Dear Russ:

Thank you for sending me a copy of the report on Baptist Health's new approach to health care organization.

The Population-Based Planning program described in the report is very interesting. I particularly agree that we need to focus not only on caring for the sick but also on finding ways to keep people healthy and on improving the overall health status of the community. As your report mentions, we need a health care system in which it is less necessary to become a patient.

I wish you the best of luck with your new planning approach and the new medical center facility. Thanks, as always, for your support.

Sincerely yours,

Dear Hillary:

While I know you are inundated with reading materials, I thought you just might like to see something positive from back home.

This first report is the culmination of two years study and development of our new approach to planning. We call it Population-Based Planning. You will note the emphasis on children, women and families.

I sincerely hope things are improving for you.

Sincerely,

Russell D. Harrington, Jr., FACHE
