RE: CEO Suggestions for Learning Lab Project
Date: December 9, 1994

Attached is a list of CEO's which we know to be interested in employment, education and training issues. Technology advances and high performance workplaces generally are of interest to all. For some, it is evident that their business is high performance and high technology by nature.

Several are retired or semi-retired; many are former CEOs. My thinking is that these people may have the time now to devote to a special national project affiliated with the Administration.

When you have time, give me a call and we can talk about some of the other details you were looking for.

On a second matter, also enclosed are some materials about the McDonald's project. It is their STW program and provides a career ladder model for the service industry. We are partnering with them to do the evaluation of the project. The Statement of Work lays out the project and the Partnership Guidelines address the relationships between the participating employers and the schools. FYI: McDonald's has recruited K-Mart Corp. and Walgreens as corporate partners. Hyatt is apparently ready to sign on as well.

Their contact is Stan Stein, Sr. Vice President of Human Resources in Chicago at (708) 575-3517. Our staff contact here is George Koch at 219-7674, x-162. If you would like a briefing on the project and the concept, we would be happy to do so. Just let me know. Also, Stan Stein was happy to do so as well.
