RE: Reception and Dinner
Chief Justice Ellen Ann Peters

Chief Justice Jack Holt of Arkansas asked that I put this to your attention.

He wanted staff to know that Chief Justice Peters was a professor of Hillary and that she is the FIRST female Chairperson of the National Center for State Courts. He says that this is a "real big deal". Judge Holt wants to make sure that Hillary is informed about this.

If Hillary is unable to attend Judge Holt suggests a personal letter to Judge Peters that can be read during the event.

I am sorry to bother you with this but Arkansans go to their fellow Arkansans to plead their case.

I hope you are well.

Dear Mr. Sipes:

Thank you for your kind letter inviting Mrs. Clinton to attend the celebration of Chief Justice Ellen Ash Peters' achievement.

Since it is difficult to know what the First Lady's upcoming official schedule will be, I am unable to make a commitment for her at this time. While it is unlikely Mrs. Clinton will be able to accept your invitation, please be assured that we will keep it in mind and contact you if we can accommodate your request.

Mrs. Clinton appreciates your thoughtfulness and sends her best wishes.

Ellen Ash Peters

Chief Justice, Supreme Court of Connecticut

Chief Justice Peters joined the Supreme Court of Connecticut as an associate justice in 1978 and has served as chief justice since 1984. Before joining the Supreme Court, Chief Justice Peters had a long and distinguished career at Yale Law School, where she taught from 1956 to 1978 and was Southmayd Professor of Law from 1975 to 1978. She continued as an adjunct professor until 1984. Chief Justice Peters was a law clerk to Chief Judge Charles E. Clark, of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit, from 1954 to 1955. She has published many law review articles and two books.

Chief Justice Peters is a member of the American Bar Foundation, the American Judicature Society, the American Law Institute Council, the American and Connecticut bar associations, the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, and the American Philosophical Society. She is an Alumni Fellow of the Yale Corporation and received the Distinguished Service Medal from Yale Law School. Chief Justice Peters' other awards include the Ella Grasso Distinguished Service Medal, the Judicial Award from the Connecticut Trial Lawyers Association, the Judiciary Award from the Connecticut Bar Association, and many honorary degrees.

Chief Justice Peters received a B.A. cum laude from Swarthmore College, where she was elected to Phi Beta Kappa, in 1951. She received an LL.B. cum laude from Yale Law School, where she was a member of the Order of the Coif, in 1954.

Dear Ms. Clinton:

Chief Justice Ellen Ash Peters of the Connecticut Supreme Court will become President of the Conference of Chief Justices this year. The Conference of Chief Justices was established in 1949 in St. Louis. Since that time, the Conference has become recognized as the primary representative of the state courts, providing them with national leadership and a national voice.

Concurrently Chief Justice Peters will become Chairperson of the Board of Directors of the National Center for State Courts in August of this year. The Center, established in 1971, is the primary resource for state and local courts throughout the country in their efforts to improve the administration of justice.

Chief Justice Peters is the first woman to serve in these positions. I am writing on behalf of the National Center for State Courts to invite your participation in a celebration of this historic event to take place in Washington this October.

We plan to celebrate Chief Justice Peters' achievement with a reception and dinner to be held at the U.S. Supreme Court. Your participation would be greatly appreciated by her and would emphasize the importance of this milestone. For that reason I am writing to inquire regarding your availability on the evenings of October 16, 17 or 18. We hope to select one of these dates by June 17th so that more detailed arrangements can be made. Our staff will call your office by that date to determine the feasibility of your participation. I send thanks in advance for your favorable consideration of this request.

Sincerely,

Larry L. Sipes

Dear Mrs. Clinton:

Meeting you on Saturday, June 12, in Georgetown was a pleasant surprise. You very graciously shared a few minutes with me and I thank you. I am extremely impressed with your efforts as Chairperson of the Health Care Reform Task Force and I would like to offer my assistance at anytime.

The organization I represent, the American Association for World Health (AAWH), is a non-profit entity that serves as the U.S. based support group for the World Health Organization (WHO) and the Pan American Health Organization (PAHO). We believe that many of today's health challenges can be largely prevented through education. Therefore, we reach out to local communities and help them work actively on health issues in their settings. We link people from business, schools and colleges, religious groups and local governments across the nation and provide a forum for improving the health of all.

It is in this sense that AAWH and the Clinton Administration have an important common mission. You have emphasized the need for greater preventive health care and more community involvement and we are doing just that. This year, for example, we focused on prevention of injury and violence, particularly gun violence as a theme for World Health Day and in a continuing effort to educate the public on preventive care, 1994 has been designated as the year of oral health, a topic which is too often ignored.

I'm sure that you are aware of World AIDS Day and the fact that the White House participated last year by observing the World AIDS Day ceremony. This year WHO has adopted the theme "Time To Act" in order to stress the need for immediate action.

On December 1st, World AIDS Day, the AAWH in conjunction with the National Education Association (NEA), WHO, and PAHO will be holding an international symposium in an effort to reach out to the community of educators across this nation to increase teaching about HIV/AIDS in the context of quality school health education. Our goal is to get the education leadership at elementary, junior high schools and high schools to realize that it's time to act to prevent the spread of HIV/AIDS to our most precious resource, our young.

The participants in our symposium of December 1 and I invite you to speak at World AIDS Day 1993. The event promises to be a significant effort to impact positively the youth of our nation. I hope that you will attend. We would be more than happy to arrange our schedule around yours in order to make this possible.

Enclosed are some sample resource materials that AAWH produced. I hope you will find them useful.

I respect you and your work and wish you much success. If there is a way that I can support your effort, please feel free to let me know.

With warmest personal regards,

Dear Hillary:

The State Democratic parties of Iowa, Nebraska and South Dakota and the Woodbury County Democratic Party would like to formally invite you to attend the Second Tri-State Democrats Unity Dinner to be held in Sioux City, Iowa on August 13, 1993. The evening will begin at 6:00 p.m. at the Sioux City Convention Center with a social hour and continue with dinner at 7:00 p.m. and with the program beginning at approximately 7:45 p.m.

The Unity Dinner developed out of the desire to work together on a regional basis to promote the interest of Democrats. Since Sioux City is the regional media center for the three states the dinner can provide some very good media coverage for those candidates and elected officials in attendance. In addition, Bonnie Campbell, current Attorney General for the State of Iowa, is contemplating a very serious bid for Governor against incumbent Terry Branstad. We are very interested in hosting or facilitating a conference earlier in the day in which you and Attorney General Bonnie Campbell (and the Nebraska and South Dakota Attorneys General) could discuss issues such as child abuse, recovery and payments owed by "dead beat parents" for back support or other issues important to you, Bonnie and the public (this could of course help Bonnie in what is expected to be a very strong bid against a very weak opponent/incumbent).

Your attendance is greatly desired at this event and is needed to make the event a success. We are very proud to have you as the First Lady of the United States and have been proud of the way you have handled yourself and your position. We would be very much honored by your presence at this event. The first event was held in 1991 and featured the largest gathering at that time of presidential candidates and was a tremendous success. Many individuals left feeling that it was the best political event that they had ever attended.

Dear Ms. Williams:

At the end of 1992, more than 2,500 people were living with AIDS in the Washington metropolitan area. As the largest community-based HIV/AIDS organization in the area, Whitman-Walker Clinic saw its caseload increase by a staggering 56 percent. The demand for the Clinic's services grows every day, as does the need for fundraising events such as our annual "Guess Who's Coming to Dinner." Now in its sixth year, this affair, while being one of our major fund raisers, has become the principal means through which the critical work of the Clinic is recognized and supported by the political and social leaders in our city.

"Guess Who's Coming to Dinner," a series of celebrity dinner parties, is one of our most dynamic and vital events. Last year this event raised over $70,000 to support Whitman-Walker Clinic's services to people living with AIDS. In addition to the money raised by the dinner, this event has become one of the most memorable and enjoyable gatherings sponsored by the Clinic each year. That's why so many of our hosts, celebrities and guests come back year after year.

I hope that you will consider being one of our celebrities at this fundraiser. The Sixth Annual "Guess Who's Coming to Dinner" will be held on Monday, July 19th. You may have heard this event was originally scheduled for early June. However, due to unforeseen circumstances, the date has been changed to July 19th. As always, all proceeds from the evening will benefit Whitman-Walker Clinic's AIDS Program.

As in the past, approximately 500 guests attend an opening cocktail reception at a central location, to be held this year at The Galleria at Lafayette Centre, 1155 - 21st Street, N.W. Guests then depart for one of the dinners hosted by noted Washingtonians at homes and restaurants around the city. These dinners range from a simple buffet to a formal sit-down affair. We generally try to group celebrities who know each other at a place that is also convenient to reach.

Your participation in this year's "Guess Who's Coming to Dinner" will help ensure the success of the event. Please fill out the enclosed card, indicating your interest in attending the dinner as one of our celebrities this year. In the meantime, if you have any questions about the dinners, or would like additional information about the Clinic and its services, please feel free to call John A. Cmar, Special Events Manager, at (202) 797-3588.

Dear Mrs. Clinton:

Congratulations on your recent nomination to receive the Dr. Albert Schweitzer Leadership award that will be presented to you at the Waldorf-Astoria in New York this May. I have attended this event several times and have observed what a highlight it has been in the lives of some of your peers in leadership roles; such as Robert Mosbacher; Dr. Roy Vagelos; General Norman Schwarzkopf; Mikhail Gorbachv and others. I believe this experience will be one of the most memorable high points of your successful career.

Hugh O'Brian and I have been friends for a number of years. My involvement in the Hugh O'Brian Youth Foundation has been as a sponsor and keynote speaker for the past 5 World Leadership Congress seminars. This has vastly broadened my appreciation for what Dr. Schweitzer inspired in Hugh, and what Hugh has made available to youth around the globe.

Mrs. Clinton, as leaders, we are endeavoring to teach these young people how to think for themselves and how to develop leadership skills. Since you are one of America's most recognized leaders, I would like to quote you on your definition of leadership, and repeat any advice that you might consider pertinent in helping these young people with their challenging role, when I open the 1993 World Leadership Congress (WLC) at Ohio State University in Columbus.

Last week I had the privilege and pleasure of spending an hour with Harold A. Poling, who will of course be sharing this award with you. He enlightened me on several key elements that I will be able to effectively pass on to these students who represent nearly 3 million high school sophomores from around the globe.

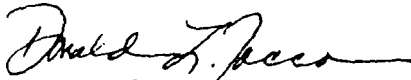

Indeed, I would be honored if you and I might spend 20-45 minutes, so that a balanced presentation can be created from 3 dynamic leaders representing government, industry and communications.

Breast Cancer

Ms. Maggie Williams
The White House
Pennsylvania Ave
Washington, DC 20510

Dear Ms. Williams,

I would like to invite Hillary Rodham Clinton to be the keynote speaker at our Symposium, Living Beyond Breast Cancer, in November 1993 (Saturday November 6 or 13th, or a date that would best accommodate Mrs. Clinton).

The organization, "Living Beyond Breast Cancer", was established to assist women with the complex medical, psychological and social issues which women face after completing primary treatment for breast cancer. We pursue this goal both through patient education and political activism.

The full-day Saturday conference in November will focus on educational issues such as: 1) Breast cancer prevention and screening in women who have had breast cancer and in the women in their families, 2) The potential benefits and side effects of tamoxifen therapy, 3) Safe treatment of post-menopausal symptoms (estrogen replacement therapy is not considered safe in women who have had breast cancer), 4) Safe options for reconstruction after mastectomy, 5) Re-establishing control of life after therapy to become as happy and as healthy as possible, 6) How to get a job and keep a job with the pre-existing condition of breast cancer, 7) Affordable health insurance which pays the bills. The conference will also encourage women to become politically active on issues such as: 1) funding for basic science and clinical research on breast cancer, 2) assisting the Clinton Administration to develop a strategy to eradicate the breast cancer epidemic, 3) access to quality mammography for all women regardless of their ability to pay.

This Symposium is sponsored by the Living Beyond Breast Cancer Organization in cooperation with the Linda Creed Breast Cancer Foundation, the Pennsylvania Chapter of the National Breast Cancer Coalition, the American Cancer Society; community hospitals, and the five area university hospital systems. We have also received strong support from our political leaders: State Senator Allyson Schwartz, Congresswoman Marjorie Margolies-Mezvinsky, Senator Arlen Specter, and Senator Harris Wofford.

We hope that Mrs Clinton's words will provide our organization with guidance, vision and inspiration. Guidance, because as the leading national expert on our nation's health care system, Mrs. Clinton has unique insights into the strengths and weaknesses of a system on which our members are dependent. Vision, because Mrs. Clinton recognizes the importance of community education and preventive care. Women seek the knowledge and ability to take control of their own health. Preventive care strategies, to minimize the risk of recurrent breast cancer or of a new breast cancer in a daughter or sister, for example, represent new concepts for health care reform. Inspiration, because she has stressed the importance of volunteerism, cooperation, and sacrifice. As a professional woman, she understands the unique message a woman can deliver as an educator and leader and she has known the responsibility involved with taking care of someone else's life. Mrs. Clinton has also stressed the importance of combining resources to serve people, rising above the politics which limit cooperation between hospitals and organizations.

I greatly appreciate your serious consideration of this offer. Please feel free to call me at any time for any reason (home: 215-668-2660; work: 648-1601). The most direct address for correspondence is: 204 Avon Rd., Narberth, PA 19072. I look forward to your response.

Dear Dr. Weiss:

Thank you for your follow-up letter to your invitation for Mrs. Clinton to speak at your Fall conference, "Living Beyond Breast Cancer" and the article describing the work of your organization. I found the article most informative.

I have forwarded your request to the Office of Scheduling for the First Lady for consideration. Additionally, I will make certain that Mrs. Clinton knows of your special interest in the invitation. Our office will inform you as soon as a decision has been made.

Sincerely,

Maggie Williams

Dear Ms. Williams,

This is a quick follow-up letter to our "formal" invitation to Hillary Clinton to be the Keynote Speaker at our Fall conference, "Living Beyond Breast Cancer". We are expecting the attendance of 500 women with breast cancer and their physicians, with tremendous cooperation between the five area university hospital systems, numerous community hospitals, the Linda Creed Breast Cancer Foundation, the American Cancer Society, and the new Pennsylvania Chapter of the National Breast Cancer Foundation. The conference will be an excellent forum for Mrs. Clinton to present her ideas on the new Health Care Reform Plan. In addition, we have the strong support of Senators Wofford and Spector, and Congresswoman Margolies-Mezvinsky. Each of these representatives will send you a letter requesting Mrs. Clinton's participation in the conference.

The tentative date of the Conference is Saturday, November 13, 1993. We have scheduled it on a Saturday so that working women can attend. If a Saturday or this date represents a problem, we can change it.

Thank you again for your serious consideration. Please feel free to call me at any time for any reason (home: 215-668-2660; work: 648-1601). The most direct address for correspondence is: 204 Avon Rd., Narberth, PA 19072.

I look forward to receiving a response to our invitation.

Sincerely,

Marisa C. Weiss, M.D.

Slice of Life

Hearts I

Women who give birth to many children face a somewhat higher than usual risk of having heart disease.

A study says women who have had six or more children appear to be about 50 percent more likely than childless women to suffer heart trouble.

Why this is so isn't known, and the researchers caution their work does not actually prove that having children causes heart problems.

An analysis of two large studies involving nearly 5,000 women found a similar increase in the risk of heart disease in women who had six or more children.

Those who gave birth to fewer children had no unusual risk of heart trouble.

Hearts II

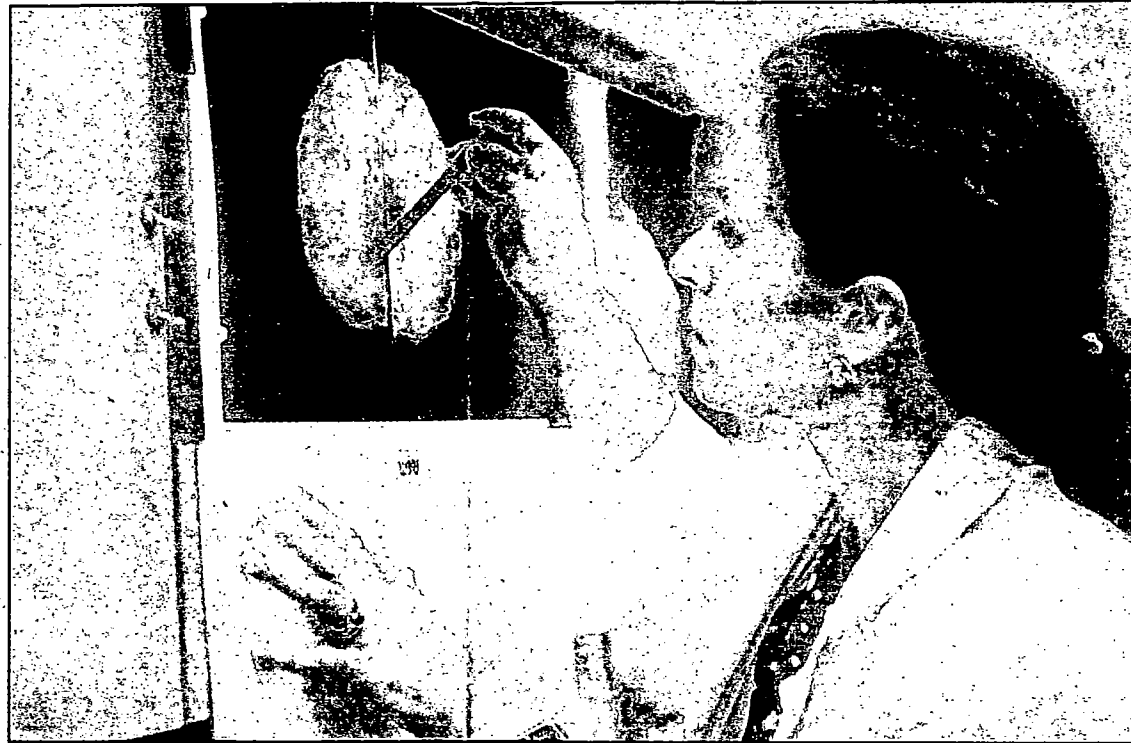

A study of Medicare patients found that whites are more likely than blacks to get heart bypass operations and balloon angioplasties.

The reason appeared to have nothing to do with differences in their conditions.

The study showed whites are 78 percent more likely to get the specialty treatments than blacks after heart disease is diagnosed.

Researchers at Brigham and Women's Hospital in Boston say the findings could reflect social or economic factors not taken into account, different preferences among patients or racial bias.

The study suggests blacks are not shut out of specialized medical care since all were likely to have seen a cardiologist.

Living Beyond Breast Cancer:

One doctor's crusade to educate and support victims of disease

By JUDITH CAPAR
Staff Writer

After the diagnosis, after the surgery, after the reconstruction, after the chemotherapy or radiation, then what?

Women with breast cancer are closely entwined with the health-care system in the year after they learn of their disease.

But the often complex medical, psychological and social issues be screened?

The women have questions about themselves: What is the chance of recurrence? Can they do anything to minimize that risk? Is it appropriate for them to have children, and if so, when? Are silicone implants safe?

And what about their overall health?

Noting that in the general population of women, 30 percent die of heart disease, Weiss said: "We need to make sure the women who have had breast cancer don't just focus on their breast cancer. They can't just not shut out of specialized medical care since all were likely to have seen a cardiologist.

Hearts III

Heart-attack patients are about five times more likely to die within six months of leaving the hospital if they are severely depressed after their attack than if they were not.

About one in five hospitalized heart-attack patients is significantly depressed after the attack, and the new result argues for treating their mood disorder.

A psychiatrist at the University of Montreal and the Montreal Heart Institute says it's not clear how depression raises the short-term death risk, but says it may involve biological and behavioral effects.

Prostate cancer

For older men with prostate cancer in its early stages, doing nothing but watching and waiting may be better than surgery.

Researchers say men over 65 who received aggressive treatment lived less than a year longer on average than those whose cancer was simply monitored.

A second study found the rate of removal of the prostate gland increased nearly sixfold from 1984 to 1990 among Medicare patients, all of them over 65.

A doctor who worked on both studies said there's an epidemic of treatment and no scientific proof that it's valid.

Telephone therapy

This is in the why-didn't-they-think-of-that-before category.

Researchers have found a simple way to treat people who are afraid to leave their homes: Do it over the phone.

A study found telephone therapy might be useful for rural residents who suffer from panic attacks with agoraphobia — a condition that can leave sufferers virtually housebound.

Even in urban areas, telephone therapy might help patients enough so they can get to a clinic for further treatment.

These panic attacks are a relatively common condition in which people have sudden bouts of unexplained terror, or a persistent fear of being alone in a public place from which they think it would be hard to escape or get help if incapacitated.

closely entwined with the health-care system in the year after they learn of their disease.

But the often complex medical, psychological and social issues that accompany breast cancer are not confined to a treatment timetable.

Sometimes, as in Joann's case, they linger for years without being addressed.

"It happened to me in 1980," she said. "I was a single parent. I had a teen-ager I had to deal with. I had to support myself, and to me breast cancer was something you experienced, but you didn't dwell on it and you went on with your life."

Two months ago, Joann attended a conference at the Upper Main Line YMCA in Berwyn where she finally began to confront the issues she had suppressed all these years.

"It's hard to do by yourself, to have no one to talk to about it — even in my family," she said.

She recalled, in particular, her mother's reaction to the news of her cancer.

"My mother came for a visit and when I went to go and hug her, she backed off from me," said Joann, not her real name. "That was much worse than having the cancer myself."

"I plastered over that and went on with my life and it caught up with me at the conference. It smacked me in the face. No one had ever talked to me or asked me how I felt about it. At that conference, I felt like I was mourning a loss that I never looked at before."

To help women like Joann, Dr. Marisa C. Weiss founded Living Beyond Breast Cancer, the group that sponsored the March conference, and one last fall at Cabrini College.

"Living Beyond Breast Cancer basically was started out of my

VICTIMS OF DISEASE

Dr. Marisa C. Weiss is the founder of Living Beyond Breast Cancer, an organization dedicated to addressing issues that arise after primary treatment of breast cancer.

frustration with the traditional medical approach to breast cancer," Weiss said. "In general, the primary focus of cancer care is on the primary diagnosis and treatment."

"Does this woman have breast cancer? Let's biopsy it. Should she have a lumpectomy and radiation or is mastectomy necessary? Does she need chemotherapy? Does tamoxifen have a role?"

All critical questions, of course, but the story doesn't end as the primary care winds down, Weiss said.

"Their whole life is completely changed," Weiss said of breast-cancer survivors. "There's no woman whose life is not changed."

A woman who is found to be a candidate for tamoxifen, for example, may take the anti-cancer drug for several years — if not the rest of her life.

But it can have unpleasant side effects — mood swings, hot flashes and sexual dysfunction, Weiss said.

"How do they deal with that?" Weiss asked. "The person who writes the prescription for that drug needs to take on the responsibility of informing the women about how to stay healthy while on it and how to monitor the potential side effects."

The list of medical issues that confront women in the years after their breast cancer is long.

The women have questions about their daughters: Are they at increased risk? When should they population of women, 50 percent die of heart disease, Weiss said. "We need to make sure the women who have had breast cancer don't just focus on their breast cancer. They can't just focus on the health problem that has manifested itself."

Then there are often complex psychological and social issues involving self-image, relationships with men and how co-workers and friends react to them.

When they look for a job, do they have to disclose their medical history? Can they get insurance, a car loan or a mortgage on a house? Can they adopt a child?

"Doctors need to have answers to these questions when they come up in the patient's follow-up care, and doctors need to realize that this is an important aspect of women's care," Weiss said.

For that reason, one of her goals for Living Beyond Breast Cancer is educating physicians and health professionals through lectures she gives at hospitals and at medical meetings.

Weiss is a radiation oncologist specializing in breast cancer who works at Paoli Memorial Hospital and Chester County Hospital.

A resident of Narberth, she is a member of Chester County's only radiation oncology practice, which she joined a year and a half ago following a seven-year career at the University of Pennsylvania.

"At Penn, there's a strong emphasis on breast cancer, and I've been very moved and inspired by the women I've treated," she said.

For two years, Weiss did basic laboratory research, working with Dr. Mark Greene, whose team is known for its studies of two oncogenes linked to breast cancer.

She said she still keeps a hand in research, collaborating indirectly with Greene, and more

Charges dropped

PAPEETE, Tahiti — A judge dropped charges against actor Marlon Brando's daughter in the shooting death of her lover at the Brando estate in California in 1990.

Cheyenne Brando's half-brother, Christian Brando, was convicted in California in January 1991 for the shooting death of Dag Drollet, father of her child. Drollet's father brought charges in Tahiti against Ms. Brando of murder conspiracy and non-assistance to a person in danger.

Ms. Brando, 22, had gone to the South Pacific French territory to join her mother and was reported to have attempted suicide twice. She later underwent therapy in Paris.

Judge Jean-Bernard Taliercio, who threw out the charges Tuesday in the Tahitian capital of Papeete, said his decision "was motivated essentially by elimination of all aspects of the notion of complicity."

He also said the charge of non-assistance "does not exist in California."

Drollet's father can appeal.

Lion 'bagged'

LOS ANGELES — Thieves bagged a 300-pound bronze statue of a lion from the front yard of a member of the singing group The Lettermen.

The 50-inch-tall statue, valued at $10,000, was taken from singer Anthony Butala's yard in suburban Woodland Hills sometime Sunday.

"With something that big I'd say there would be more than one suspect and they had a truck," said police Detective Bill Martin. "There was two of them (statues) there, only one was taken."

Butala was out of town on a singing tour and couldn't be reached for comment.

Oxford degree

OXFORD, England — Oxford University conferred an honorary law degree Wednesday on Irish President Mary Robinson at the start of her three-day visit to Britain.

Mrs. Robinson is due to pay a courtesy call to Queen Elizabeth II at Buckingham Palace on Thursday. It will be the first official meeting between an Irish president and a British sovereign since Ireland achieved independence 71 years ago.

Mrs. Robinson, formerly a senior member of the Irish Bar, was conferred with a Doctor of Civil Law Degree by Diploma. The degree is used by Oxford University to honor members of royal families or heads of state.

By honoring her, she said, the university also "honors the people of Ireland."

Mrs. Robinson is on her seventh visit to Britain since becoming Ireland's first woman president in 1990.

Cancer

directly on projects with Dr. Lori Jardines at the Medical College of Pennsylvania and Dr. Barbara Fowle at Penn.

While on the attending staff at Penn, Weiss became concerned about the limited way the medical community was dealing with breast cancer.

"Two days a week I was seeing women in follow-up — and I don't know how many hundreds of those there were — and that's when I realized there were all these issues coming up that I had no answers to," she said.

From that experience came Living Beyond Breast Cancer, which Weiss founded unofficially two years ago and incorporated about six months ago as a non-profit group.

Weiss runs Living Beyond Breast Cancer basically by herself out of her home, although volunteers help with projects.

"I'm not located at a particular hospital," she said. "It's very important to me to be as neutral as possible and not affiliate with a specific organization."

"The reason why is that as soon as you affiliate yourself with an institution, you're limited by that institution's interests and you can't expand. By staying neutral, I can work with all kinds of groups and all kinds of hospitals."

Her patient-education conferences, like the one Joann attended, have had the financial support of six hospitals — Lankenau, Bryn Mawr, Paoli Memorial, Chester County, Brandywine and Phoenixville.

Weiss said she raises funds from participating institutions to pay for conference expenses, such as renting space, food, printing and mailing invitations.

She involves health professionals from each institution in the presentations.

This fall, she is hoping to attract first lady Hillary Clinton to a large symposium for which Weiss is soliciting the backing of Philadelphia's five teaching hospitals, as well as community hospitals.

Volunteering all her time for Living Beyond Breast Cancer, Weiss is often up before dawn to do a mailing, or will work into the night.

That's because once she leaves the hospital, her life also includes a husband, Dr. David Friedman, a pediatric hematologist at The Children's Hospital of Philadelphia, and three young children — a 5½-year-old son and 3-year-old twins, a boy and girl.

Admittedly "a busy lady," with "plenty of other things to do," Weiss said she pushes ahead with Living Beyond Breast Cancer because "it's necessary. I just think this area of women's health care has not been adequately addressed."

Weiss said support groups, where breast-cancer survivors get together to help each other are important for addressing many psychological issues.

"But the medical issues and social issues need to be addressed in a much more comprehensive manner," she said. "The medical issues are critical to their well care."

Weiss said Living Beyond Breast Cancer has become involved with advocacy groups to help "get big things done," such as finding a cure for breast cancer or discovering a better imaging technique than mammography.

"We need to get more money allocated for breast cancer research and we need to make sure good projects are funded," she said.

Living Beyond Breast Cancer is a member of the National Breast Cancer Coalition, a confederation of national grass-roots organizations whose lobbying is credited with dramatically increasing the current federal budget for breast-cancer research.

Earlier this month, Weiss went to Washington, D.C., for the kick-off of the coalition's latest national campaign.

The coalition hopes to collect 2.6 million signatures urging President Clinton to declare breast cancer a national health emergency.

The number represents the 1.6 million American women who have breast cancer today and the 1 million more who have it but don't yet know it.

Each year, breast cancer, a disease for which there is no cure or prevention, kills 46,000 Americans. Over a lifetime, a woman's risk of getting the disease is one in eight, according to the National Cancer Institute.

Joann, 54, found out about Weiss' March conference, called "Help Yourself," through a mailing from Chester County Hospital, where she had a mastectomy 13 years ago.

Now living in Wilmington, Del., the former West Chester resident felt it was time to address the issues she had kept to herself.

"There was something missing," she said. "There was a piece missing that I could not put my finger on."

"I knew there were others suffering from the same thing I had but I had not connected with them. I needed that."

During this time, Joann, who has been divorced since 1969, went back to college, got a degree in human services and actively participated in her church activities.

"I sort of avoided my own self in the process. My own personal needs weren't being met," she said.

The conference's emphasis on empowering women to take charge of their health focused on topics that Joann had always been interested in — such as nutrition, exercise and the mind-body connection.

"It was a holistic type of thing, and that's the way I view my life, as a whole," she said. "I make sure I'm in top health. I make sure my exercising is a priority in my life and that my eating habits are a priority in my life."

But psychologically, Joann is just beginning to come to terms with her breast cancer and its effect on her life.

"I need to fully mourn it, I really do, and to feel OK with myself," she said.

Weiss said another woman at the conference finally decided to stop hiding from her husband.

"She hadn't gotten undressed in front of her husband since her mastectomy," Weiss said. "To him, it wasn't a big deal, but to her it was."

"Basically those are the types of things that happen at these conferences. A lot comes out of the closet."

The White House

Dear Ms. Williams:

I enclose a copy of my letter of June 3 to Mrs. Clinton and, with hopes that you will encourage and expedite her acceptance, I am writing to give you more details of the symposium which opens September 24.

The symposium is typical of the educational programs offered at the Wilson Birthplace. The event will highlight a current exhibition of Ellen Axson Wilson's paintings, 1884-1914. As you may know, she was the first professionally-trained artist to reside in the White House. (She established and designed the Rose Garden.) The retrospective exhibit, jointly assembled and sponsored with the Wilson House in Washington, is the first showing of Ellen Wilson's paintings since her one-woman exhibition at the Philadelphia Arts and Crafts Guild in 1913. Historians generally agree that Ellen Wilson broke ground for later reform-minded presidential partners such as Eleanor Roosevelt and others of this century.

Now, as the century is coming to a close, Mrs. Clinton is far exceeding the national contributions of any of her predecessors. Her presence at the September symposium would emphasize not only how women's roles have changed, but also how important those roles are in changing society.

Two former first ladies, Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis and Lady Bird Johnson, are honorary members of the Wilson Birthplace Foundation. They and all other first ladies will be invited to the symposium.

Ms. Margaret A. Williams

June 3, 1993

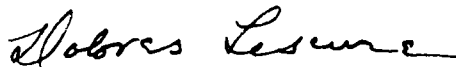

Woodrow Wilson's Birthplace is in Staunton, the center of the Shenandoah Valley of Virginia and 150 miles from Washington. It's a short trip by helicopter or a three-hour limo drive. The private non-profit Birthplace Foundation was formed in the 1930s to preserve and maintain the 28th President's birthplace and keep it open for the public. Edith Bolling Wilson, the President's second wife, was instrumental in restoring the Birthplace. President Franklin D. Roosevelt was the dedication speaker in 1941. A museum enlarging upon the life and service of Wilson as professor, president and world peacemaker was added in 1990.

Mrs. Clinton's participation in the September symposium would be a supreme tribute to Ellen Wilson's career in art and her ardent concerns for human needs, as well as a recognition of the public service of the Woodrow Wilson Birthplace Foundation.

We stand ready to work with your staff on arranging the short trip to Virginia and all necessary accommodations and schedules. Our executive director is Susan Klaffky (703-885-0897 or Fax, 703 886-9874). I may be reached at the same numbers or at home, 703-886-3050.

We look forward to Mrs. Clinton's acceptance, and thank you for your assistance.

Most sincerely,

Hillary Rodham Clinton
The White House
Washington, DC 20500

Dear Mrs. Clinton:

The Trustees of the Woodrow Wilson Birthplace invite you to come to Staunton September 24, 1993 and to be the keynote speaker for a symposium which, we think, will be of compelling interest to you. The title of the symposium is "Women in Transition: Ellen Axson Wilson and Issues in the Life of a Twentieth Century First Lady."

We believe you can speak to those issues more eloquently than anyone else. A series of presentations will be made by social, cultural and art historians. Your keynote address would be an extraordinary opportunity for you to present, and us to understand, the challenges and complexities of a First Lady's role in politics, government and the American way of life.

The symposium is being held in connection with an outstanding exhibition of paintings done by Ellen Axson Wilson in the years 1884 until her death in 1914. The exhibit was shown recently in the Wilson House in Washington.

The symposium audience will be students and faculty from a consortium of Virginia colleges and universities as well as the general public. Your personal insights on the issues which are shaping your role in history would provide a back-drop for symposium discussions.

We hope you can accept this invitation.

Dear Ms. Williams:

I enclose a copy of my letter of June 3 to Mrs. Clinton and, with hopes that you will encourage and expedite her acceptance, I am writing to give you more details of the symposium which opens September 24.

The symposium is typical of the educational programs offered at the Wilson Birthplace. The event will highlight a current exhibition of Ellen Axon Wilson's paintings, 1884-1914. As you may know, she was the first professionally-trained artist to reside in the White House. (She established and designed the Rose Garden.) The retrospective exhibit, jointly assembled and sponsored with the Wilson House in Washington, is the first showing of Ellen Wilson's paintings since her one-woman exhibition at the Philadelphia Arts and Crafts Guild in 1913. Historians generally agree that Ellen Wilson broke ground for later reform-minded presidential partners such as Eleanor Roosevelt and others of this century.

Now, as the century is coming to a close, Mrs. Clinton is far exceeding the national contributions of any of her predecessors. Her presence at the September symposium would emphasize not only how women's roles have changed, but also how important those roles are in changing society.

Two former first ladies, Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis and Lady Bird Johnson, are honorary members of the Wilson Birthplace Foundation. They and all other first ladies will be invited to the symposium.

Woodrow Wilson's Birthplace is in Staunton, the center of the Shenandoah Valley of Virginia and 150 miles from Washington. It's a short trip by helicopter or a three-hour limo drive. The private non-profit Birthplace Foundation was formed in the 1930s to preserve and maintain the 28th President's birthplace and keep it open for the public. Edith Bolling Wilson, the President's second wife, was instrumental in restoring the Birthplace. President Franklin D. Roosevelt was the dedication speaker in 1941. A museum enlarging upon the life and service of Wilson as professor, president and world peacemaker was added in 1990.

Mrs. Clinton's participation in the September symposium would be a supreme tribute to Ellen Wilson's career in art and her ardent concerns for human needs, as well as a recognition of the public service of the Woodrow Wilson Birthplace Foundation.

We stand ready to work with your staff on arranging the short trip to Virginia and all necessary accommodations and schedules. Our executive director is Susan Klaffky (703-885-0897 or Fax, 703 886-9874). I may be reached at the same numbers or at home, 703-886-3050.

We look forward to Mrs. Clinton's acceptance, and thank you for your assistance.

Most sincerely,

Dolores Lescure
President

Dear Mrs. Clinton:

The Trustees of the Woodrow Wilson Birthplace invite you to come to Staunton September 24, 1993 and to be the keynote speaker for a symposium which, we think, will be of compelling interest to you. The title of the symposium is "Women in Transition: Ellen Axson Wilson and Issues in the Life of a Twentieth Century First Lady."

We believe you can speak to those issues more eloquently than anyone else. A series of presentations will be made by social, cultural and art historians. Your keynote address would be an extraordinary opportunity for you to present, and us to understand, the challenges and complexities of a First Lady's role in politics, government and the American way of life.

The symposium is being held in connection with an outstanding exhibition of paintings done by Ellen Axson Wilson in the years 1884 until her death in 1914. The exhibit was shown recently in the Wilson House in Washington.

The symposium audience will be students and faculty from a consortium of Virginia colleges and universities as well as the general public. Your personal insights on the issues which are shaping your role in history would provide a back-drop for symposium discussions.

We hope you can accept this invitation.

Cordially,

Dolores Lescure
President
