PRESIDENT CLINTON AND VICE PRESIDENT GORE:
A NEW PARTNERSHIP TO RESTORE PACIFIC COASTAL SALMON

Today, President Clinton and Vice President Gore announce a new $100 million fund to help restore coastal salmon in the Pacific Northwest in a conference call with Governors John Kitzhaber of Oregon, Gary Locke of Washington and Tony Knowles of Alaska, California Secretary of Resources Mary Nichols, and Northwest Indian Fisheries Commission Chairman Billy Frank. The Pacific Coastal Salmon Recovery Fund, part of the President's fiscal year 2000 budget, will help state, local and tribal governments restore thriving runs of wild chinook, steelhead, sockeye and coho salmon.

Preserving a Rich Regional Heritage. Salmon long have been integral to the culture and economy of the Pacific Northwest. But the historic runs that once filled the region's coastal rivers have declined dramatically over the past century. Several runs already have been declared threatened or endangered, and the Department of Commerce's National Marine Fisheries Service (NMFS) will decide later this year whether to extend similar protections to several others. Federal agencies are working closely with state, local and tribal governments to rebuild these populations.

A New Partnership for Salmon Recovery. To strengthen salmon restoration efforts, the President is proposing $100 million in new assistance to state, local and tribal governments in fiscal year 2000. The funds, to be matched dollar-for-dollar by state or local contributions, can be used to:

- purchase conservation easements to protect and restore vital habitat and improve water quality in salmon-bearing rivers and streams;

- plant trees and other vegetation, rebuild culverts, stabilize stream banks and undertake other projects to restore salmon habitat and spawning grounds;

- map and assess watersheds to determine the quality and quantity of existing habitat and to help target restoration activities;

- monitor the success of restoration activities to refine future activities.

A portion of the fund, not to exceed 10 percent, will be reserved to help Tribal experts design projects, expand their field work and undertake other "capacity-building" activities. An equitable distribution of the remaining funds will be determined in consultation with the states. The fund will be administered by the Secretary of Commerce in consultation with the Pacific Salmon Task Force chaired by the Council on Environmental Quality.

Stronger Coordination and Science. To further assist state and local efforts, the Administration is committed to strengthening coordination among federal agencies, and improving access to federal scientific expertise and research to assist communities in their salmon restoration efforts.

Other Salmon Recovery Efforts. Other resources proposed in the President's fiscal year 2000 budget that will help strengthen restoration efforts include a $25 million increase for NMFS to develop salmon recovery plans, $1.7 million for the Army Corps of Engineers to begin construction of the Willamette River temperature control project in Oregon, and $12 million toward the removal of two dams on the Olympic Peninsula's Elwha River.

PRESIDENT CLINTON AND VICE PRESIDENT GORE:

Saving Social Security and Strengthening Medicare

January 27, 1999

In His State of the Union Address, President Clinton Put Forward His Framework

To Save Social Security And Strengthen Medicare. A week ago, President Clinton proposed his framework to allocate the projected budget surpluses over the next 15 years to meet America's challenges.

Save Social Security Now. The President's framework includes transferring 62 percent of the projected budget surpluses over the next 15 years -- more than $2.7 trillion -- to the Social Security system and investing a portion of the transferred surpluses in the private sector to achieve higher returns for Social Security -- just as any state or local government, or private pension

does. This will keep Social Security solvent until 2055. The President believes we must work on a bipartisan basis to make the hard-headed but sensible and achievable choices to save Social Security until at least 2075, while reducing poverty among single elderly women and eliminating the limit on what older Americans on Social Security can earn.

Letter from Social Security Actuary Shows President's Proposal Saves Social Security Until 2055. Today, a memo from Stephen Goss, Deputy Chief Actuary of the Social Security Administration, was released, and it stated that the President's "proposal would extend the estimated year in which the combined

OASDI trust funds would become exhausted by 23 years, from 2032 to 2055.

It

would reduce the size of the estimated long-range OASDI actuarial deficit by over one half, from 2.19 to 0.76 percent of taxable payroll." [Memorandum from

Stephen Goss, Deputy Chief Actuary of the Social Security Administration, January 26, 1999]

Strengthening Medicare for the 21st Century. Today, President Clinton emphasized the importance of his proposal to dedicate 15 percent of the projected budget surpluses to the Medicare program, as part of his broad framework to save Social Security and Medicare for the 21st century. These resources alone would extend the life of the Medicare Trust Fund to 2020, as confirmed by the Medicare actuary in a letter released today. However, the President stressed that the dedicated surplus dollars should be used in the context of broader Medicare reforms that modernize and improve the program.

President Clinton Emphasized That Dedicating Revenues is Essential to Preserving and Strengthening Medicare.

Letter from Medicare Actuary Shows President's Proposal Keeps Medicare Solvent

Until 2020. Today, a memo from Richard Foster, Chief Actuary of the Health Care Financing Administration (HCFA), was released, and it stated that "the assets of the HI trust fund would be depleted in calendar year 2020 under President's] proposal, as compared to 2008 under present law."

[Memorandum

from Richard Foster, Chief Actuary of the Health Care Financing Administration,

January 27, 1999]

Medicare, like Social Security, Faces Challenge of the "Senior Boom."

Medicare's enrollment is expected to double by 2030. Moreover, by 2030, the ratio of workers (who help finance Medicare through payroll taxes) to beneficiaries is expected to decline by over 40 percent.

Without New Surplus Revenue, Medicare Spending Would Have to Be Reduced Significantly. For the Hospital Insurance (HI) Trust Fund to be solvent only through 2017, it would take a 10 percent reduction in baseline spending in each year (all else held constant). For example, in 2000, this would amount to about $15 billion -- more than Medicare pays for all of home health care.

Growth Would Have to Be Slowed to below General Inflation. Even if Medicare per capita cost growth were constrained to general inflation in every year -- virtually unprecedented in health care and less than half projected private spending growth rate -- the Trust Fund would only be extended to 2016.

Experts Validate That Additional Revenues Are Critical to Preserving and Strengthening Medicare. Health economists and experts agree: not only are new revenues needed but the surplus is a good source. Experts supporting this proposal include: Robert Reischauer, Henry Aaron, Judy Feder, Marilyn Moon, and Uwe Reinhardt and other respected economists.

The President Underscored His Strong Belief That Surplus Dollars Should Be Utilized In the Context of Broader Reforms to the Program. The President emphasized that it would be ill-advised to expand Medicare in the absence of broader reforms. He stressed that the additional dedicated dollars should be used in conjunction with important reforms which would modernize the program by providing market-oriented purchasing tools, additional savings, and a long-overdue prescription drug benefit.

The President's Framework Would Also Allocate Projected Surpluses To Provide Tax Relief for Retirement Security and To Prepare America for the Challenges of the Future:

Create New Universal Savings Accounts -- USA Accounts. After we save Social Security, the President would allocate 12 percent of the projected surpluses to create new Universal Savings Accounts (USAs). USA Accounts would be a $536 billion tax cut over the next 15 years to help Americans save for their futures, providing Americans a flat tax credit to make contributions into their USA Account and additional tax credits to match a portion of an individual's savings -- with more help for lower-income workers.

Prepare America for the Challenges of the Future. And after Social Security reform is secured, the President's framework would allocate 11 percent of the projected surpluses for military readiness and other pressing domestic priorities.

TEXT:

Eli: David advises against North/South terminology.

We must work as well to meet our environmental challenges. The most profound, I believe, is global warming. 1998 was the warmest year on record -- yet more evidence that global warming is real. Thankfully, last year also produced genuine progress in addressing this grave threat. At the climate negotiations in Buenos Aires, developing countries showed new willingness to join the industrial countries in meeting this common challenge, recognizing that a sensible, market-based approach can bring them new technology and investment, and help set them on a path to clean, sustainable growth. There is growing recognition within the insurance industry that we face potentially catastrophic losses unless we act now to avert the risks of global warming. And many of our leading corporations are acting -- voluntarily pledging to significantly reduce their greenhouse emissions. British Petroleum was among the first, and just this week, chief executive John Browne announced that [newly formed] BP Amoco is extending this commitment to Amoco's production facilities as well. Yes, Sir Browne was saying, a healthy environment and a strong economy do go hand in hand.

The key is harnessing market forces -- putting the market to work to protect our environment. That is why we fought so hard to include emissions trading and other market mechanisms in the Kyoto Protocol. Our job now is to refine those mechanisms, and to continue our diplomatic efforts to achieve a truly global response what is truly a global challenge.

[This drops the following: We are stepping up our efforts as well. President Clinton and I are proposing a record $4 billion in the next budget year for research, tax incentives and other programs to reduce U.S. emissions.]

THE WHITE HOUSE

Office of the Press Secretary

For Immediate Release January 27, 1999

STATEMENT BY THE PRESIDENT

On behalf of all the people of the United States, I want to express our deepest sympathies to the people of Colombia who have lost loved ones or suffered injuries in Monday's devastating earthquake. It appears that more than 1000 people were killed and more than 3000 were injured. Entire neighborhoods lie in ruins, leaving many homeless.

I have spoken by telephone to President Pastrana and assured him that the United States will do its part to support relief and recovery. Already, a 62-member U.S. search and rescue team has arrived in Colombia, at the request of the Colombian Government, to help find and assist survivors. Today, we are making available through USAID $2 million for immediate disaster relief, including airlifts of blankets and shelter materials and other emergency needs identified by our two governments. We will deploy a new team of technical advisers to bolster Colombia's rescue efforts. And, with the strong support of the United States, the Inter-American Development Bank has already pledged $10 million for rebuilding.

We will stay in close contact with the Colombian Government to determine how else we can help. As with the response to Hurricane Mitch in Central America, I know the people of the United States will want to assist in the wake of this tragedy. I say to Colombians what I said to Central Americans: Ayudaremos a nuestros hermanos -- we will help our brothers and sisters. It is the right thing to do, and it supports our interest in a stable, democratic and prosperous hemisphere.

As I said in October when President Pastrana visited the White House, his presidency represents a new beginning for Colombia -- a new opportunity that Monday's tragedy cannot and must not undermine. We will continue to work closely with him as he leads Colombia toward a more peaceful and prosperous future.

Subject: how great to find out about greenstar!

Dear Mr. North,

I just found out about Greenstar and have perused the website [www.greenstar.org] and brochure, after seeing the paragraph on the DOE "EREN What's New Update". Sounds absolutely wonderful!

I coordinate the International work of the President's Council on Sustainable Development, a federal advisory committee created in 1993 to advise the President on how to advance sustainable development here in the US and abroad. We are convening a "National Town Meeting for a Sustainable America" (NTM) in Detroit MI and (concurrently in cities around the country) May 2-5, 1999. The goal of the NTM is to showcase examples of sustainability that are currently happening across the country (and my job is to include some examples across the globe as well) to inspire and motivate people that the vision is indeed possible.

After finding out about Greenstar, I'm writing to let you know of the Town Meeting, and to see if you would be interested in exhibiting. I think people would be interested in it, and as in the brochure, it is applicable to many areas (too many!) in the US as well.

The National Town Meeting website, as well as the PCSD website, is below, if you'd like to investigate them further. If you have any questions, please feel free to contact me.

Continued best wishes to you!

VICE PRESIDENT GORE ANNOUNCES OVER $21 MILLION IN

NEW HOME OWNERSHIP GRANTS

Also Highlights Highest Home Ownership Rate in American History,

Praises HUD Secretary Cuomo's Leadership

Washington, DC -- Vice President Gore highlighted that a record number of Americans owned their own homes in 1998 and that now is the time to take additional steps -- today the federal government will provide over $21 million in grants to 74 locally owned public/private partnerships to enable families in distressed communities across the nation become first-time homeowners.

Today, Housing and Urban Development Secretary Andrew Cuomo announced that the nation's homeownership rate hit a record high in 1998, climbing to 66.3 percent -- its highest level in the history of our country. Since President Clinton and Vice President Gore took office, more than 7 million Americans have bought a first home.

"For millions of Americans the surest sign of the American dream is homeownership. For too long, though, sky-high interest rates caused by sky-high deficits made homeownership a dream deferred," Vice President Gore said. "Today, for more Americans than ever before, the American dream of homeownership is a dream fulfilled."

"As a result of President's Clinton's policies, home ownership has been transformed from an impossible dream into a beautiful reality for millions of people," HUD Secretary Andrew Cuomo said.

To help more Americans buy homes, the Vice President announced that the Neighborhood Reinvestment Corporation, supported by President Clinton and Vice President Gore and funded by Congress, will provide more than $21 million in grants to their NeighborWorks network to help 14,000 low- and moderate-income families who have a good rent paying history become homeowners. These families are located in over 500 distressed communities across the country.

"President Clinton and I have always believed that opportunity and responsibility go hand-in-hand. That is why I am pleased that we are making the opportunity of homeownership a reality for 14,000 families who have been responsible citizens," the Vice President said. "For these families, the NeighborWorks network will be their bridge to homeownership -- helping them navigate the home buying process with homeownership counseling and financing."

Last year, President Clinton and Vice President Gore proposed a $25 million increase for the Neighborhood Reinvestment Corporation to expand their NeighborWorks Campaign for Home Ownership 2002. These increased funds -- which were approved by Congress -- are significantly leveraged by the NeighborWorks network and their private- and public-sector partners to extend the benefits of homeownership to an additional 14,000 low- and moderate-income working households who have paid their rent on time. Over the next five years, the NeighborWorks Campaign for Home Ownership 2002 will help 35,000 low- and moderate-income families achieve homeownership, will counsel 270,000 prospective home buyers, and generate $2.5 billion of investments in underserved communities.

THE WHITE HOUSE

REMARKS BY THE PRESIDENT AND VICE PRESIDENT IN
TELEPHONE CONVERSATION WITH GOVERNORS

1:12 P.M. EST

THE VICE PRESIDENT: (in progress) -- Mayor Paul Schell of Seattle, King County Executive Ron Simms, and Congressman Norm Dicks. And before I proceed with just a couple more words and present the President, we all want to express our best wishes to Mona, Governor Locke, and we're getting good reports that everything is fine, but let her know that she is in our thoughts and prayers, you and your whole family are.

GOVERNOR LOCKE: Well, thank you very much, Mr. Vice President. This is Gary Locke, and Mona is actually sitting next to me and I'll extend your warm greetings to her.

THE VICE PRESIDENT: Thank you, and give our warm greetings to Emily, also -- I know she's getting pretty excited about being a big sister.

Now, last September I had the honor of presiding over a pretty remarkable conference in Seattle. It was outdoors in a spectacular setting. And what was even more spectacular was the sense of commitment and the quality of leadership brought to the table by the public and private representatives from all throughout the region. This is such a blessing to have this kind of leadership -- including from all the local communities -- and to talk about ways to work together to restore this vital resource.

And I think everybody who attended that session was struck by the remarkable grass -roots support for this important effort and by the growing collaboration among the states, counties, cities and tribes, as well as the business and environmental community.

George Frampton, the head of the President's Council on Environmental Quality, has helped us to build upon that partnership and coordinate this proposal. And as all of you know, President Clinton and I are committed heart and soul to helping the Northwest restore its precious heritage. And the President is going to announce an important new initiative to accelerate this effort. And it's my honor to work with him and to now turn this over to President Bill Clinton.

THE PRESIDENT: Thank you very much. And I want to say to all of you on the phone and, obviously, our friends from Washington here in the Oval Office, that I am very, very grateful to all of you and to others in your states and in the tribes who have made a priority of preserving the salmon. And I'm grateful to you for making sure that, as those of us who do not hail from the Pacific Northwest understood the gravity and the urgency of the issue.

We want to help you bring the salmon back. And the Vice President and I today are announcing as a part of my fiscal year 2000 budget, a new $100 million fund to help states and tribes restore coastal salmon. The funds can be used up and down coastal rivers and streams to rebuild habitat, restore spawning grounds, give salmon a new lease on life. And if we work together, I'm sure that we can succeed in restoring this symbol of your region's heritage and ensure that for all time to come the salmon will still be thriving.

I want to thank again all of you for what you have done. We can't succeed here without your energy, your vision, your determination. And I know how passionate folks out there are about their salmon, and I'm confident we can succeed and I believe this $100 million will help.

Governor Locke, I'd like to call on you first -- and tell Mona I said hello and Hillary and I are thinking about her and you and we look forward to another beautiful baby. I'd like for you to speak and then maybe Governor Knowles, Chairman Billy Frank and Governor Kitzhaber.

GOVERNOR LOCKE: Well, thank you very much, Mr. President and Mr. Vice President. I'm actually in the hospital here with Mona and we want to thank you and Mrs. Clinton for thinking of her. The baby and she are doing great.

Mr. President, I'm just so delighted that you and the Vice President have recognized the enormity and the necessity of saving the wild salmon along the entire Pacific Northwest, from the northern shores of California to the shores of Alaska. Your proposal comes at a very critical time, as we in the state of Washington are mounting an all -out salmon recovery plan.

Your commitment, the commitment of the administration sends a very strong signal to everyone, from business to environmentalists, from agriculture to timber to fishermen -- both commercial and sports fishermen -- to tribes and non -tribes, and all levels of government, from local to the federal government, that saving the wild salmon is everyone's responsibility.

I can't thank you and the Vice President enough for committing the federal government to working with the states and the tribes on this enormous task. We have assembled a great team here in the state of Washington, involving all the different stakeholders. We can assure you that we will use these dollars in a way that's scientifically based, that will result in demonstrable improvement and recovery of our wild salmon -- the wild salmon which are the icons of the Pacific Northwest.

And I just want to thank you very much for your interest and your commitment to bring the resources of the federal government to this partnership that all of us must be engaged in.

THE PRESIDENT: Thank you very much.

Governor Knowles.

GOVERNOR KNOWLES: Thank you, Mr. President and Mr. Vice President. We are grateful to you for your commitment to Pacific salmon, as illustrated by this program that you're announcing today. You're absolutely correct, we all do have a passion for salmon here on the West Coast. Fish know no political or geographical boundaries. Alaska is blessed with salmon runs that are over 90 percent of the healthy wild stocks of all of the Pacific salmon -- they spawn in Alaska. And we have that kind of commitment.

It was three years ago that I invited Governor BOTTOM ODD MORE Kitzhaber, at that time Governor Lawrey, Ron Allen from the Indian tribes, to a meeting in Sitka and we called it the Sitka Salmon Summit. And from that we suggested the formation of a Sitka -- or of a Pacific Salmon fund.

We also committed ourselves to work together to protect habitat, to protect endangered species, to work together in a sense of unity. And we have seen the success of that unity. We also want to thank the State Department. The federal government has done a great job in taking that sense of unity to all of the negotiating tables. Jim Pipkin (phonetic) has done an excellent job and we appreciate that.

We are looking forward with programs such as this and the continued unity in working together, I think, to a real new vision of a future that, in a sense, in a different way, with the unity and sense of purpose, we will show the same undaunted courage that Lewis and Clark did in a previous century when they also saw an abundance of salmon -- we can perhaps share that same vision.

PRESIDENT CLINTON: Thank you very much.

Chairman Frank.

CHAIRMAN FRANK: Mr. President, this is Billy Frank. How are you doing?

PRESIDENT CLINTON: I'm doing fine, Billy.

CHAIRMAN FRANK: Good. And Mr. Vice President. First of all, we're glad the administration has included the tribe in your partnership, in your new salmon initiative. First of all, I'd like to take you back to the first meeting when you were putting your Cabinet together in Little Rock, Arkansas. You had an economy meeting with the tribes, Indian economy. And we appreciate that. The next, you came to the Northwest and did the forest plan, the initiative to that. And we all took part in that.

Now, we're doing a salmon initiative. You know, these are commitments that you have followed through and included the tribe. And yesterday, Governor Locke released economy contributions of Indian tribes to the economy of the state of Washington, and this tells us that we're moving in the right direction. And we support your initiative. We'd like to know if you have some suggestions on how we can support the proposal before Congress.

And as you know, last year, Congress placed a moratorium on our '93 638 contract -- that was the Senator Gorton rider -- and can you assure us that prohibitions such as last year's appropriation rider will not preclude us from accessing and utilizing these funds?

I hope we move in a very positive direction and restore our salmon, like our governors have been talking about. And certainly you and the Vice President came to the Northwest and -- we appreciate this, very much. And thank you very much, Mr. President.

THE VICE PRESIDENT: Billy, this is Vice President Al Gore. Norm Dicks is here with us, in the Oval Office, and he and Patty Murray, Senator Patty Murray, have really taken the leadership role in putting together bipartisan support in the Congress for the kind of proposal the President is announcing here today. On a private basis, there have been some encouraging comments from people in both parties in the Congress, including Senator Gorton, and I think there's every expectation that we have a much better chance this year of having real strong support. TOP EVEN

And, Congressman Dicks, do you want to make a comment on that?

REPRESENTATIVE DICKS: Billy, we will work together with you and the tribe to see if we can work with Senator Gorton to make certain that these monies are exempted from any prohibition. I'm against the prohibition itself, but you know you can count on me to work with you this year.

And I want to take just a moment here to say thank you to the President and the Vice President for their tremendous leadership because, as you well know, the salmon stocks out there are declining. We need this resource; we need to work with the Governor. But we certainly need the tribes to be actively involved and have resources to get the job done. So we'll make sure you get the money.

MR. FRANK: Thank you. Thank you very much.

THE PRESIDENT: Hope you're feeling well.

Governor Kitzhaber, can you hear us?

GOVERNOR KITZHABER: Yes, I can. Thank you, Mr. President and Mr. Vice President. We out here in Oregon sure appreciate the leadership you've shown in getting this appropriation into the budget. And as Governor Knowles said, he did bring this up -- almost three years ago, I think -- at the Sitka Summit, and we're delighted that he has a U.S. senator from his state that, hopefully, will be instrumental in helping us be successful.

Without this money, I think we can't recover the salmon and, perhaps more importantly, restoring watersheds in which they live out here. And I've had the opportunity to spend a lot of time with the Vice President and Mr. Frampton's predecessor, Katie McGinty, on developing the Oregon plan. And it's clear that, while we have a lot of resources for determining the species that are in danger and providing the listing process, we've got very few resources for actual on

-ground watershed restoration and fish recovery. So you're filling a very important gap in the state

-federal partnership. And we are very grateful, and we look forward to working with you to ensure that these monies are appropriated and get on the ground where the fish need them.

THE VICE PRESIDENT: John, I think the President's comments may have been cut off before you spoke. We all wish -- hope that you are feeling well. You sure sound great.

GOVERNOR KITZHABER: Oh, thanks very much. I'm back in the saddle.

THE VICE PRESIDENT: Great.

THE PRESIDENT: Do you -- Mr. Vice President, do you want to say anything else?

THE VICE PRESIDENT: Well, I think that we ought to point out that Ron Simms has played a very strong leadership role, and the other executives from Pierce County and Snohomish County have been a part of a regional coalition there.

And, Ron, would you like to say a word?

MR. SIMMS: Mr. President and Mr. Vice President, we are really overjoyed about the initiative that you announced today. It will move us a long way, in partnership with the state of Washington. Governor Gary Locke has been doing an exemplary job with the tri -county area, which is the economic base for the state. So this money will be very needed, very, very helpful, and will move us a long way to the recovery and conservation of the Chinook salmon and the Bow trout. So we're very, very pleased with this initiative, and want to thank you for it.

THE VICE PRESIDENT: Well, Ron, thank you for your leadership.

And, Mayor Paul Schell, you've been a tremendous leader on this, showed guts as well as vision. And this is an historic first for an urban recovery plan. And would you like to make a comment?

MAYOR SCHELL: Well, I want to join with Ron and Norm and everybody else here in thanking you for helping us with this. It's going to be a major challenge to bring everybody from the three counties, all the 36 city jurisdictions that the salmon have to go through to reach their spawning grounds. And it's going to require the best of us to find an answer. Hopefully, it's based on science and goodwill, and that we give ourselves space to build our solutions as we learn what works.

We're going to be celebrating our millennium in Seattle by opening up four urban streets. We're going to spend $5 million bringing fish back to our city and to our citizens, as a way to sort of symbolically say this is an important thing, it does affect our spirits. So we're very pleased.

THE VICE PRESIDENT: Well, thank you very much.

And I'd like to -- Mr. President, I'd like to suggest we hear a word from Secretary Mary Nichols in California. Governor Gray Davis, having just been sworn in, is already providing important and valued leadership on this issue, and we welcome any comments that you have, Mary.

SECRETARY NICHOLS: Thank you very much, Mr. Vice President, Mr. President. We just want to commend the governors to the north of us for their leadership, as well as the members and all of the city and tribal officials who have worked so hard to help put this initiative together. We have some important resources here for the salmon -- we're a part of their cycle -- and we're very much looking forward to working with the other three governors and with you to make this initiative work for the preservation of the species and for our people.

THE VICE PRESIDENT: Mr. President, before your closing comment, I want to express gratitude to the private industry leaders and the environmental group leaders, and the civic NGO group leaders, all of whom have played a key role in building the bipartisan consensus throughout the region which makes this initiative possible.

A lot of folks remember the big difference that your forest plan made when we started this administration with a region

-wide vision that people came together in support of, ending the deadlock, creating the basis for strong economic growth with environment. This is very much in that vein, and the fact that the county and city leaders, and governors, and private industry leaders are all behind this is just an historic breakthrough. None of it would have happened without your leadership, Mr. President, and I really am excited about going forward with this new proposal that you've made today.

THE PRESIDENT: Thank you very much. I know you're all busy and have many other things to do. I just want to thank you for what I said earlier. You brought this to our attention, you asked us to do something. We're committed to this, we have to pass this now. But this needs to be a long -term commitment to partnership with the federal government. And I want you to help us pass it in Congress. I want you to help us work with you to implement it. And I want you to continue to make sure that we are aware of exactly what's happening in your backyard.

I think this is very important to the future of the entire country, that we prove we can do this together. And this is something that every single one of you will always be proud of having taken a leadership role in.

Thank you very much, and good -bye.

VICE PRESIDENT GORE LAUDS U.S. SECURITIES AND EXCHANGE COMMISSION REWRITE OF FINANCIAL DISCLOSURE FORMS

Washington, DC -- Vice President Gore presented two Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) employees a Plain Language Award today for their work with financial disclosure forms -- a step that will help millions of Americans who depend on SEC regulated documents to determine where to invest their money.

The Vice President presented the awards to Nancy Smith of the SEC's Office of Investor Education and Assistance, and Brian Lane, Director of the Division of Corporation Finance for their work on the SEC's initiative to get companies to write financial disclosure documents in plain language.

"I want to congratulate Arthur Levitt, Chairman of the SEC, and the members of his staff who have been so helpful in promoting the use of plain language not only in the investment community, but throughout our government," Vice President Gore said.

In October, the SEC rule took effect, requiring companies to write the cover page, summary, and risk factors sections of prospectuses in plain language to help customers understand the companies, actions. And, to help the companies achieve that goal, the SEC has published a plain language guide which is available on the Internet at <http://www.sec.gov/news/handbook.htm>

Today,s Plain Language Award builds on President Clinton,s June 1st Executive Memorandum that directed all executive departments and agencies to make government documents clearer and more straightforward, with a goal of having all existing letters and notices written in plain language by 2002.

With regard to today's announcement, the attached page illustrates a disclosure document before and after a plain language rewrite.

Before:

Drakecorp has filed with the Internal Revenue Service a tax ruling request concerning, among other things, the tax consequences of the Distribution to the United States holders of the Drakecorp Stock. It is expected that the Distribution of Beco Common Stock to the shareholders of Drakecorp will be tax-free to such shareholders for federal income tax purposes, except to the extent that cash is received for fractional share interests.

After:

While we expect that this transaction will be tax free for U.S. shareholders at the federal level (except for any cash paid for fractional shares), we have asked the Internal Revenue Service to rule that it is.

THE WHITE HOUSE

Office of the Press Secretary

For Immediate Release

January 28, 1999

PRESS BRIEFING BY JOE LOCKHART

The Briefing Room

10:07 A.M. EST

MR. LOCKHART: Hello, everyone. I know it's just 10:00 a.m. in the morning, it's very early for this group. So we're going to try this as an experiment.

Q Except you don't know what the deal is yet. You don't know what it is, so how can you react to it?

MR. LOCKHART: I'm not going to react to it. I've got a whole briefing book, though, of other issues that you're welcome to --

Q Do you stand by what you said yesterday?

MR. LOCKHART: Absolutely. Absolutely.

Q Which part? (Laughter.)

MR. LOCKHART: I'll stipulate to my own record. Well, not all of it, but --

Q In terms of depositions? In terms of witnesses?

MR. LOCKHART: As we have said over the last several days, there are some fundamental issues of fairness about how the President and his legal team can prepare for the next phase of this process. We also understand the arithmetic of the Senate, which is 55 Republicans and 45 Democrats. So, ultimately, the Republicans can do what they feel is best, even if it's not something that is fair to the President.

Q Do you take issue with the suggestion that has been advanced that if there is a guarantee that things will move quickly to an up or down vote, the White House will not call witnesses?

MR. LOCKHART: I believe, as we've said before, that we'll make a decision on whether we need witnesses -- at the point when the managers have finished their part of the process, we'll make a decision.

Q Well, what about the discovery issue -- do you need discovery now before you start the depositions, or can you wait until later?

MR. LOCKHART: As a fundamental issue of fairness and in any other legal proceeding, we would have a time for discovery now. Again, the arithmetic of the Senate will argue otherwise, so I don't believe that the Senate is going to allow that. But we will continue to work however the system is -- if it's tilted against us, we still have to work within that system.

Q Have you not demanded discovery before the deposition?

MR. LOCKHART: The Senate is setting forth their procedures. We don't have the ability to demand what we want. We have made our views known on what we want, and I will remind you what we've argued for and what 44 senators voted for yesterday was to dismiss this case. The 44 -- more than a third of the Senate voted yesterday that despite everything that the House managers have said, and taking into account everything the House managers said, they haven't presented a case that warrants removing the President.

So from this point on, we know that a third of the Senate is not going to vote to remove the President. And what was the first thing the Republican majority did after that vote? They voted along party lines to call witnesses, to extend this process.

So America, looking in on this process, now understands that this extension and the fact that this trial continues to go on, and the fact that the Senate continues to be diverted from their business, is the responsibility of the Republican majority.

Q May I just ask you, if the Senate agrees today to the unanimous consent resolution, and I think it would not carry unless the White House -- the Democratic side had also agreed -- to a time certain for ending the trial -- February 12th is commonly talked about -- under conditions of calling these three witnesses on videotape, how would you, at the end of that process of the videotape depositions, then have the ability to assert that you had to call witnesses? You could assert it, but if the Senate has agreed to unanimous consent resolution, wouldn't that be it?

MR. LOCKHART: I think the Senate is in discussions now about how to move a process forward that is fair to all parties, including the White House. We're going to have to wait to see what that agreement is.

Q Can we not conclude that if they agree to an unanimous consent resolution it means the White House lawyers have agreed to it; otherwise there would be some loyal Democrat who would object?

MR. LOCKHART: No. You can conclude if they reach an unanimous consent agreement, that Senate Democrats and Senate Republicans have agreed.

Q And let me just finish it up. So you think Senate Democrats would not object to a resolution, even if they knew White House lawyers objected?

MR. LOCKHART: I think Senate Democrats are fully aware of our views on this subject. They are presenting their own views to Senator Lott and the Senate Republicans, and they're trying to reach an agreement. They have not reached an agreement. And I'm not sure that what you think the agreement may be is what the agreement will be at the end of the day.

Q Joe, those Senate Democrats are also making clear that the White House is saying to them, look, we won't stand in the way of this process ending; we're willing to defer our rights in the hopes that nothing comes out of these depositions. Are you saying that is not the case?

MR. LOCKHART: No, I'm not. But what I'm saying is, is I'm not going to stand here, in front of all of you, and do what they are not doing up in the Senate. They are negotiating behind closed doors. We have made our views known. I'm not going to articulate in any detail what those views are, except to say that we believe, at the end of the day, that the President has some fundamental rights, as part of his defense, and those ought to be protected.

Q Joe, how can you talk about concluding the trial when these three witnesses could say something? We haven't heard from them. They may say something that turns this around and throw new evidence in.

MR. LOCKHART: Well, that's part of the discussion that's going on up on the Hill, about what the scope of any new testimony will be, and that has to be worked out.

Q Joe, you said that a third of the Senators have made clear that they're not going to vote to remove the President. So why would you need to go to discovery or call witnesses for the White House, if it's clear that he can't possibly be convicted?

MR. LOCKHART: Well, I would then turn that question on its head, which is: Why do we possibly need to go to witnesses? Why do we possibly need to go to discovery? Why do we possibly need to delay this trial any longer? The Senate now knows that they will not remove the President, and the Republican majority has to answer to the country of why they want to continue to extend this process.

Q But the Senate has voted to go ahead and --

MR. LOCKHART: They have indeed.

Q -- and depose witnesses.

MR. LOCKHART: So we will go forward.

Q So that's reality. What I'm saying is, what are you saying about the need to depose witnesses on the part of the White House if you've already stated clearly there's not a chance in the world the President can be convicted?

MR. LOCKHART: Well, we'll continue to assert the fundamental rights of anyone in a judicial proceeding, and that includes the right to know the information that those who are trying to prosecute a case know.

Q You spoke of the Senate being diverted from its business. But isn't this a traditional time when they don't do much business, plus isn't this a very important piece of their business?

MR. LOCKHART: Well, I'll tell you -- I'm not a Senate historian so I can't really tell you whether this is a traditional time. I can tell you from looking at last year that the Senate, nor the House, could get their business done on time. They still have yet to pass a budget for last year. So I think they may need all the time they can get.

Q Joe, what's the White House reaction to the notion of a finding of fact or a bifurcated vote in which guilt or innocence would be decided?

MR. LOCKHART: I addressed this question yesterday, and I'll tell you, if you need any indication that that's a political play, just look at the fact that -- I think it was Senator Collins yesterday who went and made an impassioned plea in the gallery about how she needs more witnesses, she needs more facts in order to find the right way to the answer. She then left there and went to another press conference and said, we need this finding of facts because we know he's guilty of obstruction of justice; we know he's guilty of perjury. They want to have it both ways. They can't. The Constitution doesn't allow it.

Q Joe, you described the White House as being pretty much powerless to -- the Republicans have the vote to design the process as they see fit. When you say this finding of fact is unconstitutional, that's only if they plan to convict him as part of the trial, but they can pass a sense of the Senate resolution that the guy is guilty, that they could say it's our sense that he should be convicted.

MR. LOCKHART: They absolutely could. Outside the impeachment proceedings, they could.

Q Yes, but they could do it during the impeachment proceedings. They could do it before the up or down vote on the articles.

MR. LOCKHART: Well, I think there is --

Q And I'm just asking, what powers do you have to stop that?

MR. LOCKHART: Well, I think that -- again, I'm not an expert on how the Senate works, but constitutional issues I think are subject to the rule of the chair.

Q But why would that be a constitutional issue if they're not planning to convict him, they're just planning to pass this sense of the Senate resolution that he is guilty of these --

MR. LOCKHART: Because they're not talking about a sense of the Senate resolution here, because I don't believe under the rules that have been laid out you can do a sense of the Senate in the context of an impeachment proceeding. But what they're trying to do in a very political way is construct a procedure where they can convict the President, but not remove him. And you can put as many fancy words around that as possible, but the Constitution is clear; the Senate has one role, which is to convict and remove.

Q But, Joe, aren't they in a way just listening to what the White House argument has been? What Dale Bumpers said was that this is not proportionate. What the White House lawyers have said, look, even if he was guilty of these crimes, he ought not be thrown out of office for them. So they're essentially saying, if they were to follow this line, yes, you're right, we think he did it, but it's not deserving of him being removed from office.

MR. LOCKHART: Right, but that, under the Constitution, cannot be done in the context of an impeachment proceeding. The Senate is free to move forward with any kind of censure resolution that they see fit. The President has indicated that he is open to that. They can work out the details. But you can't -- again, I'll repeat what I said yesterday, which is the frustration here at the White House is that every time things seem to move against them, they try to change the rules.

I'll remind you that House Republicans argued as a constitutional matter that you cannot take up an issue of censure. And I don't remember a lot of Senate Republicans jumping to the White House defense at that point. Now we're in a different situation. Now they know by virtue of yesterday's vote that they don't have the votes. So they're trying to come up with some new political set of rules to get done, to somehow save face for the House managers and do something that the Constitution doesn't envisage.

Q Why does the White House believe that censure is constitutional?

MR. LOCKHART: Well, I think the Senate can do something outside the context of this impeachment trial that's going on, which is a very particular thing, which expresses the will and the views of the Senate.

Q Wait a minute. You're saying that if censure was going to be taken up, in your view it would have to be taken up after the final vote on the articles? In other words, that would end the impeachment process --

MR. LOCKHART: I think what the articles do is -- there are two articles that have come over from the House, and the Senate has a choice, which is to convict and remove, or to not convict and not remove, allow the President to remain in office. Now, there are probably motions in order for -- to add, like I know there was some discussion on Byrd's motion. But I think to try to -- I mean, you talk about legalisms here -- to try to somehow say, which is something we've been accused of -- to somehow say, well, now that we know that we can't remove him, we're going to convict him anyway by changing the rules. You know, I just don't think that that's an argument that can be sustained.

Q I just want to get clear, because you have argued pretty strongly for censure as an alternative to this process.

MR. LOCKHART: No, we argued during the House --

Q Well, no, even after it, when you stood on the lawn --

MR. LOCKHART: -- that they should be allowed to consider it.

Q When you stood on the lawn after he was impeached, he was arguing for censure as an alternative to a Senate trial. So you're saying now that you can't bring up censure until after this is dismissed --

MR. LOCKHART: Listen, I'll leave it to the parliamentarians of the world to tell you what can be ruled in and what can be ruled out of order. What I'm saying here is this finding of fact is a political effort for the Republicans, I think, to somehow save face for the House managers, to try to legitimize the process to date, and to do, in trying to convict, what they know they can't do under the rules.

Q Is the President open to signing a censure, joint resolution if Congress asks him to?

MR. LOCKHART: I don't have anything new on the censure issue.

Q What's the old? Is he open to signing it?

MR. LOCKHART: You know what the old is. I refer you to about a hundred transcripts.

Q On this vote to convict separated from the removal, I don't understand what your concern is. Are you concerned that senators might vote to convict the President, including those who would not remove him?

MR. LOCKHART: My concern is that every time we turn around, the rules get changed, and they're done in a political way. And it's time to put the politics aside and get this over with. The Senate has a constitutional duty, now, to convict and remove the President, or to move forward. They have a choice. The Republicans have made the choice that they want to keep this around for a while. We're going to be doing this for another couple of weeks. That's their choice. They need to explain why they're doing that, but they can't have it both ways.

Q But what rules have been changed? There are no rules after yesterday's vote.

MR. LOCKHART: Pardon?

Q What rules are being changed? After yesterday's vote, the road map ran out. There are no rules.

MR. LOCKHART: No, there are rules. There's still a Senate Resolution 16, which governs this process.

Q Joe, the only threat to that bifurcated --

MR. LOCKHART: I'll take another side of the room.

Q When the President gets up on the Hill this morning for the memorial service, he'll probably bump into a few of these folks. What message is he going to convey to the senators when he meets them individually, in the context of this memorial service.

MR. LOCKHART: I expect that he'll share some very valuable and treasured memories of Lawton Chiles as a governor and a close friend.

Q Well, what about privately, when he sees these folks?

MR. LOCKHART: I think that's why he's going up. I think that's what he'll discuss.

Q Joe, I know you all are outraged about unfairness, depositions. But is there not some sense of relief of having that less than two-thirds vote on the record?

MR. LOCKHART: I think it's a very important statement that the Senate made. The Senate -- well over one-third of the Senate said, even if you accept everything the House managers said and argued, that --

Q But this doesn't mean you're relieved --

MR. LOCKHART: -- that this should not go forward, that they should put an end to this. I think the burden now is on the Republican majority to articulate to their colleagues and to the American public why we're still doing this, why each --

Q Joe, Joe --

Q Is there a sense of relief in the White House at all about having that on the record?

MR. LOCKHART: Well, there is certainly -- there is no one here that was surprised by that vote.

Q Is there a sense of relief, Joe, that instead of 10 or 15 witnesses appearing live, that there will only be three witnesses videotaped and then possibly live?

MR. LOCKHART: I think there is a sense that, because the rules get made up as we go along, that the final rules haven't been set yet. So I'll withhold judgment.

Q Joe, I'm still not clear on discovery. Are you still asking for access to the House documents?

MR. LOCKHART: We still believe that before depositions go forward we should have some period of discovery to level the playing field. What I'm trying to express is we also understand the reality of the world -- we ain't going to get it.

Q Why not?

MR. LOCKHART: Because the Republicans don't want to give it to us.

Q Did they turn you down?

Q What about the House Democrats -- the Senate Democrats? Do you think that they all wanted to give that to you, they just couldn't convince the Republicans?

MR. LOCKHART: I think the reality is the people know the arithmetic; there's 55 votes. You can't get everything you want in a process where you don't have the votes.

Q The finding of fact -- it sounds like your complaint on that is a lot of the procedure and the way that the -- it's not constitutional. But in some ways the finding of fact and censure are very close to being the same thing, they just have different labels. So what is the difference fundamentally with the content of finding of fact as opposed to censure that you have a problem with?

MR. LOCKHART: I would refer you to the political wizards in the Republican Party who thought up this idea, because they seem to believe that you can convict without removal by doing this. And we're going to continue going down this path of playing politics with this. We think it's time for that to stop and get on with it.

Q Joe, for clarity, did you just say in the previous answer that the White House is asking for a period of discovery?

MR. LOCKHART: I said that we've made clear that we believe we should have discovery. I am not going to get into what case we put forward to the Senate leadership. We accept the idea that we're not going to get it.

Q But one of the reasons may be that the Democrats in the Senate agree with the Republicans on some further way to proceed in this trial by unanimous consent. So it would be both parties then, if that happens, that go forward.

MR. LOCKHART: That's correct.

Q So if you then decide not to assert some defense, it would be because both parties have made the --

MR. LOCKHART: That well could happen. We may find out this afternoon. That doesn't mean that that is something --

Q What reason did they give you for that?

MR. LOCKHART: Let me finish -- that may well be at the end of the day that they move forward, and we certainly don't expect to be given discovery before the depositions. They're talking about doing them this weekend. That doesn't mean that that's fair.

Q You're just keeping your options open, in other words?

MR. LOCKHART: Well, there is certainly a lot of discussion going on, and once it gets resolved we may have more to say.

Q -- if something new comes up from the testimony. If there is nothing new, then you wouldn't need to proceed with witnesses or discovery?

MR. LOCKHART: Well, we'll see how the Senate moves forward with this process and what the procedure will be.

Q Do I understand one thing, Joe, on the fact-finding or bifurcated vote, or whatever you want to call -- I understand your point that the goalpost keeps moving, so you can't ever figure out where you finish this process. On the other hand, is there any danger to the President from that, other than the fact that some Democrats would vote that he's guilty but not remove him?

MR. LOCKHART: Well, let me ask you this: What would happen if they changed their mind between the votes and passed a new procedure through on a 55-45 that said, if you vote to convict you do remove. What about that? That would be a danger. That would be a problem for us.

Q What about the stories that there is a split in the President's defense team?

MR. LOCKHART: I've talked to the members of the defense team. They were as bewildered as I was that the newspapers were talking about a split between them.

Q It is not true that some people want to end this quickly and others worry about the collateral business --

MR. LOCKHART: Everyone on the White House legal team and the White House political team want to end this quickly in a way that protects the President's rights.

Q Joe, where would the President be left legally if he were found guilty and not removed from office? Where would he be left legally after he leaves office?

MR. LOCKHART: That's an interesting question that you might want to put to those who might want to prosecute the President.

Q Well, where do the lawyers here --

MR. LOCKHART: I haven't asked them about that.

Q Joe, did the President have any reaction to the votes yesterday?

MR. LOCKHART: No, not that I'm aware of. I talked to a couple of his advisors who walked in and told him after the vote, and they just said that he wasn't surprised that they had followed party lines.

Q Following up on that, from the beginning you've urged bipartisanship. Given that position, did the White House welcome the votes of Senator Feingold?

MR. LOCKHART: No, I don't think we welcome a vote for someone who wants to extend the process, but we don't have any particular concern about the vote.

Q Joe, on Social Security, Chairman Greenspan again this morning condemned the President's plan to invest part of the surplus in the stock market. Any reaction from the White House?

MR. LOCKHART: Yes, I'm glad you asked the question, because I think what he spent a good bit of his time talking about was how the President's proposal to reserve the surplus and pay down the debt was a very positive step forward and fundamentally the right decision. And I think it's a very important validation of this program that the Chairman of the Fed -- now, on the issue of investing in the stock market, the Chairman's views have been known for some time. We respect his views. But we do think that we can construct this in a way that's limited, that limits the amount that goes in, and creates the kind of structure, similar to the Fed, that's independent of the White House, that allows professional money managers to do the investing, that will bring us the higher returns we think the system needs.

Q But he says that's impossible. He says it can never be insulated from political interference.

MR. LOCKHART: Well, again, we respect very much Chairman Greenspan's views. We appreciate the validation on the overall policy proposal we've made. But we will disagree on this one point.

Q Chairman Greenspan also said that merely using the surplus to try and shore up the Social Security system is not going to be enough, that the system is chronically underfunded and we've got to do something that cuts benefits or raises taxes.

MR. LOCKHART: We could not agree with him more on the fact that we need to do more. The President has made clear that he needs to work with Congress in order to reform -- in addition to reserving the surplus and paying down the debt, we need to do more to reform the system. And we look forward to having that debate with Congress.

Q How wedded are you to the idea that the government would have to invest this money in the stock market? I mean, there are other ways to invest money besides into the government that would probably satisfy Mr. Greenspan's concerns.

MR. LOCKHART: Well, the President believes that the proposal he puts forward is the best way to do this. Again, we look forward to working with Congress on implementing the policy proposals.

Q But you've also lost the support of some key congressional Democrats. Charlie Rangel doesn't like the idea any better than Bill Archer does. So how does the White House respond to the fact that some key congressional Democrats don't like the idea?

MR. LOCKHART: Well, I think -- I haven't seen all of the statements that Rangel has -- I'm not familiar with any statements he's made --

Q Most of the left wing of the party thinks that it's an equally bad --

MR. LOCKHART: Well, again, you ask me about Charlie Rangel, and I haven't seen any statements that he's made that have been critical of it. I'll be glad to review them if they are. I think the important point to remember here is many key members of Congress, on both sides of the aisle, have fundamentally endorsed this proposal to reserve the surplus for Social Security, to pay down the debt, as a fiscally responsible way to shore up Social Security. And if you go around town, there's a lot of people who, for 10, 15, 20 years have been the actual conscience of Social Security -- people like Mr. Reischauer and Henry Aaron and those -- and they all have come out and said that they believe that this is the right approach.

Now, we're going to work out the details with Congress. That's the appropriate way to do this. But I think it's important that the President has taken this step, in the State of the Union and subsequent events, and we're moving this process forward.

Q Joe, does the President believe it's time for the administration to impose an autonomy agreement vis-a-vis Kosovo, and what reason do you have to think that Milosevic might agree to an imposition of an autonomy agreement?

MR. LOCKHART: Well, we think that it's very important that we move towards an interim settlement that will end the fighting and move towards self-rule in Kosovo. And we'll continue to, on the diplomatic track, put pressure on Milosevic and the Kosovar Albanians to reach an agreement. But we will also continue, on the NATO track, to use the credible threat of force to make him comply with the agreements he made in October.

Q Do you anticipate an activation order vis-a-vis NATO?

MR. LOCKHART: Well, there's an activation order in place now for air strikes and an air campaign. And we expect, if he is unwilling to comply, that those threats may become very real.

Q Do you envision a new deadline for that?

MR. LOCKHART: Well, there's a lot of talk going on now in Europe. I think the NATO ambassadors, the permanent representatives, are meeting today. The Contact Group meets tomorrow. Secretary Albright will be in Europe later today or tomorrow. There's intense political and military, through NATO, pressure being put on the parties. We want to make it clear that President Milosevic has to come into compliance, and has to open up and allow international bodies to examine the massacre site.

Q There's evidence now that that massacre was directly ordered by Belgrade. Is there no penalty for that?

MR. LOCKHART: Well, I can't comment on the intelligence matters, or the intelligence that underpins some of those reports. But I will, again, call on President Milosevic to allow the international bodies to come in and do an independent investigation and find the truth.

Q How can you investigate it now? I mean, it's probably been whitewashed. Why would there be anything left to find at this stage?

MR. LOCKHART: Well, I think the independent bodies believe there's some value in continuing to try to gain access to the site.

Q Does the imposition of an autonomy order, Joe, imply the use of U.S. forces on the ground, as it did in Bosnia?

MR. LOCKHART: Well, Scott, I don't know what you mean by an "imposition of an autonomy order," so --

Q I'm curious, on Brazil, did President Clinton get a briefing from Secretary Rubin yesterday and, if so, what were the results of the briefing? The second thing -- steel imports are down in December 32 percent. Steel import from Japan are down 48 percent. The President has threatened trade actions if these imports weren't cut. Is that sufficient to avoid unilateral trade --

MR. LOCKHART: Let me do Brazil first. The President was briefed on the situation in Brazil yesterday by Secretary Rubin and some of his senior White House advisors. This was just the latest in a series of meetings to keep the President up to date on the latest developments in Brazil. We believe -- and the President was pleased -- that Brazil has made some progress on the fiscal package that President Cardoso put forward, but in order to move forward, they have to show us a sustained commitment to implement these reforms over time.

On steel, I understand that there are some steel numbers out, but by law I'm not allowed to comment on them until 11:00 a.m. It is not 11:00 a.m., so I will say -- this is what they told me I could say: The Department of Commerce is releasing new data on Japan's steel exports in December to the United States at 10:00 a.m., but we cannot comment on those numbers until 11:00 a.m. In general, though, data from any month, good or bad, does not make a trend. The President has made clear that if steel imports from Japan do not return to pre-crisis levels, we are prepared to act.

That is all I can say.

Q Joe, for clarity, if I may go back to this -- the United States is not considering whether to impose an autonomy agreement on Belgrade?

MR. LOCKHART: I don't know what that means, so I can't tell you whether we're considering or not.

Q We're talking about Dayton, we're talking about Bosnia, we're talking about going that route, imposing on Belgrade the autonomy of Kosovo.

MR. LOCKHART: I can't comment because I don't know what you mean.

Q Can you say whether the threat of force means only air strikes?

MR. LOCKHART: Well, the ACTORD now is only air strikes, yes.

Q Getting back to Brazil for just a second -- you said that they need to have a sustained commitment to reform, but are there any specific plans in the works to accelerate IMF disbursements, or anything like that? Because they have a crisis at the moment.

MR. LOCKHART: On specific plans I'd have to refer you to the Treasury Department.

Q Joe, on Iraq any readout on today's incident in the no-fly zone?

MR. LOCKHART: Do we have anything new?

COLONEL CROWLEY: We had one aircraft painted this morning. We also had some aircraft respond to some AAA fire.

Q Mr. Holbrooke -- is it correct that the Justice Department is about to wind up its investigation or make some arrangement with him to clear --

MR. LOCKHART: We look forward to the Justice Department winding up the review that they're doing. The President believes Ambassador Holbrooke is a diplomat of enormous talent and skill. We look forward to sending his name up to the Senate so that he can join the foreign policy team in a very important time in our country.

Q When will that be?

Q Did I understand P.J. to say that the American aircraft were fired on, not just painted by the radar?

MR. LOCKHART: There was AAA fire and one radar painting.

Q Joe, back to Latin America. Yesterday you were going to find out the response to the President's plan to expand the Caribbean Basin Initiative. Any readout on that today?

MR. LOCKHART: Yes. The President made clear in the State of the Union that a high priority for him this year is passing -- is the Caribbean Basin Initiative. There is some discussions, ongoing, whether the best place for that is in the budget or in the supplemental. Those discussions are ongoing; I'll let you know around budget time how that comes out.

Q Is he going to Athens in November?

MR. LOCKHART: I don't know. I'll find out. I'll find out.

Q Joe, why is it okay when the Democrats vote as a bloc to keep the President from being convicted, but if Republicans vote as a bloc, they're engaged in political gamesmanship?

MR. LOCKHART: I didn't accuse them of political gamesmanship on that. On the issue of the finding of fact, I think that is about politics. I didn't suggest --

Q Why couldn't it be a genuine feeling that they think the President is guilty, but, in your view, they don't think it rises to the level of removing him from office?

MR. LOCKHART: Well, I think that -- let me take them separately because I have raised the question here about, upon learning that well over a third of the Senate thought this should be dismissed, rather than moving to find a way to end this thing, they decided to move forward by calling witnesses. So that is a position that they need to defend. They need to articulate the reasons for, and try to help the American people understand why this trial will continue to go on, despite the fact that the die is cast by yesterday's vote.

As far as the second issue, I think -- at various times in this process, people have sought to, as I put it before, dumb down what we're doing; that somehow impeachment in some part of this during the House proceedings really was just a -- it was really just sort of throwing things over to the Senate for their consideration. It really wasn't that important. And then we found out when they passed impeachment that within moments Republican leaders went out and thought the President should resign, that it was so important.

I think there is some concern that games will continue to be played along those lines. And this is a pretty serious matter. I don't know that there is a senator in that body who will deal with something more serious, and it should be taken seriously.

Q Will he resign?

MR. LOCKHART: No.

Q Joe, one of your first objections at the beginning of this process was you should know the rules going into it, that there should be some understanding of how witnesses would work. And then that kind of went by the wayside, and the second major objection seemed to be if even one witness was called all bets were off, there would be a no-holds-barred effort by the White House to clear the President's name. Now that seems to have gone by the boards and the new thing seems to be, if there is a split vote, with the facts on one hand and then the removal on the other, then all bets are off. How can it be credible for the White House to make different threats time after time?

MR. LOCKHART: I don't think the issue here is credibility. We understand the arithmetic of the Senate. The Senate majority has decided to proceed along these ways. They have taken steps that we don't think are necessarily fair to the White House, but we understand they control the process and we'll move forward.

Q There is some issue of credibility because what you're saying to us publicly here is not what we're being told the that Democrats in the Senate are being told about what the White House wants.

MR. LOCKHART: Well, let me be clear what I'm telling you. What we would like in an ideal world is very different than the world of the Senate. And we understand that in order to fully prepare to go for these depositions, a period of discovery would be the most useful for the President. We understand we're not going to get that. So we're living in the real world, not in some fantasy world. And this isn't about threats or credibility. It's about trying to work within a system the best way you can in order to protect the President's rights. That's what we're doing.

Q Is it fair to characterize, Joe, that because you understand you're not going to get it, you're not going to ask for it? Is that --

MR. LOCKHART: It's fair to characterize we don't believe we're going to get it. I'm just not going to get into the discussions that our lawyers are having about this process. These are going on up on the Hill, behind closed doors. I don't think that the participants should be discussing it. I don't think I should be discussing it.

Q Surely, later today, if there is an agreement, you'll let us know how the President feels about it?

MR. LOCKHART: Surely. Don't call me Shirley.
(Laughter.)

Q Joe, did the White House send a reply to Trent Lott's letter asking the President to answer questions?

MR. LOCKHART: No.

Q No reply at all?

MR. LOCKHART: No, it didn't seek a reply.

Q Joe, is there a time period that the White House has asked for, aside from some sort of open-ended discovery? Did you ask for like a week or two weeks? Is there something that you asked for --

MR. LOCKHART: We have made our views on this well-known to the leadership of the Senate. I'm not going to get into what, in particular, those views are.

Q Did you ask for a discovery period at all before the witnesses were deposed?

MR. LOCKHART: Pardon?

Q You did ask for discovery before the witnesses were deposed?

MR. LOCKHART: Again, I'm not going to get into the details of that. We don't run around making request generally for things we know we're not going to get. We're dealing in the real world here. We're hoping that at the end of this day that we'll have a process that will protect the rights of the President.

Q Are your lawyers up on the Hill now?

MR. LOCKHART: No, they're right down here, probably watching me and cringing right now.

Q Is one of the dangers about the finding of fact that it would be used in the case against the President after he leaves office?

MR. LOCKHART: That is a possibility. But I, not being a lawyer, can't really speculate on how that could be used. can't really speculate on how that could be used.

Q Thank you.
