

FOIA MARKER

This is not a textual record. This is used as an administrative marker by the William J. Clinton Presidential Library Staff.

Collection/Record Group: Clinton Presidential Records
Subgroup/Office of Origin: Council on Environmental Quality
Series/Staff Member: Kathleen (Katie) McGinty
Subseries: [correspondence]

OA/ID Number: 2258
FolderID:

Folder Title:
[Standard Response Letters - March 1994] [Loose] [2]

Stack:	Row:	Section:	Shelf:	Position:
S	61	5	3	3

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Mr. Donald Wicks
Hicksville Middle School
Jerusalem Avenue
Hicksville, NY 11801

Dear Mr. Wicks:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Mr. Edwin Snape
Manageing General Partner
The Vista Group
36 Grove Street
New Canaan, CT 06840

Dear Mr. Snape:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Joy E. Hamilton
4195 Rio Poco Road
Reno, NV 89502-5353

Dear Ms. Hamilton:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Hilary Loupee
2816 Northwoods Drive
macon, GA 31204

Dear Ms. Loupee:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Barbara C. Hill
16010 Tall Pine Drive
Houston, TX 77059

Dear Ms. Hill:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Helen V. Piendl
7484 Mt. Sherman Road
Longmont, CO 80503

Dear Ms. Piendl:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Barbara Cooke
4400 Philadelphia
Space 240
Chino, CA 91710

Dear Ms. Cooke:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Kara Sczensy
314 Bagwell
Box 3371 NCSU
Raleigh, NC 27607

Dear Kara:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Jen Goldberg
4341 Club Run Road
Chantilly, VA 22021

Dear Jen:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Susie Lyons
181 Webster Road
Scarsdale, NY 10583

Dear Susie:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Mr. Richard A. Sanders
2631 McClintock
B Hills, MI 48302

Dear Mr. Sanders:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Mr. Tyler Griffin III
192 Pheasant Run Road
West Chester, PA 19380

Dear Tyler:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

M.P. Hughes
56 SI Mantior Road
Caerphilly Mid-Lylan
SOUTH WALES, GREAT BRITAIN

Dear Friend:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Arlene O'Leary
892 McKenna Avenue
Baldwin, NY 11510

Dear Ms. O'Leary:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Jacqueline Assisi
1157 The Pointe Drive
West Palm Beach, FL 33409

Dear Ms. Assisi:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Jann Vendetti
406 Windsor Road
Wood-Ridge, NJ 07075

Dear Jann:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Holly Bell
2725 Milton Avenue
Solvay, NY 13209

Dear Holly:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Melody M. Mullins
1230 East Colton Avenue
P401
Redlands, CA 92374

Dear Ms. Mullins:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Natasha Huester
420 Hemlock Lane
Mt. Laurel, NJ 08054

Dear Natasha:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Brianna N. Glance
Route 3, Box 159
Fairmont, WV 26554

Dear Ms. Glance:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Tina Romanelli
15210 Bannon Hill Court
Chantilly, VA 22021

Dear Tina:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

M.J. Turcotte, LTC, USAR
66 Garrison Lane
Hopkinton, NH 03229-2100

Dear Friend:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Kristen Lennon
5077 Verbenna Drive
Acworth, GA 30102

Dear Kristen:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Kley Greenfield
208 Liberty Street
Bath, NY 14810

Dear Kley:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Maria Italia
208 Jefferson Street
Hyde Park
Reading, PA 19605

Dear Ms. Italia:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Mr. William Prescott
208 Liberty Street
Nath, NY 14810

Dear William:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Donna Jones
67 Westline Drive
Franklin, OH 45005

Dear Ms. Jones:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Constance M. Engvall
23018 Kaywood Drive
Torrance, CA 90502

Dear Ms. Engvall:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Mr. Howard L. Shuken
128 So. Almont Drive
Beverly Hills, CA 90211

Dear Ms. Shuken:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Jean E. Nelson
1813 Drake Avenue
Panama City, FL 32405

Dear Ms. Nelson:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Bonnie G. Minkler
4119 Glen Park Road
Baltimore, MD 21236-1018

Dear Ms. Minkler:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Laurie McKeon
1404 Foothill Road
Ojai, CA 93023

Dear Ms. McKeon:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Jennifer Roose
2617 23rd Avenue #E21
Greeley, CO 80631

Dear Ms. Roose:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Kerry Schooley
11482 SW 190 Terrace Road
Miami, FL 33157

Dear Kerry:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Natasha Nash
8313 Waterstreet Road
Walkersville, MD 21793

Dear Ms. Nash:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in cursive script that reads "Katie A. McGinty".

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Kellie Ducker
102 Alcester Road
Goose Creek, SC 29445

Dear Ms. Ducker:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Mr. and Mrs. L.E. Hurtz
1515 Sombrero Blvd Apt A-2
Marathon, FL 33050-2470
Friends

Dear :

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Anne E. Batterby
421 E. Foster Street
Palmyra, NY 14522-1437

Dear Ms. Batterby:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Angie Payseur
59 Woodland Avenue
Mountain Lakes, NJ 07046

Dear Ms. Payseur:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Jane M. Korbett
24 Appledor Road
Bedford, NH 03110

Dear Ms. Korbett:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Wendy Pearce Nelson
315 East Costilla Street
Colorado Springs, CO 80903

Dear Ms. Nelson:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Cynthia Lyn Guerra
5203 S.W. 71 Place
Miami, FL 33155

Dear Ms. Guerra:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Mr. John Frederickson
5732 S. Sheridan
Littleton, CO 80123

Dear Ms. Frederickson:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Maryann Stork
308 Maple Avenue
Downers Grove, IL 60515

Dear Ms. Stork:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in cursive script that reads "Kathleen A. McGinty".

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Stephanie Hidichuk
79 Poitras Place
Winnipeg, Manitoba
R2N 2W2
CANADA

Dear Ms. Hidichuk:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Margot Collins
2123 Eagle View Drive
Colorado Springs, CO 8090

Dear Ms. Collins:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Sharon Carr
3888 Barreville Road
Crystal Lake, IL 60012

Dear Ms. Carr:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Lisa Marie Williams
1902 St. Andrews Court
South Arlington, TX 76011

Dear Lisa:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Carolyn Barlow
45 Clifford Road
Albany, NY 12204-2303

Dear Ms. Barlow:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Carolyn Hagans
6890 Burning Tree Drive
Largo, FL 34647-4621

Dear Ms. Hagans:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Sandra Simpson
2239 Kenwood Drive
Kann, NC 28081

Dear Ms. Simpson:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Third Grade Challenge Students
Kemblesville Elementary School
Route 896 Box 188
Kemblesville, PA 19347

Dear Friends:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Mrs. M. Burke
PO Box 68
North Judson, IN 46366-0068

Dear Mrs. Burke:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Marilyn A. Paules
1970 Linden Lane
Whitehall, PA 18052

Dear Ms. Paules:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Mr. Jeffrey Arnett
2750 Decatur
Mesa, AZ 85213

Dear Ms. Arnett:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Laura McKinney
3615 Keystone Avenue, #7
Los Angeles, CA 90034

Dear Ms. McKinney:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Mrs. A. M. Clay
P.O. Box 219
Plumsteadville, PA 18949

Dear Mrs. Caly:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Ingrid Tscharnuter
Tscharnuter Academie for Movement Organization
8 Harbor Court
Mount Sinai, NY 11766-1203

Dear Ms. Tscharnuter:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

The Mansur Family
8326 San Rosenado Drive
Scottsdale, AZ 85258

Dear Friends:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Dolores Cannone
910 Hubbs Street
Delran, NJ 08075

Dear Ms. Cannone:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Anne DiMonti
9 Ponderosa Drive
West Warwick, RI 02893

Dear Ms. DiMonti:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Marilyn A. Chessman
5263 Buffalo Road
Erie, CO 80516

Dear Ms. Chessman:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Mr. John Carson
P.O. Box 782
Farmington, GA 30638

Dear Mr. Carson:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Patsy Hariston
4205 16th Apt C
Lubbock, TX 79416

Dear Ms. Hariston:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Betsy Carson
P.O. Box 782
Farmington, GA 30638

Dear Ms. Carson:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Martha A. Meadows
2139 Beaver Hill Road
Chester Springs, PA 10425

Dear Ms. Meadows:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Heather Isler
Hicksville Middle School
Jerusalem Avenue
Hicksville, NY 11801

Dear Heather:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Angela Bruno
Hicksville Middle School
Jerusalem Avenue
Hicksville, NY 11801

Dear Angela:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Mr. Mario Braccio
Hicksville Middle School
Jerusalem Avenue
Hicksville, NY 11801

Dear Mario:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in cursive script that reads "Katie A. McGinty".

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Mr. Eddie Olsson III
Hicksville Middle School
Jerusalem Avenue
Hicksville, NY 11801

Dear Eddie:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Connie Van Nevel
13576 Brick Road
Granger, IN 46530-8512

Dear Ms. Van Nevel:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Amanda Rogers
14700 Washington Avenue #121
San Leandro, CA 94578

Dear Ms. Rogers:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Mr. Tony Miller
Flat1, 81 Greencroft Gardens
West Hampstead, London Nw6 3LJ
GREAT BRITAIN

Dear Mr. Miller:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Mr. Bennett Milnor
3 Winding Way
Andover, NJ 07821

Dear Bennett:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Jennifer Alexander
BCO 141st SIGBN
CMR 435 Box 614
APO, AE 09111

Dear Jennifer:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Maria A. McFarlane
7045 Woodley Avenue Apt 128
Van Nuys, CA 91406

Dear Ms. McFarlane:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Mary McRay
1264 Redwood Circle #6
Gardnerville, NV 89410

Dear Ms. McRay:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Mr. Mike King
51 Blacksmith Drive
Sudbury, MA 01776

Dear Mr. King:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Mrs. Karen Moyes
1537 Wheaton Way
Concord, NC 28027-9069

Dear Mrs. Moyes:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Ruth Petzold
12811 S. Normandy Way
Palm Beach Gardens, FL 33410

Dear Ms. Petzold:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Elizabeth J. Halbach
35005 San Carlos
Yucalpa, CA 92399

Dear Ms. Halbach:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Mari Raney
1012 Alberta Place
San Diego, CA 92103

Dear Ms. Raney:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Claire Stern
639 Middle Street
Braintree, MA 02184

Dear Ms. Stern:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Mr. David Welfker
5232 Glenmeadow Road
Centreville, VA 22020

Dear David:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Lauren Kish
14518 Battery Ridge Lane
Centreville, VA 22020

Dear Lauren:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Christina Wood
910 Elizabeth Avenue
Columbus, OH 43227

Dear Christina:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Carmen Jacobson
1622 S.W. 129 Place
Miami, FL 33186

Dear Ms. Jacobson:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Mr. and Mrs. Lambert
7325 1st Avenue, So.
Birmingham, AL 35206

Dear Friends:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Lisa Marie Dean
1214 Epsilon
Pasadena, TX 77504

Dear Ms. Dean:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Bernice C. Maertz
N77 W12477 Fond du Lac Avenue
Menomonee Falls, WI 53051

Dear Ms. Maertz:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Mr. Ken Lampkin
14704 Cardigan Square
Centreville, VA 22020

Dear Ms. Lampkin:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Marie W. Schurga
4129 Oak Terrace Drive
Lakeworth, FL 33463-3702

Dear Ms. Schurga:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

Ms. Amy B. Dailey
3859 Hoyer Road
Jackson, MI 49201

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

Dear Ms. Dailey:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Wendy and Hilary Christensen
120 W. Lincoln Avenue
Telford, PA 18969

Dear Friends:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

A & E Clark & Family
85, Monument Road
Alloway, Ayr
SCOTLAND KA7 2UF

Dear Friends:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Kay Murray
306 Monahan Street
Aliquippa, PA 15001

Dear Ms. Murray:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Paula Dodson
246 River Hills Drive
Jacksonville, FL 32216-8925

Dear Ms. Dodson:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Angela M. Macias
103 Westchase Drive
Charleston, SC 29407

Dear Ms. Macias:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Jill Donegan
1224 Coosa Street
Athens, TN 37303

Dear Ms. Donegan:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

G. Cocke
820 Skyline Drive
Willis, TX 77378

Dear Friend:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Mrs. Frances M. Cone
2663 Moss Lane
Marietta, GA 30067

Dear Ms. Cone:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

SAVE
Williamstown High School
561 Clayton Road
Williamstown, NJ 08094

Dear Friends:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Mr. Brian E. Carr
91 Main Street
Dobbs Ferry, NY 10522

Dear Mr. Carr:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

M.M.W. Martin's Class
111 St. John Street
Darlington, SC 29532

Dear Friends:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Danielle Calloway
5407 Gladewright
Centreville, VA 22020

Dear Danielle:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in cursive script that reads "Katie A. McGinty".

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Lacey Walters
1605 Sherwood Way
Emporia, KS 66801

Dear Lacey:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Mrs. Delia Burt
Penny Thatch
Chapletown, Petit
CO. Kerry
IRELAND

Dear Mrs. Burt:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Carrie Shank
4213 Palmetto Drive
Lexington, KY 40513

Dear Ms. Shank:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Patti Murray
249 Berger Street
Somerset, NJ 08873

Dear Ms. Murray:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Mrs. Cynthia Pussinger
999 Mulberry Lane
Barnhart, MO 63012

Dear Ms. Pussinger:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Mr. Jason D. Moore
P.O. Box 25293
Prescott Valley, AZ 86312

Dear Mr. Moore:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Christie L. Thurman
16226 Manzanita Trail
Dewey, AZ 86327-5808

Dear Ms. Thurman:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Saint Raphael School
31500 Beechwood
Garden City, MI 48135

Dear Friends:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Mrs. Epperson's Class
School District #50
Fairview Elementary School
7826 Fairview Avenue
Denver, CO 80221

Dear Friends:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Lanae Savu
1467 Oak Springs Drive
Marietta, GA 30066

Dear Lanae:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Lauren M. Porsch
143 San Juan Avenue
Albertson, NY 11507

Dear Lauren:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Mr. Mike Doughty
121 Knotty Oak Drive
Mt. Laurel, NJ 08054

Dear Mike:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Elisa Soll
24 Lancelot Lane
Mt. Laurel, NJ 08054

Dear Elisa:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Meghan Barr
31 Stratford Lane
Mt. Laurel, NJ 08054

Dear Meghan:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Sarah Simonds
5700 Turf Lane #43
Olympia, WA 98513

Dear Sarah:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Patti Bertucelli
1530 Escalona Drive
Santa Cruz, CA 95060

Dear Ms. Bertucelli:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Vorron Yawa
145 Knotty Oak Drive
Mt. Laurel, NJ 08054

Dear Vorron:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Dale McClarty
7825 Kelly Beach Road
Olympia, Washington 98513

Dear Dale:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Michelle L. Kincheloe
6450 S. Pontiac Court
Englewood, CO 80111

Dear Michelle:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Mary Anne Stuckart
4128 S. Garfield
Spokane, WA 99203

Dear Ms. Stuckart:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Harrington Elementary School
2401 East 37th Avenue
Denver, CO 80205

Dear Friends:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Colleen Brown
7943 68th SE
Olympia, WA 98513

Dear Ms. Brown:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Amanda Leverett
Flour Buff Elementary
Waldron Road
Corpus Christi, TX 78418

Dear Amanda:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Amy Mody
42 Rhodes Drive
N.H.P., NY 11040

Dear Amy:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Lindsay Varsaco
3 Hyde Park Court
Mt. Laurel, NJ 08054

Dear Lindsay:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Mr. Seth McLeod
4062 Maxanne Drive
Kennsaw, GA 30144

Dear Seth:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Eileen and Lori Marie Gagliardi
30 Lillie Lane
Staten Island, NY 10314

Dear Friends:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Lisa Iorio
37 Neptune Lane
E. Patchogue, NY 11722

Dear Ms. Iorio:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. AnnMarie Belotti
2110 Dill Drive
Orlando, FL 32837

Dear Ms. Belotti:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Mr. Richard Macone
1752 Forest Hill Road
Staten Island, NY 10314

Dear Mr. Macone:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. RoseAnn Giacchi
265 Logan Avenue
Bronx, NY 10465

Dear Ms. Giacchi:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Brigitte Abbey
508 10th Street
Brooklyn, NY 11215

Dear Ms. Abbey:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Barbara Chudilowsky
1624 Danromas Way
San Jose, CA 95129

Dear Ms. Chudilowsky:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Mr. Eric Glosick
208 Liberty Street
Bath, NY 14810

Dear Eric:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Gillian Granger
62 Jackson Avenue
Leeds LS8 1N5
UNITED KINGDOM

Dear Ms. Granger:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Jennifer Floyd
591 Laura Drive
Marietta, GA 30066

Dear Jennifer:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

A. Smith's Class
Schmucker Middle School
56045 Bittersweet Road
Mishawaka, IN 46545-7799

Dear Friends:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Kimberly Owen's Class
Rich Acres Elementary School
Route 6, Box 235
Martinsville, VA 24112

Dear Friends:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Debbie Kohlenstein's Class
4831 McAlpine Lane
Charlotte, NC 28212

Dear Friends:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March, 1994

The Glispin Family
54 Elizabeth Street
Pemberton, NJ 08068

Dear Friends:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March, 1994

MMr. and Mrs. Charles A. Hipple
91 Meadowbrook
Dayton, OH 45415

Dear Friends:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Kathryn Harris, DVM
3213 20th Avenue, SE
Rio Rancho, NM 87124

Dear Ms. Harris:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Barbara King and Family
516 Hiller Street
Belmont, CA 94002

Dear Friends:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Rebecca M. Dellinger
7300 Savoy Drive
Ft. Worth, TX 76133-6536

Dear Ms. Dellinger:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Mrs. Budd's Class
Caravel Academy
2801 Del Laws Road
Bear, DE 19701

Dear Friends:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Amanda Miller
Flour Bluff Elementary
Woldern Road
Corpus Christi, TX 78418

Dear Amanda:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Marguerite Vaughan
"Countryside" 118 N
8775 20th Street
Vero Beach, IL 32966

Dear Ms. Vaughan:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Susan L. Suing, CPA
16618 Pierce St.
Omaha, NE 68130

Dear Ms. Suing:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Kimberly Olds
E. 419 Hawthorne #8
Spokane, WA 99218

Dear Ms. Olds:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Mr. Mead Mier
9626 North 40th Place
Phoenix, AZ 85028

Dear Mr. Mier:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Miriam Johnson
5711 Lee Road 240
Phenix City, AL 36867

Dear Miriam:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Mr. Brad Sinclair
415 W. Taylor Street
Shelbyville, IN 46176

Dear Brad:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Jermaine Gilliland
1115 White Hall Drive
Mt. Pleasant, SC 29464

Dear Jermaine:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Victoria Manigault
555 Hwy 41
Mt. Pleasant, SC 29464

Dear Ms. Manigault:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Nancy J. Lieber
244 Winifred Avenue
Yonkers, NY 10704-2251

Dear Ms. Lieber:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

B.E. Copeland
3572 S. Charles Place
Cincinnati, OH 45208

Dear Friend:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Mr. Dane E. Kidd
Flour Bluff Elementary
Waldron Road
Corpus Christi, TX 78418

Dear Dane:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Courtney Jones
3559 Lee Rd. 248
Smiths, AL 36877

Dear Courtney:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Mr. Tommy Claridy
5007 Scarlet Drive
Phenix City, AL 36867

Dear Tommy:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Lakisha Kennedy
2174 Josephine Road
Mt. Pleasant, SC 29464

Dear Lakisha:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Rhett and Gennel Zimmerman
RD #6 Box 311
Blimline Road
Sinking Spring, PA 19608

Dear Friends:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Cara Tarner
17 Searingtown Avenue
Albertson, NY 11507

Dear Cara:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

C. Chivers-Keller Family
42 Prince of Wales Avenue
Southampton SO1 4LR
UNITED KINGDOM

Dear Friends:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. B. McLellan
21 Suttle Llose
Morton West
Laolisle Lumbonia ENGLAND

Dear Ms. McLellan:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Judith A. Switzer, Ph.D.
Communications
Bucks County Community College
Founders 107
Swamp Road, Newtown PA 18940

Dear Dr. Switzer:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Mr. Christopher Nahley
755 Lee Road 776
Valley, AL 36854

Dear Christopher:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Angie Parkman
105 Davids Drive
Seale, AL 36875

Dear Angie:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Katherine O'Neal
6239 Charing Drive
Columbus, GA 31909

Dear Katherine:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Nicole Brownlee
2031 Sprucewood Court
Mt. Pleasant, SC 29464

Dear Nicole:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Caralee Schmitt
2270 Fulton Street
San Francisco, CA 94117

Dear Caralee:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm