Talking Points
Tallahassee, Florida

●Thanks for giving us such a warm welcome to Tallahassee. It's a pleasure to be here, and I'm delighted to thank Governor Chiles, Lieutenant Governor Buddy McKay, and Mayor Scott Maddox.

●Florida is a wonderful setting for thinking anew about our mission to keep the American Dream alive for all of our citizens. Florida offers important insight into how best to grow the middle class and shrink the underclass; how to promote the mainstream values of work, family, and community; how to reform government to meet the many challenges we face. As we celebrate the 150th anniversary of Florida's statehood, so much of the promise of America is reflected in this state -- in its diverse economy and resources, in the energy and drive of its people.

I'm reminded of an old story that people tell about the inaugural speech the first Governor of Florida -- Governor Moseley -- gave when Florida became a state. It seems that just as the Governor was about to take his place at the podium, an aide hastily handed him a note. Turns out that the note was from an office seeker looking to be appointed to a state job. So I've always thought that the people of Florida know a good opportunity when they see it.

●There's a great debate going on in Washington about how to change government. The old view is that big, one-size-fits-all government can fix all our big problems. The view that's all the rage today is that government is the source of all of our problems. I believe in the idea of government as partner -- a partner that works to expand opportunity while shrinking bureaucracy; to empower people to make the most of their own lives through education and training; and to enhance our security on our streets and around the world. Government must help create opportunity, but it must also demand more responsibility from all of our citizens -- that's what I call the New Covenant.

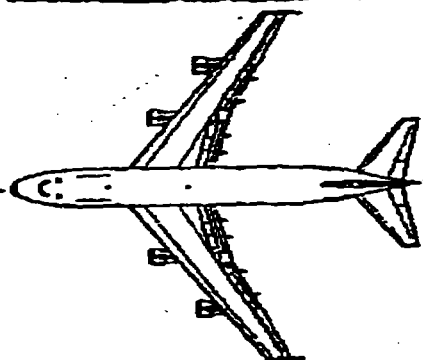

●We've made a good beginning in the past two years. Our Administration has reduced the federal bureaucracy by 100,000 employees, and we're on the way to bringing it down by 272,900 -- creating the smallest federal work force since Kennedy was President, making government leaner and more effective. We've reduced the deficit for three years in a row for the first time since Truman was President, helped to fuel the creation of 6.1 million new jobs, and enabled our economy to achieve the lowest combined rate of unemployment and inflation in 25 years. And in 1994, America created more high-wage jobs than in the previous 5 years combined.

- The investments we're making and the partnership we're building are working, and the people of Florida should be proud of their accomplishments. Unemployment in this state has dropped from 7.4% to 4.5% in the past two years. Florida is creating more than three times as many new jobs a year and more than four times as many private sector jobs a year now as in the previous four years. The EITC will give close to a million lower-income Florida families a tax cut. Expanding the annual expensing allowance is likely to give more than 70,000 small businesses a tax cut this year alone. Many more will benefit in the years to come. About half a million Florida borrowers in the next few years will be able to benefit from our reforms in the student loan program. Our crime bill is under budget and ahead of schedule, working to help Florida to hire more than 950 new police officers -- 12 of them will protect families right here in Tallahassee.
- Still, too many Americans suffer from income stagnation and job insecurity. Despite the economic recovery that has taken place over the past two years, many Americans still face uncertainty. That's why I wanted to bring together in Atlanta today a wide spectrum of people from across the Southeast to assess firsthand how our economic policies are affecting your lives and how we can best further our economic strategy to improve the lives of middle-class families throughout the nation.
- There's a lot more we can do, which is why I've proposed a Middle Class Bill of Rights. My proposal would make tuition for education and job training tax deductible. It would give middle-class people with small children a tax credit. It would allow middle-class families to put aside tax-free savings for education, health care, or buying a new home. And it would establish a new G.I. Bill for American Workers, providing a skill grant or voucher to help laid off or low-income workers get the training they need.
- We can revitalize the American Dream -- Florida has proved that it's possible. Looking around your beautiful state today, it seems hard to believe that just 3 years ago, Hurricane Andrew hit Florida, leaving a quarter of a million people homeless. But the hard work of putting lives and families back together began immediately. The recovery was aided by FEMA and SBA working in partnership with state and local officials to bring relief to folks in need. But it's the spirit and the vision of Florida's communities that have put this state back together again. That spirit is the heart and soul of the American Dream, and that's what makes this nation great.

MEMORANDUM FOR ALEXIS HERMAN

FROM: Debbie Fine

SUBJECT: Supportive Activities Around the President's Visit to Tallahassee

We wanted to give you a sense of some of the support activities going on around the President's trip to Tallahassee, but this is not meant to be an all-inclusive account.

1. Following is a list of the organizations that plan to issue statements to the press. We expect that others will as well, but we will have a better sense of precisely which groups tomorrow.

Clearinghouse on Human Services (coalition of 112 organizations)
Florida Center for Children and Youth
Florida Children's Forum (release attached)
Florida Chapter of Social Workers
The Florida Disability Caucus
Florida IMPACT (release attached)
Pinellas County Head Start
Safe and Drug Free Schools, FL

Others that will try to talk to the press with the same message as above, but who may not issue written statements are:

Youthbuild Tallahassee
Mothers in Crisis
The Family Involvement and Community Development Team

The message of these statements will hit on the following: support of the President's leadership in the areas of welfare reform and education primarily, opposition to the Republican proposals in these issue areas using state specific and national data, calls to rise above partisan politics to find solutions rather than punishing children and families.

2. The above groups, in addition to many others (women, etc.) will also be part of the crowd greeting the President at the airport arrival in Tallahassee.

3. The President of the Florida Fraternal Order of Police Lodge will be at the speech to the Legislature and will be available for press with a positive message.

4. Jacques D'Espinoza is contacting the Haitian papers and radio stations with a message of support for the President.

5. Ellic Mueller, Commerce Department, is going down to Tampa at the request of Suzanna to work with the Hispanic press for positive stories. Tampa Hispanics for Clinton will also be at the speech there.

The Other Religious Community Speaks Out on Welfare Reform

(Tallahassee) As the Clinton proposal for welfare reform states: true reform means moving people to independence, not punishing them for being poor. But the Personal Responsibility Act (PRA) does just that by dismantling key nutrition programs and further restricting, if not eliminating, programs to help low-income families. The Clinton proposal demonstrates more compassion and sound reason by maintaining the entitlement status of programs like School Lunch and Breakfast, which for many are all that stand in the way of stunted growth, iron deficiency, low birthweight, birth defects, and even death.

In a study conducted by Florida Impact in 1991, it was estimated that half a million of our state's children (or one out of three young families) are hungry or at risk. Replacing nutrition assistance programs with one lump sum (or block grant) will result in a $388 million loss of federal funds for Florida. With such a high percentage of hunger among our children, this cut is unconscionable. As stated by Family Involvement & Community Development, a local group that works directly with low-income families:

Many children rely on the free- and reduced-school meals as the only nutritious meal they receive daily. Without these benefits, our children will become what we have tried to erase in other countries: poor, malnourished, and uneducated.

Since real wages have declined, the majority of new jobs are in the service sector; the labor force has outgrown the number of sustainable jobs; and the open world market favors vulnerable third-world lower wage workers, now is not the time to further penalize those low-income American families who suffer disproportionately from these economic changes. Welfare recipients have identified what they need to leave welfare: access to education, job training, and placement; safe, affordable child care; and jobs with good pay and advancement. The waiver granted by the Clinton Administration to Governor Chiles' welfare reform Pilot Project requires a job guarantee as well as provides the enhanced services-like childcare and job training needed to break the cycle of poverty. The Clinton proposal to raise the minimum wage is also commendable but could go further if indexed annually as proposed by Florida's constitutional amendment campaign for a liveable wage.

Balancing a budget at the expense of children reflects a culture without values and an amoral void. This religious community will step into that void speaking loudly--a role with which the Judeo-Christian tradition is not unfamiliar, i.e., standing with the poor and children.

Florida Children's Forum

Voice of the Child Care Network

STATEMENT OF THE FLORIDA CHILDREN'S FORUM ON THE OCCASION OF PRESIDENT CLINTON'S VISIT TO TALLAHASSEE MARCH 29, 1995

The Florida Children's Forum strongly supports the efforts of President Clinton and other elected officials to promote welfare reform legislation that only helps families become self-supporting.

We applaud the efforts of President Clinton to address the child care needs related to welfare reform. Child care is the key to welfare reform -- both to getting parents off welfare, and to helping many low-income families from ever becoming dependent on welfare in the first place. If the government requires parents currently on welfare to go to work, this should not be at the expense of their children's health and safety.

With 13,000 children from low-income families on the waiting list for subsidized Child Care in Florida, any cut in federal funds for child care is unthinkable. Yet, the U.S. House of Representatives has recently passed legislation that would cut child care funds by at least $200 million the first year, and by $1.6 billion over the next five years.

Because the legislation does not provide for any population growth, states like Florida would be especially hard-hit. In the year 2000, Florida would lose child care for over 15,000 children.

Any welfare reform legislation worthy of the name must recognize the need for additional child care to help families work. In Florida, there are 218,588 children under age five on Aid to Families with Dependent Children. Less than half of these children currently have access to any early care and education program. If their parents were required to work, the need to double the Subsidized Child Care currently exists.

The Forum hopes that President Clinton's visit to Tallahassee will mark the beginning of a bipartisan commitment to welfare reform legislation that promotes independent, intact families.

MEMORANDUM FOR ALEXIS HERMAN

FROM: BARBARA WOOLLEY

SUBJECT: MEETING WITH STATE OF FLORIDA WOMEN LEADERS

DATE/TIME: Thursday, March 30, 1995
8:00 AM - 9:00 AM

LOCATION: Room 214, The Florida State Capitol (on 2nd Floor)

PURPOSE: To listen to the State of Florida's Women Legislators and Women Leaders comments and concerns on issues of importance to women and their constituencies and to discuss and allow dialogue on the issues.

BACKGROUND: This request was at the suggestion of Hugh Rodham who is a good friend of Sandi Beare who set up this meeting and worked hard on President Clinton's 1992 campaign (she was very active in bring in women into the campaign).

The Commission on the Status of Women is a non-partisan statewide board that studies issues affecting women and families and makes recommendations to the President, Congress, Governor, Cabinet and Legislature for improvements.

This group contains both Democrats and Republicans and is very interested in hearing the President's firm commitment to improving the status of women in this country. Because Florida continues to serve as a pivotal state in the areas of immigration, welfare reform and health care reform, they are interested in you touching on these areas. Affirmative Action will be right at the top of their list also.

AGENDA: *Opening and Introductions Elsie Crowell, Chair of the Florida Commission on the Status of Women (Resume attached).

*Issues of Concern Elsie Crowell

*Women Legislators Share Concerns of Constituencies.

*Remarks Alexis Herman

FROM: BARBARA WOOLLEY

SUBJECT: MEETING WITH STATE OF FLORIDA WOMEN LEADERS

DATE/TIME: Thursday, March 30, 1995
8:00 AM - 9:00 AM

LOCATION: Room 214, The Florida State Capitol (on 2nd Floor)

PURPOSE: To listen to the State of Florida's Women Legislators and Women Leaders comments and concerns on issues of importance to women and their constituencies and to discuss and allow dialogue on the issues.

BACKGROUND: This request was at the suggestion of Hugh Rodham who is a good friend of Sandi Beare who set up this meeting and worked hard on President Clinton's 1992 campaign (she was very active in bring in women into the campaign).

The Commission on the Status of Women is a non-partisan statewide board that studies issues affecting women and families and makes recommendations to the President, Congress, Governor, Cabinet and Legislature for improvements.

This group contains both Democrats and Republicans and is very interested in hearing the President's firm commitment to improving the status of women in this country. Because Florida continues to serve as a pivotal state in the areas of immigration, welfare reform and health care reform, they are interested in you touching on these areas. Affirmative Action will be right at the top of their list also.

AGENDA:	*Opening and Introductions	Elsie Crowell, Chair of the Florida Commission on the Status of Women (Resume attached).
	*Issues of Concern	Elsie Crowell
	*Women Legislators Share Concerns of Constituencies.
	*Remarks	Alexis Herman

March 27, 1995

MEET AND GREET WITH PERSONS HIGHLIGHTED IN SPEECH
TO FLORIDA STATE LEGISLATURE

DATE: March 30, 1995

LOCATION: Senate President's Conference
Room, State Capitol

TIME: 9:25 - 9:40 a.m.

FROM: Carol H. Rasco/Jeremy Ben-Ami

I. PURPOSE

To meet people who will be in the audience for your speech to the Florida State Legislature whose stories you will be using to illustrate the impact your administration has had on the lives of real people.

II. BACKGROUND

In your speech to the Florida State Legislature, you will be highlighting your administration's success in several areas: where you have given states more flexibility (welfare waivers) to work problems out at the local level; where you have taken the dividends of streamlining government and returned them to the community (the 100,000 cops); and where you have cut bureaucracy and costs to make education more affordable (direct loans).

To illustrate the point, you will be highlighting in the speech people who have benefited directly from these programs. The audience will include five women who have moved from welfare to work under Florida's waiver, 14 policeman who are being hired in Pensacola through the crime bill, and five students from Florida A&M who are participating in the Direct Loan program.

All twenty four will be attending the speech, and some of their stories will be highlighted in your remarks. This meet-and-greet gives you the opportunity to get to know them briefly before giving the speech.

Program Description: Escambia County, the westernmost county in Florida, is bordered on the north and west by the State of Alabama, and on the south by the Gulf of Mexico. It encompasses 662 square miles, including the City of Pensacola and two barrier islands, and is visited annually by 7.2 million tourists. The county is located along a major east-west drug trafficking route. Since 1991, violent crime in the county increased almost 60 percent and property crimes by more than 10 percent. In 1992, the crime rate in Escambia County was 31 percent higher than the average crime rate for the nation.

The county has initiated community policing efforts in some neighborhoods. Under this program, deputies are assigned to work with citizen Community Drug Patrols and Neighborhood Watch Programs.

The newly hired deputies will enable the Sheriff's Office to target several neighborhoods which are the largest sources of drug activity and related crimes. The majority of residents in these areas oppose the rising criminal activity, but are fearful of violent reprisal. Until now, the lack of deputies has precluded any concentrated help for residents. The additional deputies will provide the Sheriff's Office with the flexibility to open storefront police-substations, which will be staffed by experienced officers trained in community-policing approaches. Each neighborhood will create a Community Advisory Committee, comprised of residents and members of the business community, to support these efforts.

Profiles of Participants in Florida's Family Transition Program

Kelly Smith. Escambia County, Florida. 28 years old. One daughter, age 9. Kelly Smith was forced to go on welfare when she became separated from her husband recently after quitting her dead-end job to go back to school. She entered into Florida's welfare reform waiver demonstration project, the Family Transition Program, in April, 1994, which provided her with the support she needed to complete her training as a Medical Assistant and get a full-time job. She is now completely off of public assistance and was recently remarried.

Tane Stargel. Escambia County, Florida. 30 years old. One son, age 2 1/2. Tane Stargel was forced to go on AFDC and food stamps when her husband left her, as she had no money of her own and she had quit her job in order to care for her baby son. Immediately she was enrolled in the Family Transition Program, which provided her with all of the financial and emotional support she needed to become employed again. In June, 1994, she got a job as a Corrections Officer in the Escambia County Sheriff's Department, which pays her a living wage on which she can now support herself and her son without public assistance.

Vivian Jones. Alachua County, Florida. 29 years old. Two children, ages 3 and 5. After receiving AFDC for 18 months, Vivian Jones volunteered for the Florida Transition Program in May, 1994, in order to achieve and maintain economic self-sufficiency. She has subsequently received her GED and is employed as a child care attendant in a local hospital. She is no longer receiving a cash grant, but the Family Transition Program continues to provide the opportunity to increase her education and training and become a Medical Secretary. Due to the support of the Family Transition Program, she is also now receiving regular child support payments.

Irene Marry. Escambia County, Florida. 34 years old. Six children, 8-17 years old. Irene Marry, who has been on and off of welfare for 10 years, entered in the Family Transition Program in March, 1994. The Program has helped her attain her GED and enroll in a vocational school for heating, air conditioning and refrigeration. Upon completion of her training she will have the non-traditional skills she needs to get a high-wage job and be able to support her family.

Melinda Pearson. Escambia County, Florida. 29 years old. Three Children, ages 11, 3, and 1 1/2. Melinda Pearson was forced to go on welfare a year ago, when she became separated from her husband and was unable to afford child care for her two younger children. Through the Family Transition Program, she received assistance in paying for the child care and transportation she needed to get a full-time job. She is currently working at the Naturalizer Shoe Store.
