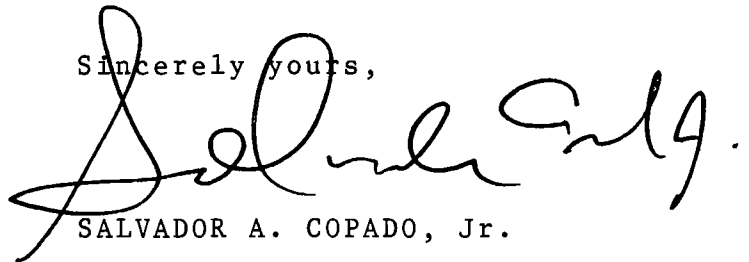

Thanks to the efforts of both yourself, and the President, I arrived at the Federal Correctional Institution in Three Rivers, Texas, today! Now, I can enjoy the love and support of my family on a regular basis.

I am forever indebted to you for your help, and would appreciate your passing the enclosed letter of appreciation on to the President.

For the first time, I feel as though my country actually cares about me, even though I am a prisoner. I intend to make my country proud of me, and to far surpass a simple repayment to society for my transgressions.

God bless both of you.

Sincerely yours,

Dear Mr. President:

When my mother first told me of the letter she wrote asking for your assistance, I never expected a response, much less your intervention.

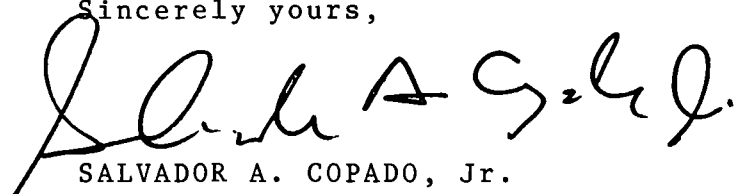

Thanks to you, I arrived at the Federal Correctional Institution in Three Rivers today, and will delight in my first family visit this weekend!

Being both hispanic, and a federal prisoner, I couldn't help but feel as though "politicians" had no time or desire to hear of my plight. Fortunately, this country finally has a President who cares about every single person, regardless of their race, color, sex or socioeconomic status. You, Mr. President are first and foremost a superb human being, and only secondarily a "politician."

I promise you that I will faithfully complete my education and emerge from prison as an honest and productive citizen, warranting your efforts on my behalf. You will always enjoy the utmost gratitude, admiration and support of myself and my entire family.

God bless you.

Sincerely yours,

Dear Friend:

I thought you'd enjoy the enclosed op-ed piece by Victor Kamber which ran in several newspapers over the last couple of weeks.

In the column, Victor slams media coverage of Whitewater, writing that comparisons between it and Watergate are as absurd as mentioning David Letterman and Jeffrey Dahmer in the same breath.

Victor defends Hillary Rodham Clinton, arguing that those who vilify her reveal more about their own insecurities than about anything to do with the First Lady. And he points out the ridiculousness of the "senator-for-sale," Alfonse D'Amato, trying to be a spokesman on ethics.

Hopefully, this op-ed can make some small contribution to giving this town the "reality check" it so desperately needs.

Sincerely,

Lynn Cutler
Senior Vice President

VIEWPOINT

Reality check on Whitewater

By Victor Kamber

WHILE reality and perspective are often alien concepts to the national capital's politicians and news media, the flap over Whitewater sets new records for absurdity.

Consider the following:

▲ Some politicians and pundits are actually comparing Whitewater with Watergate. That's like mentioning Jeffrey Dahmer and David Letterman (recipient of several speeding tickets from the Connecticut state police) in the same breath.

Watergate was a conspiracy by Richard Nixon and his key associates to misuse the levers of presidential power to destroy his so-called "enemies" and obstruct justice. It merited impeachment and any action short of that or his ultimate resignation would have ignited a constitutional crisis. Many of his aides were thrown in jail — and Nixon might have wound up behind bars, too, if not for Gerald Ford's pardon.

By contrast, Whitewater is a complicated series of financial transactions involving the governor of Arkansas and his wife in the 1980s. Republican Justice Departments did not see sufficient evidence of wrongdoing to take action. Now that ex-Gov. and Mrs. Clinton are in the White House, this deserves to be investigated. But remember, if any inappropriate activities occurred — a questionable possibility at best — they would be the equivalent of a traffic violation next to the Watergate serial killer, and not involve presidential behavior.

With regard to the infamous meetings between White House staff and regulatory officials, by all accounts these represent efforts to learn what was going on so they could better answer media inquiries — not to stop the investigation. Still, the meetings should not have occurred, and the White House has pledged never to allow anything like this to take place again. We're not talking about lying to Congress or investigators, cooking up "national security" excuses, invoking "executive privilege," creating 18-minute gaps on tapes, or the many other illicit activities of the

We're not talking about lying to Congress or investigators, cooking up "national security" excuses, invoking "executive privilege," creating 18-minute gaps on tapes, or the many other illicit activities of the Watergate cover-up during the Nixon administration. Whitewater is a much smaller story.

Watergate cover-up.

▲ Hillary Clinton — hailed until recently as Superwoman — is suddenly being vilified by the pack media. For example, U.S. News columnist Michael Barone wrote that "On issue after issue, she has shown startlingly bad judgment." New York Post writer Jack Newfield called her "an Ozark Leona Helmsley." "The problem here is Hillary Clinton," said Evan Thomas of Newsweek on one of the weekend gabfest talk shows.

The maliciousness and spitefulness of the attacks on Mrs. Clinton make it crystal clear that many of her critics have been lying in wait, looking for the smallest vulnerability, just to tear down an intelligent, forceful and powerful woman who threatens their masculinity.

The fact is that Mrs. Clinton is a trailblazer, single-handedly redefining the role of first lady. She is a brilliant attorney, strategist and policy-maker who will deserve the lion's share of the credit when health care reform becomes law. She is a woman of unquestionable integrity. She is not perfect — after all, she's from Planet Earth, not Krypton — but the degree to which she has suddenly become a villain tells us more about those doing the name-calling than it does about her.

▲ Alfonse D'Amato, the most investigated senator in history, has suddenly become the Republicans' point man on ethics. More than anything, that speaks volumes about the GOP's notion of ethical behavior.

From his early days as a go-fer for since-jailed Nassau County Republican Chairman Joseph Margiotta to the last 13 years as senator, D'Amato has treated public office as a business that sells favors in exchange for campaign contributions. As a result, he has been investigated by the Justice Department, the special counsel in the HUD scandal and the Senate Ethics Committee.

The committee found that D'Amato "conducted his office in an improper and inappropriate manner" by allowing his brother, Armand, to use the senator's office — including staffers, telephones and letterhead — to lobby on behalf of a major defense contractor, Unisys (which gave big bucks to the D'Amato campaign). In fact, Armand D'Amato was convicted of federal criminal charges for his Unisys influence-peddling.

The senator systematically pressured HUD to give grants to developers who were large campaign contributors — even to projects outside New York state. This continued a long practice of milking the HUD cow to pay off friends, relatives and donors that started when he was a Long Island township supervisor.

The notion of this senator-for-sale being an ethical watchdog shows just how topsy-turvy things have become in the nether world that exists inside the Beltway.

It's time for the American people to demand that Washington's politicians and news media do a reality check. Maybe then, the issues that really make a difference in people's lives — say, health-care reform — will get the banner headlines, while Whitewater is relegated to the much smaller story the evidence merits.

Kamber, co-host of the NBC Radio debate program, The O'Leary/Kamber Report, is president of The Kamber Group, a Washington-based communications consulting and public relations firm.

DEAR ALEXIS,

THANK YOU FOR THE INTERVIEW. I KNOW THAT YOU HAD SOMETHING TO DO WITH GETTING ME ON THE FLIGHT TO DALLAS ABOARD AIR FORCE ONE, AND I APPRECIATE THAT. I AM ENCLOSING AARON NEVILLE FOR YOUR MUSIC COLLECTION. THE NEXT TIME YOU VISIT WITH THE PRESIDENT, WOULD YOU PLEASE GIVE HIM THIS STEVIE WONDER CD FOR ME?

Dear Tom:

Thank you for your kind note and the Aaron Neville CD. I am glad to have it for my collection.

I was happy to pass along the Stevie Wonder CDs and your note to the President.

You are so thoughtful to think of us.

Dear Alexis and Amy:

President Clinton is truly amazing. When I was with him briefly on April 4 at the breakfast for sponsors of the Easter Egg Roll, he remembered me and his visit to our Management & Meetings Forum. We were pleased to be one of the sponsors of the Easter Egg Roll as an expression of our gratitude to you and the President for his courtesies to the association management profession. Thanks again to both of you.

Cordially,

Dear Amy:

On behalf of the entire Mid-America Committee delegation, I would like to thank you for organizing and serving as moderator for our White House briefing last week.

It was an afternoon which covered a wide range of critical issues. Our discussions certainly emphasized just how vitally important it is for the business and government communities to have frank and open discussion on the issues that are important to us all. Particularly appreciated was the candor of the discussion leaders, and your role in keeping the briefing informal and focused on the interchange of ideas and concerns.

We were disappointed that the President wasn't able to join us for at least a brief appearance (the first time that he hasn't in all the times I have done these), and I believe that there were a few factors that could have let me pull together a larger, better delegation, but all in all, it was a very productive afternoon.

Amy, thank you for helping to make our "Day in Washington" a success for all involved. The Mid-America Committee look forward to working together with you in the months ahead, and to welcoming more senior Clinton Administration officials to meet with our leadership in Chicago.

Best regards,

Thomas H. Miner

Thanks again for everything!
If you're in Atlanta or anywhere near - call & I'll come sit you for a more relaxing visit. 687-2852 (H)
568-2042 (W)

Take care of yourself and continue to look out for him. He needs it.

If you come to visit, you can teach me how to make gumbo. That was definitely beyond the call of duty - but I'm glad I got to see you at home. Now I can picture you there. Thanks again.

1/2 Looking and listening to these two very sharp black women trying to influence policy for our nation.
That was better than seeing & being in such close proximity to the President. I didn't get to shake his hand because the minister I was sitting next to practically knocked me over and then I needed to beat my appointment on Capitol Hill (having missed the earlier one. I promised I be back for Senator Coverdell) I also decided that Bill wouldn't know my hand from Adam. He seemed tired.
Besides which I already had shaken your hand & had a key upon the Congress.

Dear Alexis,

Thank you so very much for your wonderful hospitality! I enjoyed my visit to the White House, the briefing, and that special time with you at your home. I'm glad to get

The briefing was really interesting,
but I must say I felt most proud.

Dear Ms. Herman:

Recently, I was appointed Associate Deputy for Program Coordination at the National Endowment for the Arts. In this position I am responsible for many crucial aspects of the Endowment's work including all of the guidelines and resolution of applied policy issues that affect the various programs. I also have been assigned to work with other federal agencies to develop arts programs in related fields.

This is a career Senior Executive Service position, which is ideal because I now can plan to finish my career at this agency. It is the job that I sought from the beginning.

I could not have achieved it without your support. Know that I am grateful for your help, and if you ever need my assistance, you have but to ask.

Sincerely,

Dear Alexis:

I want to thank you for two things.

First, of course, for your essential help in making the Kick-Off a White House event. With the exception of the somewhat long-winded remarks of our stars, the event could not have been better. The First Lady's speech was very special indeed, and elevated the campaign to a new level. Our press has been excellent, and we are getting a tremendous response from the regional press especially.

But I also want to thank you for your remarks at the end of the program. Your endorsement of me and my program meant a lot to me, especially given that it is your example as the Director of the Women's Bureau that I try to emulate.

Again, thanks.

Dear Sister Alexis:

Although I am not able to see you very often, I want you to know that you remain in my thoughts and prayers. I also want you to know that I think you are doing a dynamite job! The way matters were handled with our now Sister Surgeon General Elders showed your good work. And there are many other significant statements and actions that bear your mark.

I just finished reading From Inside Out. What an important document it is, and let's hope it will address many of the questions and concerns that are floating around in our communities.

Somehow, in the middle of it all, I do hope that you are taking care of yourself. Alexis, you are one of our national treasures, a source of pride for us Black folks, and some kind of a righteous sister. Please find a way to take care of yourself.

If there is ever any way that I can do anything that will be supportive of all that you must do, I think you know that it will be done immediately after the asking.

Sisterly,

Johnnetta B. Cole

Dear Alexis:

This week marks my one year anniversary in Washington, D.C. I wanted to take the time to thank you for your sponsorship. I could not have dreamed I'd be doing this job a year ago.

In preparing for the next campaign that seems just around the corner, I have asked some staff who currently do advance for each of the principals to keep me in mind should they need assistance on any events. This would give me some experience for the campaign.

I recently read that the White House plans on doing several events focusing on the domestic crime problem. Obviously, this is an issue I'm have an interest in and thought it would be an opportunity for me to assist with some of the events. My current and former responsibilities suit me well to get involved in this issue.

Any guidance or assistance you can provide is greatly appreciated. I've enclosed my card for you to forward on to the person or office you deem appropriate to handle this request.

Thank you for your time. Look forward to seeing you again soon!

Sincerely,

Security Bob!
