The White House

Dear Anne,

I have been deeply moved by the recent comments of the First Lady about "politics of meaning" (Washington Post, 5/6/93).

Much of my work has dealt with an attempt to overcome the resistance to speaking of "inner issues" in medicine, and to develop a "medicine of meaning." That is why I resonate so strongly with what Ms. Clinton is attempting.

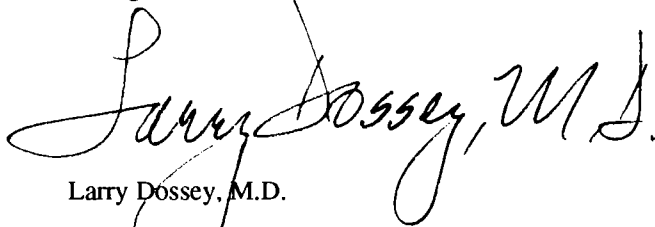

Much of the current crisis in health care is due to the fact that we have utterly divorced science and spirituality. This has led to a medicine that is cold, remote, technical, inhumane, and deplorably expensive. The enclosed book examines options. It shows how medicine can be both scientific and spiritual, and how it can honor the inner meanings of both professionals and patients.

I know it is terribly presumptuous to send reading material to First Lady Hillary Rodham Clinton, but if there is any way you might facilitate her receiving this book, I'd be grateful.

I don't know if you recall my mentioning this, but my wife, Barbara Montgomery Dossey, is from Little Rock. Her family started Browning's Mexican restaurants. Bo Montgomery, my brother-in-law, heads the literacy skills project of Pulaski County.

If I can ever assist in your tasks, let me know.

With gratitude and best wishes,

Larry Dossey, M.D.

Dear Mr. Drew:

Thank you for sending the New York Times editorial on the Australian health care system to your representative, Hamilton Fish.

I appreciate hearing from citizens like you who are concerned about the nation's health care system. I believe you will find that the President's plan will provide the kind of security that Australians now enjoy.

The President's plan will also control spiraling health care costs through an emphasis on preventive and primary care, malpractice reform, and administrative simplification. By taking these important steps, we can accomplish a lot toward the goal of reducing our country's overall health care costs.

Again, thank you for taking the time to write.

Sincerely,

Hillary Rodham Clinton
