New Patriots: AmeriCorps at 100,000
Profiles of AmeriCorps Members Starting their Service in Fall '98

Robert Peters, 24, Notre-Dame AmeriCorps, Apopka, FL
Robert joined AmeriCorps to be a role model for young people that he never had. He grew up in New Orleans 7th ward, a tough neighborhood plagued by crime, drugs and gangs. The oldest of four children, (b)(6) Robert resisted the temptations that surrounded him and kept focused on his studies. His determination to excel led him to apply to the University of Notre Dame, the first in his family to attend college. He overcame the culture shock of being an African-American male in a predominantly white institution and graduated last spring with a major in history. He turned down job offers and postponed applying to law school because he was committed to do a year of service. He joined the Sister of Notre Dame AmeriCorps program in Apopka FL, where he is tutoring migrant farmworker children in math and teaching adults how to read. In his AmeriCorps application he stated, "Throughout my childhood and adolescent years, I never had a positive role model (besides my mother) within my community. I vowed that if I ever had the chance to be a positive role model to youth in a poor community that I would do it. AmeriCorps presents me with this opportunity."

[001]

Rena Anthony, 22, National Association of Community Health Centers, Providence, RI
Twenty-two year-old Brown graduate Rena Anthony was on the fast track in a career in public health. She was already accepted into graduate school but deferred admission in order to join AmeriCorps, where she recently started serving in an Ob/Gyn clinic at a Providence community health center. Rena says, "I was accepted into grad school but realized that I would be studying people without knowing what their lives are like. I was lucky to come from a somewhat privileged background. I always went to private schools, and have never really had the chance to meet people different from me." In addition to broadening her knowledge, Rena had another reason for joining AmeriCorps:
"I also really wanted to serve. This is the first year I've had a big choice in what I do with my life - I wanted to start this new part of my life by serving." Her biggest surprise so far? "I expected everyone to be like me. But I'm serving with people who have spent their whole lives in Providence - and have never been to college. It's refreshing - it feels so real. I am finding things in common with people who are so different from me."

Efrain Chavez, 23, Public Allies, San Jose, CA

As a teen growing up in San Jose, Efrain Chavez was lucky to have an adult mentor in his life. Now through AmeriCorps he's helping other young people improve their chances for success. Originally from Mexico, Efrain has lived in San Jose since 1978. He participated in the Boy's Club and developed a close relationship with a mentor who encouraged him to be involved in his community. Efrain started volunteering in his teen years, working on anti-tobacco campaigns and other youth advocacy efforts. For the past three years, Efrain has worked in the city's recreation department and studying sociology at San Jose State University. By joining AmeriCorps, he took a significant pay cut, but he expects the experience to be well worth it.

As a

Public Allies AmeriCorps member, he is developing an after-school curriculum for 3rd-5th graders and increasing parental involvement in public schools.

Mary McNamara, 22, Operation Fresh Start, Madison, WI

Growing up in the McNamara family, Mary learned at a young age the joy and duty of serving others. Now she's putting her ideals into action full-time as an AmeriCorps member with Operation Fresh Start, where she's building low-income housing and helping at-risk youth become self-sufficient. Mary is the oldest of six children, three boys and three girls. Her father is an attorney and former mayor of Rockford, IL. When you're one of the mayor's kids, it's hard not to lean about politics and being civic-minded, but it was the responsibility to give back that Mary's father really taught all of his kids. The family always did volunteer projects together, either through their church or local projects like paint-a-thons where neighbors banded together to make home repairs for the elderly. Mr. McNamara told his children that once you receive your education, no matter what you decide to do, you should give back to others not as fortunate as you. That's exactly what Mary is doing. After graduating last spring from Lawrence University, Mary joined AmeriCorps. She started her year of service last month. Mary says she was fortunate - she had few traumas and obstacles during her upbringing. But she adds, "It's for those reasons - because I had it pretty easy - that I feel even more committed to giving something back."

Debra Gonnig, 24, Round Rock AmeriCorps, Navajo Nation

Like many young Navajos, Debra Gonnig left the reservation after graduating from high school to look for a job. But after a few years working as a temp in Phoenix, Debra wasn't satisfied. She started looking for a way to return to the reservation to pursue her real dream: helping Navajo children succeed in school. AmeriCorps provided that opportunity. Debra just started her AmeriCorps service at Round Rock Elementary School, where she's tutoring children and coaching after-school sports. "It's been a great opportunity to serve my community, something I always wanted to do." Service and kinship have always been part of the Navajo culture. AmeriCorps is strengthening that tradition and helping stop the brain drain of talented graduates leaving the reservation. Debra plans to stay on the reservation and become a teacher, using her AmeriCorps education award to get her degree from Navajo Community College.

Steve Billings, 23, AmeriCorps*National Civilian Community Corps, San Diego
After graduating with a degree in economics from Georgetown last May, Steve Billings could have landed a high paying job in the financial sector.

Instead he followed the path of service, joining the AmeriCorps* NCCC, where he will work on environmental projects, promote public safety and respond to natural disasters in California and nearby states. "I could have definitely been in the financial world, but that didn't appeal to me. Some people might say that I am wasting my degree, but that's silly. NCCC enables you to get real life experience and most importantly to help other people--that's what I call total job satisfaction." While he was in college, he tutored elementary school students through the DC Schools Project and ran a camp for children in the summer months. "If I feel that I've helped a person out, there's nothing better." After his time in NCCC, he plans to go to graduate school for city planning.

Markell Harrison, 25, Athletes in Service to America, Buffalo, NY
Through his love of sports and service, Markell Harrison has overcome many obstacles to become a role model for the young people in Rochester public schools.

(b)(6) [001]
(b)(6) But he persisted in his studies and athletics and won a track scholarship to Rochester Institute of Technology. After graduating, Markell wanted to give something back to his community. He joined AmeriCorps and is now serving with Athletes in Service to America, where he tutors elementary students, teaches conflict resolution and leads children in after-school sports. In his spare time he serves with Big Brothers/Big Sisters and People Inc., a group home for disabled people. His AmeriCorps experience this year will prepare him for his next big challenge: getting a masters in education and becoming a teacher.

Shelley Beal, 22, AmeriCorps and the Medically Under-Served, Salt Lake City,

UT

The first member of her family to receive a college degree, Shelley's older brothers couldn't understand why she would want to "volunteer" when she could start making some real money. Shelley's response to that is "It's better to be selfless than selfish." Shelly just started her AmeriCorps service, where she and her colleagues provide direct health care services to thousands of at-risk people in the areas of immunization, homeless health, diabetes, HIV/AIDS and reproductive health. Born and raised in Erie, PA, Shelly learned the value of service from her father, who volunteered a lot of his time helping the local high school softball team. She learned that when you do what you love - even in your spare time, you can really make a difference in your community. Shelley carried that sense of involvement with her to Ohio State University, where she became chair of her dorm's community service program, organizing blood drives, planning an AIDS walk and sending care packages to troops in Bosnia. Upon graduation she wasn't sure what she wanted to do. When her roommate told her she was joining the Peace Corps, Shelley's response was "Why go to Africa when there are people in the US who need help?" That was before she heard of AmeriCorps. Once Shelley learned about AmeriCorps, she knew right away that was what she wanted to do. Says Shelley, "I love the people in AmeriCorps because everyone here is serving because that's what they want to do and chose to do - they care, they're committed and they want to make people's lives better."

Tracy Breslin, 22, ReadBoston, Boston, MA

Tracy, a 1998 graduate of Cornell University, became an AmeriCorps member because she deeply believes in helping children get a chance to succeed in life. She received a Bachelor of Science with a concentration in human development and family studies. She spent a semester abroad doing early childhood work in Sweden. Tracy worked as an intern with the Ithaca Public School District during her last year of college. She feels a deep dedication to service and has years of service experience. Tracy is serving with ReadBoston in an after-school site promoting reading with elementary age children. She will manage a tutoring program as well as work with after-school program providers and parents to advocate for literacy.

Below is a scheduling request for Americorps "Call to Service" and 100,000 member milestone. Should we do this as a joint request? Any edits?

TO: Stephanie Streett

FROM:

DATE: January 6, 1999

REQUEST: President Clinton's participation in kick-off of AmeriCorps' "Call to Service" recruitment campaign.

PURPOSE: To celebrate success of President's national service program by focusing national attention on AmeriCorps passing its 100,000 member milestone and to kick-off "Call to Service" - a national recruitment campaign designed to ensure AmeriCorps reaches 200,000 member mark by end of 2000.

BACKGROUND: President Clinton created AmeriCorps, the domestic Peace Corps, in 1993. Since then, more than 100,000 Americans have participated in AmeriCorps - a tremendous achievement for the President and for the national service movement. (N.B. It took the Peace Corps more than two decades to reach the 100,000-member mark.)

To call attention to success of AmeriCorps and to enhance our recruiting efforts, we are launching a "Call to Service" - a national recruitment drive to ensure AmeriCorps reaches 200,000 members by the end of 2000. This campaign includes a new television PSA produced by MTV, print advertising, a direct mail appeal to college seniors by former AmeriCorps members, as well as a number of campus-based and other recruiting events throughout the spring and summer.

For the February kick-off event, the President could swear in 100 AmeriCorps members who are serving locally as well as several members from the first AmeriCorps class to represent the more than 100,000 who have served since 1994. The event would also include the unveiling the new MTV AmeriCorps PSA.

PREVIOUS PARTICIPATION: Since his 1992 campaign, the President has participated in number of high-profile AmeriCorps and national service events including the bill signing and the original AmeriCorps launch. Most recently the President served with AmeriCorps members on the Martin Luther King Day of Service in January 1998 and spoke to the City Year AmeriCorps Convention on Idealism in Cleveland in June 1998. He was scheduled to participate in event marking AmeriCorps' 100,000 member on October 23, 1998, which was canceled due to signing of Wye Plantation Peace Accord.

DATE/TIME: Week of February 8, 1999

DURATION: One to one and a half-hours

LOCATION: Our recommended site is Georgetown University, the President's alma mater and site of one of his "new covenant" speeches in which he spoke eloquently about the ethic of service. A college campus with an audience of young people is a excellent setting for the President to deliver a "call to service" campaign asking young people to give a year of service to their country. Alternatively, the event could be held in East Room as originally planned. The White House venue has advantage of being convenient, but is less appropriate for recruitment message.

PARTICIPANTS: The President, Harris Wofford, selected Members of Congress, Administration officials including especially Mark Gearan, current and past AmeriCorps members.

REMARKS REQUIRED: Yes. Major speech on national service, in the vein of the President's campaign speech at Notre Dame in September 1992, his speech at Rutgers unveiling the plan for AmeriCorps in 1993, and his speech at the City Year/AmeriCorps conference in Cleveland in June 1997. Also lead the AmeriCorps members, and others, in reciting the AmeriCorps pledge, as he did in Cleveland.

MEDIA COVERAGE: National media. Regional possibilities depending on involvement of AmeriCorps members. Also, possibilities for strong focus on college press.

PROPOSED ATTENDANCE: If at Georgetown University, a large student audience, and leaders of the non-profit community. If at the White House, AmeriCorps members and the leadership of major non-profit organizations.

RECOMMENDED BY: Harris Wofford

Mary Ellen called earlier. Thanks for calling about the books. I think that a few would be sufficient as it is one library. However, I may come back and ask for a few more for the school. We hope to have a Cabinet member there to read.

Please pass this info onto Mary Ellen too. Thanks.

ALSO - FYI: The following Americorps site is the one that we have at the ready should the President be able to do service on Monday. The Vice President will serve there in the afternoon. Anne McGuire is coordinating with the VP's office and Americorps. If the First Lady decides to do service that day, she will go there too. However, she is not expected to do so. Let us know if you have questions.

Garfield Terrace Apartments - The Americorps is working with the DC Housing Authority who is the sponsor for this long term project that will get a head start from a burst of one-day energy by community volunteers. Volunteers will do light carpentry work and painting of the hallways and common areas throughout the building will take place, including a space that will become a health center for the seniors living in the building. The Garfield Terrace Senior Apartments are located at 2301 11th Street, N.W. Volunteers report to the apartments at 9:00am for the morning shift and work until 1:00pm. Afternoon volunteers will work from 1:00pm - 5:00pm. White House staff will also volunteer here.

Shirley, I'm so sorry that I didn't get the handbook to you sooner. I was sure I had put it inside mail to you on Monday. Thank you for taking the time at the last minute to look at it.

We tried to keep you and your "former lives" in mind when we wrote it -- we have Mrs. Clinton in an Americorps hat and we included the Kellogg information on Service Learning that you recommended we consider.

Again, I'm truly sorry, I won't do that again. And thanks for your help.

Shirley -- would you take another look at the picture on page 4 of our Handbook and make sure you thinks it's an okay picture of HRC. We liked it because the President and First Lady were with kids and because she has an Americorps hat on but wanted your opinion on whether the hat shadows her too much. The graphic designers think the final picture will be lighter and that it's okay -- do you.

[Murphy, Tara] we found the white male....here he is. little younger -- high school grad-- great story to tell re: disaster relief

Aaron Staats, age 19, from Warwick, NY has been a part of AmeriCorps*NCCC since October 1997. He's currently a second year corps member in Charleston, SC.

This year he spent most of September through November helping Puerto Ricans recover from the disaster wreaked by hurricane Georges.

"Some of the things that have stuck out the most in my mind down my path of community service are a Puerto Rican woman's tears of joy at the assistance I was able to give her after a life threatening trauma, a homeowner's gratitude at the new paint my team and I applied to their house, and knowing that I was a factor in a youth's moment of understanding in their education. The truth is community service is nothing what I expected it to be, it is that and so much more."

After High School, Aaron was torn between going to college or enlisting in the Air Force, but ultimately decided to join AmeriCorps. After two years in AmeriCorps, he is more focused and now ready to pursue college education.

Interestingly enough, AmeriCorps has become a Staats family tradition of sorts as his younger brother is a AmeriCorps member serving at the Denver *NCCC campus this year.

Ashley Dumas

Notre Dame Mission Volunteers, Inc. and Project Hope in Dorchester, Mass.
Age 22
hometown: Seattle, Washington

A May 1998 graduate of Wellsley College with a degree in Cognitive Science, 22 year old Ashley Dumas always knew she wanted to spend her first year out of college doing intensive community service work through an AmeriCorps program. Her intense passion for social justice, a strong foundation from her parents (her father is a commander in the Coast Guard, her mother is a public school teacher) and years of catholic education led her to the Notre Dame Mission Volunteers. She is currently serving at Project Hope in South Boston, a shelter from single mothers, where she teaches GED classes while also helping with the program's child care services and food pantry. But at the end of the day, Ashley's service doesn't end. Seeking a living arrangement that would compliment her AmeriCorps service, Ashley (voluntarily) lives in a house with 6 teens enrolled in A Better Chance, a program that places at-risk youth in private and public schools so they may have a better chance at graduating from High School and breaking away from a life of poverty. In exchange for room and board, Ashley tutors the girls (ages 14-17) two hours each night, organizes weekend activities, and serves as a positive role model and mentor. After her year of service, Ashley hopes to attend graduate programs for social work.

After a successful first term, Loc decided to extend his service for a second year. Today Loc serves full-time as a mentor to 8 teenage boys at San Luis Obispo High School. They all are dealing with major risk issues including academic failure, drug and alcohol abuse, criminal activity and low-functioning families. Loc's ability to see potential and appreciate what he's been given has made him very successful at making connections with these disenfranchised teens. Since serving in AmeriCorps, Loc has changed plans from going to medical school to getting a degree in education. He has become passionate about working with youth and plans to become a teacher and ultimately a high school principal. Says Loc, "Through the work of AmeriCorps this year, I have grown and matured in so many ways. AmeriCorps has given me a vision of the future, of what I want to do with my life, and the importance of the community, working together to achieve a common goal."

Debra Gonnig, 24, Round Rock AmeriCorps, Navajo Nation
Like many young Navajos, Debra Gonnig left the reservation after graduating from high school to look for a job. But after a few years working as a temp in Phoenix, Debra wasn't satisfied. She started looking for a way to return to the reservation to pursue her real dream: helping Navajo children succeed in school. AmeriCorps provided that opportunity. Debra just started her AmeriCorps service at Round Rock Elementary School, where she's tutoring children and coaching after-school sports. "It's been a great opportunity to serve my community, something I always wanted to do." Service and kinship have always been part of the Navajo culture. AmeriCorps is strengthening that tradition and helping stop the brain drain of talented graduates leaving the reservation. Debra plans to stay on the reservation and become a teacher, using her AmeriCorps education award to get her degree from Navajo Community College.

I thought it might be useful to pull some people together to brainstorm about the 5th anniversary celebration. It could include selected folks who are involved in all of the various "AmeriCorps visibility" efforts. Next week? What do you think?

As you probably heard, I lost on the "churches" point in the speech.

Attached are Lotus 1,2,3 tables showing the programmatic breakdown of funding for CNCS in the 2000 budget. Under Tab "B" of that Lotus file is a rack up of AmeriCorps participants by program.

You'll note that both tables include columns for 2001 and 2002. The participation table shows the agreed upon increase for CNCS - - reaching 100,000 participants in 2002. The table showing budget authority does not show a corresponding increase in 2001 and 2002 to finance the participant increase. Across all agencies, the outyears have been flat lined The flat line does not reflect a specific policy decision for CNCS, but rather a government-wide decision regarding the outyears. The decision on spending in the 2001 and 2002 budgets will be made when those budgets are developed. In the meantime, our guidance is that we can discuss the participant goal of reaching 100,000 AmeriCorps members in 2002, but not the costs associated with that goal.

TEXT:

Dear Shirley --

It was really terrific to see you last week. Thank you so much for hosting us in the Roosevelt room at the White House. Our meeting with you was really the highlight of our conference in DC. Our ED's stormed Capitol Hill the next day and had some great meetings -- including with Sen's Specter, Santorum and Dewine's offices!

I'm so sorry I haven't gotten this information to you sooner. I was out again yesterday in New York (Ed Cohen has started a new foundation working to help launch economic development efforts on native american reservations and I was there for a strategy day). I've been travelling too much this past month. Anyway, I hope this info is helpful.

I've broken it down into 3 parts: some macro statistics from our first 10 years, our macro statistics from last year, and what the Bank Boston team did last year.

If there is anything else you need, or a question you have after reading this, let me know. I'm in the office all of the rest of this week and can turn something around immediately.

Again, thanks Shirley for including us in your book. I can't wait until it comes out so I can share it with folks here.

City Year as a whole, 10 years (through June 1998)

More than:

3100 City Year graduates

4.5 million hours of service

236 different corporate team sponsors (many are repeats year to year)

97,000 Serve-a-thon participants

2704 Serve-a-thon projects

$80,000,000 revenue raised (and spent!) with every federal dollar invested matched by a private sector dollar.

650 different service partners in major long-term service projects (many are repeats year to year)

more than 205,000 children tutored, taught, mentored and led into service in schools and out of school time programs

The above numbers are conservative as we don't have detailed records from our early years. Our records are very detailed from the beginning of Americorps.

City Year as a whole, 1997-98

35 corps members receiving their GED through City Year
500 Young Heroes (middle schoolers led in regular weekend service by the corps) completing multi-week program
3634 school children in week long City Year led vacation camps

68,417 total children served by teams through school partnerships (17,980); after-school programs, weekend and vacation programs; special curricula in HIV-AIDS, domestic violence, substance abuse.

20,937 adults served by teams through shelters, nursing homes, hospitals, HIV-AIDS organizations, housing authorities, community agencies

210 green spaces created
537 outdoor spaces renovated
166 gardens created
15,561 art units, such as murals, installed
30 playgrounds built
62 education spaces, such as science and nature labs, created
21,309 feet of trail laid
3851 children taught full curricula (HIV-AIDS, domestic violence, substance abuse)
260 peer educators trained
90 health fairs organized
9432 children and adults assisted in disaster relief

293 total number of corporations investing in City Year, including 125 sponsoring teams
160 service partners where City Year served a full-year, including 50 schools; 322 short-term service partners
34,831 citizen volunteers engaged in service
51,593 people attending events sponsored by City Year
2480 visitors to City Year sites

BankBoston Team-1997-98

Note: Bank Boston has been a business partner to the Josiah Quincy School for 14 years; City Year is now in its third year of service at the Josiah Quincy School

In total we served 1100 children in the Josiah Quincy School, 50 high schoolers, and 547 adults, including 59 seniors
The Bank Boston team also engaged 345 individuals in service

The team provided 7714 hours of tutoring in reading and other subjects
Renovated 17 outdoor spaces
Assisted with 7 special events

Major accomplishments in 1997-98:

Corps members received training from ReadBoston as well as Reading Recovery and provided regular tutoring to children in reading and other subjects. In 1998, the Quincy School received the highest scores in Boston in statewide assessments, despite the large number of children whose native language is not English, and City Year corps members can be seen as key contributors to this success. The team is an integral part of the school's educational strategy. Corps members tutor individual students, run small reading groups and develop whole school projects. The City Year Bank Boston team has invested itself in the district goal of having every child reading at or above grade level by the time they reach third grade.

In the fall of 1997, City Year corps members and Bank Boston employees partnered on a series of 6 Chinatown Beautification projects which engaged 50 Bank Boston employees who worked alongside the 10 City Year Bank Boston team members.

The City Year team also created a geography service learning legacy project involving all of the students and supported by teachers, community members, and employees from BankBoston and other corporations. The team engaged all 900 children in the service of beautifying their school through this map project, roof-top gardening and composting and recycling projects. Participants painted a large scale map of the United States on the school grounds and created educational games using the map. Teachers and corps members developed curriculum units to reinforce learning about the geography of our country.

In Spring 1998, the City Year team, worked with students to design a new school playground. In the Fall, under the leadership of new project leader, Tung Ha (a former corps member from 1996-97 who served on the first team to be partnered with BankBoston at the Josiah Quincy School!), the team helped move the building process forward through the Nike Corporation and KaBoom!. The team also participated in the playground construction along with Nike and KaBoom! employees, teachers, parents, other AmeriCorps organizations, the Boston Chinatown Neighborhood Committee, an after school program, and community members, and employees from BankBoston.

BankBoston employees and corps members partnered to design and paint a mural for the school during City Year's annual Serve-a-thon.

In the summer of 1998, City Year worked with Bank Boston to design a team sponsor plan that would allow for powerful service and the development of City Year corps members. City Year program director, Lara Stone, and BankBoston Corporate Community Affairs staff person, Karen Stephenson, created a model for Bank Boston's involvement. This year they have introduced a committee approach to working with the team and have six employees who regularly partner with the team. Bank Boston employees participate actively in Serve-a-thon, the Legacy Project, Chinese New Year and during student field trips. In addition, the employees run resume and cover letter workshops for corps members, provide Internet and Web-site creation trainings, and provide office space for trainings and retreats.

That's what I've been able to gather. I hope this is helpful. If you need additional stuff, have a question, or feel that something is missing, let me know by return e-mail and I'll get back to you right away.

Hope to see you again soon!

Yours,

Alan

I think it looks good, though I think there's one thing that might need clarification. The paragraph that touches on state commissions might need a little more clarification...not sure that even friendly democrats are aware that 2/3 of the money gets distributed by governor-appointed commissions...anyway...some clarification of what state commissions are might be useful...or you can leave that out altogether.

Aside from that, I think the numbers are very good (# of AmeriCorps Members, etc.) and the message that this is a Clinton legacy is communicated well.

Looks good! (I noted there were a few typos, but I'm assuming you're speed-typing your way through this and someone somewhere along the line will catch them).

I have a different thought on the visibility call for Monday. Our big visibility effort for this week is the University of Maryland event on Wednesday. And all of us are focused on getting that done as well as possible. I wonder if we can do the following:

1. Transform this call into a check-in call on the Wednesday event; and
2. Move it earlier in the day so that based on what gets discussed and decided, there is an opportunity to follow-up on Monday.

Is this possible. Let us know. Thanks. JG

PRESIDENT WILLIAM J. CLINTON
REMARKS FOR AMERICORPS , CALL TO SERVICE
UNIVERSITY OF MARYLAND
COLLEGE PARK, MD
FEBRUARY 10, 1999

Acknowledge:

For the past six years, I have said that AmeriCorps is one of my proudest achievements as President. Derek, T.J., Leslie, Justin, Pepe, you ,ve just shown us all why. You make America proud. You and your fellow AmeriCorps members here and across the country -- are the reasons why America is stronger than ever.

Today I want to talk to everyone here, those who are in AmeriCorps and those who are still thinking about it -- about why it is important to give more Americans the chance to serve through AmeriCorps.

I want you to remember what it was like when I first proposed AmeriCorps more than seven years ago. Many of you were still in high school -- or even elementary school. Back then, if you watched the news, or read the paper, or listened closely to the talk at the dinner table, you could tell that it was a time of doubt for America. Our economy was troubled, our deficit high, our people divided. Too many neighborhoods were falling prey to drugs and crime. Too many children were growing up without parents, without hope. Some wondered whether America ,s best days were already behind us. A book called &America, What Went Wrong? 8 was at the top of the bestseller lists.

But I was confident that the heart and spirit of America were still strong. Today, we ,ve earned the right to write a new bestseller, &America, What Went Right! 8 We are living in the longest peacetime economic expansion in American history. We have nearly 18 million new jobs. We have the lowest peacetime unemployment remained since 1957 -- when your parents were kids or teenagers. Wages are rising at more than twice the rate of inflation. Crime has fallen six years in a row. Our welfare rolls are shrinking. More people live in homes they call their own. We have opened the doors of college to all Americans -- making student loans more affordable, expanding Pell Grants, creating new Hope Scholarships and other tax deductions.

On my first day in office -- on the steps of the United States Capitol -- I said that &there is nothing wrong with America that cannot be cured with what is right with America. & And what was right with America then, what is right with America now, is this: Our ethic of citizen service. For more than 200 years, we the American people have always believed in every citizen's duty to give something back to our communities and to each other.

But over the past few decades, two competing visions of government stifled this ethic of service. On one side were those who believed that if there was a problem, the best approach was to set up a bureaucracy to solve it. On the other side, there were people who said that government was the cause of all our problems -- and that the only way to solve them was by citizens acting independently, and only in their own interests.

I believed we needed to move beyond these two visions of &something for nothing & and &everyone for himself & to a new ethic of &mutual obligation. & Everyone -- government, the private sector, and most importantly, every citizen, had to take responsibility and move America forward. We needed to restore the spirit of service to America, to make citizen service once again the experience and expectation of every American.

And I believed that if we were going to rekindle the spirit of service, we had to start with you, our young people. Throughout this century, America has always found a way to bring the energy and idealism of young people to the task of meeting each generation's greatest challenges. During the Great Depression, President Roosevelt started the Civilian Conservation Corps, and gave young people the chance to work together and earn money clearing trails, fighting fires, planting trees in our forests and range lands. They left behind a legacy of national and state parks that we all enjoy to this day -- Appalachian Trail, Skyline Drive in Virginia.

In the +60s, President Kennedy asked young people to serve America by serving in the Peace Corps -- teaching English, providing health care, bringing running water and electricity to some of the most remote villages of Africa, Asia and South America. Many of my generation who served in the Peace Corps came home with a greater sense of their duty to their communities. Like Harris Wofford, like my HHS Sec. Donna Shalala, they went on to become today's leaders.

I fought to create AmeriCorps in the same spirit of the Peace Corps and the CCC -- to give your generation a new chance to serve America and tackle the challenges of our time, to earn money for college, and even, to gain the skills and inspiration to become the new leaders of the 21st Century.

Now six years later, AmeriCorps is thriving. I travel around the country often --- and everywhere I go, AmeriCorps members are hard at work. Just last month, I met dozens of AmeriCorps members who were working with the Red Cross and other organizations to help the families of my home state of Arkansas rebuild in the wake of tornadoes.

I ask the people who are not in AmeriCorps to seek out the AmeriCorps members and ask them share their experiences. Like Justin, T.J., Derek, Leslie, and Pepe, they ,ve got powerful stories to tell: What it ,s like to hear the pride in a student ,s voice when after months of tutoring she can finally point to a book and say &I can read it myself 8 ... or to see the delight in a child ,s eyes as he climbs around on a playground AmeriCorps helped reclaim from drug dealers.

As a boy, I went to an all-white school. I did not get to know many children of different races. That was the law back then. But even now, too often, we still don ,t get to know people who are different. AmeriCorps can help us knock down the walls that still divide us. By working side-by-side with fellow AmeriCorps members from all walks of life, you learn that we all have much more in common than we thought; that what matters most is not the color of your skin, but your ability to get things done -- to hammer a nail, to teach a child to spell, to extend a helping hand.

Now, we must give more of our young people the same opportunity -- to serve and learn about America through AmeriCorps. That is why I challenge you -- today ,s generation of young people -- to answer a new Call to Service. Throughout this year, I will be working with Harris, the First Lady, and my entire administration to recruit more and more young people to make a difference through AmeriCorps. This fall, we can boost the number of AmeriCorps members by one quarter to 50,000 members. And in my new balanced budget, I plan to keep expanding AmeriCorps every year so that by the year 2003, 100,000 young people will be serving at any given time.

So I challenge all of you young people sign up for AmeriCorps. I challenge you to see for yourselves what America ,s real problems are: what keeps a child from learning to read or growing healthy or staying on the right side of the law. Find out for yourselves what works and doesn ,t work in solving these problems. And share them with your fellow Americans.

I challenge the high schoolers in this audience to begin serving their communities now. Service can be lifelong habit. In my balanced budget, I am propose to allow high schoolers to join AmeriCorps -- by serving part time during the school year and full time in the summers.

I challenge you to dedicate a year or two of your lives to a cause that ,s larger than yourselves. You may be tired of old people like me reminding you that you are living the most exciting times of your lives. With more tomorrows ahead of you than behind you, so many of you have the time, the freedom, the energy to tackle the work of AmeriCorps -- packing your bag at a moment ,s notice to go fight a forest fire, or moving into some of our most remote towns and Indian Reservations to teach children.

I challenge you to prove that your generation has not become a generation of cynics and slackers, but a generation of patriots and doers.

Have faith in your own power to change the world. When I was a student in college, Robert F. Kennedy inspired so many of my generation to follow our highest ideals. He told us that &each time a man stands up for an ideal, or acts to improve the lot of others, or strikes out against injustice, he sends forth a tiny ripple of hope, and crossing each other from a million different centers of energy and daring, those ripples build a current that can sweep down the mightiest walls of oppression and resistance. 8

His words are still true today. Whether or not you work through AmeriCorps, I ask you to send forth those ripples of hope. Together we can build a mighty current that will carry us past our challenges into the brighter future we all hope to live in.

Re: Upcoming Columns

Column Due February 16:

It appears that you may have two events scheduled this week -- a Social Security event with the President and a D.C. College Access event. We wrote about Social Security the week of the State of the Union, but there hasn't been a column exclusively on the issue, particularly on the women's prong. D.C. College Access is also a good topic for a column. Although it appears to be a D.C. issue, it's a good opportunity to inform Americans about the dismal state of the residents of their nation's capital. Without such an education, many Americans outside of this area may react very negatively to the bill. The bill could be ready to go up late the week of the 16th or early the week of the 23rd.

Before these two events cropped up, we had hoped to do a column on the Families Agenda Roundtable that you attended in NY on the 2nd. According to all who were there, the participants were so terrific, it wouldn't matter that it's coming out now.

I think it would be timely to write about the end of the impeachment trial and what it means for the administration and the nation. (All I have to say is, "Yee-ha!") The column's a good time to reinforce the position that now we can get back to the work the people sent the President here to do. You can write about how steadfast the American people have been, and how the President has tried throughout to keep his focus on his work.

___ Social Security

___ D.C. College Access

___ Families Agenda Roundtable

___ End of Impeachment

Column Due February 23:

On Tuesday, February 23, you are doing a CHIP event. We did the CHIP event last January at Children's Hospital, but I think it is far enough away ? and the focus is enough different this time ? that you can do it again.

___ CHIP

___ One of the topics you didn't do Feb. 16

Evergreens:

There are a few evergreen ideas floating around that I could be working on if you like.

___ Equal Pay

___ Muslim Women in the U.S. (I have been talking with Maureen Shea about this since the Eid event. She said you expressed an interest in writing about Muslims in this country and that the GW professor's remarks were very interesting.

Huma is working on getting a transcript.)

___ Senior Service Corps (The Americorps folks have been lobbying gently for a column on Senior Service.)

Miscellany

I met with Bob Barnett yesterday to talk about the column. He's very disinclined to rock the boat. He's very high on Creators and thinks they do as good a job as anyone. He thinks it's fine for me to call local papers when a specific column might appeal to them. He also thinks we could be ?punching up ? the column. His one example is the People Magazine flap.

He thinks that would have made a terrific subject for the column. He thinks it would be a good idea to make a list of 5-6 unusual ideas, send them to Creators and urge them to get the word out ahead of the time that you'd be writing on them. This seems a little tricky to me as it undercuts the ability to be newsworthy.

My 2 cents: if you decide to run for NY Senate, I hope you'll make one announcement in the column. Bob and I also talked about what impact a Senate run would have on the column. He doesn't know what would happen. The worst case is no one would run it. He thinks the foreign papers would stick with it. Domestically, maybe, the New York Papers could be the only ones inclined to drop it.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29 /U.S. Newswire/ -- The following was released today by the White House:

FIRST LADY HILLARY CLINTON UNVEILS NEW, $68 MILLION INITIATIVE TO FIGHT ASTHMA

Today, First Lady Hillary Rodham Clinton unveiled a new, $68 million initiative to fight childhood asthma through a comprehensive national strategy...

CREATING A NEW NATIONAL PUBLIC INFORMATION CAMPAIGN. The Environmental Protection Agency and the Department of Health and Human Services will invest $5.2 million in a national public information campaign to reduce children's exposure to environmental tobacco smoke and other indoor asthma triggers through a national public service campaign that uses posters, flyers, and brochures that identify common asthma triggers, such as pet hair or tobacco smoke, and simple solutions for eliminating or avoiding them; expands existing in-home education networks, such as community based lead prevention programs, and utilizes Americorps and VISTA volunteers to provide direct assistance to parents in identifying asthma triggers and implementing intervention strategies; and using health care providers and managed care organizations to help parents reduce their children's exposure to asthma triggers.

I believe the Asthma initiative was put together by HHS and EPA and someone at one of those agencies may have written this, though how they could have done so without telling you or John or our staff is really bizarre.

RE: Big News in the AmeriCorps World

As many of you know, Harris has worked extremely hard to develop strong bi-partisan support for AmeriCorps. This prospecting for support is time-consuming, and the results come slowly. Sometimes they come so slowly that one wonders if they are coming at all.

Well today we got a big break, one that Harris has been working on for a long time. In a story in today's Columbus Dispatch, Rep. John Kasich said that he has changed his mind about AmeriCorps, and that he would no longer vote to eliminate the program.

Some time ago, Kasich visited the Harlem Peacemakers program and was exceptionally impressed by the program. He was surprised to learn that many of the people working with the program were AmeriCorps members, and soon thereafter told Harris that this experience was causing him to rethink his view of AmeriCorps. Kasich then had a long session with Harris in which he learned more about AmeriCorps, and clearly seemed to be reconsidering his position. Today's story shows that he has completed his decision-making process.

The full story from the Dispatch is reproduced below. Please read it and enjoy this news. Thanks. JG

Kasich reverses on AmeriCorps

February 21, 1999

By Jonathan Riskind

Dispatch Washington Bureau

MUSCATINE, Iowa -- When Rep. John R. Kasich visited an AmeriCorps office Friday during a campaign stop for his presidential bid, he revealed that he has changed his mind about the federal program.

The Westerville Republican and House Budget Committee chairman said he has been transformed in recent months from a foe to a fan.

Kasich in the past joined many other Republicans trying unsuccessfully to eliminate the Clinton administration program. AmeriCorps provides a stipend and educational scholarships to those who spend a year in public service jobs.

Critics have said AmeriCorps isn't a true volunteer effort because participants are paid. Some questioned whether the benefits are worth the cost.

But AmeriCorps has stopped calling its participants volunteers, and Kasich said he has witnessed AmeriCorps making valuable public-service contributions.

"I have seen them do some amazing things in Harlem . . . I know that AmeriCorps workers were involved in a number of the homeless programs," he said. "I would like to spend some time trying to refocus pieces of it and trying to make it more of a public/private situation, but I don't think I would cast a vote anymore that would eliminate it."

Kasich said the program can be made more effective, "but they've done some really great work, and I'm impressed with them."

Tina Dunphy, a slightly surprised AmeriCorps project director who greeted Kasich when he entered her storefront office in this eastern Iowa town, said 20 "members" work here on such projects as tutoring and mentoring elementary-school students.

Clinton has requested $585 million for AmeriCorps in his 2000 budget proposal, a $113 million increase over current funding. The increase would add 20,000 participants to the program, for a total of 70,000. Clinton has proposed funding 100,000 members in 2002.

TEXT:

Hi Shirley!

Welcome back from vacation. I hope you had a great time.

I'm writing to connect on our event request for the First Lady. We would love to do something with her while she is in Boston for her Wellesley re-union.

Ideally, Sunday, early afternoon, around 1:00 pm would work best for us -- although we can be flexible on the date and time.

We got our first $1 million commitment for our endowment last week! We believe that if we could get a confirmation from the First Lady soon, we can definitely have $5 million in commitments by June for this event.

Our thinking is to do the event at Faneuil Hall, to have the entire City Year Boston and Rhode Island Corps there, as well as Service Partner and Corporate Champions. We'd like to use the event to honor some important City Year champions with special 10th Anniversary Awards -- with the First Lady being the key honoree. We'd also use the event to announce the launch of our endowment.

We figure that Faneuil Hall would be a particularly historic and appropriate venue for the First Lady to connect Americorps to our country's founding and it's critical role in developing citizen leaders for our democracy. We also think that she could use the event to give a message about philanthropy in the new millenium and the importance of endowing Americorps institution like City Year.

Ideally, we'd have the First Lady for 90 minutes if at all possible. 30 minutes for a private, pre-event reception with key City Year supporters

then 60 minutes for the event.

I'll call you in the next couple of days to follow up.

If there is any way we can get this confirmed relatively soon, that would give us the push we need to put together a fabulous event and meet our endowment goals.

Thank you and the First Lady again so much for considering this request.

Yours,

alan

Okay --- here's a first draft. Let me know what you think ... it's not date specific

All*AmeriCorps Weekend
Getting Things Done for America

On September 12, 1999, AmeriCorps will celebrate its fifth anniversary having deployed more than 100,000 active duty citizens in service to their communities. This anniversary will be a time to look back at our accomplishments and to look forward to the potential of national service in the future. It will be a time both to celebrate and to buckle down in a burst of citizen service energy to get things done for America. And it will be a time honor our heroes and inspire, encourage, and deploy our heroes of the future. All of AmeriCorps --- Alums, current members serving full and part time, AmeriCorps*VISTAs and corpsmembers of the AmeriCorps*NCCC, members serving in their own communities and states and those who serve neighbors from another part of our nation --- will join together across the nation in an All*AmeriCorps weekend of celebration and of service.

There are four distinct components to the weekend. The first will be a leadership forum that brings together the most creative and effective in the national service field to look forward to the next century of service. The second is a new award that honors AmeriCorps members who are demonstrating the highest achievement and ideals of the core principles of national service --- getting things done, strengthening community, developing participants, and building common ground. The third demonstrates the power of service through a week/weekend of service projects in the four issue areas of AmeriCorps --- education, public safety, human needs, and the environment. And finally, we will celebrate, honoring our past and our next generation of heroes.

All*AmeriCorps Leadership Forum

"An I hope, believe and dream that national service will remain throughout the life of America not a series of promises, but a series of challenges, across all the generations and all walks of life to help us to rebuild our troubled but wonderful land. I hope that some day the success of this program will make it possible for every young American who seeks to serve and earn credit against a college education, or other kinds of education and training, to do that. And I believe it will happen."

Bill Signing

AmeriCorps is a partnership between citizens, government, business, educational institutions, faith-based organizations --- all working together as 'partners in progress to solve our problems and secure our promise for this nation'. The Leadership Forum will be an opportunity for leaders and partners in the public and private sectors to envision the potential and plot the future of national service in the next century. Young leaders and CEO's of businesses, nonprofits, religious institutions, civilian and military service programs, schools, colleges and universities will bring their best examples of how service is transforming America and will collaborate on a vision for bringing it to scale in the future.

All*AmeriCorps Awards

"I saw the wreckage, the insanity, the lost human potential that you can find now not only in our biggest cities, but in every community. And yet, I saw even in the most difficult circumstances the light in the eyes of so many young people; the courage, the hunger for life; the desire to do something to reach beyond themselves and to reach out to others and to make things better."

Bill Signing Ceremony

Service calls forth heroes. The new All*AmeriCorps Awards will honor the outstanding achievements of AmeriCorps members who through their service have made a difference in and serve as an example to their communities, their states, and their nation. There will be four categories of awards to illustrate the powerful components of AmeriCorps. The Getting Things Done Award will highlight service that helps to solve real community problems through citizen action. The Strengthening Communities Award will honor those who have made a lasting impact through collaboration and leadership. The Leadership Development Award will recognize outstanding individual growth and personal achievement through service that builds active duty citizens. And the Common Ground Award will highlight the service of individuals who have brought people and organizations together across the lines that divide them. This first year, the All*AmeriCorps Awards will honor outstanding AmeriCorps Alums from the first four years and will

a tradition of awards for the classes to come.

All*AmeriCorps Day of Service

"There's nothing that's wrong with America that can't be fixed by what is right with America. And you are what is right with America."

AmeriCorps Launch

There is no better way to celebrate AmeriCorps than to roll up your sleeves in a national service project. All across the country, AmeriCorps members, alums, and their partners and programs will be getting things done in a wide range of community service projects that demonstrate that national service helps meet needs in education, public safety, human needs, and the environment. The service will be tied together by the theme of young people as resources and focused around schools in under-resourced areas. AmeriCorps members, alums and other volunteers will build playgrounds, renovate classrooms, open technology labs, hold health screenings, enroll students in afterschool programs, and sign up young volunteers for 100 hours of service a year. The day also can be kicked off by local fundraisers, such as a 5K All*AmeriCorps Run for the 5th Anniversary.

All*AmeriCorps Celebration of Service

"The great challenge of your generation is to prove that every person here in this great land can live up to their fullest of their God-given capacity.

If we do it, the 21st century will be the American century. The American Dream will be kept alive if you will today answer the call to service."

Rutgers

Finally, we will have a party. Celebrities and national service heroes will salute AmeriCorps and will present to the nation the All*AmeriCorps award winners. The celebration will be broadcast live to satellite downlinks in other All*AmeriCorps cities and will be recorded for rebroadcast to the nation. And it will not only be a celebration, but a national Call to Service.

Some preliminary comments:

"Getting Things Done " could be any govt agency. I assume we will have data on most effective language; my current nominee would be "Americorps: 5 years of Service "

Americorps

5 years of Service

100,000 young people serving our communities
(or building stronger communities)

About the Leadership Forum:

If the strongest message we want to send is that of young people serving , I would not begin with a forum of older people talking....The first images are likely to be enduring. Instead of people talking about service , the first event should feature people actually doing something , like the day of service -- or maybe ,if there needs to be an evening event first, the awards. Second, if there is a forum, it should be more Americorps-focussed, with topics including what we have learned from 5 years of service. And participants should include Americorps graduates/leaders-- surely they have a lot to contribute. Maybe this is the place for the 21st Century Service theme.

And speaking of the 21st Century : by mid- September there is likely to be even more interest in the approaching Millennium. Many of the projects suggested in this memo are "gifts to the future"--building/cleaning up parks and playgrounds, 100 hours of service etc. I don't know if this confuses or strengthens the theme but it's worth keeping in mind.

Hi Shirley,

Not sure if you remember me but we chatted some time back in Oct. I'm one of the National Service Fellows at the Corporation. I'm working on a project on how national service can contribute to welfare reform and how this can be done in partnership with business.

I work with Ann Marie a bit since she is doing all this stuff on collaboration within national service networks. I read through her notes (Ann Marie takes extensive notes!) on your book and found a lot of it very helpful. I'm not sure if it has come out yet or if it is still in manuscript form but I was wondering if you would give me permission to look at Ann Marie's copy. After looking over her notes, I would really benefit from a full read. It seems that the book addresses the key issues that I'm dealing with- creating partnerships with business!

Thanks for getting me in contact with Eli and his group back in Oct. I had a meeting with him and Elisa and they have been wonderful!

Thanks for your time Shirley! I know how busy you are these days. Things are wrapping up for us- I hope you'll have a chance to come to the presentations.

P.S.- Did you know that the Director of the LSE is in DC this week? I might go down to the Brit. Embassy on Sat. for some reception with some Philadelphia area alums that are going.

TEXT:

Dear Shirley,

It seems like a couple of days ago that we were working on the selection process, but this year's Fellows (who are first rate) are about to have their final event on June 3 (Thursday). The plan is for each of the Fellows to participate on one of four panels that present on Service Learning and Youth Service; Approaches to Innovative Programming; Furthering Collaboration in National Service; and Creating Inclusion and Citizenship in Service. They will provide a brief synopsis of their projects and engage in some limited dialogue among themselves and/or with the audience. This event would begin at 9:15 and end at approximately 11:15.

The Fellows and your many friends here would be very honored if you would be able to serve as the Moderator for the event. We're focusing on an internal Corporation audience and view it as an opportunity to make a statement about the Fellows' creative and high quality contributions to our field. (In addition to the general event, the Fellows will also be individually making in-depth presentations within the Corporation and to associations and others in the area).

A draft of the program follows. If you are able to do this we will provide you with additional information that we hope will make this a pleasant and engaging experience for you.

Also, needless to say I'd be happy to talk this over with you (I'm at x338).

It was nice seeing you, however briefly, at the National Press Club. It turned out to be exceptionally upbeat and positive event, a win for the Corporation.

Best wishes.

Jeffrey Anderson, Ph.D. and Terry Pickeral, Ph.D., well known as service learning activists and scholars, have conducted an analysis of common challenges facing those seeking to integrate service-learning into teacher education programs, coupled with successful strategies for overcoming those impediments.

Stephanie Blackman, a former AmeriCorp*VISTA member, seeks to strengthen the service field through a better understanding of volunteering in the social services by an under-represented gender. She has assessed factors that increase male volunteering in service programs and offers concrete approaches to overcoming barriers and designing programs that are attractive to males.

Rebecca Blumer, who served as an AmeriCorps Leader in Montana, has focused on promoting citizenship among AmeriCorps members. She has created and field-tested a manual and other training materials on citizenship for use by AmeriCorps programs.

Teresita Bolivar, inspired by an AmeriCorps*VISTA project in Puerto Rico that brings together Foster Grandparents and juvenile offenders, has developed a bi-lingual guide for communities on volunteer programs that support juveniles who are incarcerated.

Sandy Heierbacher, a former AmeriCorps member, has produced a cutting edge manual and a web site on interracial dialogue as a tool for creating understanding and collaboration among the diversity of individuals involved in national service programs.

Robert J. Keast has married his experience as a former AmeriCorps*VISTA member and recent London School of Economics graduate to focus on involving community workers and business in a welfare-to-work partnerships. He has produced a report and a manual on welfare-to-work, which is aimed in particular at AmeriCorps programs.

Sam Quan Krueger, who was an arts administrator in New York City before his Fellowship, has initiated an information exchange on arts in community service programs. He has also prepared guidance materials to strengthen connections between the arts and community service based on case interviews conducted nationally during his outreach effort.

Helen K. Lowery, a rehabilitation counselor and authority on accommodations for people with disabilities, has written and tested training materials on inclusion of people with disabilities in AmeriCorps. Before her Fellowship, she served in a training and technical assistance capacity for a Disability Demonstration Grant that increased knowledge of how to recruit and retain people with disabilities in AmeriCorps.

Anne M. Ostberg has leveraged her extensive knowledge of the Corporation's management and program environments to: (1) examine how the Internet is being used as a tool to implement Unified State Plans, and (2) provide resources to assist states in expanding their use of the Internet.

Lenore M. Parker, Ph.D., consultant and former faculty member at several institutions of higher learning, has pursued her twin passions of service and youth to create a comprehensive assessment of what can be done to improve the ability of organizations to involve youth more broadly in service.

Ann Marie Thomson, who is close to earning a Ph.D. at Indiana University - Bloomington, has focused on inter-organizational collaborative networks among AmeriCorps programs, including the nature and quality of those networks, how they evolve, and how these findings can inform national service policy.

LeVester Tubbs, E.D. on sabbatical as a Vice President of the University of Central Florida during his Fellowship, has studied AmeriCorps recruitment in Florida and produced a model incorporating a variety of strategies and techniques to enhance and diversify the applicant pool.

Hi Shirley and Mary Ellen,

I hope all is going well over at the First Lady's Office.

Youth Service America is very interested in participating in next Monday's White House conference on violence, education, and youth. Steve Culbertson, YSA's CEO and President, is willing to attend.

Youth Service America and its network of 175 national affiliates are working to highlight how involving youth in service to their community is one of the most effective ways to "immunize" youth against the pressures of social alienation, violence and negative behaviours while at the same time strengthening their community and personal developmental assets. I have attached a copy of a news advisory that we sent out to hundreds of media outlets last week in an effort to focus on the importance of service as a solution in the fight against youth violence. On Friday, we will be participating with Attorney General Reno at the MTV Stand up Against Violence event which will honor some of the young people we highlighted on National Youth Service Day through our new MTV/YSA Violence Prevention Awards.

We are grateful for the commitment by the President and the First Lady to youth service and your consideration of our participation in Monday's discussion.

Sincerely,

Mike McCabe

Youth Service America Highlights Solutions For Curbing Youth Violence

The recent violent actions of a small number of young people are creating a false perception of America's youth. It was tragically ironic that two youth in Littleton attacked their classmates just three days after National Youth Service Day, an event that highlights the ongoing contributions of millions of young people to their communities through service. National Youth Service Day is one of the programs of Youth Service America, whose 175 national affiliates provide millions of youth with the opportunity to give back to their community through service and at the same time foster the healthy development of themselves and their communities.

Recent research and lessons learned from the work of YSA's affiliates with youth across America show:

? Youth service reduces youth violence and delinquency: A national study found that young people involved in service are 50% less likely to commit acts of vandalism, violence, or truancy, or to abuse alcohol and drugs.

? Youth service increases cultural understanding and tolerance: Young volunteers report that they learn respect for others, and learn to understand people who are different from them. These factors reduce the sense of alienation that push some young people into negative behaviors.

? Youth service promotes civic engagement: Adults who did volunteer work as youth, are three times more likely to vote, volunteer, and give to charities as an adult. General Colin Powell and his America's Promise campaign highlights the opportunity for youth to give back to their community through service as one of the five key resources that all young people need for their healthy development.

? There is hope. Youth service is exploding across the US and is becoming part of education reform: Youth service is up by 12% over the past ten years. Nearly 60% of teens (13.3 million) volunteered an average of 3.5 hours a week in 1996. The number of high school students involved in service-learning courses increased 3,663% (from 81,000 to 2.9 million) in the past fifteen years.

? A growing national infrastructure for youth service: This growth is the result of the adoption of service-learning in thousands of school districts and universities, the sharp growth in youth service programs within community organizations, and the scaling up of AmeriCorps, Peace Corps, and other service corps as an option for youth to give a year of service.

Examples of the power of youth serving other youth to reduce violence:

? Peer to peer counseling: Ariel Fox, 16, works as the coordinator of the Girls Advisory Board at the Empower program in Washington, DC. The GAB empowers young women ages 14-18 by educating and training them on issues of dating violence, sexual assault, and unhealthy relationships. Ariel was a recent winner of the MTV/YSA Violence Prevention Award.

? Teaching Peace: Eric Dawson, 24, founded and directs Peace Games, a violence prevention and conflict resolution program in Boston. Nine elementary schools welcome over 300 college volunteers each year to work with thousands of students and their families to increase safety and build tolerance. Eric also won the MTV/YSA Violence Prevention Award.

? Peer courts: Melvin Moore, 16, a junior at Banneker High School in Washington, DC, helps run a peer court program at a local elementary school. The program focuses on helping young students learn to resolve their problems peacefully by teaching them conflict resolution and mediation skills.

? Character Education: Courtney Thomas, 22, founded Character Kids!, a character education program in Cumberland, MD. Thirty young volunteers teach youth in low-income housing projects about the six pillars of character development (respect, responsibility, trust, caring, citizenship and fairness) through a mixture of role play, recreation, and mentorship.

? Service Learning: Jane Hammatt, a social worker at Malcolm Shabazz High School in Madison, Wisconsin helps run a service learning initiative called "Education for Justice: The Mississippi Connection" in which students study the culture and struggles of some of the poorest counties in Mississippi, and then take the students there to do community-identified service projects as a means of building appreciation for community development.

How to get youth involved: The main reason young people say they do not volunteer more is that they have not been asked and don't know. People can find volunteer opportunities in their area by visiting YSA's website www.SERVE.net.org, the nation's first local database of volunteer opportunities, or by calling the Points of Light Foundation's 1-800-Volunteer, which can connect them to the nearest volunteer center in their area.

Conclusion: Making community service the common experience and expectation of all America's youth can't completely offset the influences of violence in the media, easy access to guns by youth, or a lack of parental guidance. However, it can and has been a proven and effective means to help young people find meaning, self-esteem, connection, and acceptance at this critical age, reducing the risks of isolation, alienation, and violent behavior.

For more information or to arrange interviews with Steven Culbertson, President and CEO of Youth Service America or "young everyday heroes" please contact YSA at 202-296-2992 x43 or email: mmccabe@ysa.org.

I just got back from State so thank you for reminding me about this -. I agree with your concerns about language -- for example in Q4, "developing a lifelong dedicaiton to community service " --what does that mean ? I don't think real people talk like that -- but it is the only place where service is mentioned. I think it's worth exploring whether workign together with different kinds of people helps build a stronger country or sense of community -- I would phrase it that way, not as end in itself -- I assumed that teh quesitns about young people/teenagers were meant to connect with concerns post Littleon --but I may be reading too much into it. Either way I don't see a quesiton about whether young people should have more opportunities to connect in a values context -- --to be part of something larger than themselves .

So generally I would rather see more emphasis on trying out some messages in this atmosphere --which is not going away by September, when school reopens -- such as teaching reponsibility,community and similar values through service...I think the Presdient's idea of teaching service as part of citizenship may be worth testing. And I agree with the concerns you raise about some of the questions being too much of a laundry list of projects . . .

Hi everyone,

Here is the National Service Briefing for this week. Hope you can join us for our monthly Working Group on National and Community Service to be held at CYZYG this Friday.

Have a great week,
Mike McCabe

The National Service Briefing

A project of YSA's National Service Affiliates Program

A weekly publication since 1994 by Youth Service America for the national and community service field.

May 24, 1999 Volume 6, number 20

Changing America's Perception of Its Youth: A Working Group on National and Community Service

There is a perception gap in America. According to a new Ad Council/Public Agenda survey: Seventy-one percent of American adults describe teenagers negatively, using words such as rude, irresponsible, and wild. Most adults also believe today's youth face a crisis in their values and morals. They look at teenagers with misgiving and trepidation, and view them as undisciplined, disrespectful, and unfriendly <www.publicagenda.com>. Yet research shows that today's youth are volunteering at record high rates, and they also are more law abiding, religious, and better educated than any generation in recent history. Youth Service America invites you to join a special interactive dialogue about this perception gap being held in conjunction with CYZYG, City Year's national gathering of young activists. Participants include: Bob Wheelock, Senior Producer, Good Morning America/ABC News; Stephen Friedman, Vice President of Public Affairs, MTV: Music Television; Linda Vesper, NBC ; Andrei Cherny, Blueprint Magazine; Rob Bisi, Children's Express; The Ad Council; and a City Year Corps member. The Working Group will be held Friday, May 28, from 10:30 am - 12:00 pm, at Howard University's Blackburn Student Center, Blackburn Auditorium, 2400 6th Street, NW, Washington, D.C. For more information, contact Shannon Maynard at 202/296-2992 x.24 or E-mail <shannon@ysa.org>.

Blueprint Magazine Poll Shows Increase in Public Support for AmeriCorps

Blueprint Magazine, the quarterly publication for the Democratic Leadership Council, devoted its Spring issue to civic action and the responsibilities of citizenship. In the issue, results from a recent public opinion poll show that Americans seek a heightened sense of community and citizenship. By large numbers, people perceive that our current society sacrifices community for the sake of individual, and people say they would like to see a greater emphasis on community. Americans also strongly support a joint public/private/nonprofit approach to solving societal problems. Strong majorities favor AmeriCorps and support its expansion when the program is explained to them. According to the survey, 82 percent of Americans favor expanding AmeriCorps so that every young person that wants to serve can participate. To learn more about the survey, visit Blueprint on-line at <<http://www.dlc.org>>, or e-mail <blueprint@dlc.org>.

Add to Your Tool Box: Video on Youth Voices in Decision Making

At The Table is an exciting new two-part video of young people and adults sharing first-hand experiences about serving together on boards and councils. It debunks the myths about the ability of young people to contribute to the decision-making process. In Part 1 of the series, young people share the reasons why they have decided to serve their organizations and communities. In Part 2, youth and adults share their thoughts about how to create a board or council environment where everyone participates. The video was developed by Community Partnerships with Youth, the Center for Youth as Resources, the National 4-H Council, Youth on Board, and the Youth Leadership Institute. For more information or to order the videos, call 219/436-4402.

Best Practice: Shackleton Schools Build One Leader at a Time

Founded in 1996, Shackleton Schools, Inc., is a nonprofit educational venture based in Boston. The Schools target young men and women between the ages of 14 and 16 who have struggled in traditional schools. In many cases, these young people excel when their learning emerges from active participation in a supportive learning community with exciting hands-on experience. Students participate in a four-year residential program that includes a 10-week summer apprenticeship. The curriculum has been designed to prepare each student for a life of service. Each student is trained to handle medical emergencies, build shelters, launch businesses, search the Internet for answers, run effective meetings, manage a budget, gain consensus, speak a foreign language, and deliver convincing presentations. Much of the curriculum involves providing assistance to others in need -- from aiding disaster relief efforts and conducting search-and-rescue operations to forming local cooperatives and volunteering in schools, hospitals, and small businesses.

Innovative Bicycling Projects Were Awarded at Youth Bike Summit

Innovative efforts to promote bike transit and bicycle safety were highlighted during a press conference and awards ceremony at the U.S. Capitol on Wednesday, May 5. The event was hosted by Earth Force to celebrate the successes of its national campaign, Get Out Spoken! Earth Force's Youth Advisory Board (YAB) capped the event by leading elementary school children and members of Congress through a bicycle safety course, demonstrating how neighborhoods can be made more bike friendly. "It's wonderful -- the creative approach these youth are taking to help promote bicycling," said Dr. Ricardo Martinez, Administrator of the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration. Supporters of this event include National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, Discover Magazine, The Robert Wood Johnson Foundation, and The Pew Charitable Trusts.

"Each time a man stands up for an ideal, or acts to improve the lot of others, or strikes out against injustice, he sends a tiny ripple of hope, and crossing each other from a million different centers of energy and daring, those ripples build a current which can sweep down the walls of oppression and resistance."

I just wanted you to know that Mark Isaac, our Congressional director, has received an inquiry about tonight's City Year/AmeriCorps event from Pete Hoekstra's oversight committee. You may recall that last year the oversight committee sent a letter soon after CYZYG asking about various questions about the event such as who paid for jackets, why the President advocated legislation (and actually seemed to ask City Year members to support these efforts), and whether City Year members received service hours for attending the President's speech.

We will tell the oversight guys when and where the event is, and we will be prepared to answer questions about it, but I thought you and your colleagues might want to know this.

Thanks. JG

Subject: Washington Post column on AmeriCorps

This piece by Mary McGrory ran in today's Washington Post. The part about the living allowance and the education award are a little off -- but the rest of the piece is on on target. Enjoy.

Star Corps, No Menace Here

By Mary McGrory

Thursday, June 3, 1999;

What in the world would any rational person have against AmeriCorps, the organization that wants to do at home what the Peace Corps

does abroad?

Generation X is supposed to be a selfish, soulless group, fixated on the bottom line and instant gratification. It is true that in some neighborhoods like mine, hundreds of future leaders are camping on the sidewalk to see "Star Wars, Episode I." But thousands of others are working for peanuts to help people who need help. AmeriCorps volunteers are making life easier for citizens who had no reason to think anyone cared about them.

AmeriCorps volunteers are building playgrounds, landscaping rundown schoolyards. They drive sick people to the doctor. They'll do what needs to be done, including tying somebody's shoes. Forty thousand people across the country are pitching in.

They dissolve racial barriers, try to persuade the homeless that all is not lost. For this, they receive $4,700 a year, and after two years of community service, they get a bonus of $4,700, a sum a young Wall Street trader would sneer at.

Peace Corps volunteers who do similar jobs in Third World countries are treated royally. They jump to the head of the line when jobs or university entrance is the issue. Congress wouldn't dream of cutting their appropriations. When retiring Peace Corps Director Mark Gearan appears before a committee, he is treated with respect. But when Harris Wofford, director of AmeriCorps, shows up, "I am heckled," he says.

Wofford gets static about "paid volunteers"--as if the Peace Corps people didn't get a stipend of $200 a month for living in mud huts and eating the local cuisine. Wofford is philosophical about the unequal treatment he gets.

He was present at the creation of the Peace Corps in 1961, and he noticed that it acquired its great cachet after John F. Kennedy's assassination.

Today's critics hate to give President Clinton a Kennedy-type legacy.

He has proceeded with monumental tact to smooth Republican hackles.

They rail against all government programs, and he has braided AmeriCorps projects into those of non-governmental organizations that are pursuing the same ends. They cooperate with some 700 groups--Habitat for Humanity, City Year and almost countless corporations that are introducing their employees to the once exotic notion of getting your kicks out of helping the down and out with literacy, housing and job training.

Two years ago, Sen. Jeff Sessions (R-Ala.) moved to take $30 million from the AmeriCorps budget and transfer it to the space program. The Senate beat him by 21 votes and Wofford thinks the worst of the opposition is over. It isn't just that Republicans have finally noticed that AmeriCorps is popular in their home states and that Republican governors are becoming fans one by one. Rep. John Kasich of Ohio, a Republican presidential candidate, is a convert. He writes a rapture in his campaign book.

Last week, City Year, a highly successful Boston project, held a big assembly at Howard University, at which Colin Powell spoke about volunteerism. All over Washington, AmeriCorps projects were on display. At Trinity College, a number of AmeriCorps volunteers were doing their usual day of helping high school dropouts to get their General Equivalency Diploma. They don't just like their work, they love it.

Littleton and its cliques and guns seemed a long way away.
So did the round-the-clock lines for the latest "Star Wars" movie.
They don't care that the Peace Corps gets the glory or that their classmates are up to their armpits in dividends. "I'd rather make a difference," said
a pretty girl just out of Ohio University.

Hi Shirley,

We have spoken a few times in the past. I am currently managing a new venture philanthropy fund called the New Schools Venture Fund (I previously started an AmeriCorps program called BAYAC, & was on founding team at Teach For America) . In addition to learning a little bit from Vanessa Kirsch about the White House conference on philanthropy, Clara Shin suggested I get in touch, because I have been helping her pull together a panel on venture philanthropy for the White House Fellows trip to SF.

I would be interested in learning more about what you are working on, and sharing with you what we are trying to do with New Schools. In a nutshell: we are a non profit venture philanthropy fund founded by John Doerr and Brook Byers who are venture capitalists at Kleiner Perkins Caufield and Byers. Our donor-investors are technology venture capitalists and technology entrepreneurs like Jim Barksdale and Reed Hastings.

Our mission is to support education entrepreneurs who are trying to improve public K-12 education, both through a hands-on relationship with a specific portfolio of "ventures," and by building the field of education entrepreneurship as a whole (this includes things like hosting a monthly discussion group of education entrepreneurs, hosting a conference in the fall and a web site to connect resources, etc). We have one non profit grant, one non profit low interest loan, and one equity investment in our "portfolio" to date. We have an interesting approach, which I think might be a worthwhile perspective to include in the dialogue you are bringing together.

I'd be happy to share more with you if you think it would be worthwhile. And, in any case, I'd like to find some time to talk with you about your perspectives on the real leverage points for public educational improvement, given the kinds of efforts you worked with in your last education related project.

I look forward to catching up soon. Thanks.

The Hart poll will be divided into multiple subgroups, "probably as many as 30 or 40." Sorry I didn't have the answer to that earlier. It will be broken down by just about every conceivable subgroup that would be useful (age, income, recognition of AmeriCorps, etc.)
