

FOIA MARKER

This is not a textual record. This is used as an administrative marker by the William J. Clinton Presidential Library Staff.

Collection/Record Group: Clinton Presidential Records
Subgroup/Office of Origin: Council on Environmental Quality
Series/Staff Member: Kathleen (Katie) McGinty
Subseries: [correspondence]

OA/ID Number: 2258
FolderID:

Folder Title:
[Standard Response Letters - April 1994] [Loose]

Stack:	Row:	Section:	Shelf:	Position:
S	61	5	3	3

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Ms. Rhea Edge
313 North Main Street
Bloomington, IL 61701

Dear Ms. Edge:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Ms. Tonnie G. Maniero
840 S. Pennsy Street
Denver, CO 80209

Dear Ms. Maniero:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Richard and Mary Bevington
982 Spring Gulch Road
Lyons, CO 80540

Dear Friends:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Ms. Suzan Stewart
12815 Goldwaite #207
Dallas, TX 75230

Dear Ms. Stewart:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Ms. Terry C. Delcore
269 8th Street 3B
Wheeling, IL 60090-2760

Dear Ms. Delcore:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

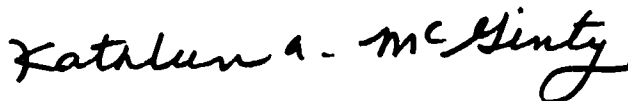

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Ms. Madge Grable
837 Waterford Drive
Frederick, MD 21702

Dear Ms. Grable:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Ms. Kara D'Ambrosio
Crossroads School
19 St. Mary Street
West Warwick, RI 02893

Dear Friends:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Ms. Gillikin's Class
Virginia Beach City Public Schools
Birdneck Elementary School
957 S. Birdneck Road
Virginia Beach, VA 23451-5801

Dear Friends:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Ms. Emily Osmanski
831 Shawn Drive
Jefferson City, MO 65109

Dear Emily:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Mr. Philip D. Heinlein
9 Fenton Avenue
Binghamton, NY 13901

Dear Mr. Heinlein:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Ms. Paula A. Mortensen
6118 Vista Siera NW
Albuquerque, NM 87120-2610

Dear Ms. Mortensen:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

April, 1994

K. Ryan's 6th Grade Class
Edwards Middle School
2633 Stanton Road
Conyers, GA 30208

Dear Friends:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Ms. Janice Gaswind's Class
Oak View School
150 Garrabrant Avenue
Bloomfield, NJ 07003

Dear Friends:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Mr. Daniel Acosta
Gateway Campers Club
109 Oak Drive
Trafford, PA 15085

Dear Mr. Acosta:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Ms. Melanie Jensen
Edwards Middle School
2633 Stanton Road
Conyers, GA 30208

Dear Ms. Jensen:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Ms. Darcie M. Cournoyer
5616 Foxwood Drive
Agoura Hills, CA 91361-3964

Dear Ms. Cournoyer:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Ms. Kristen M. Scarbrough
3666 Oxford Way, E.
Marietta, GA 30062

Dear Kristen:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Mr. Gary P. Bruner
7262 Ruritan Drive
Chambersburg, PA 17201

Dear Mr. Bruner:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

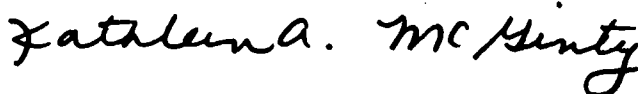

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Ms. Cassie Amidon
8054 Homestead Avenue, So.
Cottage Grove, MN 55016

Dear Cassie:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

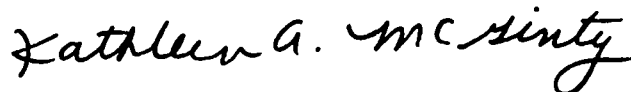

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Ms. Kim Klass
309 Verdant Lane
Jefferson City, MO 65109

Dear Kim:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Ms. Elizabeth Hawkey
721 Joseph Drive
Jefferson City, MO 65109

Dear Elizabeth:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Mr. Austin Alley
138 Forest Hill
Jefferson City, MO 65109

Dear Austin:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

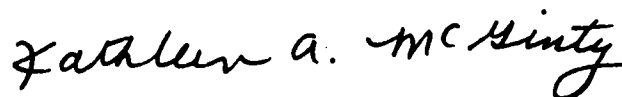

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Ms. Rachel Clark
315 Gary Lane
Jefferson City, MO 65109

Dear Rachel:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

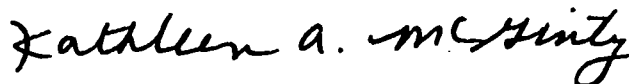

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Mr. Daniel Datema
4912 Woodhaven
Jefferson City, MO 65109

Dear Daniel:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Ms. Sara R. Hlavaoek
5313 Henwick Lane
Jefferson City, MO 65109

Dear Sara:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

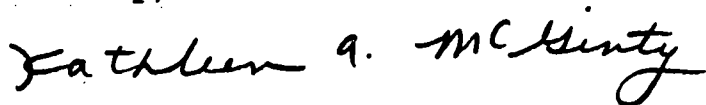

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Ms. Leah Wooderson
2706 Twin Hills Road
Jefferson City, MO 65109

Dear Leah:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Ms. Mickie Carder
5029 Schruggs Station Road
Jefferson City, MO 65109

Dear Mickie:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

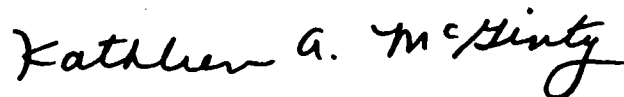

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Mr. Jon P. Schlup
816 Eastern Air
Jefferson City, MO 65109

Dear Jon:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

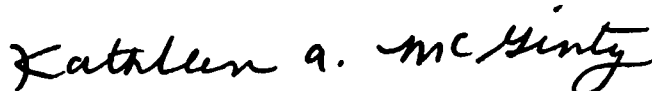

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Mr. Tim Weddle
1005 Cari Ann Street
Jefferson City, MO 65109

Dear Tim:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

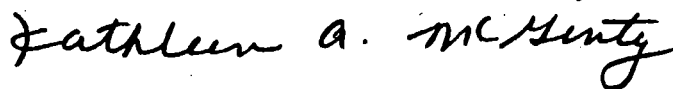

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Mr. Zachary Blomberg
1822 West McCarthy
Jefferson City, MO 65109

Dear Zachary:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

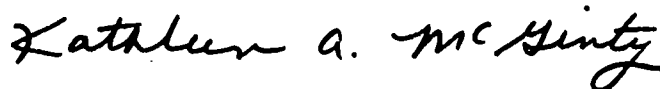

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Ms. Jami Silleck
2512 Concord
Jefferson City, MO 65109

Dear Jami:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Ms. Amy Evans
5000 Westport Drive
Jefferson City, MO 65109

Dear Amy:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

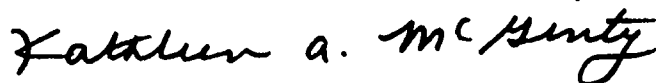

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Mr. Anthony Aiello
1713 South Country Club Drive
Jefferson City, MO 65109

Dear Anthony:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

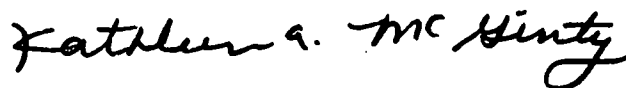

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Ms. Annessa Wheat
318 Rear West Elm
Jefferson City, MO 65109

Dear Anessa:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

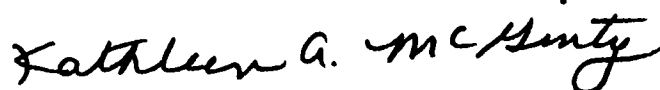

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Ms. Erin Wiseman
901 Geneva
Jefferson City, MO 65109

Dear Erin:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

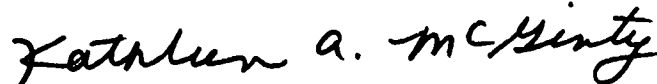

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

April, 1994

Ms. Lindsey Smith
215 Rear West Ashley
Jefferson City, MO 65101

Dear Lindsey:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

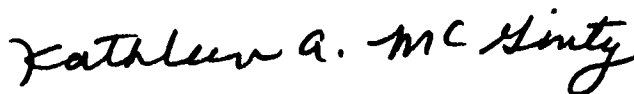

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Mr. Garrick Pietri
24861 La Grima
Mission Viejo, CA 92692

Dear Mr. Pietri:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

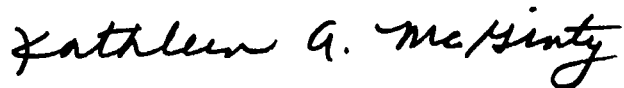

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Ms. Diane Ott
91 Wilkens Drive
Dumont, NJ 07628

Dear Ms. Ott:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

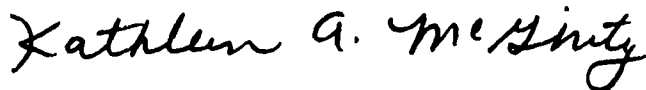

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Janesh
531 Snyder Avenue
San Jose, CA 95125

Dear Friends:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

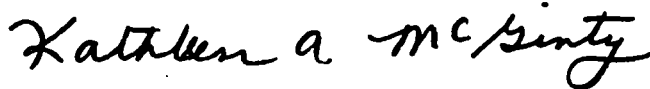

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Ms. Mayola Hayes
809 N. Edgewood Street #11
Inglewood, CA 90302

Dear Ms. Hayes:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Mr. Roger Carpenter
32 Easy Street
Farmingdale, ME 04344-2904

Dear Mr. Carpernter:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Ms. Gale Adams
803 Bridge Lane
Smyrna, GA 30082

Dear Ms. Adams:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Ms. Megan Smith
RR #1 Box 58-A
Bruceville, IN 47516

Dear Ms. Smith:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Mr. Peter Tolk
145 West 86th Street
Apt. 2B
New York, NY 10024

Dear Mr. Tolk:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

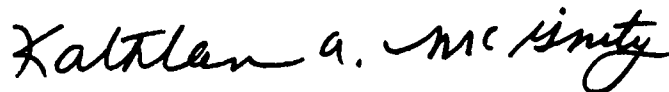

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Ms. Sarah Ann Grone
1904 Summers Way
Jefferson City, MO 65109

Dear Ms. Grone:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

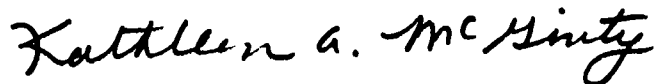

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Ms. Bridget Bondurant
1510 Hwy 179
Jefferson City, MO 65109

Dear Ms. Bondurant:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

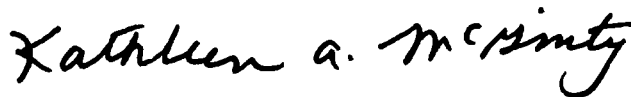

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Mr. Jason Sneller
2516 Southern Air Drive
Jefferson City, MO 65109

Dear Mr. Sneller:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

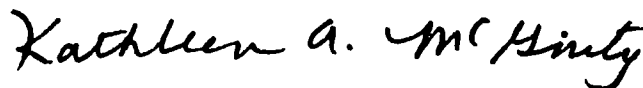

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Ms. Katherine A. Hammond
5417 Scruggs Station Road
Lohman, MO 65053

Dear Katherine:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Mr. Andrew Struempf
5221 Bagnell Drive
Jefferson City, MO 65109

Dear Andrew:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Ms. Gara Lacy
816 Western Avenue
Jefferson City, MO 65109

Dear Ms. Lacy:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Katie A. McGinty

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Ms. Chelsea Moeller
718 West High Street
Jefferson City, MO 65101

Dear Ms. Moeller:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Mr. Zachary Fisher
916 Geneva
Jefferson City, MO 65109

Dear Mr. Fisher:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Ms. Stacy Schollmeyer
1026 Westwood
Jefferson City, MO 65109

Dear Stacy:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Ms. Sarah Poiré
4816 Angeila Avenue
Jefferson City, MO 65109

Dear Sarah:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Ms. Jill Gelber
4903 Woodhaven Drive
Jefferson City, MO 65109

Dear Jill:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Mr. Travis Wilson
Route 1
Centertwon, MO

Dear Travis:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Montae Strickland
1105 Apt B Buena Vista
Jefferson City, MO 65109

Dear Montae:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Ms. Karen Westerrhouse's First Graders
Scott Elementary School
N.M. 35 Sunset Drive
Merrill, WI 54452

Dear Friends:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

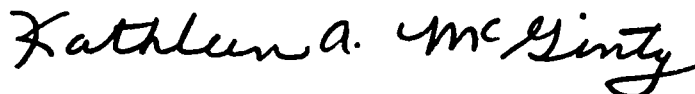

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Ms. Abby Spriggs
P.O. Box 688
Cusseta, GA 31805

Dear Ms. Spriggs:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

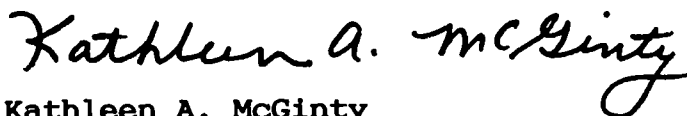

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Ms. Deb Baeringer's Eighth Graders
Hicksville Middle School
Hicksville, OH 43526

Dear Friends:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

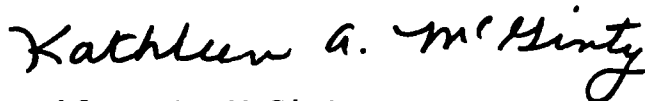

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Ms. Deb Keller's Second Graders
Sunflower Elementary
P.O. Box 268
Paola, KS 66071

Dear Friends:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

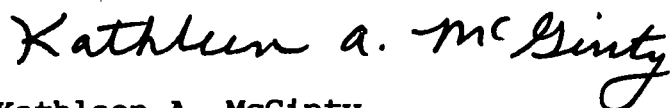

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Ann Townsend Sturmer, V.T.
Cornell University
College of Veterinary Medicine
Anesthesia Department-Large Animal Clinic
Ithaca, NY 14853-6401

Dear Dr. Sturmer:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

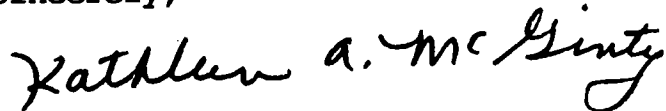

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Ms. Kenya L. Manigault
2751 Atlanta Drive
Mt. Pleasant, SC 29464

Dear Kenya:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Mr. Adam Mitchell
3505 Lee Road 248
Smiths. AL 36877

Dear Adam:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Charmian Surface
13 Harbor Hill Road
Glen Cove, NY 11542

Dear Friend:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Ms. Jean Hopkins
Class 4-330 P.S. 111X
Seton Falls Science Academy
3740 Baychester Avenue
Bronx, NY 10466

Dear Friends:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

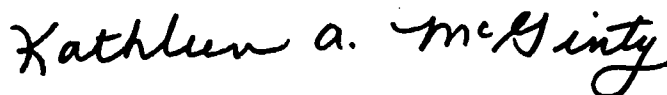

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Mr. Stephen Snell
P.O. Box 600
Wothington, OH 43085

Dear Mr. Snell:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Ms. Carol L. Clark
2137 Calais Drive #14
Miami Beach, FL 33141

Dear Ms. Clark:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Sixth Graders
Edwards Middle School
2633 Stanton Road
Conyers, GA 30208

Dear Friends:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

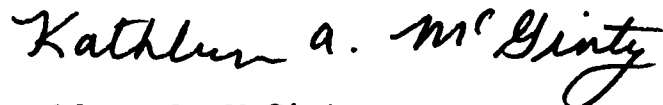

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Ms. Sandy Ralston
Port St. Lucie Elementary School
198 N.W. Marion Avenue
Port St. Lucie, FL 34983

Dear Ms. Ralston:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Ms. Debbie Herrmann
29 W. 315 Pine Avenue
West Chicago, IL 60185

Dear Ms. Herrmann:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Ms. Angela Garvin
1134 South Shadow drive
Mt. Pleasant, SC 29464

Dear Angela:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Ms. Melissa A. Newman
63 Ray Avenue
Bellingham, A 02019

Dear Ms. Newman:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

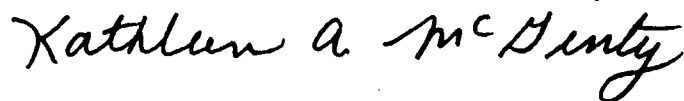

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Mrs. Susan L. Stender
528 Heckel Avenue, Rear Apt.
Spring City, PA 19475

Dear Ms. Stender:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

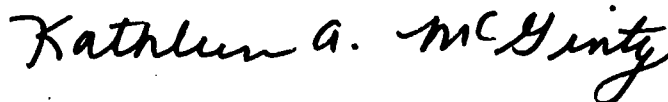

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Mr. Paul R. Ames
41 New Jersey Avenue
Bellport, NY 11713

Dear Mr. Ames:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

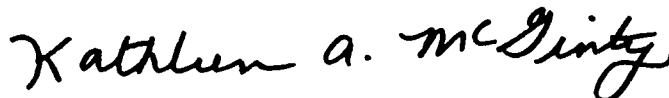

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Mr. Michael Radte
762 Lily Cache Lane
Bolingbrook, IL 60440

Dear Michael:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Ms. Tiffany Thibault
340 Lee Road #931
Smiths, AL 36877

Dear Tiffany:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Ms. Nancy Melton
3731 Nanticoke
Roswell, NM 88201

Dear Nancy:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Ms. Daphne Wennersten
Environmental Excellence Council Chairperson
Chemical Waste Management, Inc.
2600 Delk Road, Suite 100
Marietta, GA 30067

Dear Ms. Wennersten:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

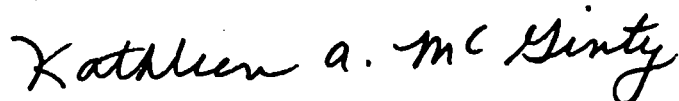

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Ms. Julie Shaw's Class
3100 Winterfield Place
Charlotte, NC 28205

Dear Friends:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

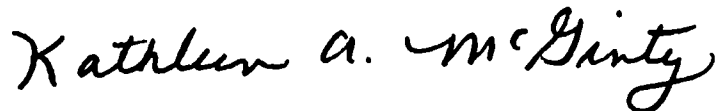

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Ms. Debbie Kotula's Class
2508 Liverman Drive
Hopewell, VA 23860

Dear Friends:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

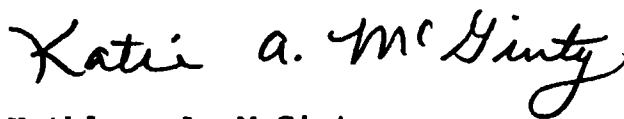

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Ms. Portia's Fifth Grade Class
Gardentown Fundamental Magnet School
Newburgh, NY 12550

Dear Friends:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Ms. Ethel M. Wiggins
427 E. 75th Street
Los Angeles, CA 90003

Dear Ms. Wiggins:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

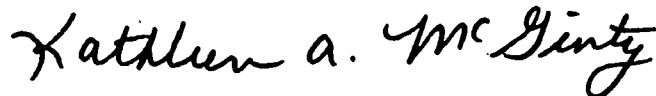

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Steve and Diane Lukias
5714 Arcturus Drive, SW
Roanoke, VA 24018-4802

Dear Friends:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Ms. Nina Niu
11000 Lindley Avenue
Granada Hills, CA 91344

Dear Ms. Niu:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Mr. Chapman's Fifth Grade Class
Alamo Elementary School
8184 N. 6th Street
Kalamazoo, MI 49009

Dear Friends:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

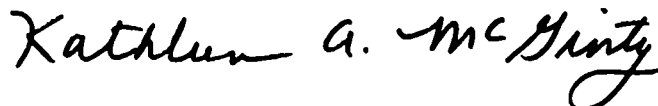

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Ms. Kerra Gray
7558 West D Avenue
Kalamazoo, MI 49009

Dear Kerra:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

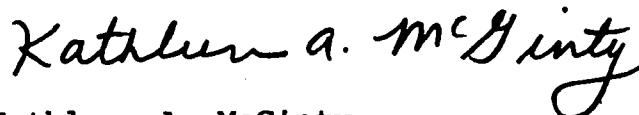

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Ms. Rae Pica and Mr. Richard Gardzina
178 A N. Barnstead Road
Ctr. Barnstead, NH 03225

Dear Friends:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

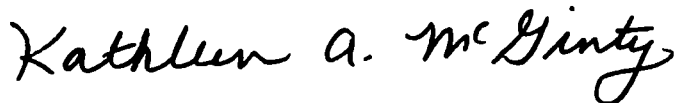

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

April, 1994

J.D. and Lauren Willis
33 N. Wisconsin
Addison, IL 60101

Dear Friends:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

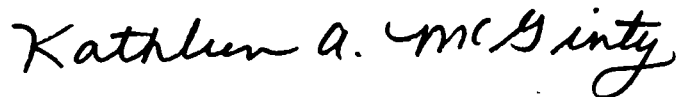

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Mrs. Smith's First Grade, Room 20
Immaculate Conception School
7203 W. Talcott
Chicago, IL 60631

Dear Friends:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Ms. Kathy O'Connor
14403 Tiara
Van Nuys, CA 91401

Dear Ms. O'Connor:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

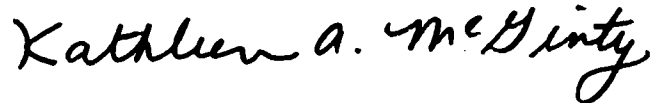

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Ms. Carol K. Danielson
56 Pardee Avenue
Jamestown, NY 14701

Dear Ms. Danielson:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in cursive script that reads "Kathleen A. McGinty".

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Ms. Kira D. Stewart
9119 Newhall Drive #24
Sacramento, CA 95826

Dear Ms. Stewart:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

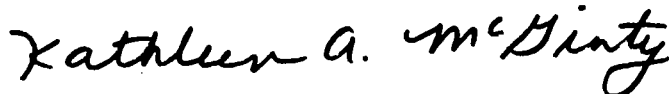

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Ms. Emma France
5 Carlingdale
Burneside Kendal
Cumbria LA9 6PW
ENGLAND

Dear Ms. France:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

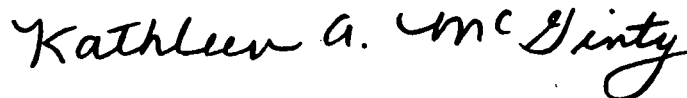

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Mr. Sam Doonan
Flour Bluff Elementary
Waldron Road
Corpus Christi, TX 78418

Dear Sam:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Ms. Veronica Acut
Flour Bluff Elementary
Waldron Road
Corpus Christi, TX 78418

Dear Veronica:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Ms. Jamie M. Sturgeon
361 Cedar Grove street
New Bedford, MA 02746

Dear Ms. Sturgeon:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

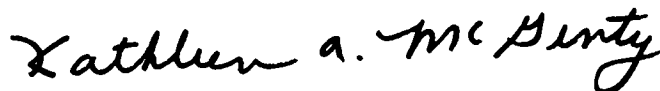

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Mr. Michael Vega
361 Cedar Grove Street
New Bedford, MA 02746

Dear Michael:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Mrs. Greene's Fifth Grade
Towamensing Elementary School
RR #3 Box 3431
Lehighton, PA 18235

Dear Friends:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Mr. Chad Bridges
Lake Elementary School
6211 Mullen Road, SE
lacey, WA 98503-7198

Dear Chad:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Mr. Eric Edelstein
7 Fox Ridge
Noth Hills, NY 11576

Dear Eric:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Ms. Minnie Hastings
5911 7th Avenue
Los Angeles, CA 90043

Dear Ms. Hastings:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Katie A. McGinty

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Ms. Eugles Fifth Grade
Edson School
116 Merilina Avenue
Kingston, NY 12401

Dear Friends:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Ms. Susan Sawyer's Second Grade
Hickory Elementary School Room 104
2100 Conawingo Road
Bel Air, MD 21014

Dear Friends:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Mrs. Debbie Erbstoesser's Class
Windmill Springs School
2880 Aetna Way
San Jose, CA 95121

Dear Friends:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Ms. Erskine's Third Grade
Otondo School
2251 Otondo Drive
Yuma, AZ 85365

Dear Friends:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Mr. Darrell Ray
155 Lee Highway Road 442
Phenix City, AL 36867

Dear Darrell:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Albert G. Marquis, Esq.
Marquis & Aurbach
228 South Fourth Street
Las Vegas, NV 89101

Dear Mr. Marquis:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

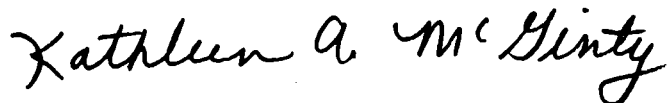

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Academy of the Holy Names
1075 New Scotland Road
Albany, NY 12208

Dear Friends:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Ms. Melissa White's Class
Mark Twain School
1427 W. Aylor
Webb City, MO 64870

Dear Friends:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Ms. Sharon Huckin's Kindergarten
Hulmstrom Elementary
10604 Grant
Nothglenn, CO 80233

Dear Friends:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Ms. Jennifer Lynn Best
1901 Camelia Drive
Marietta, GA 30062

Dear Jennifer:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Ms. Susan Tlustos
P.O. Box 122
Hanna, WY 82327

Dear Ms. Tlustos:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

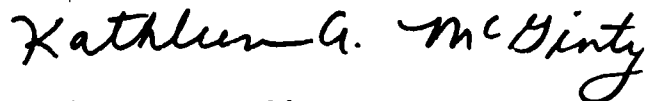

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

April, 1994

Ms. Lori S. Smith
224 So. Clovis Avenue #112
Fresno, CA 93727

Dear Ms. Smith:

Thank you for your thoughtful letter on the efforts of some other countries to resume commercial whaling.

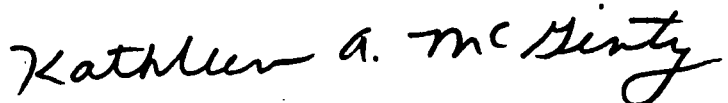

Let me reassure you that the United States is deeply opposed to commercial whaling. The U.S. does not engage in commercial whaling and we allow no imports of whale products. The United States also firmly supports creation of a whale sanctuary in the oceans surrounding Antarctica.

We have to recognize, however, that not every country agrees with us. Some countries believe that certain stocks of whales are numerous enough to withstand the resumption of commercial whaling without the danger of extinction. We think it is important to make sure that this question is addressed with sound science, and by giving the whales, not whalers, the benefit of the doubt when there are serious scientific uncertainties. That is why we are working within the International Whaling Commission to assure that the methodology known as the "revised management procedure" embodies these principles.

Some people fear that we are changing our position and will support commercial whaling. Let me reassure you that this is not true. The United States does not and will not support commercial whaling.

I share your concern for whales and the environment. With your support, we will accomplish a great deal to protect the environment here in this country and around the world.

Sincerely,

Kathleen A. McGinty
Director, White House Office on Environmental Policy

KAM/jdm