The following is a HEX DUMP:

CLIMATE CHANGE & LABOR

- We know you have concerns about climate change and the Kyoto Protocol.
 - Want to emphasize to you that we have a common sense approach to this issue that is balanced and measured.
 - We don't think there's any question that there is a scientific imperative to take appropriate action. People differ over the scope and urgency of the problem, but there is little doubt that the risks are serious.
 - Taking action now amounts to an insurance policy against these risks.
 - Cost of this insurance policy is reasonable. Administration's economic analysis concludes that implementing Kyoto Protocol would mean a $70-100/year increase in the average household's energy bill.
 - We think that our policy on climate change reflects the kind of balanced, moderate approach that this issue requires:
 - On both the diplomatic side, we have negotiated long and hard for various cost-saving, free market measures to be included in the treaty;
 - On the domestic side, we have promoted win-win solutions and avoided mandates and taxes.
- We appreciate that despite your concerns you've been engaging with us in a constructive way. Important that we keep the lines of communication open.
 - High-level Administration officials met w/labor leaders [at the White House] last September to discuss issues relating to labor and climate change.
 - Since then we've had a series of meetings with IBEW and AFL-CIO representatives to look at ways to improve the Administration's proposal for restructuring the electricity industry.
 - Another interagency group is looking into more general transition issues. So far they've been reviewing federal transition assistance efforts in other areas -- such as clean air laws and base closures -- to see what types of programs have been the most effective. As part of our ongoing dialogue on these issues, we have a meeting scheduled with Dave Smith [of AFL-CIO] for ____ .
 - Finally, there's an interagency group looking at ways to ensure a smooth transition for the coal industry. Administration believes coal plays an important role in the nation's energy portfolio. We have a vigorous R&D effort underway at DOE to develop next-generation, high-efficiency coal technologies. And we will continue working with both labor and industry on possible tax incentives to spur adoption of these new technologies.

TEXT:

As some of you may already know, I am leaving the federal government February 26 to work for a company called EIC in their Washington office. I will focus on developing financing mechanisms and business opportunities for clean energy and climate change projects in Eastern Europe, the former Soviet Union and other economies in transition.

I have had an exciting and fulfilling six years with the Clinton Administration and am looking forward to channeling that experience into a private sector career. I hope this new career will not take me far from the good friends and colleagues I have had the privilege to work with.

Janet Anderson will be the point of contact for industry consultations. She is now available through email (above address) and at 395-2334.

Shelley Fidler, of course, continues to honcho the federal energy effort. She is available through email (above address) and at 395-2310.

And as most of you already know, Meagan Earley is now Todd Stern's assistant.

Beginning March 22, 1999 I can be reached at:

TEXT:

Congressman Matsui (third ranking Democrat on house ways and means -- see list below) has asked for a drafting sessions with Treasury on our Climate Change tax package. The drafting should be straightforward with the exception of the auto provisions. Some critical blanks must be filled to write a credible bill. Treasury wants some guidance on how to proceed and Gerry Giardi of treasury will probably be calling you tommorw. Morley and Linda agree that this one is your call. Matsui is a friend and can help us (he introduced our bill last year) We have good support for virtually all parts of the bill eXCEPT the auto sections. I'd be disappointed if we sacrificed a good strategy for moving the entire bill becasue we haven't gotten agreement with the autos. The options are:

tell Matsui to wait while we negotiate with the autos
work with Matsui to draft all parts of the bill EXCEPT the auto provision (submit absent the auto provision?)
work out an arrangement with the autos that we will move a bill with provisions on issues like the baseline which we will agree are place holders which can be negotiated .

We probably need to work more closely with Matsui to get his advice about how the best strategy for actually moving a bill.

I want to do it. David Doniger has already told Todd all he knows and Sam Napolitano is in North Carolina.

I am trying to get the Tier 2 rule drafted and have another meeting with Carol at 4pm. Then Linda and Morley at 5 and enviros later.

I am not dodging just stuck. If Todd wants to chat with David he certainly can but it would be better if Sam and I could be there and we could do some strategic talking as well.

THE WHITE HOUSE

Office of the Press Secretary

For Immediate Release February 17, 1999

STATEMENT BY THE PRESIDENT

Senator Frank Lautenberg has been a great public servant and a principled champion of the people of New Jersey and the children of America. He has done as much as any other citizen to protect our young people from tobacco, was the author of the national law raising the drinking age, and passed legislation barring those convicted of domestic abuse from owning guns. He has led our efforts to pass a clean environment on to the next generation. With his hardheaded business sense, he has helped bring balance to the books of the federal government, working with me to craft a balanced budget that invests in the education and health care of our people. Frank Lautenberg has been tough, tireless and tremendously effective. And more than that, he has been a great friend. Hillary and I wish him the best.

Office of the Press Secretary

For Immediate
Release
February 17, 1999

PRESIDENT CLINTON DECLARES A MAJOR DISASTER EXISTS IN THE STATE OF WYOMING

The President today declared a major disaster exists in the State of Wyoming and ordered Federal aid to supplement state and local recovery efforts in the area struck by a severe winter storm on October 5-9, 1998.

The President's action makes Federal funding available to affected local governments in Niobrara County.

Federal funding is available to eligible local governments on a cost-sharing basis for the repair or replacement of public facilities damaged by the severe winter storm. Federal funding is also available on a cost share basis for hazard mitigation measures.

The Agency said that damage surveys are continuing in other areas, and additional counties may be added after the assessments are completed.

Todd-

Hope you're doing well. Would you have any interest in meeting with a deputy chief of staff to the Hungarian Prime Minister? His name is Szabolcs Kerek-Barczy (I know, a mouthful), and he is going to be in town March 1-8 on one of our fellowship programs. He is interested in learning about how the White House staff operation functions. He is an interesting fellow who even spent a year at the Kennedy School.

The two clear blocks of time he has available are Wednesday, March 3, anytime between 12 and 3, and Friday, March 5, anytime between 12 and 4. If neither of those is convenient, we could work with you to try to find a time that fits with your schedule. Let me know if this would be of interest.

Thanks.

Best,
Steve

THE WHITE HOUSE

Office of the Press Secretary

For Immediate
Release
February 17, 1999

PRESIDENT CLINTON DECLARES A MAJOR DISASTER EXISTS IN THE STATE OF WYOMING

The President today declared a major disaster exists in the State of Wyoming and ordered Federal aid to supplement state and local recovery efforts in the area struck by a severe winter storm on October 5-9, 1998.

The President's action makes Federal funding available to affected local governments in Niobrara County.

Federal funding is available to eligible local governments on a cost-sharing basis for the repair or replacement of public facilities damaged by the severe winter storm. Federal funding is also available on a cost share basis for hazard mitigation measures.

The Agency said that damage surveys are continuing in other areas, and additional counties may be added after the assessments are completed.

Congressman Matsui (third ranking Democrat on house ways and means -- see list below) has asked for a drafting sessions with Treasury on our Climate Change tax package. The drafting should be straightforward with the exception of the auto provisions. Some critical blanks must be filled to write a credible bill. Treasury wants some guidance on how to proceed and Gerry Giardi of treasury will probably be calling you tommorw. Morley and Linda agree that this one is your call. Matsui is a friend and can help us (he introduced our bill last year) We have good support for virtually all parts of the bill eXCEPT the auto sections. I'd be disappointed if we sacrificed a good strategy for moving the entire bill becasue we haven't gotten agreement with the autos. The options are:

tell Matsui to wait while we negotiate with the autos
work with Matsui to draft all parts of the bill EXCEPT the auto provision (submit absent the auto provision?)
work out an arrangement with the autos that we will move a bill with provisions on issues like the baseline which we will agree are place holders which can be negotiated .

We probably need to work more closely with Matsui to get his advice about how the best strategy for actually moving a bill.

Washington, DC 20502

Dear Mr. Vice President

I thought you might be interested in our forthcoming article "Creating A Market for Carbon Emissions - Opportunities for U.S. Farmers" which will be published by CHOICES, a unit of the American Agricultural Economics Association. That paper, along with the accompanying overheads and comments, suggest that both theoretically and practically American agriculture and forestry could meet 50% of the US requirements under the Kyoto Protocol. I will be in Washington testifying on reauthorization for CFTC legislation on Thursday and Friday (February 25-26). I know your schedule is always very tight but if you have ten minutes on Thursday morning I would be happy to share with you some new developments on greenhouse gas trading.

Warmest personal regards.

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY AND KEY WORDS

Creating a Market for Carbon Emissions: Opportunities for U.S. Farmers

Richard L. Sandor and Jerry R. Skees*

This article examines the role that U.S. farmers could play in reducing greenhouse gases – a major international objective. Using the market to trade sulfur emissions has been a large success in the U.S. Likewise, a worldwide market for carbon emissions could help reduce greenhouse gases in a more cost-effective fashion than command and control systems. U.S. farmers could be big winners from such a market as they are uniquely positioned to sequester more carbon by adopting more Best Management Practices (BMPs). Adopting more BMPs has the dual effect of cleaning the global and the local environments.

Bio of Authors

Richard L. Sandor is Chairman and Chief Executive Officer of Environmental Financial Products, L.L.C. and visiting scholar at the Kellogg Graduate School of Management Northwestern University. This firm specializes in providing consulting, financing and trading of environmental markets. Dr. Sandor is widely recognized as a founder of the interest rate derivatives markets now traded worldwide, and has designed revolutionary market mechanisms for the catastrophe insurance industry and market-based solutions to environmental problems. Dr. Sandor is known for founding the Chicago Board of Trade sulfur dioxide emission allowance market. He was also the originator and co-author of the catastrophe and crop insurance futures and options contracts. He has advised leading exchanges, governments, international agencies and corporations around the world on the design and implementation of a market for greenhouse gas emissions. Dr. Sandor currently also serves as Chairman of Hedge Financial, a unit of CNA Insurance, and is Second Vice Chairman of the Chicago Board of Trade and a member of the boards of directors for the following organizations: Central and South West Corp., a Dallas-based public utility, the Center for Sustainable Development in the Americas, and Zurich-based Sustainable Asset Management.

Jerry R. Skees is a teaching and research professor of policy and risk in the Department of Agricultural Economics, University of Kentucky. While Dr. Skees has been at the University of Kentucky since 1981, during this time he has also gained experience working in Washington D.C. and in the private sector. In 1989, Skees was the research director for the Commission to Improve the Federal Crop Insurance Program and a visiting scholar at the Economic Research Service – USDA. For the last several years, Skees has consulted with the U.S. government, the World Bank, and private firms in the capital markets. In addition to authoring numerous scholarly journal articles, Skees is co-author of the award-winning book – “Sacred Cows and Hot Potatoes: Agrarian Myths in Agricultural Policy.” He is also a recent recipient of the Outstanding Teacher award from the Southern Agricultural Economics Association.

Reducing greenhouse gases has become a major international objective. While the international community debates the Kyoto protocol, a number of countries have already announced that they will reduce greenhouse gases. The November 1998 Buenos Aires meeting on the Kyoto Protocol helped advance the trading approach as one means for reducing greenhouse gases. Since carbon dioxide is a major greenhouse gas, creating a market for carbon emissions is under consideration. Should such a market evolve, U.S. farmers could be big winners.

Even though some in the scientific community do not believe carbon emissions contribute to global warming, everyone agrees carbon emissions are increasing rapidly. Since it is possible that carbon emissions increase the likelihood of significant climate change, a market should be at the top of the list of policy options to cost-effectively manage emissions. In effect, a carbon trading system may be cheap insurance against potentially large societal problems.

Sulfur Emissions Trading Paves the Way

Emission allowance trading is a straightforward concept that is already operational on a national scale. The U.S. sulfur dioxide emissions market provides a good example. Congress placed an overall restriction on power plant emissions nationwide, effectively allowing power plants to comply by either 1) investing in cleaner fuels or pollution control technologies or 2) buying extra emissions rights from another power plant that made extraordinary emission cuts. Buying excess rights from a more efficient power plant allows the older and less efficient plant to meet its obligations at lower cost to consumers. In short, trading emissions permits allows industry to meet emissions goals in a least cost way.

Title IV of the 1990 Clean Air Act Amendments cleared the way for trading sulfur emissions among 110 power plants. During the debate on this legislation, experts estimated that these emission rights would command a very high premium. Some initial estimates ran as high as $1500 per ton. Hahn and May report several pre-1992 estimates of forecasted per ton prices for sulfur emission allowances, ranging from $309 (Resource Data International) to $981 (United Mine Workers). In 1998, the Chicago Board of Trade (CBOT) auctioned off a large number of allowances at an average price of $115. Carlson et. al. argue that many factors, in addition to trading of emissions rights, created low prices of sulfur emission allowances: improved technologies for burning low sulfur coal, improvements in electrical generating efficiency, and lower fuel costs.

Evaluations of the sulfur emissions trading program suggest that it has been a success. By 1998 actual sulfur emissions averaged 30 percent below the allowable level. There has also been steady growth in the inter-utility trading of allowances from 700,000 tons in 1995 to 2.8 million in 1997. The full effects of the trading have not been realized as the market is still adjusting to this new innovation. Carlson et. al. estimate that this innovation will save $784 million annually beginning in the year 2000. Further, they estimate the net cost of the cap and trade system is 43 percent of the estimated costs under a command and control system.

The Potential of Carbon Trades for U.S. Agriculture

If a market evolves for greenhouse gas emissions, those who are now contributing to carbon emissions may be willing to pay others to sequester carbon (remove it from the atmosphere) as a permanent offset to emissions, or as a means of buying time to invest in technologies needed to reduce emissions. When sequestering carbon costs less than reducing carbon emissions, the carbon market would provide a more efficient solution. Firms would likely use a combination of reductions in emissions and offsets with carbon trades.

A market would also motivate technological improvements to both sequester carbon and reduce emissions. For example, if prices signal farmers to sequester additional carbon, the market would respond with new technologies. Price incentives would encourage bio-engineering plants that more efficiently and effectively sequester carbon. Most soil organic carbon is in the upper meter of soil. Could plants with deeper roots sequester more carbon to deeper levels?

The agricultural sector provides a number of effective alternatives for sequestering carbon. Forests and cropland offer the most promise. A large number of solutions will be needed to offset the increase in carbon emissions, and a market offers the best way to orchestrate them. Agronomists (Lal et. al) estimate the overall potential for carbon sequestration using U.S. cropland at 120-270 million metric tons of carbon per year (MMTC/yr). Around 100 MMTC/yr would come from increased use of Best Management Practices (BMPs). The remainder comes largely from acreage conversion and bio-fuels. Worldwide carbon emissions are growing by about 3,000 MMTC/yr. The U.S. emissions target under the Kyoto protocol is roughly 600 MMTC/yr below the level projected by 2010 under current trends. Thus, U.S. cropland could be used to reduce the projected annual world increase in carbon by about 7 percent, or about 30 percent of the U.S. share under the Kyoto protocol.

Most soils have a capacity for sequestering additional carbon. Tilling the soil, however, releases carbon into the atmosphere. Lal et al. report that Corn Belt soils likely have about 61 percent of the carbon that was present in 1907. Minimum and no-till systems can sequester more carbon. In 1997, about 37 percent of the arable land in the U.S. was under conservation tillage. Lal et. al estimate that using more BMPs (primarily reduced and minimum tillage systems) could sequester 5000 MMTC in cropland soils over the next 50 years. That converts to 100 MMTC/yr via wider use of BMPs, while other options offer the possibility of up to an additional 100 MMTC/yr.

Estimates of the value of carbon emissions allowances range from $15 per ton (Council of Economic Advisers) to $348 per ton (Energy Information Administration). Based on early market signals, Environmental Financial Products is using market values between $20 and $30 per ton of carbon. Without a market to trade carbon emissions, the lower prices (and the lower mitigation cost to society) will not be possible.

Using the low-end estimates of $20 to $30 per ton, paying farmers to sequester 200 MMTC/yr could add $4 to $6 billion of gross income to the farm economy – and possibly up to 10 percent of typical net farm income. The market for carbon could be a major supplement to the Conservation Reserve Program and, if managed properly, opportunities in the international carbon market could soften farm income cycles by taking land out of crop production and putting it into conservation uses when relative prices favor carbon sequestering over food production.

BMP's increase the agronomic productivity of U.S. cropland, reduce soil erosion, and improve water quality and wildlife habitat. Thus, BMP's help both the global and local environments. The local benefits are consistent with the goals of the much discussed 'green support payments' (Lynch and Smith). However, rather than using taxpayer dollars, this green support payment could evolve in a marketplace with more diligent monitoring and enforcement. Paying farmers to sequester carbon will heighten the stakes for verification that farmers make changes in their farming practices or that they are actually sequestering more carbon.

Lal et. al. estimate the long-term nutrient value of an additional ton of soil organic carbon at $200. A ton of soil organic carbon can be added in 4-5 years. In 4-5 years the value of some of the country's most productive farmland could increase 10 to 15 percent. In summary, a carbon market could increase both income and net worth in the farming community by 10 percent or more.

Leading scientists expect that climate change brought about by increased greenhouse gases may bring more extreme droughts and floods. Thus, American farmers can not only sell a new "crop" in the international environmental service market, but also help solve, at least in a marginal way, long-term weather problems affecting farming.

Implementing a Carbon Emissions Allowance Trading Program

A number of factors must be considered when designing a market for carbon emissions. In contrast to the sulfur market, carbon emission sources are less concentrated. In addition, sulfur could be reduced only by cutting emissions. A carbon market, on the other hand, may work through both outright reductions and sequestration. Considerable care must be taken to assure that incentives do not encourage farmers or others to change the baseline used to reward additional carbon sequestered. For example, in the short run a farmer or forester could release more carbon via changed practices so that they are ready to gain more when trading begins.

Low-cost systems to measure carbon in the soils are becoming more feasible. As the market develops, new technologies should emerge to make this task economically feasible. Lal et. al have provided estimates of the existing soil organic carbon for the lower 48 states, but improved estimates are needed. The existing base of carbon needs to be mapped. Only additional tons of carbon that are added to the baseline should be eligible for the market.

While many will get bogged down worrying about monitoring how much additional carbon is sequestered on an individual field, there are more effective means for monitoring and verification. Consider the opportunity for farmer cooperatives, grain merchandizers, biotech firms, and almost any agribusiness. Any of these firms could become a wholesaler for carbon sequestering. Estimates of the amount of carbon actually in the soil on an individual parcel may be flawed. However, the error likely has typical statistical properties and conventional statistics apply – estimating many individual parcels and aggregating them into one measurement will improve the estimate considerably. The agribusiness firm would be responsible for monitoring the individual farmers, possibly with some advisory role from USDA on adoption of BMPs. Under this system farmers could be rewarded for adopting BMPs and the agribusiness firm would be rewarded based on estimates of actual carbon sequestered.

Sandor, a student of the history of markets, has been heavily involved in inventing a number of new markets. He postulates a simple seven-stage process for market development:

- (1) a structural economic change that creates a demand for new services;
- (2) the creation of uniform standards for a commodity or security;
- (3) the development of a legal instrument which provides evidence of ownership;
- (4) the development of informal spot markets (for immediate delivery) and forward markets (non-standardized agreements for future delivery) in commodities and securities where “receipts” of ownership are traded;
- (5) the emergence of securities and commodities exchanges;
- (6) the creation of organized futures markets (standardized contracts for future delivery on organized exchanges) and options markets (rights but not guarantees for future delivery) in commodities and securities; and
- (7) the proliferation of over-the-counter markets (p.2).

Based on this experience, Sandor develops recommendations for implementing an international pilot program for carbon emissions trading. An international pilot is in keeping with the Kyoto protocol which, during the first phase, puts the burden on developed economies. With trading, those in developed countries would also have the option of involving developing countries by funding low-cost emission reduction projects and by helping developing countries finance their efforts to prevent destruction of existing forests.

An effective carbon emissions market must have a clearly defined tradable commodity for greenhouse gas emissions - the standard measure to be traded must be agreed. An oversight body is needed, along with emissions baselines and clearly specified allocation and monitoring procedures. Once these standards are in place, existing exchanges and trading systems can be used to facilitate trades. Widely accepted standards will increase the credibility of the trades and help standardize the legal mechanics more quickly. All of these steps will lower the transaction costs in the new market.

With standardization and use of existing exchanges and trading systems, a carbon emissions market is very feasible. If we can trade corn on the Chicago Board of Trade, we can trade carbon. A system of quotes, hedging, and options will evolve. The market for carbon trades is, if fact, already evolving (Sandor). Niagara Mohawk (an electric power company in New York) and Arizona Public Service completed a swap of carbon offsets for sulfur dioxide emission allowances in 1996. Environmental Financial Products purchased rainforest protection carbon offsets from the Republic of Costa Rica in 1997. A subsequent 1.1 million acre program also includes assurance from the Costa Rican government that the area will be placed in a national preserve. In 1998, the Japan-based Sumitomo began converting coal-fired electric power plants in Russia to natural gas to earn carbon offsets.

The road to price discovery is being built. A market for carbon reduction services is now emerging. Carbon markets are being designed in the United Kingdom on the International Petroleum Exchange and in Australia at the Sydney Futures Exchange. Major companies such as United Technologies, British Petroleum and Royal Dutch Shell have also committed to large and early reductions in their own greenhouse gas emissions. Therefore, regardless of whether the U.S. approves the treaty, firms in other countries may soon be willing to pay American farmers to sequester carbon. U.S. action to limit net carbon emissions would help make the benefits and incentives to U.S. agriculture even greater.

Carbon trading is feasible. The prospects of a market will increase this feasibility as new investments are made in technologies and research needed to monitor and standardize carbon measurement. Active trading of carbon could prove an inexpensive insurance policy against the unknown problems that may emerge because of the rapid increase in global carbon emissions. An effective and efficient market-based solution will become even more important as governments around the world tighten restrictions on carbon emissions.

U.S. farmers are well-positioned to help in sequestering more carbon. While helping to clean up the air, the benefits to the sector could be substantial. Farm income and land values should both increase. Local soil, water, and wildlife should benefit. All the while, carbon trading could also make the sector more resilient to other forces that have persistently created cycles in farm income through a market-based CRP program.

Here is a draft. Is this what you are looking for???

Following an initial meeting with labor at end of September, we agreed to meet with them to discuss their concerns about the effect of our electricity restructuring proposal on labor and to look into transition issues generally. Our attention has been most closely focused on the effects of electricity restructuring, as we are submitting comprehensive legislation to Congress shortly; therefore, electricity restructuring will affect labor much sooner than other climate change initiatives.

An interagency group met internally to consider how to address the effect of electricity restructuring on labor. Subsequently, representatives of that interagency group have met with labor representatives from the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers on five occasions, including one meeting which was also attended by representatives of the AFL-CIO. The labor representatives sought a generous package, including substantial money for worker retraining, federal prohibitions requiring news owners of power plants to retain all staff for three years, and federal standards related to employment and skill levels at various utilities and their facilities. Such a program is beyond the scope of what we can do for labor. (Moreover, at the start of the meeting attended by the AFL-CIO, a labor representative opened the meeting by noting that even if we included all of their recommendations in the bill, they still would not support the bill.) The group reviewing our bill, however, is considering a training program, the development of model standards for reliability and safety, and requiring states to consider the effect of restructuring on workers when they consider the treatment of stranded costs.

As we progress toward a conclusion of our interagency review of the electricity restructuring bill, we are shifting our focus to other issues. Regarding transition, we have an interagency group that, initially, conducted a review of transition assistance efforts in other areas as a backdrop to considering what might be appropriate for climate change. In particular, they are examining what types of programs have been most effective so that our funds will be spent as cost-effectively as possible. We have a meeting scheduled with Dave Smith for _____. [Date to filled in later today, I expect. Dave Smith's assistant is still not at work, but is due in at 11:00 am today.]

THE WHITE HOUSE

Office of the Press Secretary

For Immediate
Release
February 17, 1999

PRESIDENT CLINTON DECLARES A MAJOR DISASTER EXISTS IN THE STATE OF WYOMING

The President today declared a major disaster exists in the State of Wyoming and ordered Federal aid to supplement state and local recovery efforts in the area struck by a severe winter storm on October 5-9, 1998.

The President's action makes Federal funding available to affected local governments in Niobrara County.

Federal funding is available to eligible local governments on a cost-sharing basis for the repair or replacement of public facilities damaged by the severe winter storm. Federal funding is also available on a cost share basis for hazard mitigation measures.

The Agency said that damage surveys are continuing in other areas, and additional counties may be added after the assessments are completed.

AFBF: Climate treaty to cut farm income 50 percent

A new study says farmers and ranchers would see their income slashed

by as much as 50 percent if global warming guidelines approved by the U.

S. are fully implemented.

The study, conducted by the agricultural consulting firm Sparks Companies, Inc., at the request of the American Farm Bureau Federation and other farm interests, shows that agricultural production costs could increase by $16.2 billion or 8.8 percent.

The study is based on the final Kyoto Treaty that the Clinton administration signed in November 1998.

The treaty would force U.S. farmers to compete with more than 100 countries, such as China and Brazil, that don't have to comply with the treaty and its emission constraints.

AFBF president Dean Kleckner says the treaty would be a ``financial last straw for many family farmers."

The following is a HEX DUMP:

- AFL-CIO has expressed concern that the Administration's analysis rests on "rosy assumptions" such as securing binding targets for developing countries and implementing a perfectly efficient international emissions trading system.
- The United Mine Workers commissioned a study to assess Kyoto, and found that:
 - gasoline prices would increase about 20%
 - electricity prices would increase by nearly 40%
 - GDP would be 1.1% lower in 2010
 - national losses of 0.7 million jobs annually between 2001 and 2012
 - coal mining employment would be 36% lower in 2010 than projected
- The UMW study does not accurately reflect the cost-savings available from the Kyoto Protocol's flexibility mechanisms: exploiting the full potential of international emissions trading, carbon sinks, and trading across greenhouse gases would all lower the costs of meeting Kyoto. The UMW study ignores the Administration's efforts that can lower costs: the electricity restructuring proposal, the Climate Change Technology Initiative, and support for voluntary reductions by industry, including credit for early action.
- In a November 1998 meeting, AFL-CIO requested that Dr. Yellen undertake more analysis of Kyoto, specifically to describe sectoral and regional economic effects, as well as employment and distributional consequences. AFL-CIO also asked that the Administration assess various schemes of allocating emissions permits, and consider how revenues from auctioning permits could fund worker/community transition programs.

THE WHITE HOUSE

Office of the Press Secretary

For Immediate Release February 17, 1999

STATEMENT BY THE PRESIDENT

Senator Frank Lautenberg has been a great public servant and a principled champion of the people of New Jersey and the children of America. He has done as much as any other citizen to protect our young people from tobacco, was the author of the national law raising the drinking age, and passed legislation barring those convicted of domestic abuse from owning guns. He has led our efforts to pass a clean environment on to the next generation. With his hardheaded business sense, he has helped bring balance to the books of the federal government, working with me to craft a balanced budget that invests in the education and health care of our people. Frank Lautenberg has been tough, tireless and tremendously effective. And more than that, he has been a great friend. Hillary and I wish him the best.
