Dear Hillary,

Thank you for your generous support of Hunter College's attempt to raise money for additional scholarships for young men and women who might otherwise not have been able to continue their education.

By honoring me with their Athena Award on the 28th of October Hunter chose someone as "Woman of the Year" to whom few were obligated and thus reduced the possibilities of attracting large gifts. With your endorsement as Honorary Chair of this award dinner we were able to more completely validate the importance of the event. So many fund-raisers take place each evening everywhere that it has become impossible to focus and to support everything we believe in. With your warm approval and encouragement we moved ahead and actually surpassed the projections for both gifts and attendance at this relatively intimate gathering at the Pierre Hotel.

Although we don't know each other well I like to believe we do. I believe we share many common goals and I sincerely hope I can make some worthwhile contributions, hands on, during your next four years in Washington.

With my warmest thanks.

Happy holidays and joyful inauguration.

Dear Jane:

Thank you so much for your letter. Hillary and I have been deeply touched by the expressions of support and encouragement we have received from people who care about the future of our country, and we're glad you took the time to write.

As you know, I share your deep concern about the debate in Congress over welfare reform. I have long believed that government must work in partnership with people -- providing opportunity, encouraging responsibility, and strengthening families for the future. Our goal should be to ensure that poor children and families can become self-sufficient, not destitute.

My Administration is doing everything we can to bring about the changes that Americans want and need -- real changes that will guarantee our country a more secure, more prosperous future. As we continue to work to ensure greater opportunity for hardworking families like yours, I appreciate your insights, and I encourage your continued involvement.

You and Hilary have my best wishes.

Sincerely,

Bill Clinton

Your letter was stunning - I know you are so proud of your daughter, but we should be proud of you too —

Dear President and Mrs. Clinton,

When I voted for you--and it may be politically incorrect to say so, but I really did vote for both of you, because I saw you on television together talking about your marriage, and I know that, whatever has passed between you, whatever pain and anger and grief you have endured privately together, it has forged of you a team, and I admire you for that--I was filled with such hope and energy. At the inauguration, you had a poet, Maya Angelou, read. A poet--someone who dares to dream and envision, someone who looks truth in the face--was reading at our President's Inaugural. I knew our President was a man to look truth in the face.

You seemed to understand, as no recent President has seemed to want to understand, how hungry people like myself are for some ray of light, some hope of reward for years of long, hard toil which has gone chiefly to benefit others. I was thrilled when I heard about the plans to reform health care, and even more thrilled to learn that Hillary Rodham Clinton would lead that effort. I was so certain you'd succeed I made changes in my own life in anticipation of that reform.

Let me tell you a little about myself.

(b)(6)

002

(b)(6)

002

Bad as things are, though, I know they'll get better. But only if you serve another term, and only if you can persuade the Congress to put aside its mean-spirited Contract On America.

President Clinton, I listened to your State of the Union address tonight, and Mrs. Clinton, I have watched the Whitewater committee yapping at your heels for months now.

I want to tell you, Mr. President, that you are on the right track. Most of those who have turned to the government for help are helped; and once they're on they're feet again, they move on, contribute, and help others. It is a partnership, and can be more of one. We understand and support your message, and there are many, many of us. Unfortunately, we are also, all too often, non-voters. Estranged and disenfranchised, or facing obstacles like lack of transportation to the polls, we are among that segment of the population that shrugs off this civic duty. More must be done to bring this portion of the electorate to a realization of its power and influence.

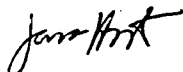

Mrs. Clinton, you have my sympathy. Rep. D'Amato's committee has been free to sift and winnow through every detail of your past, desperately searching for something with which to light the bonfire around the stake to which he clearly has mentally tied you. Who among us could withstand this minute scrutiny? I'm reminded of the psychiatrist who diagnosed his early-arriving patients as compulsive, his tardy patients as hostile, and his prompt patients as dependent. No matter what you do or don't do, it's made to look suspicious. I do not know if other Americans are as sick of this inquisitorial Star Chamber approach as I am; but I wish it would end. Now they are hauling you before a Grand Jury at a time and for reasons that look like grand-standing.

Not long ago, Mrs. Clinton, I cleared off the desk in my home office. I found papers there that were 2 years old, and I haven't moved recently, as you have. I know you have more help with your papers than I have, but I suspect that you also have a few more papers to keep track of. It is no mystery to most of us how files--even important ones--can be misplaced or misfiled. It is also no surprise to me that some employee, perhaps fearful of reprimand or dismissal, might secretly place those papers where they'd be discovered rather than own up to having mislaid them in the first place.

This letter is already too long, yet there is so much more I wish I could say--about welfare and single moms and student loans, and about hope and strength and courage for you in this time of trouble.

Please stay the course; I know there are so many of us who believe in you and what you're trying to do. Keep waging peace, Mr. President; and Mrs. Clinton, I suspect your accusers need only a little more rope with which to hoist high their own petard.

Sincerely,

DEJA' VU IN DC

It's fascinating to watch the evolution of the Clinton-Clinton administration. Mature Americans have lived through all this before.

Bill Clinton is a quick study.

He was elected President four years before he expected to be. He went to Washington ill-prepared either in support staff or in the application of appropriate protocol.

One of several books which helped him and Hillary to adapt is the Pulitzer prize-winning biography of Eleanor and Franklin Roosevelt during the war years called NO ORDINARY TIME.

While the author tends to be reverential, especially where Eleanor is concerned, it is worthwhile reading.

The White House of the 1940s, literally, was neglected, comparatively primitive. It's conduct was less sophisticated, less formal, under less public scrutiny.

Both Eleanor and Franklin were allowed romances on the side without media attention.

Our nation's dominant mindset of that era credits FDR with both military strategy and the accelerated social evolution. Not so. Careful retrospection reveals that the persistent agitation for the betterment of blacks, civilian and military, came from Eleanor.

2- DEJA VU

During the White House years Eleanor was away more than she was home, seeking perhaps to outdistance her loneliness with a frenetic schedule of appearances, most of which were devoted to social issues -- unionization, discrimination, recognition of the wartime problems of working mothers, etc.

Limelight endows national leaders with an aura of invincibility to everyone but themselves.

Some have tried, with limited success, to hide; modern, multiple media scrutiny, for better or worse, does not allow that.

President Truman confronted critics with surprising success.

President Reagan ducked from criticism behind Irish eyes and a gorgeous grin.

Recent generations of Presidents have sought liaison with peers. FDR was never happier than when Winston Churchill was weeks at the White House, in and out of the President's quarters at all hours, sometimes sipping a martini in his underwear.

Also, of course, beginning with FDR, it has been deemed politically strategic to have the respect of one's counterparts made obvious to the electorate.

So, while FDR steered our Ship Of State, Eleanor, subtly or overtly, steered FDR in his compassionate embrace of our polyglot population.

There are significant similarities in our present First Family's employment of their respective talents.

Does this mean that the Roosevelts are a template by which the Clintons measure themselves? Only very imprecisely but to this extent certainly:

Hillary is more the dialectical liberal.

Bill is the more pragmatic politician.

They make a complimentary team

PERSONAL
CONFIDENTIAL

Dear Mrs. Clinton,

Thanks you so much for the opportunity and for the privilege of meeting with you on April 4th. I know it must have been a very difficult day for you and so appreciated that you took so much time to be with us and to listen to what each of us had to say.

Just last week I was on a radio show and talking about values and what we must do to keep our children and families healthy. Callers were asking for better programs in their communities and schools for kids and teens.

I found myself talking about your book, and saying, "that if you want these programs for your children and teens, it makes a difference who is in office." I talked about how important it is to know who your local, state and national representatives are, and that who is in office can make a big difference.

I then said, "If you want the programs you are asking for, you need to support The President, and you need to vote, and vote for The President" I plan to say this whenever I speak. I had never done this before and it is a direct result from the meeting with you.

As I said in the meeting, I do hope that the phrase "in the best interest of the child" (lifted from Sally Provence and Al Solnit who have also taught me so much) will be part of the campaign, as one of The President's values. In fact, it will weave in with the STAND FOR CHILDREN RALLY on June 1st. In some ways, I think using the word "child" or "children" whenever the word family is used resonances with "the folks out there."

People from all economic strata are worried about our nation's children and if there is some way we can tap into that fear -- not using negatives tactics of fear and shame as the Right does -- but rather using the notion of "what is in the best interest of the child," I think that could be a powerful message.

I hope you do not think it presumptuous for me so speak about children's issues when you have done so much and are doing so much for our nation's children and families. I feel that you and The President can make "the case for children" and that what we do for our children -- pre-natally through adolescence -- and that what happens to our children will determine the future health of our nation.

Again thank you so much for the chance to speak with you and share these thoughts with you.

Best wishes, express himself, but he has blamed President Clinton unjustly and tried to smear the reputation of the first lady.

He wrote that he and his wife have been doing business with the LRAFB pharmacy for about nine years. I know this "business" is absolutely free to them. It is so disgusting that he is not grateful for this free business.

I don't know if he is eligible for tri-care (CHAMPUS), but if he is, he can continue to use the mail order service for $8 per prescription, or phone in prescriptions and drive to LRAFB and pick them up for free.

Did he ever think what he would do if LRAFB should close, like so many other U.S. Air Force, Army and Navy facilities have closed? He should think about that and be thankful for the "free business" he enjoys provided by the LRAFB hospital staff and by the government that he's so eager to criticize.

Unfair to the Clintons

Even with constant reminders of the extraordinary bias of the Democrat-Gazette against the Clintons in every edition of the paper, I was surprised by your recent announcement that the paper will discontinue the first lady's column, "Talking it over."

I have followed the column and have never thought of its contents as partisan or political. Your placement of the column in the social pages indicates you don't consider the topics to be political.

Your weak explanation reeks of hypocrisy: You suggest that it would not be fair to the Doles to carry Hillary Clinton's column during the election season, since Liddy Dole does not write a column. When have you ever been fair to the Clintons?

I might feel differently if you did not editorialize throughout your paper against the Clintons with your slanted headlines, choice of photographs, choice of articles from other sources and sensationalized language in ordinary news items.

I would not be able to criticize your decision if you had been honest enough to say that you are discontinuing her column simply because you oppose her husband's re-election.

If fairness to the candidates is your real motivation, then perhaps you should cease politically biased news reporting until after Nov. 5.

Overreacting to terrorism

Terrorism is the act of making the powerless powerful. Their spirit is one of poverty of the soul.

Any act of terror fuels political action. New law will not stop fanatical activists. Government can't stop these events from happening.

Those who seek to spawn a revolution against the government of the United States will surely fail.

We the people still live in relative freedom from individuals, and government.

The Republicans satisfactorily performed their television mini-series last week. Research showed them what they needed to say, so they acted out the script, which provided partly truth, but mostly fiction.

They softened their image, showcased the Gipper, closeted Newt Gingrich, introduced a hearted Bob Dole, appeared centrist, appealed to women and injected energy through the style and persona of Jack Kennedy.

The Democrats will come right back next week. The unusual one-week turnaround results from a squeeze: the Olympic Games on one side and the traditional Labor Day startup of presidential campaigning on the other.

Bill Clinton's Democrats will have their own reality check objectives at their convention beginning Monday in Chicago's United Center, which is, incidentally, the house and where the Democrats' audience will gather. Wide extras for the vital television performance to be beamed in prime time to tens of millions coast-to-coast.

Here are the Democrats' objectives along with an analysis of challenges facing the party's strategists and managers in achieving them.

1. The Democrats must make a credible case that Clinton has been a good president and that life isn't so bad, although, as always, it could be better. Polls show that it is important to balance contention that the economy is good with expressions of sympathy, if not empathy, for the people who aren't "sharing the growth."

You will hear from various speakers that two dynamic indicators of our economic performance—unemployment and inflation, composing the "Misery Index"—have stayed at historically low levels under Clinton's stewardship (not to mention Alan Greenspan's). You will hear about deficit reduction and student loans and a higher minimum wage.

You will not hear about gays in the military, employer mandates for universal health insurance or the tax increases of 1993.

2. Democrats with political antennae understand that it will not be a breeze to best a presidential candidate who promises to cut everyone's taxes 15 percent. The counter-argument is that

Democrats will appeal to the common sense of viewers, citing the fantasy and the cop-out of proposing to cut taxes by 15 percent, build up defenses and balance the budget by 2002. It might not be wise to mention, much less stress, that Ronald Reagan promised all of that and predictably sent the deficit and debt to stratospheric levels that plague us still.

Reagan is popular and sick. It might be discreet and wise merely to cite mathematical reality and common sense, but to shy away from historical perspective that might appear to ridicule the Gipper.

Second, you will hear time and again that Clinton has his own tax cut. But you will hear that his alternative is smart, purposeful and responsible—limited and targeted to middle-class families to help with costs of education and child care.

The danger is that the Democrats may be seen as saying, "Hey, we, too, want tax cuts, just less money in your pockets than the Republicans would give you."

3. The Democrats must balance two poll findings. People recoil at partisan bickering, but they do not like, and in fact are frightened of, Gingrich.

Finish roadway project

Desperate times call for desperate measures.

The long-awaited road project in Southeast Arkansas to connect U.S. 79 and 65 via the bridge over Emmett Sanders Lock and Dam No. 4 is at least a quarter-century old.

This unfinished enterprise needs a proper name. The Martha Mitchell Expressway runs through Pine Bluff and Jefferson County. Here are several other titles to complement the completed Martha Mitchell: Dale Bumpers Boulevard, Bill Clinton Cutoff and Beryl Anthony Avenue. Any of these could be easily stenciled onto a road sign.

After all of these years of incompleteness, this strip of unpaved road could be called the Jane Fonda Freeway, Jay Dickey Drive. Jim Guy Tucker Turnpike or Barbara Streisand Street. Motorists who now routinely drive miles out of their way to cross the Arkansas River would not million to help break the Highway 79 bottleneck.

The state Highway Commission took this available cash flow and channeled it elsewhere. Fair is fair, but this isn't fair.

The Highway Commission members need to get up off of their collective duff and apply their asphalt to this unfinished road. Twenty-plus years is long enough to wait, especially when the dough to complete this step-by-step project was handed to the commission on a federally secured silver platter.

Matter of interpretation

The Warren Court used Amendment 14, Section 1, to sustain its ruling of separation of church and state in Everson vs. Board of Education (1947). However, it is an interpretation; the words "separation" and "church" are not written in the amend-

Dear Mrs. Clinton:

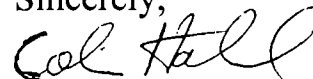

Ron Lieber and I, two recent graduates of Amherst College, are pleased to pass along a copy of our new book, Taking Time Off for you and your daughter.

cc her | We recommend you start reading on page 46, where you'll find the story of Tracy Johnston. Tracy worked on your husband's campaign in 1992 and also did the advance work for your speech at Wellesley that year. She credits her becoming a Rhodes Scholar to the fact that she took time off to do something different before graduating from college.

Please thank your husband for his continued support of programs like Americorps that make it possible for more and more students to take time off and serve their communities.

I hope you both have a chance to "take time off" after winning the upcoming election.

Sincerely,

Colin Hall

cc her | P.S. My mother, Joan Hall (Yale Law School '65), a lawyer in Chicago, has met you through the ABA and sends you her best regards.

Mrs. Hillary Rodham Clinton

Dear Hillary:

While there are several opinions why Clinton-Gore carried Missouri, I believe I have the real answer. Please see the enclosed copy and particularly photo of you in University of Missouri jacket for reference to my theory. As you know, all Missourians are quite proud of their University in Columbia. A photograph of a genuinely happy First Lady wearing a University of Missouri jacket, particularly during football season, had to be a critical factor in the reelection victory (at least I think so). I have to tell you this is just about the best photo I've seen from the campaign.

Not to give you fashion advice, but I do think that the black could be worn to any one of a number of formal events that you may attend in the next month including the inauguration.

Please forgive this slightly tongue and cheek letter, but I couldn't resist getting in my two cents.

Sincerely,

Stephen L. Hill, Jr.

Dear Hillary -

Knowing of your tremendous interest in, and support for, the FDR Memorial,
I enclose a 7-minute TV interview I did with C-SPAN last week which will show you the progress of the Memorial construction as we head toward a May 2, 1997 dedication.

If this video piques your curiosity, would you like me to walk you through the Memorial one day soon when you're in town? It would take about 45 minutes door-to-door, and there would be no press and no sight-seers to mar the privacy of your visit. Just let me know (O: 404-7509; H: 363-3079).

Warmest regards.

Fondly,

(es)

P.S. I was absolutely bursting with pride, Hillary, as I watched and listened to your superb Convention speech. It not only was substantively stimulating, but stylistically conveyed publicly the warmth, sensitivity, and humor that those of us who know you privately see all the time. Congratulations!

FROM: Kelly Craighead

RE: September 5, 1996, Trip Of HRC To Texas

During our recent trip to Texas, HRC asked me to take down the following information:

1. Should one exist, Dagmar Hamilton, from the LBJ School of Public Affairs, would like to volunteer her time and experience on an Advisory Committee for the Clinton Library.
2. Ms. Hamilton worked with HRC during the Watergate hearings and is looking for another colleague of theirs, Terri Fitzpatrick...
3. Dagmar Hamilton can be reached at the University of Texas, Austin, LBJ School of Public Affairs, Austin, TX 78713. Phone: 512-471-4962 or 512-327-3201.

4716968

Would you mind coordinating the follow-up for Ms. Hamilton? If you are not the most appropriate person to pass this kind of work along to, could you suggest who might be?

Thank you Pam. Let me know if I need to be doing something else in this regard.

SUBJECT: inquiry about Clinton Presidential Library

Rebecca,

per our conversation, when HRC was in Texas recently she ran into a woman named Dagmar Hamilton at the LBJ School of Public Affairs. She worked with her on the Impeachment Committee. She would like to volunteer her time and experience on any advisory committee for the future Clinton Library. If you discern that it is just too early for such a thing, let me know and I will call her. Just let me know how you want to handle it, but HRC did want me to follow-up in some way.

Thanks, Pam

Dear Hillary:

Congratulations on a well-won victory. Kristina and I are elated by the results, which were especially satisfying because you and the President attained it by avoiding the type of vitriolic, corrosive assaults on your opponents that all too often poison political discourse.

I was at the White House Wednesday for the homecoming and delighted in seeing the happiness in all those tired faces. I didn't speak because of the crush, but I do hope that Kristina and I will have a chance to visit with you in the not too distant future.

In the meantime, our wish for you is that during the next four years you can concentrate your talents and energies on your passions such as improving the lot of children, women and families, and not be too distracted by partisan attacks and other less agreeable aspects of public life.

Best regards,

James Hamilton

Mrs. Hillary Rodham Clinton
The First Lady, The White House

Dear Mrs. Clinton:

I had intended to autograph this copy of my recently published book before I sent it to you.

016b

(b)(6)
I would be happy to sign it the next time I see you.

Children in Jeopardy is a compilation of my thoughts about and experiences in working with children at risk. I have written it to provide individuals with rational arguments for supporting pro-children policies and programs.

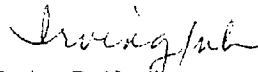

There can be no argument that children are our nation's future. Yet, our society is overwhelmed by a large number of high risk children born with extremely poor prospects for optimal development. Most of these are unwanted children. They are targeted for failure before they are old enough to learn how to read.

The prospects for all of these high risk children must become the priority and focus of all of our attention. Otherwise, these children will continue disproportionately to contribute to our failing schools and our nation's frightening violence, crime and prison statistics. No silver bullet will solve the complex problems facing high risk children. However, there are intervention and prevention strategies that work.

I have spent many years trying to influence politicians and voters to promote research and training in early childhood development, and to influence public policy in order to support innovative approaches to serving young women and their families to prevent school failure. However, I am only one voice. To effect change, we need a multitude of voices from all walks of life.

I encourage you to read this book. I hope you can use some of the information to inform your friends and colleagues about the need for all of us to take action on behalf of our children.

Sincerely,

Irving B. Harris

P.S. If you don't have time to read the entire book at this time, I encourage you to start with the areas that interest you most. This book does not have to be read in one sitting.

Dear Hillary,

When I lost a very close race for mayor to a Jesse Helms' protege, you and your husband were gracious enough to think of me election night and in the months afterwards. I have not forgotten that, and I wanted you to know that I, my wife, my daughter and my son all send our support and admiration to you in this meanest of election seasons.

As a City Councillor and candidate for mayor, I got a tiny taste of the bitter publicity that is directed toward those in public office today. I cannot imagine what you all endure in Washington at the White House. I have been both outraged and puzzled by the intensity of the attacks on you. Coming from Arkansas, I take special umbrage because I know the good works you achieved there. That is what prompted me to write this letter.

I know how disheartening and depressing one feels when he or she is under unflagging and unfair attacks. I also know the hope and comfort one feels from an encouraging word. Hence, I send you this message of support and the certain knowledge that there are thousands--yea, millions--like me who believe in you and your dreams for a better America. We are here, we are with you.

Sincerely,

Barlow Herget

Dear Mr. Hood:

The First Lady's office forwarded to us a copy of your recent letter to her. We appreciate very much your interest in contributing to the Administration's work on telecommunications issues.

While we are not in a position to make use of your services ourselves, I thought you might be interested in becoming involved in some of the "NetDay" activities going on in North Carolina. Inspired by an event kicked off by the President and Vice President in California in March, NetDays in states all across the country are volunteer efforts by companies, schools, parents, engineers and students to connect classrooms to the information superhighway. The long-term goal is to provide computers, training, software and Internet access to every student and teacher by the year 2000.

North Carolina has a very active project; the contact person is Dave Boliek with WTVD Newschannel 11 in Raleigh. He can be reached by phone at 919/899-3608, fax at 919-834-0550, or e-mail at daveb@nando.net. The North Carolina NetDay Web site is <http://www.explor.net>. I am certain this effort could benefit from your talents and expertise and hope you will consider becoming involved.

HRC,

 Arsenio Hall

Greetings from your old pal on the "D/L," which is an urban term for "down low," in hiding or avoiding the limelight!

I hope Thanksgiving, Christmas, New Years and of course MLK Day have been pleasant and fulfilling for you.

In a nutshell, I'm just writing to say hi and hang tough. Stevie Wonder can see that you're catching hell; but you're a strong woman, and as the old folk say, "What doesn't kill you, makes you stronger." You'll be fine.

Give my love to the President and Chelsea. Whenever I watch her boarding the helicopter on CNN, it's amazing to see that little girl from Arkansas, growing up to be a classy young woman right before our eyes. I'm proud of our "First Teenager."

Anyway, stay strong. In public life we only hear the negative, but there are many friends and Americans who are pulling for you in this madness.

Much Love,

Mr. William Jefferson Clinton
President of the United States
The White House
Washington, D.C. 20500

Dear Bill,

I am in Paris finishing a film and awakened before dawn. I imagine you have left this paralyzed city, and once again with a flourish of good will and strength that has inspired me to take pen to paper and write this letter.

I want to congratulate you on your success as President. When I first met you, your kindness of heart was bleeding through your suit. Your dream to help this troubled world was a deep and honest commitment. I believed in you then as a compassionate leader.

You have undergone tremendous scrutiny, which is symptomatic of the angry and vindictive times in which we live, with a dangerously omnipotent press. They can undermine the stability and well-being of our sense of security.

You have in these few years shown a tenacity in expressing your ideals with passion and humanity. Not only are you paving a new road to peace among men and nations, but you are restoring long-lost pride in being an American.

When the Los Angeles riots erupted after the Rodney King verdict, I wrote a letter to President Bush because I felt that when these desperate lost souls were setting fire to their own neighborhoods, it was a bloodcurdling scream for help, a cry of hopeless children, lost and frightened, frightened for their futures, full of doubt, fear and hopelessness, a bedding ground for hatred and aggression. I asked him, "Who is nurturing our family of Americans? Who is instilling a feeling of security and safety? When you took the Presidential oath, you adopted a nation of children of all ages and made a promise to protect and serve them, a symbolic father-figure. When a nation feels they have a compassionate leader, a sense of well-being flows from the doors of the White House into all the main arteries of our great nation." He never answered my letter.

Mr. William Jefferson Clinton

You have, by being who you are from the core, and I will continue to applaud you as our brilliant and kind-hearted, peace-keeping leader.

I will always be there to help in anyway I can.

Gratefully yours,

A handwritten signature in cursive script, reading "Gladys Hawn". The signature is fluid and elegant, with a large, sweeping initial "G" and a long, horizontal flourish extending to the right.

P.S. There will always be ailing budgets to balance now and forever. But balancing the ailing heart is a more serious endeavor. BRAVO....

Please accept our apologies for the delay in thanking you and Mrs. Clinton for including us as guests for the State Dinner honoring President Chirac and Mrs. Chirac. The evening was delightful, the guests enjoyed themselves immensely and the whole affair had a pleasant feeling of intimacy not always found on such occasions.

We certainly would like to congratulate Mrs. Clinton and her staff for having the ability to make all the important details look easy.

We were sorry to leave the dinner a little early as we were trying to beat the severe weather scheduled to hit that night around midnight. We succeeded and have been on the move for the last few weeks.

Veronica and I wish you success and good health.

Dear Mrs. Clinton:

I just received the pictures from your lecture at our law school last month. Thank you so much for signing one of the pictures for me. I will proudly display it in my office.

Because of my age (I am 33 years old), I have a close bond to many of the students. They regularly come by my office and discuss future plans. I can tell you that you had a tremendous impact on them with your presentation. All of them commented that your lecture was one of the best they have ever attended. It got a lot of them thinking about doing public interest work.

If you ever need assistance from someone in the academic sector, you are always free to contact one of us at SMU Law School. I will be a visiting scholar at the University of Tokyo Faculty of Law for the 1996-97 academic year. My mother is Japanese leading to my interest in Japan. If I can be of assistance to you in Tokyo, please do not hesitate to contact me.

Dear Mrs. Clinton,

Thank you so much for the wonderful video you sent to the Virginia Clinton Felley Democratic Women's Club. It was terrific to see you. We only wish you could have been there with us.

As an honor, you were in good company with all of the wonderful women represented.

It is a privilege and honor to see a member of this Club, as well as the Hillary Clinton Fan Club.

Please don't stop speaking out and representing all working mothers. We are the reality - and we're not going away. Once again - Thank you.

Sincerely,

Deane Harry

Dear Ana:

I was delighted to learn of your early admission to Sarah Lawrence College. Congratulations. I know how very proud, and a little sad, your parents must be about your acceptance -- at least it isn't too far from home!

With warm regards and best wishes for continued academic success, I remain

Sincerely yours,

Dear Kelly:

When Ana met Mrs. Clinton at the book signing event Mrs. Clinton asked about Ana's plans for college. I am happy to report that Ana was accepted at Sarah Lawrence College for early admission. Ana will start in September after dividing her summer between an art gallery in Georgetown and DACOWITS at the Pentagon. Do you think that Mrs. Clinton could send Ana a note of congratulations upon her acceptance to Sarah Lawrence?

Sincerely,

Dear Mrs Clinton (Hillary)

While watching C-span last week, I was thrilled to see you and President Clinton in formats that allow you to do what you do best.

You were speaking to the PTA group and President Clinton was leading the conference on faith, drugs, and violence. Both instances were beyond sound bites and allowed the following to shine through:

1. your earnest concern for truly important causes.

2. your incredible organizational skills in extemporizing intelligently. (This same 'buzzer' air time will destroy Dole)

Dear Hillary:

Congratulations on the trip to Bosnia and nearby points. The themes of reconciliation and tolerance came through loud and clear. It is hard to imagine what messages could be more important.

I am so sorry that I cannot join you on April 10 for the event dealing with Chernobyl. I am sure it will be a very good occasion, but we have a Carnegie board meeting that day.

I have greatly enjoyed our recent discussions and look forward to seeing you again before long.

With every good wish,

As always,
