Thanks for working on our $1 million for the AmeriCorps Network. I've heard that Cong. Walsh has raised issues about it -- want to make sure he understands that it is not a political effort, but an attempt to extend AmeriCorps members service beyond their regular term in much the way the Returned Peace Corps Volunteers continue to serve (without stipends). Since he was a Peace Corps volunteer, that comparison might be helpful.

I'm happy to answer any questions that might be raised. Thanks.

What about the President signing the VA-HUD bill at our event or talking about that he just signed it. He could quote Kit Bond in saying that the debate over whether there should be an AmeriCorps program is over. Show the Republican support on the stage, and pour some cement into our political foundation.

Just a thought, but maybe not a bad one. Reaction? JG

In a slightly surprising development, Harris feels strongly that it is inappropriate for him not to speak at the main event. He feels it would be conspicuous and uncomfortable for him. I didn't anticipate that reaction, but it is strong and it is sustained. And he is head of the agency.

He (and I) understand the problem with the length of the program and the number of speakers. And we both understand the issue with Eli speaking as well.

So here's my proposed solution: Eli and Harris introduce the presenters: Harris does Powell and King, Eli does Leavitt and Mr. X. Not perfect, takes a little bit of time, I know, but that's the best we can do right now.

Your thoughts? JG

AmeriCorps Anniversary Celebration

The President and First Lady will be hosting a major celebration in honor of the Fifth Anniversary of AmeriCorps on October 20 at 1:30 pm. This will be a 1,000 person event, attended by AmeriCorps members and alumni, Congress people and staff, corporate supporters, national nonprofit organizations, and other friends of the program. The event kicks off activities around the country to recognize the contributions of this signature program of the President.

The centerpiece of the program will be the presentation of awards to AmeriCorps alumni in four categories:

- Getting Things Done
- Common Ground
- Community Strengthening
- Leadership

Award winners have been selected by the Corporation for National Service through a competitive process, from almost 400 entries. They will receive a silver medal.

Each award winner will be introduced by a well-known person who exemplifies the category who will speak for 2 – 3 minutes. They will be seated on the podium with the President and First Lady. Our first choices of speakers are:

- Colin Powell
- Coretta Scott King
- Jerry Yang
- Governor Levitt

The ceremony will be preceded by a small lunch with the First Lady (about 100 people). Our speakers would be included in the lunch, which starts at noon.

In case you hear from the John Gomperts regarding Harris Wofford's role in the AmeriCorps event, I wanted to let you know where we are. (Harris may try to call John about this.)

We have a very full program for the AmeriCorps ceremony -- 21 award winners, four celebrity presenters (Colin Powell, Mike Leavit, Coretta Scott King, and one tbd), ads to preview, an AmeriCorps member speaking, etc. We have it clocked at 1 hour with no fat. The group working on the program decided to have both Harris Wofford and Eli Segal on the stage and to have them put the medals around the necks of the award winners, shake hands, be photographed with them. We did not give either a speaking role. They will, however, have an opportunity to speak at the lunch preceding the event.

I understand from John Gomperts that Harris just found out he is not speaking at the larger event. We really don't have time to have him and Eli, they wouldn't really add anything to the program in terms of its goals, and in fact, we do not always have agency heads speak at events like this (like the ARts and Humanities Medals -- Bill Ivey and Bill Ferris do not speak at this event and this year, weren't even on stage). Surely the First Lady and President will recognize Harris in their remarks, and he does have a role in the program, just not a speaking one.

Thanks.

Bruce, Eric and Shirley -

CNS has come back with a proposal on how they will set up a system to formally engage and re-activate AmeriCorps alums.

Their proposal appears to be very realistic, but also sets the groundwork in motion for a greater effort at a possible later date. At this point, they propose three pieces: sending out a letter from the President to every alum to get them to register with CNS, setting up a new office of "Continuing Service," and announcing partnerships with national organizations through which their alums can volunteer.

Please let me know if we can move ahead with this announcements. If so, John Gomperts will contact the potential partners and we will begin to get the paper ready for next week.

Thanks.

Overview

As part of the fifth anniversary President Clinton will issue a renewed “call to service” to the AmeriCorps alumni and seek to expand and strengthen the continuing service of former AmeriCorps members. The President will write to all former AmeriCorps members about their obligation and opportunities for continuing service to their community and their country; establish in the Corporation for National Service an office to encourage former AmeriCorps members to serve and to connect former members to community service opportunities; and announce partnerships between the Corporation for National Service and leading non-profit organizations that will utilize former AmeriCorps members in key volunteer roles.

Background

[This is the part that needs to be filled in. It will draw the parallel with veterans of military service and returned Peace Corps volunteers. Point out that former AmeriCorps members are a similar national resource. Building on the ideas of military reserves and the volunteer activities of returned Peace Corps volunteers, the President will make a special call to AmeriCorps alumni to engage in continuing community and national service.

In taking the AmeriCorps pledge, each AmeriCorps member promises: “I will carry this commitment with me this year and beyond.” Now that some 150,000 Americans have joined AmeriCorps, these former AmeriCorps members have become a large and powerful asset. The President will make a call to all former AmeriCorps members to make good on their continuing commitment and to engage in sustained meaningful service.

Specific Actions

Letter from the President: The President will send a letter to all former AmeriCorps members reminding them of their pledge and will encourage all former members to find meaningful ways to continue their service. The President’s letter will encourage all AmeriCorps alumni to register with the Corporation’s new Office of Continuing Service. [Quote from the letter] (Letter will be available for release)

Office of Continuing Service: The Corporation for National Service will immediately establish an Office of Continuing Service whose task it is to work with former AmeriCorps members, and to connect those alumni to service opportunities. The Office will also seek and establish partnerships with major non-profit and educational organizations who can benefit from the volunteer service of former AmeriCorps members who have significant training and experience.

Partnerships with Non-profit Organizations: Many leading service organizations already make great use of former AmeriCorps members, and have approached the Corporation about ways to increase those connections and opportunities. To launch this initiative, the Corporation has entered into strategic partnerships with several leading non-profit organizations. These organizations want to have the benefit of significant volunteer assistance from former AmeriCorps members and have made a commitment to reach out to AmeriCorps alumni with significant opportunities for continuing service.

The first partners in this new endeavor are:

The National Mentoring Partnership, including Big Brothers Big Sisters will offer service opportunities for former AmeriCorps members who want to establish a mentoring relationship with a young person,

Habitat for Humanity will offer opportunities for AmeriCorps members who want to participate in physical service to provide housing for low-income families.

The American Red Cross will enlist the assistance of former AmeriCorps members, especially those with training and experience in disaster response, to help in disaster preparedness and recovery.

Boys and Girls Clubs will reach out to former AmeriCorps members who have a special interest in volunteering in after-school activities for young people.

America's Promise will enlist the AmeriCorps alumni who want to participate in the America's Promise campaign for children and youth.

Points of Light Foundation and its network of over Volunteer Centers will offer a wide range of service opportunities in communities across the country.

These are only the first partnerships. The Corporation's Office of Continuing Service will be reaching out to all non-profit organizations that have a special interest in skills of former AmeriCorps members and that wish to offer significant service opportunities for these AmeriCorps alumni.

TALKING POINTS FOR AMERICORPS LUNCH
October 20, 1999

- It's hard to imagine that six years ago, when the President signed the bill into law, AmeriCorps was just an idea – an idea intended to capture the idealism of young Americans and blend it with a practical “get things done” approach that has sustained this country through its hardest times. A way to build community, create opportunity, and encourage responsibility.
- And it's hard to imagine that just five years ago, the first AmeriCorps members were sworn in here at the White House (one of the few events we have held on the North Portico, due to the fact that a plane had tragically crashed on the South Lawn that morning).
- Now here we are celebrating the fifth anniversary of the program. You know, when the President signed the bill, he said that there was no achievement that made him prouder (need exact quote). Well, seeing what these AmeriCorps members have accomplished has surpassed that achievement many times over.
- As I've travelled around the country, I have found AmeriCorps working – relieving the distress of hurricane victims; tutoring students in schools that can't even afford text books; wiring schools and community centers for internet access; conducting home visits for the HIPPIY program; training child care workers; and building houses for the homeless with Habitat for Humanity and Youthbuild.
- And I've met some extraordinary people. For some, AmeriCorps offered a second chance after they had dropped out of high school; for others, their service made it possible to fulfill the dream of going to college; and for still others, it made it possible to experience the joy of helping others and still be able to pay back student loans. I've met Frankie Gomez, an assemblyline workers from Providence who today is in medical school preparing to become a pediatrician, thanks to AmeriCorps. And I've met Tran Loc, [fill in]. And [need one more from state of the union or other source – will get on Monday.]
- Today is our opportunity to thank the people who made this all possible. First, our nonprofit partners – including America's Promise, [need to list some who will be in the room]. Thank you for believing that AmeriCorps could work for the people you serve.
- Next, our corporate and foundation partners. Some of you have worked with us from the very beginning, by supporting local initiatives or national programs – like the Ford Foundation, IBM, and [fill in]. And some of you are supporting an effort to make what has been described as “the best kept secret in Washington” more visible – I especially want to thank Danny Abraham with Slimfast Foods, Archer Daniels Midland, Yahoo, AOL, [list others].
- This effort to make AmeriCorps more visible as we celebrate this milestone is the work of the AmeriCorps Anniversary Committee. I first met with the committee's organizers almost a year ago and I could not have been more enthusiastic about the idea. Since that time, the Committee has worked with Yahoo to create a state of the art website about AmeriCorps; with Roy Spence and his colleagues at GSD&M to develop television ads, which we will be previewing at the ceremony in a few minutes; with Peter Hart and his associates to refine the message and learn what the American people like best about AmeriCorps; and with Morgan Binswanger at the Creative Artists Foundation to develop a television special which is in the works.
- One sad note on what is otherwise a day of celebration is that one of the Committee's co-chairs, Dan Dutko, is not with us due to his untimely death. Dan was a good friend to Bill and me, and to AmeriCorps. He brought to the task of organizing the Committee his great creative mind, his wide network of friends and colleagues, and his passion to help out whenever he was needed. I know we would not be here today had it not been for the commitment and caring and energy he brought to the task.

- I do want to thank Alan Solomont, who has served as Committee co-chair. [need to say something else about Alan].
- And I particularly want to thank Eli Segal, who heads the Welfare-to-Work Partnership, another great success story, but deserves our thanks both for his excellent work in starting up AmeriCorps – guiding the legislation through Congress and then leaving the White House to become the first CEO of the Corporation for National Service; and for his leadership of the AmeriCorps Anniversary Committee. We will hear from Eli shortly.
- But first, it is my pleasure to thank and introduce to you the current CEO of the Corporation for National Service, Harris Wofford. Harris has guided AmeriCorps through some of its toughest hours, as it became a target of House Republicans and its fate was not at all secure. By reaching across the aisle, Harris has build even stronger bipartisan support for the program and developed strong partnerships with many of the nonprofit organizations here today. Harris – please come up and say a few words.

MEMORANDUM FOR MRS. CLINTON

FROM: Shirley Sagawa
RE: AmeriCorps events
DATE: October 16, 1999

I thought you might want to see the print and tv ads developed by Roy Spence for the AmeriCorps Anniversary Committee. We will show them at Wednesday's fifth anniversary ceremony.

Anniversary projects

The Committee is also launching a new website on Monday, developed by Yahoo, and the AmeriCorps Alums are holding their annual fundraiser, organizing service projects, and hosting a policy roundtable in conjunction with the anniversary. The Anniversary Committee continues to work on a television special and to raise money to purchase ad time. The Corporation for National Service has arranged events and service projects in 27 states.

Lunch

The lunch preceding the fifth anniversary event will include the sponsors of the Committee, Committee members (a mix of nonprofit, corporate and political leaders from both parties), speakers from the larger event, and top Corporation for National Service staff. You, Harris Wofford, and Eli Segal will speak briefly, and Eli will call up Debbie Jospin, Dan Dutko's widow who is also the director of AmeriCorps, to present you with the Dan Dutko award. The award will be referenced by the President at the ceremony which follows the lunch.

Ceremony

The larger event, with almost 1,000 friends of AmeriCorps, AmeriCorps members and alumni, program directors, corporate and foundation funders, and Congressional members and staff, features the presentation of awards to 21 alumni. The awards will be presented by Colin Powell, Coretta Scott King, Gov. Mike Leavit, and Bette Midler (not confirmed). Two hundred members of the new class will be sworn in by the President. The policy deliverable for the event will be the formation of an alumni network that can be mobilized to assist with national priority issues, such as mentoring, disaster relief, and housing.

Please give me a call this weekend if you want more information or to discuss the events.

Another thing that has been simmering that might be ready for announcement at the event on Wednesday is new appointments to the Corporation for National Service Board. Ordinarily not interesting, obviously, but what if the President announces that he will nominate Marc Racicot, Republican Governor of Montana, and Mark Gearan, former Director of the Peace Corps. The Racicot piece ties very well to Leavitt speaking and representing the Governors and speaks to the partnership with Governors. Mark G's appointment speaks to the powerful tie between the Peace Corps and AmeriCorps.

Interested? I am pretty sure that they are positioned well enough in the process that we could do this on Wednesday if that makes sense.

Thoughts? JG

Bruce, Eric and Shirley -

CNS has come back with a proposal on how they will set up a system to formally engage and re-activate AmeriCorps alums.

Their proposal appears to be very realistic, but also sets the groundwork in motion for a greater effort at a possible later date. At this point, they propose three pieces: sending out a letter from the President to every alum to get them to register with CNS, setting up a new office of "Continuing Service," and announcing partnerships with national organizations through which their alums can volunteer.

Please let me know if we can move ahead with this announcements. If so, John Gomperts will contact the potential partners and we will begin to get the paper ready for next week.

Thanks.

Overview

As part of the fifth anniversary President Clinton will issue a renewed “call to service” to the AmeriCorps alumni and seek to expand and strengthen the continuing service of former AmeriCorps members. The President will write to all former AmeriCorps members about their obligation and opportunities for continuing service to their community and their country; establish in the Corporation for National Service an office to encourage former AmeriCorps members to serve and to connect former members to community service opportunities; and announce partnerships between the Corporation for National Service and leading non-profit organizations that will utilize former AmeriCorps members in key volunteer roles.

Background

[This is the part that needs to be filled in. It will draw the parallel with veterans of military service and returned Peace Corps volunteers. Point out that former AmeriCorps members are a similar national resource. Building on the ideas of military reserves and the volunteer activities of returned Peace Corps volunteers, the President will make a special call to AmeriCorps alumni to engage in continuing community and national service.

In taking the AmeriCorps pledge, each AmeriCorps member promises: “I will carry this commitment with me this year and beyond.” Now that some 150,000 Americans have joined AmeriCorps, these former AmeriCorps members have become a large and powerful asset. The President will make a call to all former AmeriCorps members to make good on their continuing commitment and to engage in sustained meaningful service.

Specific Actions

Letter from the President: The President will send a letter to all former AmeriCorps members reminding them of their pledge and will encourage all former members to find meaningful ways to continue their service. The President’s letter will encourage all AmeriCorps alumni to register with the Corporation’s new Office of Continuing Service. [Quote from the letter] (Letter will be available for release)

Office of Continuing Service: The Corporation for National Service will immediately establish an Office of Continuing Service whose task it is to work with former AmeriCorps members, and to connect those alumni to service opportunities. The Office will also seek and establish partnerships with major non-profit and educational organizations who can benefit from the volunteer service of former AmeriCorps members who have significant training and experience.

Partnerships with Non-profit Organizations: Many leading service organizations already make great use of former AmeriCorps members, and have approached the Corporation about ways to increase those connections and opportunities. To launch this initiative, the Corporation has entered into strategic partnerships with several leading non-profit organizations. These organizations want to have the benefit of significant volunteer assistance from former AmeriCorps members and have made a commitment to reach out to AmeriCorps alumni with significant opportunities for continuing service.

The first partners in this new endeavor are:

The National Mentoring Partnership, including Big Brothers Big Sisters will offer service opportunities for former AmeriCorps members who want to establish a mentoring relationship with a young person,

Habitat for Humanity will offer opportunities for AmeriCorps members who want to participate in physical service to provide housing for low-income families.

The American Red Cross will enlist the assistance of former AmeriCorps members, especially those with training and experience in disaster response, to help in disaster preparedness and recovery.

Boys and Girls Clubs will reach out to former AmeriCorps members who have a special interest in volunteering in after-school activities for young people.

America's Promise will enlist the AmeriCorps alumni who want to participate in the America's Promise campaign for children and youth.

Points of Light Foundation and its network of over Volunteer Centers will offer a wide range of service opportunities in communities across the country.

These are only the first partnerships. The Corporation's Office of Continuing Service will be reaching out to all non-profit organizations that have a special interest in skills of former AmeriCorps members and that wish to offer significant service opportunities for these AmeriCorps alumni.

AMERICORPS FIFTH ANNIVERSARY EVENT

DATE: Wednesday, October 20, 1999
TIME: 1:45 p.m. – 3:00 p.m.
LOCATION: South Lawn Pavilion

FROM: Thurgood Marshall, Jr.
Shirley Sagawa
Anne Bovaird

I. PURPOSE

To highlight the accomplishments of the thousands of AmeriCorps members who have served their country over the past five years and to congratulate the winners of the first annual All*AmeriCorps Awards. You will also issue a renewed “call to service” to the AmeriCorps alumni and announce steps to expand and strengthen the continuing service of former AmeriCorps members.

II. BACKGROUND

This fall, AmeriCorps celebrated its fifth anniversary having deployed nearly 150,000 citizens in service to more than 4,000 communities across the nation. At this event, YOU will kick off the All*AmeriCorps Award, a new annual award that honors the efforts and accomplishments of the men and women who have devoted their energy and idealism to improve our communities and our nation since 1994.

The 1999 All*AmeriCorps Awards will be given to a total of twenty-one winners in four different categories: Getting Things Done, Community Strengthening, Leadership and Common Ground. A panel of distinguished Americans chose the award winners from hundreds of finalists in a national competition.

YOU will issue a renewed “call to service” to former AmeriCorps members and seek to expand and strengthen the continuing service for these AmeriCorps alumni. YOU will announce the following specific actions: YOU will write to all former AmeriCorps members about their obligation and opportunities for continuing service to their community and their country; YOU will direct the Corporation for National Service to connect former AmeriCorps members to community service opportunities; and YOU will announce a strategic alliance between the Corporation for National Service and leading non-profit organizations to engage former AmeriCorps members in significant volunteer roles.

In addition, the First Lady will unveil two new television advertisements created by GSD&M which were commissioned by the AmeriCorps Anniversary Committee. Mrs. Clinton will also announce the AmeriCorps Anniversary Committee's new web site, which was set up free of charge by Yahoo!.

Prior to the awards presentation, the First Lady will host a lunch in the State Dining Room to thank the private sector supporters of AmeriCorps. Eli Segal and Deborah Jospin will present the First Lady with the Dan Dutko Award for Extraordinary Commitment to National Service on behalf of the AmeriCorps Anniversary Committee.

III. PARTICIPANTS

YOU

The First Lady
Andre Crisp, AmeriCorps Member
General Colin Powell
Governor Mike Leavitt
Sargent Shriver
Coretta Scott King
Harris Wofford
Eli Segal
150 NCCC AmeriCorps Members

IV. PRESS PLAN

V. REMARKS

See remarks from Speechwriting

VI. SEQUENCE OF EVENTS

- YOU proceed to meet the First Lady outside the Map Room.
- YOU and the First Lady proceed to meet the program participants and other special guests in the Diplomatic Reception Room
- YOU and the First Lady, accompanied by the stage participants, proceed to the Entry Tent.
- Off-stage announcement of YOU and the First Lady, accompanied by Andre Crisp, General Colin Powell, Coretta Scott King, Governor Michael Leavitt, Sargent Shriver, Eli Segal and Harris Wofford.
- The First Lady makes remarks and introduces two AmeriCorps ads to be played on the large screens.

- Two AmeriCorps Anniversary Committee videotaped ads are played.
- The First Lady introduces AmeriCorps Member Andre Crisp.
- Andre Crisp makes brief remarks and introduces YOU.
- YOU make remarks and introduce General Colin Powell.
- General Powell makes brief remarks and introduces the winners of the “Getting Things Done” Award.
- Harris Wofford and Eli Segal present the award winners with their medals.
- YOU and the First Lady participate in a photo opportunity with each award winner.
- This process repeats three times as each of the following people present a different category of the All*AmeriCorps Award: Governor Leavitt (Leadership), Sargent Shriver (Community Strengthening) and Coretta Scott King (Common Ground).
- Following the fourth award presentation, YOU return to the podium and administer the AmeriCorps pledge to approximately 150 new National Civilian Community Corps members.
- YOU thank the guests for attending and acknowledge the Howard University Choir.
- Singing of America the Beautiful, led by the Howard University Choir.
- YOU and the First Lady depart.

FIRST LADY HILLARY RODHAM CLINTON

AMERICORPS ANNIVERSARY LUNCH

OCTOBER 20, 1999

Draft Talking Points

ú I want to welcome all of you to the White House for what is truly a remarkable anniversary. Five years ago, right here at the White House, the President swore the first AmeriCorps members into service for our country.

ú And in just five years) those first members have grown to more than 150,000 young people who have answered the Call to Service, and transformed America one child, one school, one community at a time.

ú The President has said that AmeriCorps is one of his proudest achievements. And when I think of the AmeriCorps members I have met these past five years) idealistic young people filled with the &can do 8 spirit, I know why. I have seen AmeriCorps members in action) helping hurricane victims rebuild their homes and their lives; teaching children to read in schools that can ,t even afford text books; wiring schools and community centers for the internet; training child care workers; and building houses for the homeless with Habitat for Humanity and Youthbuild. In short, they are getting things done.

ú And I have seen how AmeriCorps has also made a difference in the lives of its members)helping them earn money for college or pay back student loans; helping members from all walks of life gain a greater understanding of each other and the diverse communities we live in.

ú Today is our opportunity to thank the people who made all this possible. First, our nonprofit partners) including America ,s Promise, the Points of Light Foundation, Youth Service America, the Red Cross, the King Center, Big Brothers/Big Sisters, the National Mentoring Partnership, Habitat for Humanity, Boys and Girls Club, United Way, and AmeriCorps Alums [cut those not in the room -- don't have list from Social yet]. Thank you for believing that AmeriCorps could work for the people you serve.

ú Next, our corporate and foundation partners. Some of you have worked with us from the very beginning, by supporting local initiatives or national programs) like the Ford Foundation, IBM, GE, the Kellogg Foundation, the Kauffman Foundation, and the James Irvine Foundation, to name a few.

And some of you are supporting an effort to make the program that has been described as &the best kept secret in Washington 8 more visible) I especially want to thank Danny Abraham with Slimfast Foods, Archer Daniels Midland, Yahoo, AOL, and Nokia, along with my good friend Jill Iscol for all they have done.

ú This effort to make AmeriCorps more visible is the hard work of the AmeriCorps Anniversary Committee. Over the year, the Committee has worked with Yahoo to create a state of the art website about AmeriCorps, which is being unveiled this week and will be improved over the coming months; with Roy Spence and his wonderfully creative colleagues at GSD&M to develop television ads, which we will be previewing at the ceremony in a few minutes; with Peter Hart and his associates to refine the message and learn what the American people like best about AmeriCorps; and with Morgan Binswanger at the Creative Artists Foundation to develop a television special) which we hope to premiere in the coming months.

I first met with the committee ,s organizers almost a year ago -- and I could not have met a more enthusiastic, energetic and committed group of people. One of the committee's leaders was my good friend Dan Dutko. I know that we all wish that Dan Dutko could have lived to see this day. He brought to this Committee a great creative mind, his wide network of friends and colleagues, and a passion to help out whenever he was needed. His tragic death was a tremendous loss for all of us. I know we would not be here today had it not been for him.

ú Eli Segal and Alan Solomont have continued the work of the Committee in Dan's absence and I am deeply grateful to them both.

ú I particularly want to thank Eli Segal, who heads the Welfare-to-Work Partnership, another great success story, but deserves our thanks both for his excellent work in starting up AmeriCorps) guiding the legislation through Congress and then serving as the first CEO of the Corporation for National Service; and for his leadership of the AmeriCorps Anniversary Committee. We will hear from Eli shortly.

ú But first, it is my pleasure to thank and introduce the current CEO of the Corporation for National Service, Harris Wofford. After a long and distinguished career in public service, Harris agreed a few years ago to lead AmeriCorps into the 21st Century. We are so lucky he did. Harris has guided AmeriCorps through some of its toughest hours in Congress. By reaching across the aisle, Harris has built even stronger bipartisan support for the program and developed strong partnerships with many of the nonprofit organizations here today. Harris) please come up and say a few words.

AMERICORPS ANNIVERSARY LUNCH
OCTOBER 20, 1999

Draft Talking Points

ú I want to welcome all of you to the White House for what is truly a remarkable anniversary. Five years ago, right here at the White House, the President swore the first AmeriCorps members into service for our country.

ú And in just five years) those first members have grown to more than 150,000 young people who have answered the Call to Service, and transformed America one child, one school, one community at a time.

ú The President has said that AmeriCorps is one of his proudest achievements. And when I think of the AmeriCorps members I have met these past five years) idealistic young people filled with the &can do 8 spirit, I know why. I have seen AmeriCorps members in action) helping hurricane victims rebuild their homes and their lives; teaching children to read in schools that can ,t even afford text books; wiring schools and community centers for the internet; training child care workers; and building houses for the homeless with Habitat for Humanity and Youthbuild. In short, they are getting things done.

ú And I have seen how AmeriCorps has also made a difference in the lives of its members)helping them earn money for college or pay back student loans; helping members from all walks of life gain a greater understanding of each other and the diverse communities we live in.

ú Today is our opportunity to thank the people who made all this possible. First, our nonprofit partners) including America ,s Promise, the Points of Light Foundation, Youth Service America, the Red Cross, the King Center, Big Brothers/Big Sisters, the National Mentoring Partnership, Habitat for Humanity, Boys and Girls Club, United Way, and AmeriCorps Alums [cut those not in the room -- don't have list from Social yet].

Thank you for believing that AmeriCorps could work for the people you serve.

ú Next, our corporate and foundation partners. Some of you have worked with us from the very beginning, by supporting local initiatives or national programs) like the Ford Foundation, IBM, GE, the Kellogg Foundation, the Kauffman Foundation, and the James Irvine Foundation, to name a few.

And some of you are supporting an effort to make the program that has been described as &the best kept secret in Washington 8 more visible) I especially want to thank Danny Abraham with Slimfast Foods, Archer Daniels Midland, Yahoo, AOL, and Nokia, along with my good friends Jill Iscol and Nancy Rubin for all they have done.

ú This effort to make AmeriCorps more visible is the hard work of the AmeriCorps Anniversary Committee. Over the year, the Committee has worked with Yahoo to create a state of the art website about AmeriCorps, which is being unveiled this week and will be improved over the coming months; with Roy Spence and his wonderfully creative colleagues at GSD&M to develop television ads, which we will be previewing at the ceremony in a few minutes; with Peter Hart and his associates to refine the message and learn what the American people like best about AmeriCorps; and with Morgan Binswanger at the Creative Artists Foundation to develop a television special) which we hope to premiere in the coming months.

I first met with the committee 's organizers almost a year ago -- and I could not have met a more enthusiastic, energetic and committed group of people. One of the committee's leaders was my good friend Dan Dutko. I know that we all wish that Dan Dutko could have lived to see this day. He brought to this Committee a great creative mind, his wide network of friends and colleagues, and a passion to help out whenever he was needed. His tragic death was a tremendous loss for all of us. I know we would not be here today had it not been for him.

ú Eli Segal and Alan Solomont have continued the work of the Committee in Dan's absence and I am deeply grateful to them both.

ú I particularly want to thank Eli Segal, who heads the Welfare-to-Work Partnership, another great success story, but deserves our thanks both for his excellent work in starting up AmeriCorps) guiding the legislation through Congress and then serving as the first CEO of the Corporation for National Service; and for his leadership of the AmeriCorps Anniversary Committee. We will hear from Eli shortly.

ú But first, it is my pleasure to thank and introduce the current CEO of the Corporation for National Service, Harris Wofford. After a long and distinguished career in public service, Harris agreed a few years ago to lead AmeriCorps into the 21st Century. We are so lucky he did. Harris has guided AmeriCorps through some of its toughest hours in Congress. By reaching across the aisle, Harris has built even stronger bipartisan support for the program and developed strong partnerships with many of the nonprofit organizations here today. Harris) please come up and say a few words.

AMERICORPS FIFTH ANNIVERSARY EVENT

DATE: Wednesday, October 20, 1999
TIME: 1:45 p.m. – 3:00 p.m.
LOCATION: South Lawn Pavilion

FROM: Thurgood Marshall, Jr.
Shirley Sagawa
Anne Bovaird

I. PURPOSE

To highlight the accomplishments of the thousands of AmeriCorps members who have served their country over the past five years and to congratulate the winners of the first annual All*AmeriCorps Awards. You will also issue a renewed “call to service” to the AmeriCorps alumni and announce steps to expand and strengthen the continuing service of former AmeriCorps members.

II. BACKGROUND

This fall, AmeriCorps celebrated its fifth anniversary having deployed nearly 150,000 citizens in service to more than 4,000 communities across the nation. At this event, YOU will kick off the All*AmeriCorps Award, a new annual award that honors the efforts and accomplishments of the men and women who have devoted their energy and idealism to improve our communities and our nation since 1994.

The 1999 All*AmeriCorps Awards will be given to a total of twenty-one winners in four different categories: Getting Things Done, Community Strengthening, Leadership and Common Ground. A panel of distinguished Americans chose the award winners from hundreds of finalists in a national competition.

YOU will issue a renewed “call to service” to former AmeriCorps members and seek to expand and strengthen the continuing service for these AmeriCorps alumni. YOU will announce the following specific actions: YOU will write to all former AmeriCorps members about their obligation and opportunities for continuing service to their community and their country; YOU will direct the Corporation for National Service to connect former AmeriCorps members to community service opportunities; and YOU will announce a strategic alliance between the Corporation for National Service and leading non-profit organizations to engage former AmeriCorps members in significant volunteer roles.

In addition, the First Lady will unveil two new television advertisements created by GSD&M which were commissioned by the AmeriCorps Anniversary Committee. Mrs. Clinton will also announce the AmeriCorps Anniversary Committee's new web site, which was set up free of charge by Yahoo!.

Prior to the awards presentation, the First Lady will host a lunch in the State Dining Room to thank the private sector supporters of AmeriCorps. Eli Segal and Deborah Jospin will present the First Lady with the Dan Dutko Award for Extraordinary Commitment to National Service on behalf of the AmeriCorps Anniversary Committee.

III. PARTICIPANTS

YOU

The First Lady
Andre Crisp, AmeriCorps Member
General Colin Powell
Governor Mike Leavitt
Sargent Shriver
Coretta Scott King
Harris Wofford
Eli Segal
150 NCCC AmeriCorps Members

IV. PRESS PLAN

VI. SEQUENCE OF EVENTS

- YOU proceed to meet the First Lady outside the Map Room.
- YOU and the First Lady proceed to meet the program participants and other special guests in the Diplomatic Reception Room
- YOU and the First Lady, accompanied by the stage participants, proceed to the Entry Tent.
- Off-stage announcement of YOU and the First Lady, accompanied by Andre Crisp, General Colin Powell, Coretta Scott King, Governor Michael Leavitt, Sargent Shriver, Eli Segal and Harris Wofford.
- The First Lady makes remarks and introduces two AmeriCorps ads to be played on the large screens.

- Two AmeriCorps Anniversary Committee videotaped ads are played.
- The First Lady introduces AmeriCorps Member Andre Crisp.
- Andre Crisp makes brief remarks and introduces YOU.
- YOU make remarks and introduce General Colin Powell.
- General Powell makes brief remarks and introduces the winners of the “Getting Things Done” Award.
- Harris Wofford and Eli Segal present the award winners with their medals.
- YOU and the First Lady participate in a photo opportunity with each award winner.
- This process repeats three times as each of the following people present a different category of the All*AmeriCorps Award: Governor Leavitt (Leadership), Sargent Shriver (Community Strengthening) and Coretta Scott King (Common Ground).
- Following the fourth award presentation, YOU return to the podium and administer the AmeriCorps pledge to approximately 150 new National Civilian Community Corps members.
- YOU thank the guests for attending and acknowledge the Howard University Choir.
- Singing of America the Beautiful, led by the Howard University Choir.
- YOU and the First Lady depart.

What is the status of the lunch? I had some suggestions of vips to add -- I think Marsha has 4 press people and I believe MaryEllen sent over some names last night, so you may not need anyone else. I assume you got Andre Crisp the Americorps member who is speaking on the program and Sargent Shriver. Other VIPS if you need them are Ethel Kennedy, Tim Shriver, Richard North Patterson (author), Andrew Shue, Bernadine Healy (may already be in), and cabinet -- Janice Lachance, James Lee Witt, Louis Caldera, and Richard Danzig. Not a must do, just in case you need it.

Looks very good. Does she need a line about bipartisanship? I know it's in President's remarks, but it might help introduce and underscore the theme if she had a line or two.

It looks like Lowell's draft doesn't talk much about the award winners -- he does just one. I'm not sure if the presenters cover them -- given HRC's love for Carol's column, should she talk about a few?

Finally, here are some points on the Anniversary Committee to introduce the video:

-- One of AmeriCorps' greatest strengths is that it is not just a government program, but a partnership with states, with nonprofit and community organizations, and with private sector funders.

-- A year ago, a group of private sector friends of AmeriCorps joined together to see what they could do to ensure that this fifth anniversary was a true celebration. This group was led by our good friends Eli Segal, Alan Solomont, and Dan Dutko. Sadly, Dan died tragically this summer. We all miss his wisdom and energy and commitment to this cause.

-- The Anniversary Committee is comprised of nonprofit friends of AmeriCorps, along with corporate and individual supporters, all participating on a nonpartisan basis to do what they can to spread the word about the good work of AmeriCorps members. They partnered with Yahoo! to develop a new website and with GSD&M and Peter Hart and Associates to create advertisements that celebrate AmeriCorps. These ads feature what I think is the perfect slogan for AmeriCorps: Taking Responsibility Personally. That is what every AmeriCorps member does every day.

-- Thanks to supporters like Slimfast, Archer Daniels Midland, and Time Warner, they will be seen over the next several months, along with companion print ads. I hope you enjoy these ads as much as I do.

fyi -- I spoke with Chuck about inviting a few members to the AmeriCorps lunch preceding the event tomorrow. He recommended Houghton, Walsh, Mikulski, and Kennedy. I believe both Mikulski and Walsh will be at the signing of HUD/VA in the Oval at noon -- the lunch follows -- need to make sure it isn't awkward with just the two of them being invited out of the six who will be at the signing.

FIRST LADY HILLARY RODHAM CLINTON
AMERICORPS ANNIVERSARY LUNCH
OCTOBER 20, 1999

Talking Points

? I want to welcome all of you to the White House for what is truly a remarkable anniversary. Five years ago, right here at the White House, the President swore the first AmeriCorps members into service for our country.

? And in just five years ? those first members have grown to more than 150,000 young people who have answered the Call to Service, and transformed America one child, one school, one community at a time.

? The President has said that AmeriCorps is one of his proudest achievements. And when I think of the AmeriCorps members I have met these past five years ? idealistic young people filled with the ?can do? spirit, I know why. I have seen AmeriCorps members in action ? helping hurricane victims rebuild their homes and their lives; teaching children to read in schools that can?t even afford text books; wiring schools and community centers for the internet; training child care workers; and building houses for the homeless with Habitat for Humanity and Youthbuild. In short, they are getting things done.

? And I have seen how AmeriCorps has also made a difference in the lives of its members ?helping them earn money for college or pay back student loans; helping members from all walks of life gain a greater understanding of each other and the diverse communities we live in.

? Today is our opportunity to thank the people who made all this possible. First, our nonprofit partners ? including America?s Promise, the Points of Light Foundation, Youth Service America, and AmeriCorps Alums. Thank you for your strong support.

? Next, our corporate and foundation partners. Some of you have worked with us from the very beginning, by supporting local initiatives or national programs ? like the Ford Foundation, GE, the Kellogg Foundation, the Kauffman Foundation, and the Irvine Foundation, to name a few.

And some of you are supporting an effort to make the program that has been described as ?the best kept secret in Washington? more visible ?

I especially want to thank Danny Abraham with Slimfast Foods, Archer Daniels Midland, AOL, Nokia, and GM [, along with my good friends Jill Iscol and Nancy Rubin -- could cut] for all they have done.

? This effort to make AmeriCorps more visible is the hard work of the AmeriCorps Anniversary Committee. Over the year, the Committee has worked with Yahoo to create a state of the art website about AmeriCorps, which is being unveiled this week and will be improved over the coming months; with Roy Spence and his wonderfully creative colleagues at GSD&M to develop television ads, which we will be previewing at the ceremony in a few minutes; with Peter Hart and his associates to refine the message and learn what the American people like best about AmeriCorps; and with Morgan Binswanger at the Creative Artists Foundation to develop a television special ? which we hope to premiere in the coming months.

I first met with the committee?s organizers almost a year ago -- and I could not have met a more enthusiastic, energetic and committed group of people. One of the committee's leaders was my good friend Dan Dutko. I know that we all wish that Dan Dutko could have lived to see this day.

He brought to this Committee a great creative mind, his wide network of friends and colleagues, and a passion to help out whenever he was needed. His tragic death was a tremendous loss for all of us. I know

we would not be here today had it not been for him.

? Eli Segal and Alan Solomont have continued the work of the Committee in Dan's absense and I am deeply grateful to them both.

? I particularly want to thank Eli Segal, who heads the Welfare-to-Work Partnership, another great success story, but deserves our thanks both for his excellent work in starting up AmeriCorps ? guiding the legislation through Congress and then serving as the first CEO of the Corporation for National Service; and for his leadership of the AmeriCorps Anniversary Committee. We will hear from Eli shortly.

? But first, it is my pleasure to thank and introduce the current CEO of the Corporation for National Service, Harris Wofford. After a long and distinguished career in public service, Harris agreed a few years ago to lead AmeriCorps into the 21st Century. We are so lucky he did. Harris has guided AmeriCorps through some of its toughest hours in Congress. By reaching across the aisle, Harris has built even stronger bipartisan support for the program and developed strong partnerships with many of the nonprofit organizations here today. Harris ? please come up and say a few words.

To Shirley and Bob,

There are many nominations outstanding that are affected by Governor Racicot's intent/announcement/nomination (Christopher Gallagher is on the executive calendar. Amy Anchor is nominated and in committee). I recommend that no intent or nomination occur until Bob or Larry Stein negotiate the confirmation pairing/package with Senator Lott's office. (While Mark Gearan, Alan Solomont, Leslie Lenkowsky are awaiting final counsel clearance and Presidential Personnel's decision on when to nominate, Bob/Larry should negotiate the package so that their confirmation are ensured upon subsequent nominations). Otherwise, the confirmation of the pending nominees will jeopardized.

In addition, we have a number of calls to make. At a minimum, Presidential Personnel and Legislative Affairs (Tracey Thornton or someone she designates) should contact Chris Gallagher and the Labor committee.

Looks very good. Does she need a line about bipartisanship? I know it's in President's remarks, but it might help introduce and underscore the theme if she had a line or two.

It looks like Lowell's draft doesn't talk much about the award winners -- he does just one. I'm not sure if the presenters cover them -- given HRC's love for Carol's column, should she talk about a few?

Finally, here are some points on the Anniversary Committee to introduce the video:

-- One of AmeriCorps' greatest strengths is that it is not just a government program, but a partnership with states, with nonprofit and community organizations, and with private sector funders.

-- A year ago, a group of private sector friends of AmeriCorps joined together to see what they could do to ensure that this fifth anniversary was a true celebration. This group was led by our good friends Eli Segal, Alan Solomont, and Dan Dutko. Sadly, Dan died tragically this summer. We all miss his wisdom and energy and commitment to this cause.

-- The Anniversary Committee is comprised of nonprofit friends of AmeriCorps, along with corporate and individual supporters, all participating on a nonpartisan basis to do what they can to spread the word about the good work of AmeriCorps members. They partnered with Yahoo! to develop a new website and with GSD&M and Peter Hart and Associates to create advertisements that celebrate AmeriCorps. These ads feature what I think is the perfect slogan for AmeriCorps: Taking Responsibility Personally. That is what every AmeriCorps member does every day.

-- Thanks to supporters like Slimfast, Archer Daniels Midland, and Time Warner, they will be seen over the next several months, along with companion print ads. I hope you enjoy these ads as much as I do.

Talked to them -- they are a government corporation not an independent agency. Would like to be on. DRAFT

PRESIDENT AND MRS. CLINTON CONVENE “WHITE HOUSE CONFERENCE ON PHILANTHROPY: GIFTS TO THE FUTURE”

October 22, 1999

Today the President and First Lady, with the National Endowment of the Humanities (NEH), will convene the first-ever “White House Conference on Philanthropy: Gifts to the Future.” The conference will bring together individuals who are engaged in philanthropy -- including charitable donors, youth, policy experts, and representatives from non-profit organizations, foundations, and educational programs – to highlight the unique American tradition of charitable giving; to discuss the diverse and changing face of philanthropy; and at a time of the strongest economy in a generation, to explore how to preserve and expand this tradition for future generations.

Focusing On Philanthropic Giving As The New Millennium Approaches:

As the new millennium approaches, the American tradition of philanthropic giving may take a new turn. Several recent economic, demographic and technological advances and trends have made this an important time to focus on charitable giving, such as:

- Giving has reached a new high, rising over 10% in 1998, the third consecutive year in which giving increased.
- Dramatic gifts from some of America’s wealthiest citizens have drawn new attention to philanthropy and inspired debate about appropriate giving levels by the rich.
- At the same time, there is a growing recognition that as the demographic profile of the United States changes, giving by African Americans, Hispanic Americans, and other people of color is essential to the long-term health of the nonprofit sector and the expansion of our collective philanthropic tradition.
- Just as the strongest economy in a generation has produced unprecedented new wealth, the baby boom generation is poised to inherit $12 trillion from their parents.
- New technology is creating new avenues for giving, through both for-profit and nonprofit Internet sites.
- And finally, new donors, particularly those who have made their fortunes in the technology boom, have become innovators in the world of philanthropy, as they look for greater involvement in the causes they support and greater accountability for results. These “venture philanthropists” find kindred spirits among new social entrepreneurs who are applying new thinking and business solutions to the problems that plague our communities.

New Clinton Administration Commitments:

At the conference, the President and Mrs. Clinton will announce new Clinton Administration commitments to improve our understanding of giving and to encourage subsequent activities and dialogue on giving.

- Making Government More Responsive to the Nonprofit Sector: Insert DPC White House Council and Treasury Department info
- Examining Tax-related Issues and Research Opportunities: note plans for roundtable
- Expanding Our Understanding of Charitable Giving: CEA planned study

New Corporate and Private Commitments to Expand Giving:

The President and Mrs. Clinton also will highlight several new private initiatives to encourage the expansion of charitable giving, such as:

- AOL Foundation: The AOL Foundation will highlight its launch of Helping.org, a revolutionary e-philanthropy portal that provides Americans who want to lend a helping hand with the fastest, safest, easiest and most cost-effective way to donate money or volunteer time to the charity of their choice. Helping.org connects users to over 620,000 charities and more than 20,000 volunteer activities, providing an important new resource for the more than two-thirds of American households that already make charitable contributions, as well as those new to philanthropy.
- The Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation: The Gates Foundation will announce its support of a follow-up conference...
- Girl Scouts of the USA: The Girl Scouts of the USA will unveil its new philanthropy patch entitled 'Sharing our Strength.' Beginning in 2000, Girl Scouts of all age levels will earn interest patches that will help them recognize and learn from philanthropists in their own families, places of worship, schools, Girl Scout troops, and neighborhoods. The program will allow girls to identify and assist organizations and institutions that meet community needs and understand how their own time and money can make a difference in their communities.
WINGS???

Building on the White House Conference on Philanthropy:

On the occasion of the White House Conference on Philanthropy, the National Information Charities Bureau (NCIB) will host the "E-Philanthropy: Technology and the Nonprofit Community" forum to discuss the how the ever-increasing use of the Internet will impact the unique American tradition of charitable giving. In addition, the Corporation for National Service will host a morning conference on youth and philanthropy. At the White House conference, William Massey of NCIB and Malik Evans of the AmeriCorps program will report on what was discussed at their morning sessions.

Engaging Communities Around the Country:

A portion of the "White House Conference on Philanthropy" will be broadcast via satellite, presenting an extraordinary opportunity for communities across the country to participate in this important discussion. Over 4,500 sites in 40 states will view the conference via satellite, with the assistance of a grant from the Charles Mott Foundation and the support of SCETV, and the Department of Education. An additional 10.1 million viewers around the country will have access to viewing the conference through PBS and cable channels' live broadcasts.

The White Conference on Philanthropy is made possible with the support of The National Endowment for the Humanities, South Carolina Educational Television, The Charles Stewart Mott Foundation, Community Foundation-Silicon Valley, The J. Paul Getty Trust, the Iscol Family Foundation, The Marcie Polier Family Foundation, the American Red Cross, and the United Way of America.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE HEADS OF EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENTS AND AGENCIES

SUBJECT: Supporting the Role of Nonprofit Organizations: Interagency Task Force on Nonprofits and Government

The United States is the most generous Nation on Earth. In 1998, an estimated $175 billion was given by American individuals, communities, foundations, corporations, and other private philanthropies to a wide variety of causes and organizations. Individuals accounted for 85 percent of all contributions in 1998 and their giving has increased by almost one-third since 1995. And over the next 20 years, approximately $12 trillion in wealth is expected to be transferred from one generation to the next -- more than $1 trillion of which will flow to nonprofit organizations through charitable giving.

In many cases it is nonprofit organizations that convert philanthropy into results -- helping people in need, providing health care and educating our Nation's youth. The nonprofit sector is an integral component of our national life, encompassing more than one and a half million organizations with operating expenditures in excess of $600 billion. But more telling than the dollar figures is the new spirit of service and civic activism that nonprofits of every kind are now exhibiting. We are today in the midst of a nonprofit boom, a time when the activities of this sector are becoming ever more creative and entrepreneurial.

Nonprofits are uniquely able to identify problems, mobilize fresh thinking and energy, care for those in need on a human scale, and promote social change at the community level. As this sector grows in size and importance, there is an ever greater opportunity to forge partnerships that include Government, nonprofit groups, businesses, and citizens to address pressing public problems. There are already many ways that nonprofits work closely with the Federal Government. For example, Federal grant programs from the National Science Foundation and the National Institutes of Health assist non-profit research institutions that search for cures to cancer. And the Corporation for National Service works with nonprofits throughout the Nation to provide after-school and tutoring programs. Our challenge in this time of burgeoning social entrepreneurship is to encourage Government, nonprofits, and others to work together more meaningfully.

Therefore, today I direct the Assistants to the President for Domestic Policy and Economic Policy and the Chief of Staff to the First Lady to convene an Interagency Task Force on Nonprofits and Government ("Task Force"). The purpose of this Task Force will be twofold: first, to identify current forms of collaboration between the Federal Government and nonprofits; and second, to evaluate ways this collaboration can be improved.

Structure of the Task Force

The Assistant to the President for Domestic Policy, the Assistant to the President for Economic Policy, and the Assistant to the President and Chief of Staff to the First Lady will jointly Chair the Task Force. The Office of the Vice President, the Office of Management and Budget, and the Council of Economic Advisers will be regular participants.

The Task Force shall be composed of the following members:

- (1) Secretary of the Treasury
- (2) Attorney General
- (3) Secretary of the Interior
- (4) Secretary of Agriculture
- (5) Secretary of Commerce
- (6) Secretary of Labor
- (7) Secretary of Health and Human Services
- (8) Secretary of Housing and Urban Development
- (9) Secretary of Transportation
- (10) Secretary of Education
- (11) Administrator of the Small Business Administration
- (12) Chief Executive Officer of the Corporation for National and Community Service

The Chairs of the Task Force may add such other officials and independent agencies as they deem appropriate to further the purposes of this effort or to participate in specific aspects of it. The Chairs, after consultation with Task Force members, will appoint staff members to coordinate the Task Force's efforts. The Chairs may call upon the participating agencies for logistical support to the Task Force, as necessary. Members of the Task Force may delegate their responsibilities under this memorandum to subordinates. During its work, the Task Force will consult regularly with the nonprofit sector.

Objectives of the Task Force

The Task Force will:

1. Develop a public inventory of "best practices" in existing collaborations between Federal agency programs and nonprofit organizations. In cooperation with the nonprofit sector, the Task Force will work to apply these leading models to other Government efforts. For example, cross-agency initiatives that reflect the community-wide focus of many nonprofits could be highlighted and replicated. The Task Force will also examine ways that Federal agencies can better draw upon the experience and innovations of nonprofits in the development of public policy.
2. Evaluate data and research trends on nonprofits and philanthropy. Understanding the significance of the relationship between the nonprofit and Government sectors requires an understanding of the impact that the nonprofit sector has on the economy and on public policy. For example, the Council of Economic Advisers should undertake an analysis of existing data from the private and nonprofit sectors concerning the role of philanthropy in our economy, including an examination of the factors that affect giving and an investigation of trends that are likely to affect future giving. The Task Force will also coordinate agency efforts to identify the contributions made by the nonprofit sector and information regarding philanthropic activity.

3. Develop further policy responses. The Task Force will meet to discuss new findings and to consider new or modified Administration policy responses. For example, the Task Force will work with the non-profit sector and others to explore ways to encourage philanthropy and service, efforts to help nonprofits develop and grow (including "venture philanthropy"), opportunities for closer collaboration on research and in meeting local needs, and ways to reduce governmental barriers to innovative nonprofit enterprises.

From time to time, the Task Force will report to me on the results of its efforts.

General Provisions

This memorandum is intended only for internal management of the executive branch. This memorandum is not intended, and should not be construed, to create any right, benefit, or trust responsibility, substantive or procedural, enforceable at law or equity by a party against the United States, its agencies, its officers, or its employees. This memorandum shall not be construed to create any right to judicial review involving the compliance or noncompliance with this memorandum by the United States, its agencies, its officers, or any other person.

To Eli from HRC:

When we first discussed plans for the 5th anniversary of AmeriCorps, I had hoped we might see paid advertisements, awards, and strong corporate involvement. You made it happen. Thank you. YOU know how much the program you started means to Bill and me. It is our fondest hope that AmeriCorps will be a "legacy, not history," as one person put it. I am so grateful that you were willing to take on what I understand has been a difficult project of raising funds to spread the word about the great work of these young people.

I am deeply appreciative as well to have been the first recipient of the Dan Dutko award. It means a lot to me, knowing Dan and his commitment to the project. Thank you.

I look forward to seeing you again soon.

HRC

Dear Debbie:

I wanted to take a minute to thank you for your kind words and role in making me the first recipient of the Dan Dutko award. Dan was truly an American treasure, and we dearly miss his enthusiasm for our cause and his friendship. It is indeed an honor to receive an award named for him. Thank you.

I hope you will come visit us soon.

Sincerely,

HRC

Dear Ms. Connolly:

Thank you for all you did to make the 5th Anniversary of AMeriCorps a success. When I first spoke with Dan and Eli about the project, we had many ideas. But it takes real commitment and perseverance to make them happen. The PResident and I are truly grateful for your efforts.

Best wishes in your future endeavors.

Sincerely,

HRC

Dear Mr. Scardino:

I wanted to write to let you know how much the President and I appreciate your work on the 5th Anniversary. You should be proud of what you accomplished -- a project of this kind and complexity could not be successful without your efforts. Thank you.

Best of luck in your future endeavors.

Sincerely,

HRC

TALKING IT OVER
BY HILLARY RODHAM CLINTON
RELEASE: WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 27, 1999, AND THEREAFTER

Last week at the White House, I met some real heroes -- people who understand the importance of giving. After seeing news accounts of the refugee crisis in Yugoslavia, 10-year-old Gil Castellanos wanted to help, so he created "Simply from the Heart," an effort to raise $1 from each resident of his hometown, Elmhurst, Ill. Matthew Nonnemacher, of Hazelton, Penn., was also 10 when he launched a drive to collect pennies for the poor. His total: 1.8 million, or $18,000. At the age of 78, Matel Dawson still spends over 80 hours a week operating a forklift at the Ford Motor Company, just as he has for 59 years. Over the last eight years, Mat has given away $1 million, mostly helping college students complete their education. Asked why he continues to work so hard, Mat responds, "I need the money. I need it to give away." The Rev. Ann Pearson inherited $1,000 from her Uncle John. Hoping to inspire an ethic of caring in others, she decided to give each of her parishioners $10 that they,

. What Ann found was that the money grew as enthusiastic donors brought new opportunities and ideas for community service into the church and requested support for additional giving. Giving has always been an important tradition in this country. More than a hundred years ago, political observer Alexis de Tocqueville said that charity in America is more than simple compassion. It is a sign of good citizenship. He wrote, "Americans make great and real sacrifices to the public welfare. They hardly ever fail to lend faithful support to one another." I have been privileged to travel to many of the world's newest democracies -- places where people are just beginning to understand both the benefits and the responsibilities of freedom. Everywhere I go, someone asks me how the United States has been able to make its democracy work for so many years. Our democracy thrives, I reply, not just because we enjoy free elections and free markets, it also thrives because our citizens are the most gen erous in the world, both with their time, and with their resources. Our democracy thrives because of people like Gil and Matthew, Matel and Ann. Our democracy thrives because of people like Osceola McCarty. Osceola spent a lifetime washing, starching and ironing other people's clothes. She lived simply and frugally. Four years ago, she decided to use her life savings to endow a scholarship fund at a nearby university. "I'm giving it away so that the children won't have to work so hard like I did," she explained. At the age of 91, Osceola passed away, but her generous spirit lives on. In order to honor "heroes" like these, and to highlight the American tradition of giving, the President and I hosted the first-ever White House Conference on Philanthropy last week. We listened as donors, young people, policy experts and representatives of non-profits, foundations and educational programs discussed the diverse and changing face of philanthropy, and explored how best to preserve and expand this valuable tradi en a better time to take a look at philanthropy in this country. We are living in a period of unprecedented prosperity, a time when the new economy has produced new wealth and the Baby Boom generation stands poised to inherit $12 trillion from their parents. Although dramatic gifts from a new group of donors, many of whom have made their fortunes in the technology boom, have drawn new attention to giving, Osceola, Gil, Matthew, Matel and Ann prove every day that philanthropy is not just for the wealthy. As a matter of fact, the face of giving in this country is almost as diverse as the population itself. Last year, donations to charitable causes reached a new high, totaling nearly $150 billion. Individuals accounted for 85 percent of that amount, up a third since 1995. As a percent of our gross national product, total giving exceeded 2 percent last year, the highest level since 1971. This is all great news, but I can't help but wonder what we could do as a nation if we increased o gine this: If we increased our giving by just 1 percent, we could offer child care to more than 6 million children, deliver 250 million more meals to the homebound elderly, and guarantee Head Start to every low-income preschooler in America. We could provide shelter to 4 million people, save all the rare books in our libraries, and still have more than enough money left over to create the equivalent of a Ford Foundation each year.

As we move toward the new century, the President and I have asked every American to identify the gifts they can make for the future. There is no better gift our generation can give than creating an even stronger philanthropic tradition. To find out more about Hillary Rodham

It is a sign of good citizenship. He wrote, "Americans make great and real sacrifices to the public welfare. They hardly ever fail to lend faithful support to one another."

I have been privileged to travel to many of the world's newest democracies -- places where people are just beginning to understand both the benefits and the responsibilities of freedom. Everywhere I go, someone asks me how the United States has been able to make its democracy work for so many years.

Our democracy thrives, I reply, not just because we enjoy free elections and free markets, it also thrives because our citizens are the most generous in the world, both with their time, and with their resources.

Our democracy thr ives because of people like Gil and Matthew, Matel and Ann. Our democracy thrives because of people like Osceola McCarty. Osceola spent a lifetime washing, starching and ironing other people's clothes. She lived simply and frugally. Four years ago, she decided to use her life savings to endow a scholarship fund at a nearby university. "I'm giving it away so that the children won't have to work so hard like I did," she explained. At the age of 91, Osceola passed away, but her generous spirit lives on.

In order to honor "heroes" like these, and to highlight the American tradition of giving, the President and I hosted the first-ever White House Conference on Philanthropy last week. We listened as donors, young people, policy experts and representatives of non-profits, foundations and educational programs discussed the diverse and changing face of philanthropy, and explored how best to preserve and expand this valuable tradition.

There has never been a better time to take a look at philanthropy in this country. We are living in a period of unprecedented prosperity, a time when the new economy has produced new wealth and the Baby Boom generation stands poised to inherit $12 trillion from their parents.

Although dramatic gifts from a new group of donors, many of whom have made their fortunes in the technology boom, have drawn new attention to giving, Osceola, Gil, Matthew, Matel and Ann prove every day that philanthropy is not just for the wealthy. As a matter of fact, the face of giving in this country is almost as diverse as the population itself.

Last year, donations to charitable causes reached a new high, totaling nearly $150 billion. Individuals accounted for 85 percent of that amount, up a third since 1995. As a percent of our gross national product, total giving exceeded 2 percent last year, the highest level since 1971.

This is all great news, but I can't help but wonder what we could do as a nation if we increased our giving even more.

Imagine this: If we increased our giving by just 1 percent, we could offer child care to more than 6 million children, deliver 250 million more meals to the homebound elderly, and guarantee Head Start to every low-income preschooler in America. We could provide shelter to 4 million people, save all the rare books in our libraries, and still have more than enough money left over to create the equivalent of a Ford Foundation each year.

As we move toward the new century, the President and I have asked every American to identify the gifts they can make for the future. There is no better gift our generation can give than creating an even stronger philanthropic tradition.

TALKING IT OVER

Last week at the White House, I met some real heroes -- people who understand the importance of giving.

After seeing news accounts of the refugee crisis in Yugoslavia, 10-year-old Gil Castellanos wanted to help, so he created "Simply from the Heart," an effort to raise $1 from each resident of his hometown, Elmhurst, Ill. Matthew Nonnemacher, of Hazelton, Penn., was also 10 when he launched a drive to collect pennies for the poor. His total: 1.8 million, or $18,000.

At the age of 78, Matel Dawson still spends over 80 hours a week operating a forklift at the Ford Motor Company, just as he has for 59 years. Over the last eight years, Mat has given away $1 million, mostly helping college students complete their education. Asked why he continues to work so hard, Mat responds, "I need the money. I need it to give away."

The Rev.

Ann Pearson inherited $1,000 from her Uncle John. Hoping to inspire an ethic of caring in others, she decided to give each of her parishioners $10 that they, in turn, would give away. What Ann found was that the money grew as enthusiastic donors brought new opportunities and ideas for community service into the church and requested support for additional giving.

Giving has always been an important tradition in this country. More than a hundred years ago, political observer Alexis de Tocqueville said that charity in America is more than simple compassion. It is a sign of good citizenship. He wrote, "Americans make great and real sacrifices to the public welfare. They hardly ever fail to lend faithful support to one another."

Subject: AmeriCorps Fifth Anniversary Photos!!

Hello All!

It was so great to see all of you at the Fifth Celebration!! We must all get together again very soon!

Sorry it has taken me awhile to get the email distribution list and these photos to you all, but here they are!! I put them on our personal website
(so you can also check out our Tibet and Nepal trip photos)

To go there, direct your browser to <<http://www.vernajosh.homepage.com>> and click on the AmeriCorps button!

We may add a few more photos, but it's mostly complete. If you have any problems or notice anything wrong with it, please tell me.

Otherwise, enjoy!

Love,
Verna

PS Please forward this to anyone whose email I didn't have! thanks.
