

FOIA MARKER

This is not a textual record. This is used as an administrative marker by the William J. Clinton Presidential Library Staff.

Collection/Record Group: Clinton Presidential Records
Subgroup/Office of Origin: Council on Environmental Quality
Series/Staff Member: Kathleen (Katie) McGinty
Subseries: [correspondence]

OA/ID Number: 2258
FolderID:

Folder Title:
[Standard Response Letters - March 1994] [Loose] [3]

Stack:	Row:	Section:	Shelf:	Position:
S	61	5	3	3

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Laura Shigemitsu
13962 Dittmar Drive
Whittier, CA 90605-2410

Dear Ms. Shigemitsu:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Mrs. Gertrude Mallon
2142 Devereaux Avenue
Philadelphia, PA 19149

Dear Mrs. Mallon:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Gina Marie
296 West Moorestown Road
Wind Gap, PA 18091

Dear Gina:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Judy Hulbert
2855 S. Zurich Court
Denver, CO 80236-2036

Dear Ms. Hulbert:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Hazel M. Dargatz
155 Kensington Drive
Delaware, OH 43015

Dear Ms. Dargatz:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Sandra Jagusch
21 S. Sandusky Street
Delaware, OH 43015

Dear Ms. Jagusch:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Blake Rand Pierce
Flour Bluff Elementary
Waldron Road
Corpus Christi, TX 78418

Dear Blake:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Valerie Jackson
Flour Bluff Elementary
Waldron Road
Corpus Christi, TX 78418

Dear Valerie:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Ashlëy Skrobarczyk
Flour Bluff Elementary School
Waldron Road
Corpus Christi, TX 78418

Dear Ashley:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Joan M. Corrigan
4445 Artesian Avenue
Chicago, IL 60625

Dear Ms. Corrigan:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Ameer Shah
1 Churchhill Drive
New Hyde Park, NY 11040

Dear Ameer:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Alanna Kennedy
725 Foch Blvd
Williston Park, NY 11596

Dear Alanna:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Amy Bolton
13485 Finley Road Apt 1M
Lombard, IL 60148

Dear Amy:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Kathy Arbour
5928 N. 11th Street
Philadelphia, PA 19141

Dear Ms. Arbour:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

UHA
P.O. Box 1070
Hopkinsville, KY 42240

Dear Friends:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Kristen Dolish
Box 410B Means Road
New Wilmington, PA 16142

Dear Kristen:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Brittany Greulich
Flour Bluff Elementary
Waldron Road
Corpus Christi, TX 78418

Dear Brittany:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Heather Ashford
PO Box 1122
Clayton, NC 27520

Dear Heather:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

P. Dunlap
Sunflower Elementary
Box 268
Paola, KS 66071

Dear Friends:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Cher Tenwood
5113 Lansdowne Drive
Solon, OH 44139

Dear Ms. Tenwood:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Marilyn Guzman
2115 Route 94
Salisbury Mills, NY 12577-5207

Dear Ms. Guzman:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. B. Clarke's Class
Kathryn D. Markley Elementary School
Church Road
Malvern, PA 19355

Dear :

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Miss Karen Kelly's Class
Penn Beach School
96 Kansas Drive
Pennsville, NJ 08070

Dear Friends:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Mrs. Hammer's Third Grade Class
Pedkey Elementary School
Box 6, W. Main Street
Pedkey, IN 47373

Dear Friends:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Lawhon Jr. Kippers Environmental Organization
Lawhon Elementary
Pearland Independent School District
PO Box 7
Pearland, TX 77588-0007

Dear Friends:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Miss Alexnader's 4th Graders
Ward L. Myers Elementary
New Street
Muncy, PA 17756

Dear Friends:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Moises Roman
616 Veteran Avenue
Los Angeles, CA 90024

Dear Moises:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Patricia Donoso
843 Bay Street #12
Santa Monica, CA 90405

Dear Patricia:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Carmen Burkett
5460 Kimstone Avenue
Culver City, CA 90230

Dear Carmen:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Dolores Romo
11262 Barman Avenue
Culver City, CA 90230

Dear Dolores:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Alexandra Schmidt
3833 Park Blvd. #7
Palo alto, CA 94306

Dear Ms. Schmidt:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Francis P. Lynch
162 Solana Point Circle
Soloma Beach, CA 92075

Dear Ms. Lynch:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Jan McDonald
14200 Bluff Road
Traverse City, MI 49684

Dear Ms. McDonald:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Anne E. Carr, CRS, GRI
Sunstone Realty, Inc.
3210 South Ocean Blvd. Suite 505
Highland Beach, FL 33487

Dear Ms. Carr:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Linda Stabile
4950 N. Marine Drive, #1105
Chicago, IL 60640

Dear Ms. Stabile:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Mr. Raymond Joseph
59a Marine Promenade
New Brighton Merseypride LQ5 2JS
UNITED KINGDOM

Dear Mr. Joseph:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Jeanne Boyd
1160 apache Drive
Florissant, MO 63033

Dear Ms. Boyd:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Frances H. Newell
22354 Country Club Lane
Davidson, NC 28036

Dear Ms. Newell:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Mr. Michael McKinley
711 Nora Lane
Mt. Pleasant, SC 29464

Dear Michael:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Brooke Weldon
Wando High School
1560 Mathis Ferry Road
Mt. Pleasant, SC 29464

Dear Brooke:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Mr. Gerardo Soto
4585 Lexington Avenue #1
Los Angeles, CA 90029

Dear Gerardo:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in cursive script that reads "Katie A. McGinty".

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Jean Harrington
535 Broadway
Venice, CA 90291

Dear Jean:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Katharine Threlkeld's Class
P.O. Box 195
Woodland Mills, TN 38271

Dear Friends:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in dark ink, reading "Kathleen A. McGinty". The signature is written in a cursive, flowing style.

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

The Uppen Dublin High School Ecology Club
800 Lock Alsh Avenue
Ft. Washington, PA 19034

Dear Friends:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Mae Barrena
80 Old McKaskey Road
Cartersville, GA 30120

Dear Ms. Barrena:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Mr. Will Wright
6100 Marlowe Drive
Columbus, GA 31904

Dear Will:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Juliet Perrucci
4857 Pond Chase
Kennesaw, GA 30144

Dear Juliet:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Pam Dunlop's Second Grade
Sunflower Elementary
Paola, KS 66071

Dear Friends:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Brooke Cole
29 Eason Drive
Phenix City, AL 36869

Dear Brooke:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Mr. Edward Lee Palmer
415 Taylor Street
Shelbyville, IN 46176

Dear Edward:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Lauren Williams
497 Lee Road 281
Salem, AL 36874

Dear Lauren:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Emily Culpepper
466 Chambliss Road
Cataula, GA 31804

Dear Emily:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Mr. Brandon Snellings
1806 Britton Drive
Phenix City, AL 36867

Dear Brandon:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Lindsey Mixon
292 Hennon Drive
Cataula, GA 31804

Dear Lindsey:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in cursive script that reads "Katie A. McGinty".

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Nicki Hockenbury
1148 Highway 165
Seale, AL 36875

Dear Nicki:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Mr. Greg Jones
71 Maringo Creek Road
Phenix City, AL 36869

Dear Greg:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Ashlee Thompson
4208 Surrey Lane
Phenix City, AL 36867

Dear Ashlee:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Amy Grawe
142 Charles Street
Washington, PA 15301

Dear Ms. Grawe:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Mr. Thomas C. Letts
7309 Calibre Park Drive #111
Durham, NC 27707

Dear Mr. Letts:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Jena Nobley
415 W. Taylor Street
Shelbyville, IN 46176

Dear Jena:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in cursive script that reads "Kathleen A. McGinty".

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

D.E. Gooding
415 W. Taylor
Shelbyville, IN 46176

Dear Friend:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Heather Sparks
415 W. Taylor Street
Shelbyville, IN 46176

Dear Heather:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Keri Killen
415 W. Taylor Street
Shelbyville, IN 46176

Dear Keri:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Sallie Miller's Class
Teacher of Pre-Primary Impaired Children
Armada Area Schools
74500 Burk Street
Armada, MI 48005

Dear :

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Mary K. Stech
611 N. Craig Drive
Mahomet, IL 61853

Dear Mary:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Mr. Jay Blackman
4610 Astible Circle
Acworth, GA 30102

Dear Jay:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Kimberly Kolinski
58 Laurelhurst Road
Rochester, NY 14626

Dear Kimberly:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Pat Flynn
415 W. Taylor Street
Shelbyville, IN 46176

Dear Pat:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in cursive script that reads "Katie A. McGinty".

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Colleen Harrell
415 W. Taylor Street
Shelbyville, IN 46176

Dear Colleen:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Mr. Adam Elliot
415 W. Taylor Street
Shelbyville, IN 46176

Dear Adam:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Desiree Higdon
415 W. Taylor Street
Shelbyville, IN 46176

Dear Desiree:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Mr. Dennis Tucker
415 W. Taylor Street
Shelbyville, IN 46176

Dear :

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Walid Zaza
61 Lee Avenue
Albertson, NY 1507

Dear Walid:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Manska Lund
7 Edgemere Drive
Searingtown, NY 11507

Dear Manska:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Jessica Sweet
208 Liberty Street
Bath, NY 14810

Dear Jessica:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Shannon Fleishman
208 Liberty Street
Bath, NY 14810

Dear Shannon:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Beverley Henderson
767 Lockhaven Drive
Pacifica, CA 94044

Dear Beverley:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Chrissy Kline
416 Anna Maria Drive
Mars, PA 16046

Dear Chrissy:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Mr. Joseph Mc Kenney
415 W. Taylor Street
Shelbyville, IN 46176

Dear Joseph:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Mr. Jeff Rogers
415 W. Taylor Street
Shelbyville, IN 46176

Dear Jeff:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Heather Bradley's Class
Sambra del Monte
9110 Shoshane, NE
Albuquerque, NM 87111

Dear Friends:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Jayne Stephens
N.K. West Elementary
RR1, Box
Bruceville, IN 47516

Dear Jayne:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in cursive script that reads "Kathleen A. McGinty".

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Amanda Luttrell
North Knox West Elementary
RR!, Box
Bruceville, IN 47516

Dear Amanda:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Cathy Hillman's Class
6301 Northumberland Street
Pittsburgh, PA 15217

Dear Friends:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Mr. John Bryare
5501 Springfield Court
Phenix City, AL 36867

Dear John:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Karen Adams-Ray
164 Linwood Avenue
Jamestown, NY 14701

Dear Ms. Adams-Ray:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Kathy Vitale's Class
Mineral County School District
P.O. Box 1540
Hawthorne, NV 89415

Dear Friends:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Andrea VonHagn
208 Liberty Street
Bath, NY 14810

Dear Andrea:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Erin Denison
1925 S. Maun Street
Hopkinsville, KY 42240

Dear Erin:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Mr. Clint Smith
2909 Harris Avenue
Phenix, AL 36867

Dear Clint:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Stephanie Johnson
1908 Lynn Drive
Phenix, AL 36867

Dear Stephanie:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Angela Salva
21225 Mary Lynn Drive
Waukesha, WI 53186

Dear Angela:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Nancy Wilson's Class
Ripley High School
School Street
Ripley, WV 25271

Dear Friends:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Jessica Rogers
208 Liberty Street
Bath, NY 14810

Dear Jessica:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Mr. Nathan Longwell
208 Liberty Street
Bath, NY 14810

Dear Nathan:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Brittany Hogan
1184 Broward Drive
Marietta, GA 30066

Dear Brittany:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Ashley Smathers
4126 Oak Ferry Drive
Kennesaw, GA 30144

Dear Ashley:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Parulski.
208 Liberty Street
Bath, NY 14810

Dear Parulski:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Brandyn Sosbe
415 W. Taylor Street
Shelbyville, IN 46176

Dear Brandyn:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Alexandra Beckner
415 W. Taylor Street
Shebyville, IN 46176

Dear Alexandra:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Natasha Brewer
415 W. Taylor Street
Shelbyville, IN 46176

Dear Natasha:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Laura Parkman
542 Highway 16950
Seale, AL 36875

Dear Laura:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Martha Fitzgerald
120 Retreat Avenue C3
Hartford, CT 06106

Dear Martha:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in cursive script that reads "Kathleen A. McGinty".

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Mr. Scott Cobler
415 W. Taylor Street
Shelbyville, IN 46176

Dear Scott:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Mr. Nick Biddinger
415 W. Taylor Street
Shelbyville, IN 46176

Dear Nick:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Jessica Killey
415 W. Taylor Street
Shelbyville, IN 46176

Dear Jessica:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Mr. Luke Willard
415 W. Taylor Street
Shelbyville, IN 46176

Dear Luke:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Amber DeWitt
415 W. Taylor Street
Shelbyville, IN 46176

Dear Amber:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Lisa Russell
415 W. Taylor Street
Shelbyville, IN 46176

Dear Lisa:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Mr. Aaron Smith
415 W. Taylor Street
Shelbyville, IN 46176

Dear Aaron:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Sabrina Dawson
415 W. Taylor Street
Shelbyville, IN 46176

Dear Sabrina:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Jyll Smolev
164 Boulder Ridge Road
Scarsdale, NY 10583

Dear Jyll:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Autumn Spears
5240 Clark Road
Cameron, NY 14819

Dear Autumn:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Yvonne Graham
Heyward Road
Effingham, SC 29541

Dear Yvonne:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Audrey Kitchens
2010 New Kemp Road
Marietta, GA 30666

Dear Audrey:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Anne M. Keddy
208 Liberty Street
Bath, NY 14810

Dear Anne:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Reese Stewart
208 Liberty Street
Bath, NY 14810

Dear Reese:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Mr. Chuck Hoad
208 Liberty Street
Bath, NY 14810

Dear Chuck:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Mr. Josh Tracy
208 Liberty Street
Bath, NY 14810

Dear Josh:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Beth Neal
311 Dumbarton Road
Gahanna, OH 43230

Dear Beth:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Friends of the Whales
5123 Susan
Amarillo, TX 79110

Dear Friends:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Judy Bencivengo
1137 12th #8
Santa Monica, CA 90403

Dear Ms. Bencivengo:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Brittany Walker
Mucksville Elementary
Cemetery Street
Mocksville, NC 27018

Dear Brittany:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Mr. Michael Lifeski
208 Liberty Street
Beth, NY 14810

Dear Michael:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Angela Smith
208 Liberty Street
Bath, NY 14810

Dear Angela:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Karie Holland
6010 Buck Settlement Road
Bath, NY 14810

Dear Karie:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Terri Hopkins
208 Liberty Street
Bath, NY 14810

Dear Terri:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Katy Acuff
45 Lee Road 609
Smithe, AL 36877

Dear Katy:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Amy Long
208 Liberty Street
Bath, NY 14810

Dear Amy:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Sara Lauzze
208 Liberty Street
Bath, NY 14810

Dear Sara:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Mr. Clinton Webb
3014 Oak Drive
Marietta, GA 30066

Dear Clinton:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

F. Gibson's Class
St. Philomena School
40th and 6th
Beaver Falls, PA 15010

Dear Friends:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Mrs. Herrick's Third Grade
Douglas Elementary
Box 186
Saugatuck, MI 49453

Dear Friends:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Amy O'Dair
290 Woodmore Drive
Monument, CO 80132

Dear Ms. O'Dair:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Weir's Class
Green Chimneys School
Putnam Lake Road
Brewster, NY 10509

Dear Friends:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Mr. John Little II
4605 22nd Avenue
Phenix City, AL 36867

Dear John:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Heather Vogt
208 Liberty street
Bath, NY 14810

Dear Heather:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Julie Morrison
3522 Key Street
Marietta, GA 30066

Dear Julie:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Mr. William E. Sperling
PO Box 2400
Idyllwild, CA 92549

Dear Mr. Sperling:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March, 1994

Ms. Pamela Ecsid
16515 NE 99th Street
Redmond, WA 98052

Dear Ms. Ecsid:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm