TEXT:

I'm working on a schedule for the climate briefing. I've got rooms reserved (450OEOB and Truman at Conference Center)

I'd like to try and coordinate schedules with principal presenters, but need your okay on who would be speaking on agenda. We had talked about:

Todd Stern
George Frampton
Gene Sperling or Sally Katzen
Neal Lane or Rosina Bierbaum
Jack Lew or Sylvia Mathews or Elgie Holstein

Also, what about:
Dan Reicher
David Gardiner
Bob Perciasepe
Richard Rominger

Dirk and Beth are going over the invite list.

TEXT:

Please remember that the first interagency meeting to discuss the Department of Energy's electricity restructuring proposal is tomorrow at 2:00, room 239 of the Old Executive Office Building. If you plan to attend, and have not yet sent your DOB and SSN to me, please do so by 10:00 am tomorrow so that I may clear you into the building. If you have any problem entering the building, please contact Gay Joshlyn at extension 6-5362 from the building lobby.

The second meeting is still scheduled for Thursday morning at 10:00 in the same location. One item from Thursday's agenda, reliability of the grid, has been moved to meeting three.

Meeting three is now scheduled for Wednesday, January 20th, at 2:00 pm. We will schedule the fourth meeting once we have identified the issues that need to be discussed at that time.

I also wanted to remind everyone that anyone is welcome to attend any meeting. In the previous e-mail, I identified the meetings at which I thought agencies would have an institutional interest. However, that was simply my best guess of the areas of the proposal in which your agency might be interested. Each agency should review the entire proposal to determine if has interests beyond those that I identified, and plan to attend any meetings at which the issue is being addressed.

As always, please feel free to call me with any questions.

Thank you in advance for your participation.

SUBJECT: Yes. the fuel cell would definitely get the credit.

TO: Todd Stern (CN=Todd Stern/OU=WHO/O=EOP @ EOP [WHO])

READ:UNKNOWN

TEXT:

Talked with Jock who told me that the fuel cell in the article was a plug power fuel cell. I went to the Plug Power website Q&A and found the following:

What size will the Plug Power residential fuel cell system be? How much power will it supply? What types of fuel will it use?

The system is expected to be about the size of a dishwasher when it is commercialized, and will be designed with dimensions that allow it to fit through a standard doorway. Though it will require minimal space, customers will have the option of installing the unit inside or outside their home. Our first product, the Plug Power 7000, will provide enough output -- 7kW -- to power an average sized home, along with meeting peak loading concerns (based on research conducted by Detroit Edison). We will manufacture a variety of models for different sized homes. The exact number will be determined during our pre-commercialization testing period. We plan to manufacture units that run with natural gas, propane and methanol.

Also, if you draft a letter back to Gill you might have the President say that "Hillary tells me that she really enjoyed visiting your house in December -- particularly when the power in your neighborhood failed and you had a long conversation in candle light. If you had one of these fuel cells in your basement the lights wouldn't have failed, but she would have missed the candle-lit atmosphere. ..

THE WHITE HOUSE

Office of the Press Secretary

For Immediate Release

January 12, 1999

PRESS BRIEFING BY SECRETARY OF INTERIOR BRUCE BABBITT AND
ACTING CHAIR OF COUNCIL ON ENVIRONMENTAL QUALITY GEORGE FRAMPTON

The Briefing Room

1:20 P.M. EST

MR. TOIV: Good afternoon, everybody. As you know, this is a major environmental initiative announced by the President and Vice President today, and here to brief on it, to give you additional information are George Frampton, who is the Acting Chair of the Council on Environmental Quality, and Secretary of Interior Bruce Babbitt.

MR. FRAMPTON: Thanks, Barry. I'm George Frampton. I'm going to give you a quick overview of the announcement the President made this morning and Secretary Babbitt, who is going to talk in a little bit more detail about the federal land acquisition, "great places" part of this, and the President's wilderness proposal.

The President proposed this morning -- announced that in the FY 2000 proposed budget the administration is asking for funding for a new $1-billion lands legacy program. This is the largest proposed lands acquisition investment program made by any president. It involves the full funding, full appropriation for the Land and Water Conservation Fund, a fund which was authorized in 1965 by Congress at a maximum of $900 million a year, but the full amount of $900 million a year has never been requested by any president or appropriated in the past. So this is really an historic commitment to the protection of America's natural resources.

A little less than half of the proposal, about $450 million, is for federal land acquisition, great places, parks, refuges, and a little more than half, about $580 million is money that would go to states and local governments in the form of a series of different kinds of grants which would be designed to protect, primarily acquire and restore urban parks, green space and agricultural lands on the edges of our cities and towns.

In addition, there is $180 million that is targeted for coastal states which have their own unique set of impacts and issues and growth problems. A large amount of that is for coastal zone management program, but it's also to expand -- protect and expand the national marine sanctuary system. There are currently 12 national marine sanctuaries. The budget would commit to double that number in the next 10 years to 24 and provide adequate money for funding for coral reef protection and for a number of other coastal zone management issues.

In the state half, so to speak, the part that is not federal land acquisition money, the proposal includes $150 million for what's called "stateside land and water conservation fund grants." Those are direct grants to states and cities to purchase parkland, green space. There is an increase in the Forest Service's Forest Legacy program to help provide matching money to states and local communities to acquire easements to protect, among other things, working forests, and there is about a ten-fold increase to $80 million in the habitat protection program administered by the Department of Interior, which is money that the Interior Department shares with states and communities to buy habitat for endangered species, very important in the last couple of years in a program to help counties, for example in Southern California -- San Diego, Orange County, Riverside County -- do comprehensive planning based on habitat protection to improve the quality of communities.

So I will stop and let Secretary Babbitt talk a little bit more in detail about the new wilderness proposal that the President made and also about the federal side, and then we'll both take questions.

SECRETARY BABBITT: Thank you, George. I believe the President's proposal today is going to receive a warm and enthusiastic reception out across this country. And the reason I say that with confidence is that in the last year or two there has been growing from the grass roots in this country a concern about open space, about urban sprawl, about it is that communities can grow without destroying the very natural values that in most cases are the source of the community growth as people increasingly seek out quality of life, as employers increasingly locate jobs in communities where the people want to live in.

Now, remarkably, that sort of grass-roots resurgence of these issues has been paralleled by ballot issues, several thousand of them in the last couple of years, in which county, local and state governments have been putting up substantial amounts of dedicated tax revenues for the purchase of open space.

Now, at that point, of course, the question becomes, well, what about federal lands, what about the federal partnership that was originally contemplated when many of these laws were passed? Well, the President's proposal I think puts a lot of power and energy into a revived partnership. At the federal level we're looking at about half of that $1 billion to get some of this backlog of forests, seashores, in holdings in national parks -- areas of private land inside national parks like Grand Canyon, the Alaska parks, the Utah high desert park, and to make needed federal acquisitions.

The Everglades I think is a really good example. There's a major restoration going on down there. It is now -- the plan is now out before the public; it's an historic opportunity to continue working on the largest environmental restoration program in the history of this country.

Some of the money should surely be earmarked for the so-called Catellus lands in Southern California. It's an incredible opportunity; it's half a million acres of private land interspersed with our new national parks out in the California desert. The land is available; it's been appraised. It's a matter of I think $100-some per acre. Can you imagine that? An opportunity to buy and flesh out a national park by purchasing a half a million acres of land for a couple hundred dollars an acre. Those opportunities don't come often. They're tremendously important.

There's an increasing movement up in New England to protect northern forests. Now, we should have money available either directly or for grants to the states to take advantage of some extraordinary opportunities up there.

There are many more of these, and I fully expect that members of Congress and the Senate will step forward with proposals that affect their states and districts.

Secondly is this question of wilderness. Now, in this particular case, we're talking about wilderness within national parks -- Grand Canyon, Yellowstone, Yosemite and others. Why have wilderness in parks? Well, because, in the final analysis, that's what national parks are all about, is the ultimate protected status of lands which are unequivocally, for all time, set aside for one purpose, and one purpose only -- with no conflicts, no dilution of that purpose -- and that is, a place where our kids, and their kids, can experience America in its pristine, God-given state -- to see a landscape that is increasingly looking like it might have looked when Lewis and Clark were out there.

So the President has proposed to the Congress that they get moving on the five million acres of wilderness recommendations for parks, that have been before the Congress, now -- some of them from the Nixon administration, some of them from the Carter administration. I don't know whether any were sent up in the Reagan administration or not, I'm not certain about that, but -- they've been up there a long time, and the President has today announced his intention to get those going, and to find congressional sponsors and see if we can't get that backlog cleared up as well.

Okay, that's it.

Q How are you going to pay for this? You were talking a little bit about oil leases. In particular, how many leases are you talking about? Where are they going to happen? Is this more leases than you had last year?

SECRETARY BABBITT: The President is going to present, the first week into February, a balanced budget, which will show revenues, offsets and expenditures. This proposal will be a part of that budget.

Q Can you give us an idea of when he mentions off the cuff that this is going to be paid for by oil leases, we need a little more detail than that.

SECRETARY BABBITT: Look, I don't have a green eyeshade. I have studiously avoided those kinds of details. And it's not a question of which source; it's a question of an expenditure from a unified budget. That's the bottom line.

Q You don't know where the money's coming from?

SECRETARY BABBITT: Helen, the money is coming from the budget. Where does the money for the schools in your neighborhood come from?

Q Taxes.

SECRETARY BABBITT: It comes from the federal budget, right? Comes from the revenues from the federal budget. The school grants to your neighborhood school come from federal budget. This is no different.

Q Mr. Secretary, how much of this $1 billion is entirely new money not now being spent for an environmental purpose? Any of it reprogrammed --

SECRETARY BABBITT: Well, the Land and Water Conservation Fund last year I think had a total of $300-some-odd million, so it's a step up of about $700 million.

MR. FRAMPTON: Perhaps I could respond to the question about oil leases. Offshore oil receipts to the Federal Treasury are currently $3.5 billion a year. What the Land and Water Conservation Fund legislation did in 1965 was to say $900 million of that is available every year for conservation purposes; but, in fact, Congress has never appropriated anywhere near that much, so the balance of that $900 million, together with other offshore oil receipts have always just gone back into the general Treasury.

There's no proposal here for new oil drilling; this is only a portion of the receipts that come in every year from existing oil wells. What's different about this proposal is, first, that it recommends that the entire amount originally made available, $900 million a year, would go to conservation, and, second, the President announced this morning that he will work with Congress to try to make this $1 billion a year that's proposed for FY 2000 a permanent stream of financing, so that you would take the annual battle over how much goes to conservation and turn it into a guaranteed stream of $1 billion a year, a very long-term legacy that would have to be used for conservation and land protection purposes.

Q Can you explain if, in the past, Congress has never come close to approving that much money, why do you think it will be any different this year?

SECRETARY BABBITT: It'll be different this year for the reasons that I so eloquently explained in my opening statement. There's a lot of attention out there. There's demand. Ultimately, the assurances of the folks back home. And I think if you get out there around the countryside, you're going to see that this is really -- I mean, when New Jersey passes a $1-billion bond issue for this very purpose, you don't think the people who went to the polls in New Jersey made a statement, and you don't think that they're ready to say, look, we've made that effort and it's appropriate and indeed, imperative that the Congress join this partnership, initiate it at the state and local level.

Q In the final weeks of the last Congress, Senator Landrieu and Congressman Young were among the people pushing a bill that would have spent some $3 billion in they say similar programs. How did that bill differ? You opposed that bill, correct? How does that differ from what you're proposing?

MR. FRAMPTON: I think the President has made a commitment and we're looking forward to working with the Congress on a bipartisan basis to try to shape this program. Now, one major difference between the Landrieu and other bills is that they have proposed more than $1 billion of annual guaranteed funding, but they haven't identified a way to pay for it.

What the President will do in the budget is to include this $1 billion a year within the budget caps fully paid for. That's number one. Number two, the administration's proposal that the President announced today, is very much focused on both the Great Places Land Acquisition federal acquisition money, but also on promoting livable communities, open space in our own communities program. So in that respect, the focus differs a little bit from the Landrieu bill, which tends to be more for the coastal states.

But I think that the President is going to work with the Congress, and we're going to try to put together something that will pass this year.

Q Will there be -- Secretary Babbitt, you sent a bunch of land acquisition proposals up to the Hill last year, or the year before, and a lot of them you had a lot of trouble convincing them that those were the areas that you should buy. Do you anticipate some problems in terms of arguments over where this money -- not that you're going to buy land, but what land you're going to buy?

SECRETARY BABBITT: Oh, I think inevitably there will be some give and take between all of the parties in the Congress, and the administration. That's been the case in the past, and certainly there will be some of that, sure.

Q What is the wilderness protection for the national park areas? Does that mean no roads, no -- any commercial development, nothing?

SECRETARY BABBITT: Yeah, the essential add-on, from a wilderness designation in a national park, is precisely that. No more roads; no motorized intrusions. No snowmobiles, jet-skis, ORVs. That's the real issue and it, of course, precludes any kind of development as well. And, sometimes, that does happen in national parks, however well-intentioned. And we need to make sure that it doesn't.

Q In terms of the lands that are being proposed, are there new areas being proposed? Or is this all working off backlog of previous set-aside proposals?

SECRETARY BABBITT: Oh, no, I think there will be some new priorities. Inevitably there are. I mean, life goes on and circumstances change. Who could have imagined, ten years ago, that we would have a gold mine ready for development on the edge of Yellowstone? Or that the Headwaters Forest, to take an example from last year, would be under siege by chainsaw? The most prominent of the new opportunities this year is the so-called Catellus acquisition that I described. And, inevitably, there will be more of those. So I think it's a matter of the administration clearly asserting its priorities -- a function of old and new -- and being sensitive and responsive to Congressional requests, provided they fit the criteria that are laid out by the land management agencies.

Q -- any strong opposition?

SECRETARY BABBITT: Helen, I don't think so. I don't think so. You know, I'm kind of a newcomer around this town, and I'm prepared for a surprise. But I think this is a winner.

Q No rancher is going to get in your way?

SECRETARY BABBITT: Look. This is about sending checks.

Q The budget, now -- I would presume there would be some kind of battle over -- if you're removing this money from the oil leases that had gone into the general fund, I mean, you still have $900 million or whatever to replace.

SECRETARY BABBITT: Look, that's why I refused to take the bait that was offered last time. It's important to think of this as a budget proposal. And the President, the first week in February, is going to, as I understand it from my sort of -- I'm just a gamekeeper, I'm not a budget guy -- but my understanding of a budget is, the President lays out these expenditures, lays out all these integrated revenues and draws a line across them and they all balance.

But, see, this is for all time. I don't want to get over-enthused here, but these are investments that will be with us forever. I think the Congress members are getting increasingly appreciative of that.

Q If Teddy Roosevelt could do it, you can.

SECRETARY BABBITT: Absolutely. I don't have many game trophies to show. Helen, were you here when TR had all those heads mounted on the walls of the White House?

Q I deserved that. (Laughter.)

MR. FRAMPTON: Thank you. I don't know for those of you -- I don't know what you have, the briefing paper, but for those of you who were not out there at the Arboretum or don't have a paper, Ted Roosevelt, Theodore Roosevelt IV was out at the Arboretum with the President and Vice President and spoke about this today.

MR TOIV: Joe will be out shortly.

THE PRESS: Thank you.

Great minds...Yes, we proposed an insert to Ch4 already, along the lines you wanted.

Chapter 5 does already mention the carbon initiative. Rosina

CHAPTER 4: OSTP Insert (page 8-9, added to end of &Addressing Global Climate Change8):

"The Administration is proposing XXX for the US Global Change Research Program, which supports the scientific research that is increasing our understanding of climate change and its consequences. This includes XXX for a special initiative on carbon cycle science focused on determining the potential for crops and forests to decrease the concentrations of greenhouse gases in the atmosphere."

CHAPTER 5: USGCRP paragraph already says: "In the year 2000, the program will also focus on how the terrestrial biosphere produces and consumes carbon dioxide on a regional scale, to increase our understanding of the role of biological processes on the Earth's Climate."

TEXT:
PRESIDENT CLINTON AND VICE PRESIDENT GORE:
A HISTORIC COMMITMENT TO PRESERVING OUR LANDS
January 12, 1999

Today, at the National Arboretum in Washington, D.C., President Clinton and Vice President Gore announce a $1 billion Lands Legacy Initiative -- the largest one-year investment ever in the protection of America's land resources. This FY 2000 budget proposal -- a 125-percent increase over FY 1999 -- expands federal efforts to save America's natural treasures and provides significant new resources to states and communities to protect local green spaces. To sustain these efforts in the new century, the President commits to work with Congress to create a permanent funding stream beginning in FY 2001. In addition, the President calls on Congress to extend permanent wilderness protection to more than 5 million acres within 17 national parks and monuments. This landmark initiative charts a new conservation vision for the 21st century, preserving irreplaceable pieces of our natural legacy within easy reach of every citizen.

Saving America's Natural Treasures. At the start of this century, President Theodore Roosevelt called on Americans to save the best of our natural endowment for all time. His legacy is seen across the country, in our parks, our forests, and our wildlife refuges. President Clinton has continued to fulfill this vision by protecting Yellowstone Park from mining, creating a 1.7 million-acre national monument in Utah's spectacular red-rock country, and forging a historic agreement to save ancient California redwoods. The Lands Legacy Initiative expands these efforts with $442 million for federal land acquisitions. Priorities include:

- Mojave Desert - Acquiring 450,000 acres within and around Mojave and Joshua Tree National Parks.
- New England Forests - Acquiring additional land within national forests and wildlife refuges in Maine, Vermont, New Hampshire and New York.
- Everglades - Acquiring lands critical to ongoing federal-state restoration efforts.
- Lewis and Clark Trail - Protecting the explorers, historic route along the Missouri River.

- Civil War Battlefields - Acquiring lands within Gettysburg, Antietam and other battlegrounds.

Protecting our Parks. In addition, the President is calling on Congress to grant permanent wilderness protection to over 5 million acres within the backcountry of Yellowstone, Grand Teton, Glacier, Great Smoky Mountains, Cumberland Gap and 12 other national parks and monuments, giving these lands the highest level of federal protection available.

A Conservation Vision for the 21st Century. A new century poses new conservation challenges.

Beyond saving America's "crown jewels," we must work as well to preserve natural wonders in our very backyards that grow scarcer every day.

Protecting local green spaces helps improve air and water quality, sustain wildlife, provide families with places to play and relax, and make our communities more livable. Lands Legacy, to be coordinated with the Livability Agenda announced yesterday by Vice President Gore, provides $588 million to state and local governments, private land trusts, and other nonprofit groups for:

Land Acquisition Grants - $150 million in matching grants for land or easements for urban parks, greenways, outdoor recreation, wetlands, and wildlife habitat.

Planning Grants and Loans - $50 million in matching grants for open space planning, and $10 million to support $50 million in low-interest loans to rural areas for "smart growth" planning and development.

Farmland Protection - $50 million for easements on threatened farmland and open space.

Urban Parks and Forests - $40 million to maintain and expand urban and community forests, and $4 million to renovate parks in distressed urban neighborhoods.

Forest and Wildlife Protection - $50 million for easements to protect critical forest habitat, and $80 million for habitat conservation plans to protect endangered species.

Protecting our Oceans and Coasts. Lands Legacy includes funds for federal and state efforts to protect ocean and coastal resources: $29 million to expand and protect national marine sanctuaries; $90 million to states to protect and restore coastlands; $19 million to states for estuary protections; and $45 million to restore coral reefs, fisheries and marine habitats.

THE WHITE HOUSE

Office of the Press Secretary

For Immediate Release

January 11, 1999

REMARKS BY PRESIDENT CLINTON
AND PRESIDENT MENEM OF ARGENTINA
IN EXCHANGE OF TOASTS

The State Floor

8:33 P.M. EST

PRESIDENT CLINTON: Good evening. Welcome to the White House, and to this wonderful dinner. As you can see, we had so many people who wanted to be here, who love Argentina and respect you, Mr. President, that were in more than one room tonight. But were all happy to be here, and Hillary and I welcome you all.

Mr. President, we hope that we have, in some small way, repaid the hospitality showed us during our unforgettable visit to Argentina in October 1997. At our dinner in Buenos Aires, I cited the memory of Domingo Sarmiento, who loved the United States, but who complained that we ate our meals far too fast -- often in five minutes or less. (Laughter.) Tonight, I hope our guests from Argentina will see that we value constructive criticism -- (laughter.) This will be a long, leisurely meal. (Laughter.)

The friendship between our two peoples reaches back to our earliest days as sister republics. In fact, our first envoy to Buenos Aires was sent well before there was a nation called Argentina. In 1810, as Joel Poinsett was leaving to take up his post in Argentina, he was instructed by the State Department to "promote the most friendly relations" between us, and remember that all nations lie under -- and I quote -- "a common obligation to maintain that system of peace, justice and goodwill which is the only source of happiness for nations."

Mr. President, those words are still a good description of our warm, rich, friendly relations. We share aspirations old and new, to deepen democracy, to strengthen justice, to educate our children, to preserve and enhance what we have inherited from our descendants, and to give other people a chance to live as peacefully and as prosperously as possible at the dawn of this new century.

Now, there are certain disputes we will never resolve -- like which country has the better beef. (Laughter.) Or whose cooks have better mastered the ancient art of barbecue. (Laughter.)

But as we approach the 200th anniversary of our official relationship, our friendship has never been stronger. We have a common enthusiasm for the future and a common parallel in our history -- two nations generously blessed; blessed by nature, blessed by hardworking immigrants eager to build a better life.

Mr. President, I know how much this legacy means to you personally. It says a great deal about Argentina that a child of Syrian immigrants would grow up to be its President. It is remarkable to consider how far you have come and how far the nation has come under your leadership in the last nine years.

Over the last decade, the world has undergone a remarkable transformation. Nowhere has it been more dramatic or complete than in the Americas, where Argentina has led by its example at home and its commitment abroad to freedom and democracy, to peace and prosperity. A great deal of the credit for South America's achievements and for its promise belongs with the man we honor this evening.

Borges once wrote a poem about our great 18th century theologian, Jonathan Edwards. It included this line: "Today is tomorrow and yesterday." Tonight, let us remember the best days of our past and plan even better days yet to come. But first, let us enjoy an unhurried dinner together.

I ask you to join me in a toast to the President and to the people of Argentina.

(A toast is offered.) (Applause.)

PRESIDENT MENEM: Mr. President of the United States of America, my dear friend, Bill Clinton; charming Mrs. Clinton; government officials of the United States government; Argentine government officials; ladies and gentlemen. I believe this microphone was prepared for somebody that was taller than myself. (Laughter.)

I thank you very much, my friend, Mr. President, for this invitation. And I would also like to thank you for this occasion of mentioning several things that are very much related to the excellent relationship between our two countries. Tonight, apart from this dinner party, I would also have the privilege of sharing with you a moment of celebration. After 10 years of my government, we are finishing a decade of excellent relations between the United States and Argentina.

But this relationship is not the result of acts of government only, nor the result of only bonds of friendship. Of course, the bonds of friendship between the Presidents is very deep, but as deep are the bonds of friendship that bring together the people of Argentina and the people of America. And I am sure that on the basis of that friendship, we will be able to create a partnership, an association, an alliance that will prepare us even for a better future.

To show you one of the events that has marked this excellent relationship, I would like tonight to celebrate the initiative of a group of Americans that have created the Academy of Tango. And I would like also to take advantage of this moment to congratulate the chairman of this Academy, the excellent actor and now, excellent dancer, Mr. Robert Duvall. (Applause.)

I thank you, my friend, Mr. President, for the fact that you have promised a long dinner and a long party so that I won't be able to go back to my country complaining as Sarmiento did. (Laughter.) Because we in Argentina are used to solving everything over a meal. It is a working breakfast, a working luncheon, a working afternoon, or a working dinner. And of course, this always takes long. And we also have tango and football -- or soccer, as it is called here in the United States.

Mr. President, I would like publicly to show you my full solidarity at this time. And I say this from the bottom of my heart and based on my inner-most feelings. I hope that the American citizens will come to recognize that they are not the only ones who need you still here and your leadership.

(Applause.) Your leadership is needed, Mr. President, all over the world.

I want you to know that I feel proud of the fact that I have brought Argentina again to a position that is important in the world. And before closing, I would like to propose a toast for the President of the United States of America, for the American people; of course, as well, for the republic of Argentina and the people of Argentina.

(A toast is offered.) (Applause.)

Alternative Fuels Update COAST TO COAST DEVELOPERS FIND NEW USES
FOR FUEL

CELLS
(Oxy-Fuel News; 01/11/99)

Jan. 11, 1999 (OXY-FUEL NEWS, Vol. 11, No. 1 via COMTEX) -- With the huge boom in fuel cell research and development, industry leaders are finding new applications for fuel cell use with the most significant inroads being made in providing power to residential homes.

Recently, many research and development companies in this field including Plug Power and Northwest Power Systems have been running numerous tests in hopes to produce marketable fuel cells, powered by methanol, to service residential homes.

Plug Power, based in Latham, NY, recently saw the successful demonstration of a natural gas powered, proton exchange membrane (PEM) fuel cell. The fuel cell and fuel processor provided by Johnson Matthey powered the company's development facility for four hours, and produced in excess of 4 kW of electricity, said John Mousaw, of Plug Power .

Plug Power proclaims itself the first company to run a fuel cell for practical application within the home. "The company is currently focused on producing a fuel cell that has design integrity, good endurance, dependability, and can be mass produced at a competitive price and sold to the public," said Mousaw.

Although the cost of fuel cells is not yet competitive with traditional electric utility applications, by the year 2001, fuel cells should cost about $7,000 to $8,000 per unit, estimates Mousaw. That price should plummet to $3,000 by the year 2005 as fuel cells become mass produced and are more readily available, continued Mousaw.

On the West Coast, Northwest Power Systems of Bend, OR, in conjunction with Bonneville Power Administration has been demonstrating its fuel cell. It is a 5kW system run on methanol and water.

Each of the tests last about one hour and demonstrates how the cell works to power a residential home, explained Alan Guggenheim of Northwest Power Systems. Although no testing for long-term capabilities has been conducted the company is expected to run a two to three day trial on their fuel cell sometime in late January, said Guggenheim.

Additionally, fuel cells are being studied in still more applications. Fuel cells can be a valuable power source for remotely located operations such as NOAA weather stations, power generators, hot water pumps, and even cell phones, said Guggenheim.

Fuel Cells May Increase Alt. Fuel Use in New Millennium

Because fuel cells can operate on a variety of alternative fuels, their increased use may potentially expand the use of alternative fuels such as natural gas and methanol.

Future fuel cells developed by Plug Power to be used for residential applications will most likely run on natural gas due to the substantial infrastructure already in place, said Mousaw. Northwest Power Systems has plans to initially run its fuel cells on methanol because it is most easily converted into hydrogen, said Guggenheim.

"Because methanol is a liquid fuel it is easily transportable which makes it ideal for use remote applications such as rural areas, cabins and weather stations," explained Greg Dolan of the American Methanol Institute. "Methanol is also the favored fuel for automakers currently developing fuel cells."

The direct liquid feed methanol fuel cell can be used for smaller applications such as consumer electronics, and possibly larger applications, like lawnmowers, boat motors, and even recreational vehicles, Dolan continued. The methanol industry is convinced that fuel cells will greatly increase the market for their product, he said. --By Kerry Lenahan

For Immediate Release January 11, 1999

REMARKS BY PRESIDENT CLINTON
IN EXCHANGE OF TOASTS

The State Floor

8:33 P.M. EST

PRESIDENT CLINTON: Good evening. Welcome to the White House, and to this wonderful dinner. As you can see, we had so many people who wanted to be here, who love Argentina and respect you, Mr. President, that were in more than one room tonight. But were all happy to be here, and Hillary and I welcome you all.

Mr. President, we hope that we have, in some small way, repaid the hospitality showed us during our unforgettable visit to Argentina in October 1997. At our dinner in Buenos Aires, I cited the memory of Domingo Sarmiento, who loved the United States, but who complained that we ate our meals far too fast -- often in five minutes or less. (Laughter.) Tonight, I hope our guests from Argentina will see that we value constructive criticism -- (laughter.) This will be a long, leisurely meal. (Laughter.)

The friendship between our two peoples reaches back to our earliest days as sister republics. In fact, our first envoy to Buenos Aires was sent well before there was a nation called Argentina. In 1810, as Joel Poinsett was leaving to take up his post in Argentina, he was instructed by the State Department to "promote the most friendly relations" between us, and remember that all nations lie under -- and I quote -- "a common obligation to maintain that system of peace, justice and goodwill which is the only source of happiness for nations."

Mr. President, those words are still a good description of our warm, rich, friendly relations. We share aspirations old and new, to deepen democracy, to strengthen justice, to educate our children, to preserve and enhance what we have inherited from our descendants, and to give other people a chance to live as peacefully and as prosperously as possible at the dawn of this new century.

Now, there are certain disputes we will never resolve -- like which country has the better beef. (Laughter.) Or whose cooks have better mastered the ancient art of barbecue. (Laughter.)

But as we approach the 200th anniversary of our official relationship, our friendship has never been stronger. We have a common enthusiasm for the future and a common parallel in our history -- two nations generously blessed; blessed by nature, blessed by hardworking immigrants eager to build a better BOTTOM EVEN MORE life.

Mr. President, I know how much this legacy means to you personally. It says a great deal about Argentina that a child of Syrian immigrants would grow up to be its President. It is remarkable to consider how far you have come and how far the nation has come under your leadership in the last nine years.

Over the last decade, the world has undergone a remarkable transformation. Nowhere has it been more dramatic or complete than in the Americas, where Argentina has led by its example at home and its commitment abroad to freedom and democracy, to peace and prosperity. A great deal of the credit for South America's achievements and for its promise belongs with the man we honor this evening.

Borges once wrote a poem about our great 18th century theologian, Jonathan Edwards. It included this line: "Today is tomorrow and yesterday." Tonight, let us remember the best days of our past and plan even better days yet to come. But first, let us enjoy an unhurried dinner together.

I ask you to join me in a toast to the President and to the people of Argentina.

(A toast is offered.) (Applause.)

PRESIDENT MENEM: Mr. President of the United States of America, my dear friend, Bill Clinton; charming Mrs. Clinton; government officials of the United States government; Argentine government officials; ladies and gentlemen. I believe this microphone was prepared for somebody that was taller than myself. (Laughter.)

I thank you very much, my friend, Mr. President, for this invitation. And I would also like to thank you for this occasion of mentioning several things that are very much related to the excellent relationship between our two countries. Tonight, apart from this dinner party, I would also have the privilege of sharing with you a moment of celebration. After 10 years of my government, we are finishing a decade of excellent relations between the United States and Argentina.

But this relationship is not the result of acts of government only, nor the result of only bonds of friendship. Of course, the bonds of friendship between the Presidents is very deep, but as deep are the bonds of friendship that bring together the people of Argentina and the people of America. And I am sure that on the basis of that friendship, we will be able to create a partnership, an association, an alliance that will prepare us even for a better future.

To show you one of the events that has marked this excellent relationship, I would like tonight to celebrate the initiative of a group of Americans that have created the Academy of Tango. And I would like also to take advantage of this moment to congratulate the chairman of this Academy, the excellent actor and now, excellent dancer, Mr. Robert Duvall. (Applause.)

I thank you, my friend, Mr. President, for the fact that you have promised a long dinner and a long party so that I won't be able to go back to my country complaining as Sarmiento did. (Laughter.) Because we in Argentina are used to solving everything over a meal. It is a working breakfast, a working luncheon, a working afternoon, or a working dinner. And of course, this always takes long. And we also have tango and football -- or soccer, as it is called here in the United States.

Mr. President, I would like publicly to show you my full solidarity at this time. And I say this from the bottom of my heart and based on my inner

-most feelings. I hope that the American citizens will come to recognize that they are not the TOP ODD

BOTTOM ALL

(Applause.) Your leadership is needed, Mr. President, all over the world.

I want you to know that I feel proud of the fact that I have brought Argentina again to a position that is important in the world. And before closing, I would like to propose a toast for the President of the United States of America, for the American people; of course, as well, for the republic of Argentina and the people of Argentina.

(A toast is offered.) (Applause.)

THE WHITE HOUSE

Office of the Press Secretary

For Immediate Release January 12, 1999

EXECUTIVE ORDER

USING TECHNOLOGY TO IMPROVE TRAINING OPPORTUNITIES FOR FEDERAL GOVERNMENT EMPLOYEES

Advances in technology and increased skills needs are changing the workplace at an ever increasing rate. These advances can make Federal employees more productive and pro-vide improved service to our customers, the American taxpayers. We need to ensure that we continue to train Federal employees

to take full advantage of these technological advances and to acquire the skills and learning needed to succeed in a changing workplace. A coordinated Federal
effort is needed to provide flexible training opportunities to employees and to explore how Federal training programs, initiatives, and policies can better support lifelong learning through the use of learning technology.

To help us meet these goals, I am creating a task force on Federal training
technology, directing Federal agencies to take certain steps to enhance employees' training opportunities through the use of training technology,
and an advisory committee on the use of training technology, which also will explore options for financing the training and post-secondary education needed
to upgrade skills and gain new knowledge.

Therefore, by the authority vested in me as President by the Constitution
and the laws of the United States of America, including the Federal Advisory Committee Act, as amended (5 U.S.C. App.), and in furtherance of the purposes
of Chapter 41 of title 5, United States Code, the Government Employees
Training
Act of 1958 (Public Law 85-507), as amended, and Executive Order 11348, "Providing for the Further Training of Government Employees," and in order to make effective use of technology to improve training opportunities for Federal
Government employees, it is ordered as follows:

Section 1. Establishment of the President's Task Force on Federal Training
Technology. (a) The "President's Task Force on Federal Training Technology"
(Task Force) is established. The Task Force shall provide leadership regarding the effective use of technology in training and education; make training opportunities an integral part of continuing employment in the Federal Government; and facilitate the ongoing coordination of Federal activities concerning the use of technology in training. The Task Force shall consist of the heads of the following departments and agencies or their representatives:
the Departments of State, the Treasury, Defense, Justice, Interior, Agriculture, Commerce, Labor, Health and Human Services, Housing and Urban Development, Transportation, Energy, and Education; the Office of Personnel
Management, General Services Administration, Environmental Protection Agency,
National Aeronautics and Space Administration, Small Business

Administration, and Social Security Administration; a representative from the Small Agency Council; and representatives from other relevant agencies and related Federal councils, as determined by the Chair and Vice Chair of the Task Force.

(b) Within 30 days of the date of this order, the head of each agency or council shall designate a senior official to serve as a representative to the Task Force. The representative shall report directly to the agency head or the President's Management Council member on the agency's or council's activities under this order.

(c) The Director of the Office of Personnel Management (OPM) shall be the Chair and the representative from the Department of Labor shall be the Vice Chair of the Task Force.

(d) The Chair and Vice Chair shall appoint an Executive Director.

(e) The Task Force member agencies shall provide any required staffing and funding, as appropriate.

Sec. 2. Duties of the Task Force. (a) Within 18 months of the date of this order, the Task Force shall develop and recommend to the President, through the Assistant to the President for Economic Policy and the Assistant to the President for Science and Technology, a policy to make effective use of technology to improve training opportunities for Federal Government employees. The policy should promote and integrate the effective use of training technologies to create affordable and convenient training opportunities to improve Federal employee performance. The Task Force shall seek the views of experts from industry, academia, and State and local governments as the Task Force proceeds, as appropriate. Specifically, the Task Force shall:

(1) develop strategies to improve the efficiency and availability of training opportunities for Federal Government employees;

(2) form partnerships among key Federal agencies, State and local governments, businesses, universities, and other appropriate entities to promote the development and use of high-quality training opportunities;

(3) analyze the use of technology in existing training programs and policies of the Task Force member agencies to determine what changes, modifications, and innovations may be necessary to advance training opportunities;

(4) in consultation with the Department of Defense and the National Institute of Standards and Technology, recommend standards for training software and associated services purchased by Federal agencies and contractors. These standards should be consistent with voluntary industry consensus-based commercial standards. Agencies, where appropriate, should use these standards in procure-ments to promote reusable training component software and thereby reduce duplication in the development of courseware;

(5) evaluate and, where appropriate, coordinate and collaborate on, research and demonstration activities of Task Force member agencies related to Federal training technology;

(6) identify and support cross-agency training areas that would particularly benefit from new instructional technologies and facilitate multiagency procurement and use of training materials, where appropriate;

more

(7) in consultation with the General Services Administration, the Office of Personnel Management, and the Office of Federal Procurement Policy of the Office of Management and Budget (OFPP), promote existing and new procurement vehicles that allow agencies to provide innovative training opportunities for Federal employees;

(8) recommend changes that may be needed to existing procurement laws to further the objectives of this order and forward the recommendations to the Administrator of OFPP; and

(b) develop options and recommendations for establishing a Federal Individual

Training Account for each Federal worker for training relevant to his or her

Federal employment. To the extent permitted by law, such accounts may be established with the funds allocated to the agency for employee training. Approval for training would be within the discretion of the individual employee's manager. Options and recommendations shall be reported no later than 6 months from the date of this order.

Sec. 3. Duties of All Federal Agencies. (a) Each Federal agency shall, to the extent permitted by law:

- (1) include as part of its annual budget process a set of goals to provide the highest quality and most efficient training opportunities possible to its employees, and a set of performance measures of the quality and availability of training opportunities possible to its employees. Such measures should be, where appropriate, based on outcomes related to performance rather than time allocation;
 - (2) identify the resources necessary to achieve the aforementioned goals and performance measures articulated in its annual performance plan;
 - (3) and, where practicable, use the standards recommended by the Task Force and published by the Office of Personnel Management for purchasing training software and associated services; and
 - (4) subject to the availability of appropriations, post training courses, information, and other learning opportunities on the Department of Labor's America's Learning Exchange (ALX), or other appropriate information dissemination vehicles as determined by the Task Force, to make information about Federal training courses, information, and other learning opportunities widely available to Federal employees.
- (b) Each Federal agency, to the extent permitted by law, is encouraged to consider how savings achieved through the efficient use of training technology can be reinvested in improved training for their employees.

Sec. 4. Duties of Specific Federal Agencies. (a) In light of the Office of Personnel Management's responsibility for developing Government-wide training policy, coordinating and managing training policy programs, and providing technical assistance to Federal agencies, the Office of Personnel Management or other appropriate agency as determined by the Task Force shall:

(1) in consultation with the Task Force, the Department of Defense, the National Institute of Standards and Technology, the Department of Labor, and other appropriate agencies as determined by OPM, publish the standards for training software and associated services recommended by the Task Force; and

(2) ensure that qualification standards for civil service positions, where appropriate, reflect standard industry certification practices.

(b) The Department of Labor or other appropriate agency as determined by the Task Force shall, subject to the availability of appropriations:

(1) establish a specialized database for Federal training within the framework of the Department of Labor's ALX, or other appropriate information dissemination vehicles determined by the Task Force, to make information about Federal training courses, information, and other learning opportunities widely available to Federal employees;

(2) establish and maintain a training technology website for agencies to post training needs and to foster communication among the agencies and between public and private sector organizations to identify and meet common needs; and

(3) establish a staffed help desk and technology resource center to support Federal agencies using training technology and to facilitate the development of online training courses.

(c) The Department of Defense or other appropriate agency as determined by the Task Force shall:

(1) in consultation with the National Institute of Standards and Technology, lead Federal participation in business and university organizations charged with developing consensus standards for training software and associated services and lead the Federal review of the standards; and

(2) provide guidance to Defense agencies and advise the civilian agencies, as appropriate, on how best to use these standards for large-scale development and implementation of efficient and effective distributed learning technologies.

(d) Each Executive department shall designate at least one subject area of training that it will use to demonstrate opportunities in technology-based training and assign an agency leader in the designated area. Leaders in these training technology experiments shall work closely with other agencies with similar training interests. Each Executive department shall develop a plan for measuring and evaluating the effectiveness, cost-effectiveness, and benefits to employees and the agency for each designated subject area.

Sec. 5. Establishment of Advisory Committee on Expanding Training Opportunities.

The Advisory Committee on Expanding Training Opportunities (Committee) is established. The Committee shall consist of not more than 20 members appointed by the President from outside the Federal Government, including representatives of the research, education, labor, and training communities, information technology sector, and representatives from other critical sectors. The President shall designate Co-Chairs from among the members of the Committee.

Sec. 6. Functions of the Advisory Committee. The Committee shall provide the President, through the Assistant to the President for Economic Policy and the Assistant to the President for Science and Technology (Assistants to the President), with: (a) an independent assessment of:

(1) progress made by the Federal Government in its use and integration of technology in training programs, particularly in the use of voluntary industry consensus-based commercial standards for training software and associated services;

(2) how Federal Government programs, initiatives, and policies can encourage or accelerate training technology to provide more accessible, more timely, and more cost-effective training opportunities for all Americans;

(3) mechanisms for the Federal Government to encourage private sector investment in the development of high-quality instructional software and wider deployment and utilization of technology-mediated instruction so that all Americans may take advantage of the opportunities provided by learning technology; and

(4) the appropriate Federal Government role in research and development for learning technologies and their applications in order to develop high-quality training and education opportunities for all Americans;

(b) an analysis of options for helping adult Americans finance the training and post-secondary education needed to upgrade skills and gain new knowledge. Options for financial mechanisms may include grants, tax incentives, low-interest loans, or other vehicles to make training and post-secondary education accessible to adults throughout their lifetimes; and

(c) advice on other issues regarding emerging technologies in government training and financing training and post-secondary education for adult Americans as specified by the Assistants to the President.

Sec. 7. Administration of the Advisory Committee. (a) To the extent permitted by law and subject to the availability of appropriations, the Office of Personnel Management shall provide the financial and administrative support for the Committee.

(b) The heads of Executive agencies shall, to the extent permitted by law, provide to the Committee such information as it may require for the purpose of carrying out its functions.

(c) The Committee Co-Chairs may, from time to time, invite experts to submit information to the Committee and may form subcommittees or working groups within the Committee to review specific issues.

(d) Members of the Committee shall serve without compensation but shall be allowed travel expenses, including per diem instead of subsistence, as authorized by law for persons serving intermittently in the Government service (5 U.S.C. 5701-5707).

(e) Notwithstanding any other Executive order, the functions of the President under the Federal Advisory Committee Act, as amended, that are applicable to the Committee, except that of reporting to the Congress, shall be performed by the Office of Personnel Management in accordance with guidelines that have been issued by the Administrator of General Services.

(f) The Committee shall terminate 2 years from the date of this order unless extended by the President prior to such date.

Sec. 8. Definitions. (a) As used in this order, the terms "agency," "employee," "Government," and "training" have the meaning given to those terms, respectively, by section 4101 of title 5, United States Code.

(b) The term "technology," means any equipment or interconnected system or subsystem of equipment that is used in the automatic acquisition, storage, manipulation, management, movement, control, display, switching, interchange, transmission, or reception of data or information, including computers, ancillary equipment, software, firmware and similar procedures, services (including support services), and related resources. For purposes of the preceding sentence, equipment is used by an Executive agency if the equipment is used by the Executive agency directly or is used by a contractor under a contract with the Executive agency that requires the use of such equipment. The term "technology" does not include any equipment that is acquired by a Federal contractor incidental to a Federal contract.

Sec. 9. Judicial Review. This order does not create any enforceable rights against the United States, its agencies, its officers, or any person.

STATEMENT BY THE PRESS SECRETARY

Trade Penalties Against Three Russian Entities

The U.S. Government has imposed trade penalties against three Russian entities for materially contributing to Iran's nuclear weapons and missile programs. These three entities are NIKIET (the Scientific Research and Design Institute of Power Technology), the D. Mendeleyev University of Chemical Technology, and the Moscow Aviation Institute (MAI). Based on existing authorities, including President Clinton's July 1998 Executive Order on weapons of mass destruction (WMD), the United States is banning exports to and imports from these entities, as well as U.S. Government procurement from and assistance to these entities. Relevant notices to this effect will appear shortly in the Federal Register.

The Clinton Administration is taking these actions as part of its ongoing, high-priority effort to combat the threat to U.S. forces, allies, and interests posed by Iran's aggressive pursuit of WMD and their delivery systems. These penalties apply only to the aforementioned entities, not to the Russian government or Russia as a whole. These steps complement the Russian government's efforts to enforce its laws and international commitments relating to nonproliferation and export controls.

The United States will continue to work with Russia to strengthen controls on such exports and to enforce compliance with the laws, policies, and international agreements on such transfers. The United States will continue to urge the Russian leadership to take aggressive steps to curtail the flow of sensitive technology to Iran from Russian entities in violation of the Russian government's laws and policies.

PRESIDENT CLINTON!,S LANDS LEGACY INITIATIVE:
Forging a Conservation Vision for the 21st Century
January 12, 1999

President Clinton, in the FY 2000 budget he will submit to Congress, is proposing a $1 billion Lands Legacy initiative to expand federal protection of critical lands across America, help states and communities preserve local green spaces, and strengthen protections for our oceans and coasts.

This landmark initiative -- a 125 percent increase over FY 1999 funding -- represents the largest one-year investment ever in the preservation of America!,s lands legacy. It includes $900 million from the Land and Water Conservation Fund (LWCF), marking the first time any Administration has requested full funding from LWCF, which draws revenues from federal offshore oil sales. To sustain these efforts in the new century, the President commits to work with Congress to create a permanent funding stream beginning in FY

The Lands Legacy initiative continues the Clinton-Gore Administration's vigorous efforts to save America's natural treasures. And, by providing significant new resources to states and local communities, it forges a new conservation vision for the 21st century -- one that recognizes the importance of preserving irreplaceable pieces of our natural legacy within easy reach of every citizen.

Lands Legacy will be administered by the Department of the Interior (DOI), $579 million; the Department of Agriculture (USDA), $268 million; and the Department of Commerce's National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA), $183 million. It will be coordinated with the $1 billion Livability Agenda announced by Vice President Gore of January 11 through interagency cooperation and consultation.

In addition, the President is calling on Congress to extend permanent wilderness protection to more than 5 million acres in 17 national parks and monuments, including Yellowstone, Grand Teton, Glacier, Great Smoky Mountains and Cumberland Gap.

Saving America's Natural Treasures

Federal Acquisitions - The initiative increases federal land acquisition funding through the Land and Water Conservation Fund by 26 percent to a total of $413 million ($295 million for DOI, and $118 million for USDA). In recent years, the Administration has dedicated LWCF funds to protecting Yellowstone National Park from mining, saving ancient redwoods in California's Headwaters Forest, preserving Civil War battlefields, completing the Maine-to-Georgia Appalachian Trail, and acquiring more than 100 other natural and historic sites across the country. Priorities for FY 2000 include acquisition of over 450,000 acres in California's Mojave Desert, 100,000 acres for addition to New England wildlife refuges and national forests, and lands critical to the ongoing restoration of Florida's Everglades.

Protecting Our Parks - The President also is calling on Congress to grant permanent wilderness protection to over 5 million acres within Arches, Big Bend, Bryce Canyon, Canyonlands, Capitol Reef, Crater Lake, Glacier, Grand Teton, Great Smoky Mountains, Rocky Mountain, Yellowstone and Zion National Parks; Cedar Breaks, Colorado and Dinosaur National Monuments; Assateague

Island National Seashore/Chincoteague National Wildlife Refuge; and Cumberland Gap National Historic Park. Granting these areas the highest level of federal protection available would, in the words of the Wilderness Act of 1964, recognize them as areas "where the earth and its community of life are untrammelled by man, where man himself is a visitor who does not remain."

Helping States and Communities Preserve Green Spaces

Land Acquisition Grants - Lands Legacy includes $150 million through LWCF for matching grants to state, local and tribal governments, and nonprofit land trusts, for acquisition of land and easements for urban parks, greenways, outdoor recreations, wildlife habitat, and coastal wetlands. The DOI program retools the LWCF state grants program for "smart growth" and open space preservation. Grants will be awarded on a competitive basis, with priority going to projects consistent with statewide "smart growth" plans.

Open Space Planning Grants - The initiative proposes a new $50 million program of matching grants to states to develop open space preservation and "smart growth" strategies. States would use a variety of data and tools to identify priority areas for urban development, farmland, and conservation. The program, administered by DOI, would award grants competitively, with priority going to proposals that tie state plans to regional strategies for managing the economy, job growth, and infrastructure development.

Cooperative Endangered Species Conservation Fund - The initiative proposes $80 million -- a $66 million increase -- for state and local land acquisition to protect threatened and endangered species. By supporting Habitat Conservation Plans and other flexible tools under the Endangered Species Act, the Fund promotes collaborative strategies that sustain both wildlife and economic development. The program is administered by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

Forest Legacy Program - To protect private forest land that provides critical wildlife habitat and is threatened by development, the initiative proposes $50 million -- an increase of more than six-fold -- for matching grants to states for the purchase of permanent conservation easements. Use of protected lands for forestry and compatible activities is permitted. The program is administered by the U.S. Forest Service (USFS), and the proposed funding would protect roughly 135,000 acres.

Urban and Community Forestry - The initiative proposes $40 million -- a 29 percent increase -- for matching grants to states and communities to establish, maintain, and expand urban and community forests and related green spaces. The program, administered by USFS, operates in partnership with 8,000 volunteer organizations in more than 10,000 communities. The proposed funding would support 75,000 projects in more than 10,000 communities.

Farmland Protection Program - To protect farmland and sustain rural economies, Lands Legacy would provide $50 million in matching grants to states, communities, tribes and land trusts for the purchase of permanent conservation easements on farmland threatened by development. The program, administered by USDA's Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) was created by the 1996 Farm Bill. Through mid-1998, $35 million in federal funding had leveraged an estimated $230 million in easements, protecting about 127,000 acres.

Smart Growth Partnership - Lands Legacy proposes a new revolving loan program to support acquisition of land and easements in rural areas. The Partnership, administered by USDA, would make loans to intermediate borrowers (state, local and tribal governments, and nonprofit corporations), which in turn would loan funds to rural businesses, land trusts and other nonprofit organizations. Proposed funding of $10 million would support $50 million in loans. Priorities are supporting "smart growth" strategies and helping owners of underproducing forest land at risk of sale improve forest productivity.

Urban Parks and Recreation Recovery - The initiative proposes $4 million in matching grants and technical assistance for the restoration of parks in economically distressed urban communities. The program, administered by the National Park Service, awarded over 1200 grants from 1978 to 1995 but has remained unfunded since 1995.

Protecting Our Oceans and Coasts

National Marine Sanctuaries - Lands Legacy proposes $29 million -- a 107 percent increase -- to strengthen protections at 12 marine sanctuaries off California, Florida, Georgia, Hawaii, Louisiana, Massachusetts, North Carolina, Texas, Washington, and American Samoa, and to plan for future marine sanctuaries. The funding will allow NOAA to accelerate the adoption and implementation of management plans for existing sanctuaries and expand outreach activities with coastal communities.

Coastal Zone Management Act Program - To help promote "smart growth" strategies along America's coasts, the initiative proposes $90 million, a 55 percent increase, to help states implement Critical Coastal Area Management and Restoration Plans. The matching grants can be used to acquire lands or to undertake other efforts to protect wildlife habitat, protect life and property from coastal hazards, and revitalize ports and urban waterfronts.

National Estuarine Research Reserves System - The initiative proposes $19 million, a 375 percent increase, to expand a network of critical estuaries representing all the biological regions along America's coasts. NOAA provides guidance and matching funds to states to acquire land, protect resources and conduct research and education. Twenty-two reserves in 19 states and territories manage about 500,000 acres. The proposed funding would double the protected acreage.

Coral Reef Restoration - Lands Legacy proposes $10.3 million -- a $10 million increase -- to protect fragile coral reefs from pollution and other human impacts. NOAA, in conjunction with DOI, would restore injured reefs in Puerto Rico, Florida, Hawaii and U.S. territories, and develop a coral nursery to grow donor material for restoration projects.

Coastal Dredge Area Restoration - The initiative proposes $10 million for NOAA to work with the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers to use material dredged from ports and shipping channels to restore coastal habitats. Dredging is critical to keep shipping lanes open and deepen channels to accommodate larger ships. Reusing dredge spoils benefits the environment and reduces disposal costs.

Fisheries Habitat Restoration - To restore declining fisheries, the initiative proposes $25 million for NOAA's National Marine Fisheries Service to acquire and protect critical habitat. Efforts would focus on Northeast and Middle Atlantic coast, the Gulf Coast, the West Coast, Alaska, and other regions that participate in the National Estuary Program or have multiple threatened or endangered species.
