Dear Hillary Clinton:

My name is (b)(6), and I am sixteen years old. I live at Buckners Childrens Village because my parents don't want me. Buckners is a home for children to live if their parents don't want them, or can't take care of them.

Enough about me. Let me tell you why I am writing to you. I am writing you because you are my role model. I'm serious. I want to be like you.

There are several reasons

why I want to be like you. For one thing, I think you are very smart and have a lot of ambition. I like how you don't let what other people say about you get you down. Like when they say that you are too domineering, and say that you are trying to be the president, you don't quit doing what you are doing. I think that's cool. Also, I like how you are a woman successfully making it in a "man's" world. Besides that, I like how you are concerned about children and try and help them in stuff. Plus, you act very self-confident. Like you have real high self esteem, that's something that I desperately need.

I know that you will probably never see this letter, much less read it, but if you happen to, could you please write me back. Oh, I want you to write me back, not one of those people you pay to answer your mail.

Sincerely,

[601c]

Dear (b)(6):

Thank you for your thoughtful and compelling letter. I am touched that you chose to share your personal story with me. The ability to express your feelings in the way that you have in your letter is the sign of a strong young woman.

I hope that you realize your own strength and potential, and develop the confidence in yourself and your convictions that you deserve. You are to be commended on your concern for our nation's children.

Protecting children from violence, abuse and neglect is one of the Clinton administration's highest priorities. However, President Clinton cannot solve these problems alone. No matter how much work is done by the administration, what children will continue to need most are adults who love them, who teach them, who discipline them, and who stand up and fight for their interests.

Thank you again for writing. My thoughts and prayers are with you.

Sincerely yours,

Hillary Rodham Clinton
