William D. Ford Federal Direct Loan Program

What is the new direct loan program? Under the William D. Ford Federal Direct Loan Program, students borrow money for college and other postsecondary education directly from the federal government through their schools, bypassing the banks, guaranty agencies and secondary markets that trade in student loans. By cutting out the middlemen, direct lending — which was proposed by President Clinton and enacted into law in 1993 — saves the taxpayers money and makes borrowing simpler, faster, and more flexible for students and schools.

In the first year, 104 public and private colleges, universities, and trade schools participated. Now more than 1400 schools offer direct loans.

For students, borrowing is easier and faster. Since students get their loans directly through their college, aid is posted to their accounts faster, in days rather than weeks. Students can also tailor repayment plans to match their ability to pay.

For schools, processing is easier, service to students is improved. Schools don't have to wait for or process checks from multiple lenders. Funds transfer electronically from a single source, the federal government, which means less processing time at the school, so there's more time for helping students, and better cash flow.

Taxpayers save money. By eliminating unnecessary fees to banks and others in the guaranteed loan program, direct lending would save taxpayers an estimated $6.8 billion by the year 2000. (The law limited direct loans to five percent of loan volume in the program's first year, 1994-95, increasing to 60 percent plus demand by 1998.) The Clinton Administration would increase those savings by accelerating direct lending to 100 percent by 1997-1998. Under that plan, savings would increase to $12 billion.

Independent evaluations confirm direct lending's benefits. Three separate independent surveys of the first-year direct loan schools found consistently that they are very satisfied. Surveys were conducted by Education Daily, a trade publication; the American Association of Community College Trustees; and an independent evaluation conducted by Macro International, Inc.

In addition, direct loans received the first clean audit ever for a federal student aid program. The accompanying report called it "more efficient, less costly and more customer-friendly."

Here's what schools have to say about direct lending:

"It is rare that the federal government creates a program that both saves money and improves service to its constituents. Direct lending is such a program..."

— Jerome Supple, president
Southwest Texas State University

"Our purpose is to provide the best service possible and to deliver financial aid in a timely manner. Direct loans put the students back where they belong — at the center of this business."

— Carolyn Sabatino, financial aid director
Ohio University

"The FFEL programs on our campus were broken beyond repair. The direct loan process is easier for students and staff to understand, delivery is faster and much more efficient, and problem resolution is much, much easier."

— Karen Fooks, financial aid director
University of Florida

Here's what students and parents have to say:

"Getting a student loan was easier than I ever imagined. I didn't have to shop around to find a lender and wait for all the paperwork to be processed. It was a tremendous relief."

— Jennifer Phillips, graduate
Harvard University

"The old (guaranteed) loan program was a real headache and took a lot of time and effort to straighten out — there was so much paperwork and so many agencies involved. This year the (direct loan) process was so much better. I filled out one form, sent it to the school, and the money was immediately credited to my son's account."

— Steve Merlin, parent
of an American University student

Newspapers endorse direct lending:

(The savings from direct loans are) "a good deal for the schools and a good deal for the taxpayers. The program should continue on schedule."

— Chicago Sun-Times,
March 29, 1995

"Many graduates who have preferred lower-paying public service jobs.. gave up those career choices because of debt pressure. the income-contingent repayment plan will enable them to take jobs they believe they will find most fulfilling."

— San Francisco Chronicle
December 27, 1994

"Bringing the banks back in, as some Republican decision-makers want to do, isn't justified. It would be good for banks, but it's not clear that it would benefit anyone else."

— Buffalo News
February 19, 1995

"The federal government is expanding its presence in the student loan business, a move taxpayers everywhere should cheer...In effect, the government has been subsidizing banks who make the loans to students, covering any losses while the banks earn the profit. That's not smart government. If the federal government is taking the risk, it should make the profit. President Clinton has threatened to block any attempt to end the direct lending program."

— Sunday Gazette Mail, Charleston, S.C.
February 26, 1995

Judy Reinking, D.P.M.

Dr. Judy Reinking remembers growing up in her grandmother's home where it was a struggle just to keep the bills paid, and presents at Christmas time came from the local Jaycees. In high school, Judy became involved in the Upward Bound Program at Iowa Lakes Community College in Emmetsburg, Iowa, and never realized the difference that it would make in her life. Growing up in a poverty-level home made college completely out of the question. It was thanks to Upward Bound that I even made it to college. The Upward Bound staff showed me a way to make furthering my education possible.

Judy pursued an accounting degree when she enrolled at Iowa Lakes Community College, but her first job was in social work. She later switched to a hospital business office where she discovered her interest in podiatry and decided to return to school. After four years of medical school, she obtained her degree as a Doctor of Podiatric Medicine from the University of Osteopathic Medicine and Health Services in Des Moines, Iowa.

She is now a podiatrist and the proprietor of the Family Foot Care Center in Algona, Iowa. "Dr. Judy," affectionately named by the students with whom she works, is also back with the Upward Bound Program at Iowa Lakes working as a tutor in her fourth consecutive year. "The theory of Upward Bound is an excellent one, and I'm one of those people that if I see someone who needs help, I'm going to be there. I like to see that light bulb come on when the kids actually grasp new concepts." Her hard work and commitment to the program were recognized when she was inducted in the Iowa Lakes Upward Bound Hall of Fame.

Gwendolyn Tyre

Gwendolyn Tyre came to Choice Thru Education's Upward Bound Program hoping to overcome the socio-economic barriers of limited financial resources and a family background which did not include higher education. Gwen's academic abilities made it possible for her to enroll in Smith College where she graduated cum laude with a degree in Afro-American Studies and Psychology. Her course work made her eligible for a secondary education teaching certificate in social studies, which she used to return to Choice Thru Education as a staff member. After several years of working with the program, Gwen entered the Northeastern School of Law; she is presently an Assistant United States Attorney for the Department of Justice in Boston, Massachusetts.

On top of managing a demanding career, Gwen still takes time to help improve the educational opportunities available to the youth of Chelsea, Massachusetts. In July, 1992, she was a guest speaker at Choice Thru Education event where she captivated an audience of about seventy-five youths, serving as an inspirational role model and emphasizing education as the key to their futures. She also serves as Chair of the Chelsea Executive Advisory Committee, a broad-based group established to advise Boston University in its role of managing the Chelsea Public Schools. Reflecting on the impact of her experience with Upward Bound, Gwen says, "The Upward Bound program truly broadened my horizons. It gave me the self-confidence to convert my desires into accomplishments. When distracted, it made me focus, so as to keep my eyes on the prize."

GENERAL SERVICES ADMINISTRATION

Patty Wells

Patty Wells entered the University of South Dakota in 1981 as a divorced, thirty-year old mother of eight, and a high school drop-out. Upon a friend's recommendation, she connected with Special Services (Student Support Services), where she was advised and counseled about classes, instructors and career interests.

As a result, Patty was challenged to maximize her years as an undergraduate student, and she served as President of the Tiospaye Council (USD's Indian student organization) from 1982-84. She remembers, "The Special Services program was always there to support student initiative and leadership." She also served on several university committees that provided selective services for the recruitment and retention of Native Americans. She graduated in December, 1986, with a Bachelor's degree in English and Speech.

Patty's involvement with TRIO continued after graduation. She was hired as a Special Services Tutor and Advisor during the academic year and as a teacher in the Upward Bound summer program. She also served as the South Dakota ASPIRE Secretary/Treasurer in 1986-87.

Patty is now working with the USD School of Medicine where she currently serves as Assistant Director of INMED, the Indians Into Medicine program. She is currently pursuing a Master's in Administrative Studies and continues to be active in issues of cultural diversity, human rights, health, education, and the Lakota culture.

Jovita Lopez

After leaving a dysfunctional marriage of fifteen years, Jovita Lopez, mother of two, entered Skagit Valley College and the Student Support Services Program in the fall of 1986. Her self-esteem had vanished and her goals for the future were simply ones of survival. As a result of the Student Support Services Program, she has now attended three institutions of higher education and has been honored by each for her outstanding scholarship. Reflecting on the past eight years, Jovita says, "What Student Support Services did for me was a miracle. The program helped me transform my life from one desolate of choices to a life rich in possibilities. I am no longer a scared, timid woman, but one in love with life and humanity."

In June of 1988, Jovita graduated from Skagit Valley College with an Associate in Arts Honors degree and earned the Women's Advisory Leadership Award. At Western Washington University she earned her Bachelor of Arts in English in June of 1990 where she received the Minority Achievement Merit Award twice. Following graduation, she was offered a grant by the Skagit Valley College to attend graduate school at the University of Washington with the agreement that she would return to teach at SVC upon completing her studies. At the University of Washington, she earned her Master of Librarianship degree in June of 1992. She is now working at SVC as an English writing Instructor and a reference librarian.

In addition to her educational accomplishments, Jovita has remained an active part of her community in the Girl Scouts of America as well as offering her time as a mentor for displaced homemakers and a volunteer for United Way and the American Red Cross.

WASHINGTON, DC — Up to six million financial aid recipients may not be able to return to classes this fall if Congress passes current proposals to cut financial aid. To receive intense training on federal financial aid funding and to lobby Congress, hundreds of student leaders from around the country will travel to Washington, DC to attend the United States Student Association's (USSA) Education for the Nation: Building A Better Tomorrow Conference, Friday, March 17 through Monday, March 20 at the Quality Inn on Capital Hill, 415 New Jersey Ave., NW.

Congress is currently deliberating a rescission package that contains over $1.7 billion in cuts to federal financial aid that would take effect this fall. In addition, the GOP Contract with America outlines the elimination of education programs, including all campus based aid programs and the Stafford Loan Interest Subsidy.

"Eliminating financial aid programs under the auspices of deficit reduction is reckless and may deny millions of people access to a post secondary education," said Stephanie Arellano, USSA president. "Tax dollars appropriated for student aid programs is money well-spent. Students are coming here to tell Congress to preserve financial aid."

USSA is the country's oldest and largest national student organization, representing millions of students across the country. Founded in 1947, USSA is the only national student organization in Washington, DC and is the student voice on Capitol Hill, in the White House, and in the Department of Education. USSA advocates for student interests by tracking and lobbying on federal legislation and policy and by voicing student concerns on issues affecting access to education.

Direct-loan program has won over OU

By Alan D. Miller

Dispatch Higher Education Reporter

They measure success in silence.

A year ago this week, officials in the Ohio University financial aid office surveyed a lobby packed with frustrated and angry students, each wondering whether a federal student-loan check had arrived.

This year the office is empty. Even the telephone is quiet.

The silence came when the university joined 103 other colleges nationwide in the pilot federal direct-lending program, which allows students to receive guaranteed loans directly from the government.

About 1,400 other colleges — including Ohio State University and 47 other Ohio colleges — are joining the program this year. Instead of going through a bank, students make loan applications at their colleges and receive money directly from the government.

Last year alone students attending Ohio colleges borrowed nearly half a billion dollars in federally subsidized loans.

But the future for such loans and the direct-loan program is uncertain.

The direct-loan program, as well as most financial aid programs, is threatened by several proposals in Congress, said Carolyn Sabatino, OU financial aid director.

So as much as she enjoys the silence, Sabatino hopes students will generate some noise again — as long as they direct it toward Washington.

"If students make their voices heard, I think we will be successful in keeping the program," Sabatino said. "And students are protesting. After the '80s, we went into a slump for student activism, but I think we are seeing a new level of activity on campus."

Two proposals would cap the direct-loan program so that no more than 40 percent of the nation's colleges could enroll. Another would kill the program. Banks and other middlemen who have traditionally handled student loans — and who stand to lose millions of dollars in profits — have waged a strong lobbying effort against direct loans.

They argue that the program, after one year in operation, is not fully tested and could end up costing students and taxpayers more than the old system. Through lobbying organizations such as the Coalition for Student Loan Reform, they say the program will bloat the U.S. Education Department and the national debt.

Critics also say that because the new system allows for a 25-year repayment period rather than the current 10-year limit — a move made to lower monthly payments — students could end up paying far more to borrow money.

"The issue in Washington is that middlemen are putting the squeeze on Congress," Sabatino said. "I don't want to get into political issues, but this isn't about whether the program works or doesn't work. Direct loans save taxpayers money because we eliminate middlemen. Why would you want to cut a cost-cutting program when you're trying to cut the budget?"

The program works like this, Sabatino said: A student applying to college fills out one application for financial aid, and that also serves as a loan application. If approved, a loan is deposited electronically in a student's name in an account at the college, reducing processing time, and eliminating paperwork and checks.

The old system required the 8,000 OU students who received loans to go to a bank and fill out separate paperwork for a loan. They were then required to go to the financial aid office and stand in long lines to endorse checks each quarter. Checks didn't always arrive on time, and in those cases students either could not attend until the check arrived or they were forced to take out bridge loans.

Under the old system, this would have taken the week to do those things. Some students would have been in the financial aid office last week — spring break week — fretting over their loan checks.

"Am I lonely?" asked Sabatino. "It's wonderful. We now control the work flow instead of the work controlling us."

At OSU, notorious in the past for long lines, financial aid officials are looking forward to some of that quiet.

"I hope this means no more lines," said Michele Nemes Meeker, OSU assistant director of financial aid. "I can't see any negatives. There were a lot of start-up costs in systems development, but we are saving other kinds of costs."

"I am confident it will be one of the best things we've ever done for our students."

Family of Five Right at Home At Gallaudet

Mom, Children Learn, Live at College for Deaf

By Valerie Strauss
Washington Post Staff Writer

When friends ask Gallaudet University student Jon Kovacs where he goes home for vacation, he answers, "Gallaudet University."

When his sister, Dyan, fills out medical forms, she writes "Gallaudet" for both her college and home addresses.

To both Jon and Dyan, Gallaudet is their college residence as well as their family home because their two brothers—and their mother—attend the country's only four-year university for the deaf along with them.

"This is my home," Jon, who is graduating today, said through an interpreter. "When people ask where my home is, I tell them I live here with my mom."

Though numerous siblings and even mother-and-child teams have gone to Gallaudet simultaneously, the Kovacses are the only family whose members are known to have attended the 131-year-old school at the same time, school officials said.

Beyond being a statistic, the officials said, the Kovacses' presence together except on weekends, because each member is too busy.

Dyan, for example, was named Athlete of the Year at Gallaudet University this year. She is an avid volleyball player who is looking forward to participating in the World Games for the Deaf in 1997, and she has been a star on the basketball court as well.

Meanwhile, Jon, who has appeared in television shows, including "Family Tree," "General Hospital" and "Airwolf," just wrote a play being produced at Gallaudet and is planning to start a nationwide newspaper for the deaf. He also dabbles in politics and just completed a term as student body president.

When other students go away for summer vacation, all five Kovacses stay at Gallaudet, sometimes taking classes, sometimes working. Sue, for example, works as a residential assistant during the summer.

"Sometimes during vacation, I'll go see my dad in Michigan, but then I come back. It's my home," Jon said. "When people say, 'Where is your home?' I tell them 'Gallaudet,' and then they say, 'Seriously now,' and I say, 'Seriously, Gallaudet.'"

Though all four Kovacs children were born deaf to deaf parents, about 90 percent of deaf children in the United States are born to hearing parents—and the socialization that occurs often is very different.

Sue's sister is deaf but has four hearing children, and Jon has a 1-year-old son who can hear. "I tell people my son is deaf but he happens to hear," Jon said. "What that means is that he can hear, but he can jump into the deaf culture."

Being surrounded by deaf culture is of prime importance to the Kovacses and to many other students at Gallaudet, who reject efforts by some people to try to give the deaf the same kind of experiences that hearing people have.

"People think we want the same kinds of experiences as the hearing, the same perspective," Jon said. "But we're not [at Gallaudet] to get a hearing person's perspective. We need what we need and want what we want."

Imbuing deaf children with deaf culture is so important to Sue that she is studying at Gallaudet to learn to teach American Sign Language and deaf culture to the hearing.

"Deaf children in a hearing world have no identity until they accept deaf culture," Sue said. "When I was young, we had almost nothing to help us, no interpreters, nothing. My self-esteem grew when I got into college for the first time, but then I had to leave. Now, it is wonderful to be here again, with my family around me. So much has changed. We think anything is possible."

Students decry proposed aid cuts, form group to fight Gingrich plan

By Edward Colimore
INQUIRER STAFF WRITER

CAMDEN — Student leaders at the Rutgers University campus here said yesterday they don't want Congress to make any "Newt" changes in their federal financial aid programs.

At a news conference in front of the university's financial aid building, they condemned aid cuts proposed this month by Republican House Speaker Newt Gingrich, as part the 104th Congress' budget deliberations.

The students also announced formation of the Coalition to Save Student Aid, a group of student governments, administrators and other student organizations that are urging the New Jersey congressional delegation to block any federal aid reductions.

Student leaders will meet with university officials tomorrow to discuss the proposals — and ways of opposing them.

"We're encouraging students to call their local representatives in the congress, to help further the cause," said Louis Rivera, president of Student Governing Association at Rutgers' Camden College of Arts and Sciences. "We can't let Newt Gingrich get away with this. ... Students will not allow this to happen."

Erika Schneeman, a student who serves as chairwoman of the campus chapter of the New Jersey Public Interest Research Group, said Congress was poised to vote on "drastic proposals that sacrifice affordable higher education on the altar of political gain."

"Programs that provide aid and employment to needy students, help graduates pay off their loans, and streamline red tape and needless bureaucracy are all on the chopping block," she said.

In an interview at his office, Richard Woodland, director of financial aid at the Rutgers campus in Camden, said students' most pressing concern was the possible elimination of the so-called in-school interest subsidy. The federal government now pays the interest on student loans while the students are in school. They take over interest payments when they finish their studies.

That would change under Gingrich's plan. The proposal would eliminate the interest subsidy and force students to pay it while still in school.

"The effect of that is to create a spiraling debt," said Woodland. "When students leave, they'll significantly increase their student-loan debt."

Woodland said another proposal favored by Gingrich would eliminate Rutgers' direct lending program. Students now apply for federal loans directly through the university because of Clinton administration reforms that affect 104 schools including Rutgers.

Students formerly obtained loan applications at banks or other financial institutions and had them processed by the college. The loans were guaranteed by a state agency.

"Gingrich wants to go back to the bank process," said Woodland. "He says that whatever federal government does, it does badly."

Woodland said Gingrich also would like to cut off funding to a work-study program that provides campus employment for hundreds of Rutgers students. "We're very concerned about the proposals in Congress," he added.

At the students' news conference, Rivera said education should be Congress' number-one priority.

"In today's global economy an affordable education is essential for a competitive workforce and a healthy society," he said. "Education for the privileged few would have a devastating effect on our economy, not to mention our quality of life."

"Without student aid programs, students will be forced to drop out of college, and with the prospect of years and years of debts to pay, many will be deterred from going at all."

Another student, Shelley Marino, coordinator of student volunteer services, said the federal cuts would widen the gap between rich and poor by limiting educational opportunities.

"You're sending a clear-cut message to the American public that education is a privilege and not a right in this country," said Marino, a single mother with two children and two jobs. "You're sending it to us, our peers and future generations."

UPDATE ON "BACK TO SCHOOL WEEK" ACTIVITIES AS OF SEPTEMBER 7, 1995

The following status report provides our best current understanding of "Back to School" activities for September 6 through 15. At this point, plans fall into five areas: (1) Presidential events, (2) other events involving administration officials, (3) media activities, and (4) other organized events not sponsored by the administration around the country.

(1) Presidential Activities

Monday September 11 -- Presidential address at Southern Illinois University at Carbondale. The audience for this event will be students from Carbondale as well as students from surrounding schools. Before the event the President will hold a roundtable discussion open to pool coverage with students from the different schools to discuss the impact of proposed budget cuts on their education.

Monday - VP addresses students in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania & discusses impact of proposed budget cuts on their education.

Tuesday September 12 -- The President will participate in a conference call with Superintendents from 6-8 key districts around the country to discuss the impact of budget cuts on their school systems.

Wednesday September 13 -- The President will go to Mayfield Woods Middle School where he will launch the National Family Partnership's annual Red Ribbon campaign. The event will permit the President to make a strong statement on drugs and youth and to mark the one year anniversary of the Crime Bill signing.

The Committee on Education Funding's Tenth Annual Education Awards Dinner -- This dinner will be held on Monday, September 18, and the President will do a video address to the 600 attendees. Secretary Riley will be attending the event, in which the President will be given an award for his leadership on education investment. Awards will also go to Senators Kennedy, Hatfield, Jeffords, Snowe, Frist, and Representatives Obey and Rivers. The CEF represents 90 of the largest education groups in the country.

(2) Cabinet and Subcabinet Activity

Cabinet and Subcabinet Travel -- 47 Administration officials will be participating in over 50 events around the country in the coming week. Some of these coincide with the President's Monday address, others will be held at other times during the week. Cabinet Affairs will be producing a map and detailed list of these events.

Media -- The Departments of Education and Labor are doing extensive media during the week. Secretary Riley will be on Good Morning America on Monday, Fox Morning News on 9/6, CSPAN on 9/7 and CBS Radio News on 9/7. Secretary Riley will also appear on the CNN Newsroom Worldview Program, which will be broadcast to 30,000 schools nationwide. The administration officials doing regional events will also do regional media.

(3) Media Activities

20 Chief of Staff Letter -- A letter from the Chief of Staff was sent to a lengthy list of editorial boards and papers last week along with an "Education Alert" summarizing the differences between the Republican budget and the President's proposals. Both documents are attached.

1) Presidential Op-Ed -- An op-ed from the President will be sent out on Thursday, September 7 to 1750 college and university newspapers. The goal is for the piece to run in conjunction with coverage of the Illinois speech. We will also pitch it for USA Today on Monday.

1) Other Presidential Media -- There is a request in for the President to do a conference call with the St. Louis Post-Dispatch and the Southern Illinoisan to preview the Monday speech.

1) School-Specific Impacts -- The administration will release information on the impact of the Republican budget on student loans and Pell grants at 100 schools in targeted districts later this week. This information will be shared with both school and regional media.

(4) Other Events

- . Campus Rallies -- We currently have confirmation of 55 events being planned at colleges and universities around the country to mark "Save Student Aid Week." Many of these are being organized around the satellite link up of the President's speech. The list is growing daily as organizations around the country provide us with better information.
- . National Bake Sale -- The Committee for Education Funding (CEF) and the Education First Alliance are organizing most of their activities during the week of the 11th around a "National Bake Sale." Their focus is on the cuts in elementary and secondary education. They plan a large event on Capitol Hill on Wednesday September 13, and they anticipate many events around the country as well. Educators will hand deliver a "$1000 Cookie" to each Congressional office with the message that they would only have to sell 4.5 million of these to make up the difference of the proposed education cuts. As of now, we have no confirmed list or count of such events.
- . Volunteer Action Kit -- The CEF has also developed and disseminated a volunteer action kit entitled "Education Cuts Never Heal" to its member organizations for their use with their own memberships. These 100 member organizations have a potential audience of over 10 million people. The kit includes: a list of activities for local organizers; tips on meeting with Members of Congress; and media suggestions including sample op-eds.
- . National Education Call-in Day -- CEF is also sponsoring a National Education Call in Day on September 14, where constituents are urged to call their member of Congress and ask them to oppose the education cuts.
- . Celebrity Involvement -- The Department of Education's Back to School week activities including the possibility of a number of celebrities such as Bill Gates, Peter Max, Jesse Jackson and Jim Lovell who will be going "virtual" back-to-school on-line in schools around the country.
- . The American Federation of Teachers -- has sent organizing packets to all affiliates that include Shanker's NY Times columns on the budget and sample letters and op-eds.
- . The National School Boards Association (NSBA) -- has just published a booklet highlighting the real-life impact of federally funded programs entitled "Children Succeed: Federal Education Investment at Work," and is working with other education groups to conduct town meetings on the subject.
- . The Council of Great City Schools -- is working on an event with the Postal Service and the White House to deliver a letter from the President via a mock "Pony Express" to the national superintendent's conference in Oklahoma City. The event is expected to get a good deal of national and regional attention. The Council has also just completed a "Spotlight on Education" ten minute spot that will be carried by at least 300 PBS markets over the next three months delivering a positive message on urban schools and investments.

Local Rallies -- Various groups of School district superintendents, mayors, and school board members are planning rallies to protest House education cuts around the country. What we know for sure so far: On September 7, the Mayor and School Superintendent of New Orleans are holding a rally with over 1000 people to demonstrate against the cuts and demand that House Appropriations Chairman Livingston (whose district includes a part of New Orleans) restore the cuts he made earlier this summer in the House Appropriations Bill.

The Alliance to Save Student Aid -- A newly formed coalition of higher education groups co-chaired by the American Council on Education and the National Association of Independent Colleges and Universities has produced and sent to every college president and every student financial officer across the country a handbook for organizers entitled "Stop the Raid on Student Aid."

Validators' Op Eds -- Derek Bok is attempting to place an op-ed in the New York Times and Bill Gray will be trying to place one in the L.A. Times.

Family Technology Nights -- Microsoft Corporation will be hosting a series of interactive "Family Technology Nights" during the week.

Cable in the Classroom Program -- Turner Education Services Inc will be launching a new "Cable in the Classroom Program" on September 15.

(2) Cabinet and Subcabinet Activity

Cabinet and Subcabinet Travel -- 47 Administration officials will be participating in over 50 events around the country in the coming week. MEETING WITH TEENS AT THE TEEN HEALTH CONNECTION

DATE: August 9, 1995
TIME: 1:15 pm - 2:15 pm
LOCATION: Teen Health Connection
1509 Elizabeth Avenue
Charlotte, North Carolina
FROM: Alexis Herman
Flo McAfee
Jeremy Ben-Ami

I. PURPOSE

The purpose of this visit is to have an informal discussion with teens about health issues that concern them and how the Teen Health Connection has been beneficial. The visit will allow you to explore in depth with a small group of teens the issues you will have raised in your earlier speech.

This is the first of what we hope will be a series of visits you will make to celebrate and spotlight "What's Right With America" -- community initiatives throughout the country working to solve complex national problems at the local level. In your Georgetown speech you committed to make these stops a regular part of your travel, and we will be working to build such stops into your schedule as often as possible.

II. BACKGROUND

The Teen Health Connection (THC) is an innovative community-based non-profit that provides a full range of physical and mental health care services to young people between the ages of 11 and 22. THC aims to address the growing number of teenagers dying because of their own behavior - through, for example, drug abuse, sexually transmitted diseases, and drunk driving. The Clinic estimates that nearly 75 percent of the teen deaths in Charlotte can be attributed to teen behavior as compared to 25 percent fifty years ago.

THC was started to fulfill a dire need to provide affordable, accessible health care to teens living in Mecklenburg County. With extensive community input from parents, youth, media, local hospitals, clergy, schools and businesses, THC opened its doors in three years ago under the leadership of Dr. John Johnston and Barbara Zeigler. After 18 years, Dr. Johnston left a lucrative private practice as a pediatrician to start the clinic along with Barbara Zeigler, a specialist in adolescent teen pregnancy, and now THC's executive director.

From the start, both individuals made personal commitments to provide the best services to their patients, and that commitment is exemplified through the endless time and care given to patients, their parents and the facility. Dr. Johnston is truly dedicated to the health of others, he refuses to bring attention to his own health and the fact that he is on a wait list for a liver transplant.

THC provides a wide range of services, including curative care, preventative education programs to educate teens and community members, counseling, outreach to train professionals about the special needs of youth, and research on adolescent health care needs, utilization and the impact of services. Funding comes from community, government, and foundation sources, and teams of volunteers extend both medical and support services. To spur the spirit of contribution, the clinic encourages every patient to pay something. Some bring $2 per week or contribute what they can much later.

In its first two years of operation, THC estimates that it has saved Mecklenburg County taxpayers more than $3.5 million and that each $100 invested in their preventive health programs saves approximately $600 in later health costs.

The impact of THC goes much further than the patients it serves. By helping train medical residents and providers from other states and agencies, its innovative approach is being extended well beyond the borders of Mecklenburg County. The teens play an active role in determining the direction of the clinic through their Teen Advisory Board. They changed the clinic's name from Adolescent Health Center to the Teen Health Connection. They set the dress code for the clinicians---no uniforms, street clothes only. They select the magazines and the music for the waiting room. They painted the mural on the wall; and they created the 4-minute promotional video with the idea, "if you don't treat your body well, you will end up like cars in a junkyard."

III. PARTICIPANTS

Greeters:

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRESIDENT

FROM: ERSKINE BOWLES
 GENE SPERLING
 JEREMY BEN-AMI

SUBJECT: Update on Back to School Week Activities

The following status report provides our best current understanding of "Back to School" activities for September 11 through 15. At this point, plans fall into five areas: (1) Presidential events, (2) other events involving administration officials, (3) media activities, (4) Intergovernmental activities, and (5) other organized events not sponsored by the administration around the country.

(1) Presidential Activities

- . Monday September 11 -- Address at Southern Illinois University at Carbondale. The audience for this event will be students from Carbondale as well as students from surrounding schools. The speech will be downlinked to at least 50 sites around the nation. Before the event, you will hold a roundtable discussion open to pool coverage with students from the different schools to discuss the impact of proposed budget cuts on their education.

The Vice President will travel to Pittsburgh on this same day to address students from a coalition of area schools on the impact of the proposed budget cuts on their education.

- . Tuesday September 12 -- You will participate in a conference call with Superintendents from 6-8 key districts around the country to discuss the impact of budget cuts on their school systems.
- . Wednesday September 13 -- You will go to Mayfield Woods Middle School where he will launch the National Family Partnership's annual Red Ribbon campaign. The event will permit you to make a strong statement on drugs and youth and to mark the one year anniversary of the Crime Bill signing.
- . The Committee on Education Funding's Tenth Annual Education Awards Dinner -- This dinner will be held on Monday, September 18, and you will do a video address to the 600 attendees. Awards will also go to Senators Kennedy, Hatfield, Jeffords, Snowe, Frist, and Representatives Obey and Rivers. The CEF represents 90 of the largest education groups in the country.

(2) Cabinet and Subcabinet Activity

- . Cabinet and Subcabinet Travel -- 52 Administration officials will be participating in 70 events around the country in the coming week. Some of these coincide with your Monday address, others will be held at other times during the week. We have attached a map and detailed list of these events.
- . Media -- The Departments of Education and Labor are doing extensive media during the week. Secretary Riley will be on Good Morning America on Monday, Fox Morning News on 9/6, CSPAN on 9/7 and CBS Radio News on 9/7. Secretary Riley will also appear on the CNN Newsroom Worldview Program, which will be broadcast to 30,000 schools nationwide. The administration officials doing regional events will also do regional media.

(3) Media Activities

- . Chief of Staff Letter -- A letter from the Chief of Staff was sent to a lengthy list of editorial boards and papers last week along with an "Education Alert" summarizing the differences between the Republican budget and the President's proposals. Both documents are attached.
- . Presidential Op-Ed -- An op-ed from the President will be sent out today to 1750 college and university newspapers. The goal is for the piece to run in conjunction with coverage of the Illinois speech. We will also pitch it for USA Today on Monday.
- . School-Specific Impacts -- The administration has released information on the impact of the Republican budget on student loans and Pell grants at 100 schools in targeted districts later this week. This information was shared with both school and regional media, and will be embargoed for Tuesday release.

(4) Intergovernmental Activities

Press statements on the impact of the GOP education cuts will be issued on Tuesday by over 160 Democratic elected officials (Governors, Lt. Governors, State Legislative Leaders, County Executives, and County Commissioners) from 30 states and the District of Columbia: Arkansas, California, Connecticut, Delaware, Florida, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, Nevada, New Mexico, New Jersey, New York, North Carolina, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, South Dakota, Texas, Vermont, Washington, and Wisconsin.

(5) Other Events

Campus Rallies -- We currently have confirmation of 55 events being planned at colleges and universities around the country to mark "Save Student Aid Week." Many of these are being organized around the satellite link up of the President's speech. The list is growing daily as organizations around the country provide us with better information.

UPDATE ON "BACK TO SCHOOL WEEK" ACTIVITIES AS OF SEPTEMBER 5, 1995

The following status report provides our best current understanding of "Back to School" activities for September 6 through 15. At this point, plans fall into five areas: (1) Presidential events, (2) other events involving administration officials, (3) media activities, and (4) other organized events not sponsored by the administration around the country.

(1) Presidential Activities

- . Wednesday September 6 -- The President is participating in two meetings -- one with a bipartisan group of Mayors and county officials and the other with CEOs supportive of GOALS 2000. The meetings are open to pool press coverage and participants will do additional press after the meeting.
- . Monday September 11 -- Presidential address at Southern Illinois University at Carbondale. The audience for this event will be students from Carbondale as well as students from surrounding schools. Before the event the President will hold a roundtable discussion open to pool coverage with students from the different schools to discuss the impact of proposed budget cuts on their education.
- . Tuesday September 12 -- The President will participate in a conference call with Superintendents from 6-8 key districts around the country to discuss the impact of budget cuts on their school systems.
- . Wednesday September 13 -- The President will go to Mayfield Woods Middle School where he will launch the National Family Partnership's annual Red Ribbon campaign. The event will permit the President to make a strong statement on drugs and youth and to mark the one year anniversary of the Crime Bill signing.

(4) Other Events

- . Campus Rallies -- We currently have confirmation of 55 events being planned at colleges and universities around the country to mark "Save Student Aid Week." Many of these are being organized around the satellite link up of the President's speech. The list is growing daily as organizations around the country provide us with better information.
- . National Bake Sale -- The Committee for Education Funding (CEF) and the Education First Alliance are organizing most of their activities during the week of the 11th around a "National Bake Sale." Their focus is on the cuts in elementary and secondary education. They plan a large event on Capitol Hill on Wednesday September 13, and they anticipate many events around the country as well. Educators will hand deliver a "$1000 Cookie" to each Congressional office with the message that they would only have to sell 4.5 million of these to make up the difference of the proposed education cuts. As of now, we have no confirmed list or count of such events.
- . The CEF's Tenth Annual Education Awards Dinner -- This dinner will be held on Monday, September 18, and the President has been asked to do a video address to the 600 attendees. Secretary Riley will be attending the event, in which the President will be recognized for his leadership on education investment. Awards will also go to Senators Kennedy, Hatfield, Jeffords, Snowe, Frist, and Representatives Obey and Rivers.
- . Volunteer Action Kit -- The CEF has also developed and disseminated a volunteer action kit entitled "Education Cuts Never Heal" to its member organizations for their use with their own memberships. These 100 member organizations have a potential audience of over 10 million people. The kit includes: a list of activities for local organizers; tips on meeting with Members of Congress; and media suggestions including sample op-eds.
- . National Education Call-in Day -- CEF is also sponsoring a National Education Call in Day on September 14, where constituents are urged to call their member of Congress and ask them to oppose the education cuts.
- . Celebrity Involvement -- The Department of Education's Back to School week activities including the possibility of a number of celebrities such as Bill Gates, Peter Max, Jesse Jackson and Jim Lovell who will be going "virtual" back-to-school on-line in schools around the country.
- . The American Federation of Teachers -- has sent organizing packets to all affiliates that include Shanker's NY Times columns on the budget and sample letters and op-eds.

(2) Cabinet and Subcabinet Activity

Cabinet and Subcabinet Travel -- Administration officials will be participating in at least ~~20~~ events around the country in the coming week. Some of these coincide with the President's Monday address, others will be held at other times during the week. Cabinet Affairs will be producing a map and detailed list of these events.

Media -- The Departments of Education and Labor are doing extensive media during the week. Secretary Riley will be on Good Morning America on Monday, Fox Morning News on 9/6, CSPAN on 9/7 and CBS Radio News on 9/7. The administration officials doing regional events will also do regional media.

(3) Media Activities

Riley CNN Newsroom worldview program, which will be precast to 30,000 schools nationwide

Chief of Staff Letter -- A letter from the Chief of Staff was sent to a lengthy list of editorial boards and papers last week along with an "Education Alert" summarizing the differences between the Republican budget and the President's proposals. Both documents are attached.

Presidential Op-Ed -- An op-ed from the President will be sent out on Thursday September 7 to 1750 college and university newspapers. The goal is for the piece to run in conjunction with coverage of the Illinois speech. We will also pitch it for USA Today on Monday.

Other Presidential Media -- There is a request in for the President to do a conference call with the St. Louis Post-Dispatch and the Southern Illinoisan to preview the Monday speech.

School-Specific Impacts -- The administration will release information on the impact of the Republican budget on student loans and Pell grants at 100 schools in targeted districts later this week. This information will be shared with both school and regional media.

~~Sec R1~~

The National School Boards Association (NSBA) -- has just published a booklet highlighting the real-life impact of federally funded programs entitled "Children Succeed: Federal Education Investment at Work," and is working with other education groups to conduct town meetings on the subject.

The Council of Great City Schools -- is working on an event with the Postal Service and the White House to deliver a letter from the President via a mock "Pony Express" to the national superintendent's conference in Oklahoma City. The event is expected to get a good deal of national and regional attention. The Council has also just completed a "Spotlight on Education" ten minute spot that will be carried by at least 300 PBS markets over the next three months delivering a positive message on urban schools and investments.

Local Rallies -- Various groups of School district superintendents, mayors, and school board members are planning rallies to protest House education cuts around the country. What we know for sure so far: On September 7, the Mayor and School Superintendent of New Orleans are holding a rally with over 1000 people to demonstrate against the cuts and demand that House Appropriations Chairman Livingston (whose district includes a part of New Orleans) restore the cuts he made earlier this summer in the House Appropriations Bill.

The Alliance to Save Student Aid -- A newly formed coalition of higher education groups co-chaired by the American Council on Education and the National Association of Independent Colleges and Universities has produced and sent to every college president and every student financial officer across the country a handbook for organizers entitled "Stop the Raid on Student Aid."

Validators' Op Eds -- Derek Bok is attempting to place an op-ed in the New York Times and Bill Gray will be trying to place one in the L.A. Times.

Microsoft will have a series of Family Technology nights

Turner Education Services Inc. Launching new cable in classroom program on Sept 15

MEMORANDUM

TO: Marla Romash
FROM: Susan Blad, Executive Director
DATE: August 21, 1995
RE: National Events

The following is a tentative schedule for national events during "Save Student Aid Week" the week of September 11-15, 1995.

At College Democrats of America, our concentration will be to support national events in addition to at least 100 campus events across the country. Our objective is to set the agenda within campus media, connect the college loan cuts to activism, i.e voter registration and petition drives -- both activities will allow us to increase our database for the '96 election cycle.

Monday, 9/11

- President Clinton gives speech at campus (Choices being thrown around include University of Wisconsin - Madison, University of Ohio - Akron, University of Illinois - Urbana/Champaign, within the city of Pittsburgh. This is a downlink event.

- Senator Daschle and Congressman Gephardt have a town hall meeting with Senators and Members in remote locations. This is an interactive downlink/uplink event.

NOTE: So far there seems to be a lot of miscommunication about whether or not these events are supposed to happen during the same day or as a joint event.

Tuesday, 9/12

- Non-partisan press conference on Capitol Hill sponsored by the Student Alliance from Georgetown University.

Wednesday, 9/13

- Secretary Riley has a Town Hall Meeting in St. Louis with nine area schools. Sponsored by College Democrats of America.

- "Death of Education" events sponsored by United States Student

Association across the country.

- Center for Education Funding selling brownies at the capitol. (i.e. we have to sell X million brownies to make up the difference of these cuts.)

Thursday, 9/14

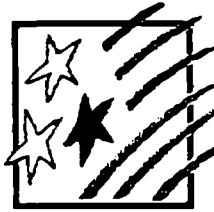

- National Call-in day sponsored by PTA.

Friday, 9/15

- I am not aware of any national events happening on these days.

Call me with any questions at (202) 479-5179. I look forward to working with you.

DELAWARE

- University of Delaware -- event being planned.
- Statewide voter registration drive.

ILLINOIS

- University of Illinois, Urbana-Champaign -- planning rally/press conference.
- University of Chicago -- event being planned.
- Chicago area schools in touch with Senator Mosley-Braun's office for possible event.
- Statewide voter registration.

IOWA (newly organized, but strong with state party)

- University of Iowa -- planning a press conference with Senator Harkin
- Working with state party on statewide voter registration drive.

KANSAS

- University of Kansas -- planning anti Dole events on campus.
- Statewide voter registration drive.

LOUISIANA (Fall, 95 elections)

- Statewide voter registration.

MAINE

- University of Maine -- rally/event being planned, date tba.
- Colby College -- event being planned, date tba.
- Statewide voter registration drive working with the state party.

MARYLAND

- University of Maryland -- event being planned.
- Johns Hopkins University -- event being planned.
- Statewide voter registration drive.

MASSACHUSETTS (state is very well organized)

- Northeastern University -- Rally/Voter registration kick-off with Michael Dukakis, date tba.
- All schools organized for voter registration, working closely with the state party.
(Last spring a spontaneous rally was held within Boston Common, over 300 students showed up -- on a Saturday.)

MINNESOTA (state is very well organized)

- University of Minnesota, Minneapolis -- Organizing press conference inviting Senator Wellstone and Congressional members including Rep. Sabo.
- College loan cut information and voter registration on 27 campuses during campus orientation.
- Statewide voter registration drive with competition for most students registered.
- Statewide phone call and petition drive against the college loan cuts.

MISSISSIPPI (Fall 95 elections)

- Voter registration at all seven Historically Black Colleges and Universities.

NEW JERSEY???

NEW YORK

- There will be events here, however no known event planned yet. We are digging into this state because of all the events last spring against higher education cuts from Gov. Pataki.

ADDENDUM to August 22 MEMO re: September 11-18 events.

FROM: Susan Blad

MEMORANDUM TO ERSKINE BOWLES

From: Gene Sperling

Subject: Options for Monday Back-to-School Event

As you know, we are planning for the President to travel to a large midwestern University to kick off "Back to School Week" with a major event on Monday September 11. While there is tentative consensus around travelling to Pittsburgh, we wanted to be sure that you and the President were fully aware that the University of Pittsburgh is not in the direct lending program and wanted you to have the pros and cons of the alternatives to Pittsburgh.

Pittsburgh

There is a large rally already planned at the University of Pittsburgh with a coalition of Pennsylvania schools including Duquesne, Carnegie Mellon, LaRoche Community College, Alleghany Community College, and possibly Temple University. The United States Student Association (USSA) makes this their recommendation for a Presidential event.

Pittsburgh would be our first choice -- the arguments for Pittsburgh are strong: there's a large pre-planned event, the students are active and well organized, there are a number of schools participating, it's a targeted state and an important media market. In addition, Congressman Coyne, who is a strong supporter of Direct Lending is very enthusiastic about a rally here and would be very helpful in organizing it.

However, Pitt is not a participant in the direct lending program. While the students and the administration are enthusiastic about the program and would like to join, the Pennsylvania higher education authorities have caused problems statewide for schools wanting to join.

We believe that holding the event in downtown Pittsburgh, rather than on campus, and the enthusiasm for the program among the students and administrators make this an acceptable location notwithstanding the direct lending issue – but we wanted to be sure that you and the President were comfortable with this as well. The Direct Lending issue would be further mitigated by the proposed satellite downlinks which could be targeted primarily to Direct Lending schools.

Other Options

In case you decide that the direct lending issue is significant enough to warrant holding the event elsewhere, the following are other options and their pros and cons.

Penn State
37,000 Students
Return to campus 8/23

Pros

- . Large, active student body
- . Target state

Cons

- . Not in Direct Lending (but close to joining)
- . Not major media market

Ohio University
18,000 Students
Return to campus ??

District: Congressman Ewing – freshman Republican who defeated Ted Strickland 51–49.

Pros

- . Large, active student body

Cons

- . State not recommended by Political Affairs

Univeristy of Illinois at Champaign–Urbana
36,000 Students
District: Congressman Ewing (R)

Pros

- . Direct Lending School
- . Target state
- . Would get statewide media

Cons

- . Not recommended by national student groups because not an active campus

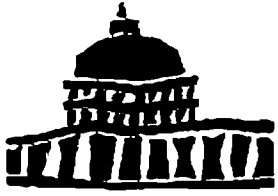

University of Wisconsin at Milwaukee
15,000 Students

Pros

- . Large, active student body
- . In Direct Lending
- . Recommended by USSA

Cons

- . Not as critical a state
- . School perceived as liberal

Memo To: Gene Sperling
From: Kellye McIntosh
Re: September 11th event
Date: August 23, 1995

The following is a brief breakdown of events occurring at the campuses discussed yesterday, scheduled for the September 11-18, week of student activism.

University of Pittsburgh:

By far, the most organized event, the student government association at the University of Pittsburgh has planned a rally in City Park, located between the University of Pittsburgh and Carnegie Mellon University. At least, five thousand students from University of Pittsburgh, Carnegie Mellon University, Duquane University, Chatham University, Allegheny Community College, West Virginia University and California University of Pennsylvania at California, Indiana University of Pennsylvania and Temple University will attend this event. Outreach is being planned for Ohio schools for next week. The rally is being held to educate students on the cuts to financial aid, register voters in key congressional districts and collect petitions for members of Congress opposing the cuts. During the rally, student leaders and University Presidents will address the audience. At the end of each speech, speakers will place 3 foot ballots into a 8 foot ballot box to represent a vote for candidates supporting student aid program. Deputy registrars will register students in the crowd.

University of Wisconsin at Milwaukee:

The student government association in coalition with multicultural and women's groups is planning an on-campus, rally to oppose cuts to financial aid. If the President attends, they will invite other University of Wisconsin universities. During the rally, student speakers will discuss the effects of cuts to student aid programs and encourage the crowd to sign petitions and to call their Congress members to urge them to oppose cuts or elimination of federal financial aid programs. Students also plan to toss "contracts" into a large trash can. At the conclusion of the event, the last speakers will toss candy, attached to diplomas into the crowd of students.

Southern Illinois University:

A diverse group of students at Southern Illinois University is planning an outdoor rally to educate students about federal cuts to financial aid and specifically direct lending. They plan to have student speakers address the effects of cuts or elimination of student aid programs. During the event, a student, dressed up as a banker holding fake dollar bills, representing the guarantee loan industry will mock speakers. At the end of the event the students are set to have the banker, who will be bumped by a student dressed up to represent the Direct Lending Program, stumble on stage and drop hundreds of diplomas from his belly. Participants will be asked to sign a petition to asking members of Congress to oppose cuts to student aid programs.

Feel free to call either myself or Jeannette Galanis at 347-8772. Attached is a letter from the Student Government at University of Pittsburgh.

- meet with our financial aid office to explore ways in which the University of Pittsburgh can become a direct lending school.

Thank you for all your support. If you have any questions, please call us at (412) 648-7970.

COMMITTEE FOR EDUCATION FUNDING

TO: The Education Community

FROM: Ed Kealy
John Forkenbrock

DATE: August 31, 1995

SUBJ: National Education Bake Sale

The Senate Appropriations Committee will be considering the Labor, Health and Human Services Appropriation bill in mid-September. As you know, the House already approved a $4.5 billion cut in federal education funding. In response, the Committee for Education Funding and Sen. Jim Jeffords are holding a national education bake sale to raise public awareness of the effect on children of the proposed funding cuts.

The "bake sale" is one way for us to show the public just how difficult it will be for schools to make up for the lost funding. We all know the role bake sales have played over the years in raising money for extra curricular activities. Now, we have to show Congress that it would take a "really big" bake sale to replace the money they plan to cut. At $1,000 per cookie, for example, we'd have to sell 4.5 million cookies just to break even.

The "bake sale" is scheduled for Wednesday, September 13, 1995 at 11:00 am at the triangle in front of the U.S. Capitol. The featured speakers will include Sen. Jeffords and other members of Congress, a parent, teacher and student.

This event is another way for the education community to make the votes to cut education funding difficult and painful ones for members of Congress. It also gives us the opportunity to show support for members of Congress, such as Sen. Jeffords, who are backing strong federal funding for education.

We urge you to get involved in the "bake sale" activities. We need volunteers to distribute cookies and our message to Congress and we need help in working with the media to ensure positive news coverage of the event. We want to focus public attention on the effects of Congress' action to cut federal programs and educational opportunities.

If you or someone in your organization would like to help, please call Mark Schneiderman at 202-223-9485, John Butler at 703-838-6225 or Nelson Canton at 202-822-7239.

Jason C. Ervin, a 21-year-old senior in accounting, has had a strong work ethic from the start.

He graduated from Chicago's Morgan Park Academy on a Friday four years ago and the following Monday was hard at work for Arthur Andersen, a major accounting firm.

He's had summer internships at the company every summer since and will start there full time as a staff auditor after he graduates this spring.

Jason got his internship through the Chicago branch of Inroads, a national non-profit career development organization which aims to place talented minority students in corporate leadership tracks. Last year, he was the national group's junior intern of the year. He is a student member of the Chicago branch's Board of Directors.

At SIUC, Jason serves as the campus' student representative on the system Board of Trustees. He's also president of Blacks Interested in Business (a business college student organization) and a three-year member of COBA LINX, the business college's student ambassador group. In his spare time, he tutors other business students in accounting, finite math and finance.

Jason thinks education is the backbone of America, which cannot progress without it. He also believes it is the key to personal success.

"I may not always be an accountant, but my education and training will allow me to go into other fields and do other things because it has given me the ability to adapt to change," he says.

HIGHER EDUCATION ADDRESS AT SOUTHERN ILLINOIS UNIVERSITY

Date: September 11, 1995
Time: 12:05 p.m.-1:05 p.m.
Location: Southern Illinois University at Carbondale
From: Jeremy Ben-Ami and Mike Schmidt

I. PURPOSE

To kick-off "Back to School Week," this event will provide an opportunity to make a major address on the importance of Federal student aid programs -- particularly the Direct Lending Program and Pell Grants -- and to highlight the threat that the cuts to these programs being made by the Congress pose to millions of Americans.

II. BACKGROUND

Higher education and student groups have identified the week of September 11-18 for the kick-off of their own back to school campaign. They will hold events on hundreds of campuses across the country during this week to protest the cuts to education programs being made by Republicans in Congress (a summary is attached outlining GOP cuts to Student Aid Programs). Your address will be the first major campus event of the higher education community's back to school campaign.

The address will take place at Southern Illinois University (SIU) at Carbondale, a small town 96 miles southeast of St. Louis. SIU was founded in 1869, and has an enrollment of over 23,000 (18,000 undergraduate). Approximately 80% of undergraduates are from Illinois. SIU is a Direct Lending School -- $35 million dollars in loans have been originated for almost 9,000 students since SIU began the Direct lending program. 88% of all student receive some form of need-based financial aid (Direct lending and other loans and grants), and the average total aid for a freshman in 1995-96 is $8899.

The University is expecting approximately 10,000 students. Most of these students will be from SIU Carbondale, but some others will be students from surrounding schools. It will be an outdoor address. Your address will be broadcast via satellite to over 30 college campuses around the country where education groups will be holding simultaneous events. The Vice President will travel to Pittsburgh on this same day and participate in a similar event with a coalition of area schools. 47 Cabinet and sub-Cabinet officials will participate in 70 education events around the country throughout the week.

Before the address, you will hold a roundtable discussion with students from the different schools participating in the event to discuss the impact of proposed budget cuts on their education, and also participate in a reception with area University Presidents and student leaders (covered in separate briefing memoranda).

III. PARTICIPANTS

YOU

Ted Sonders, Chancellor of Southern Illinois University
Jason Irvin, student at SIU

IV. SEQUENCE OF EVENTS

NOTE: There is a pre-program.

- Ted Sonders, Chancellor of Southern Illinois University, makes brief welcoming remarks and introduces Jason Irvin, a student at SIU.
- Jason Irvin will give some brief remarks and introduces YOU.
- YOU will give an address on higher education.
- YOU will work a ropeline
- YOU will depart.

V. REMARKS

Address on higher education is attached.

ROUNDTABLE WITH STUDENT LEADERS AT SOUTHERN ILLINOIS UNIVERSITY

Date: September 11, 1995
Time: 11:00 a.m.-11:45 a.m.
Location: Southern Illinois University at Carbondale
From: Jeremy Ben-Ami

I. PURPOSE

Before making your address on higher education, this roundtable will give you the opportunity to discuss with 11 students from area colleges and universities their personal experiences with student loans and the effect of GOP cuts on their education. There will be regional media coverage of the roundtable and the students in several surrounding shots.

II. BACKGROUND

The 11 students who will be participating in this roundtable represent 10 area colleges from four different states: Tennessee, Kentucky, Indiana, and Illinois. (a list of student participants and brief bios is attached). They all depend on student aid to help them remain in college.

The Roundtable will have a moderator -- Pam Britton, Financial Aid Coordinator for SIU. Pam is very enthusiastic about the positive effect that the Direct Lending program has had at SIU. During the roundtable, she will introduce four students who will be asked to tell you a little about how important student aid has been to their being able to attend college. The roundtable will then open up to a discussion of the GOP cuts to student aid programs.

III. PARTICIPANTS

YOU

Pam Britton, Financial Aid Coordinator, SIU
11 student participants (see attached list)

IV PRESS

There will be a pool spray at the beginning of the event. After YOU make your opening remarks, the pool will leave and select members of area print press will remain to observe the roundtable session.

IV. SEQUENCE OF EVENTS

- YOU enter Room X of Pulliam Hall and sit down at a table with the 11 students and Pam Britton.
- Pam Britton makes brief remarks on the importance of student aid programs, asks the student participants to go around the table and introduce themselves, and turns to you for welcoming remarks. (Pool Spray)
- YOU make opening remarks. (Pool Spray)
- The Pool Press exit, leaving behind local print press, and the discussion begins.
- Pam Britton begins the discussion by asking four students -- Duane Sherman, Moemi Rivera-Morales, Mary Armstrong, and Rickie Collie -- to tell you about the importance of student aid to their education.
- Duane Sherman from SIU talks for 3 minutes about his experiences with the Pell Grant Program and its importance.
- Noemi Rivera-Morales from Indiana University talks for 3 minutes about her experience with the Direct Lending Program and its importance to her.
- Mary Armstrong from Eastern Illinois University talks for 3 minutes about her views on the in-school interest subsidy.
- Rickie Collie from Shawnee Community College talks for 3 minutes about the importance of student aid to him as a community college student.
