At the same time, the Journal of the American Medical Association (JAMA) has been a vocal proponent of the "evidence-based medicine" movement, which emphasizes the use of scientific research to guide clinical practice. This movement has led to a greater emphasis on clinical trials and the use of statistical methods to evaluate the effectiveness of treatments.

White sand, blue skies and green palm trees
That is Aruba.

HELLO, HELLO! - WHAT
DAY IS IT?! - I SHOULDN'T
GLOAT! THIS IS GREAT. -

THE SUN, SAND, BEACH VIEWS - OR IN SOME CASES LIKE THE ONE ON THE FRONT - VISTAS ARE WONDERFUL! THE FISH, SHRIMP
etc. - OF COURSE - I'M NOT INTER-

ESTED IN! I HAVE TO SAY,
THE PEOPLE OF ARUBA SEEM VERY NICE, & ARE QUITE
PROUD THAT THEY ARE HONEST!
THAT CRIME IS REAL LOW.

WHILE I MISS ALL OF YOU -
I'M NOT ANXIOUS TO GET BACK

Enjoying '60's and '70's weather, but miss you. Hope to see you Tuesday,
Feb. 7th.

As I write, it's lovely to be able to look out at the hibiscus blooming and the grapefruit trees heavy with fruit. We've had a little rain and everything is very green.

Love to all,

Phyllis

Dear Evan and all,

Between walking on the beach
and swimming in the heated pool
I'm running a clipping service for the First Lady's office (see enclosure).

I don't know if Lisa usually sees

In a lunch with reporters, she says the country doesn't recognize the "real" Hillary Clinton.

By Marian Burros
N.Y. TIMES NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — Saying that she is eager to present herself in a more likable way, Hillary Rodham Clinton on Monday said she had been "dumb and naive" about national politics and was to blame for the failure of the health care overhaul plan last year.

She said that she is sometimes shocked by the harsh way she comes across in news reports — as a woman that she herself would not particularly want to know. And she asked a group of female writers — including Ann Landers — invited to lunch at the White House how she could better make the public see her in the sympathetic, more complicated way in which she sees herself.

"I am surprised at the way people seem to perceive me," she said, "and sometimes I read stories and hear things about me and I go 'ugh.' I wouldn't like her either. It's so unlike what I think I am or what my friends think I am."

She added: "So I can only guess that people are getting perceptions about me from things I am saying or doing in ways that don't correspond with things I am trying to get across. I didn't get this whole image creation thing. I see what it can do but I'm not sure I get it. I have let other people define me."

In interviews last year immediately after her health care plan collapsed in Congress, the first lady tended to say that the failure had to do with her being a woman in a male-dominated political system that found her position of authority hard to accept.

Monday, speaking to a group of women who normally write about gossip, personal advice, style and the first lady's social functions, Clinton put most of the fault on herself.

"I think I was naive and dumb, because my view was, results speak for themselves," Clinton told the group, which included Donnie Radcliffe, who specializes in covering first ladies for The Washington Post, and the gossip columnists Lois Romano of The Washington Post and Jeannie Williams of USA Today.

"I regret very much that the efforts on health care were badly misunderstood, taken out of context and used politically against the administration. I take responsibility for that, and I'm very sorry for that."

Clinton said she had thought she could reach an accommodation with the Republicans in Congress and had not sought strong political counsel.

"I take responsibility for not understanding what was going on," she said. "There was a lack of politically savvy advice. No one had figured out the dynamics."

During the luncheon into which Clinton began by speaking the record but later agreed for publication, the first lady bent on finding a way to counter a harsh run of publicity.

It was not the first time she had undertaken an image makeover in the 1992 campaign, after which she was out of public view for a while. Advisers undertook to make her seem softer and more traditionally feminine as part of what they

on. I take responsibility and I'm very sorry for that." said she had thought she had an accommodation with politicians in Congress and sought strong political responsibility for not understanding what was going on. "There was a lack of political advice. No one had figured the dynamics."

During the luncheon interview, in which Clinton began by speaking off the record but later agreed to talk for publication, the first lady seemed bent on finding a way to counter her harsh run of publicity. It was not the first time Clinton had undertaken an image makeover; in the 1992 campaign, after taking her out of public view for a time, her advisers undertook to make her seem softer and more traditionally feminine as part of what they called

"The Manhattan Project" to reshape Bill Clinton's candidacy. And, as before, the most recent effort by Hillary Clinton may have reflected the lingering confusion over the proper role for a first lady who is not content with retiring to the social wing of the White House. Clinton spoke in the relative comfort of an informal lunch with reporters who do not cover hard news. Clinton said Monday that she is no longer upset by personal attacks. "At first you are sort of stunned," she said. "After a while it gets easier." She acknowledged that she was to blame for her unfavorable public image. But she said she is still bewildered by others' perceptions of her as a tough-minded litigator who often comes across as self-righteous. Friends of Clinton often remark on her sense of humor and her warmth.

NEW JERSEY SCHOOL BOARDS ASSOCIATION

Six Years of Success

For the sixth year in a row, the annual Urban Education Conference was a success, with over 250 school board members, teachers, students, parents, school administrators and NJSBA officers in attendance. Ironically, the title of this year's program was "Student Success Network: Who is Involved?"

Conference committee members responsible for planning the two-day event were Dorothie Dorrington, Atlantic City; Rita Heins, Lindenwold; Mamie Jackson, Pleasantville; Elaine Bey, Camden; Fred Lester, Hillside; Nydia Belfort, Camden; Ernestine Harris, East Orange; Gilmon Brooks, Neptune; William Knox, Long Branch; Maxine Baker, Passaic; Dr. Willie Carter, Monroe; Cathy Southerland, Irvington; Diane Cooper, East Orange; Alice Dunston, Orange and committee chairperson, Annette D'Angelo, Bloomfield.

The committee selected a new site for the 1995 Spring Conference and Annual Dinner held on May 19 and 20.

The Friday night and Saturday affair took place at the Holiday Inn Conference Center and Hotel in Somerset.

The program showcased ten "Programs that Work." Educational initiatives developed by local school district staff had specific components that demonstrated successful collaboration between schools and community agencies. Urban school district superintendents submitted model program descriptions for review and consideration by the conference planning committee.

Using the conference theme and evaluation reports that documented student growth and educational improvement, the committee selected the following projects: "Augusta Street School Young Gentlemen's Club," Irvington Board of Education; "Highlighted Active Parental Involvement Program," Camden City; "Youth Employability Enhancement Program," Orange City; Site-Based

Bridgeton Board Receives Certification

The Bridgeton Board of Education was awarded board certification by the NJSBA Board Member Academy in recognition of its members' participation in training courses. Bridgeton joins the first two urban boards—Orange City and Camden City—to receive board certification. There are 62 urban boards statewide.

The certificate was presented by NJSBA President Mark Finkelstein at the June 9 Board of Directors meeting.

Certification Requirements To receive board certification the board must schedule and participate in special training programs conducted by NJSBA. The board must earn at least 18 Board Member Academy Credits within a three-year period (each credit earned equals one hour of training). To count toward board certification, each training session must be attended by at least seven of a nine member board, five of a seven member board or four of a five member board. ■

President's Report

Mark J. Finkelstein

On April 15, 1965, the federal government passed one of the most significant public education funding acts in history. The legislation signed into law was P.L. 89-10, the "Elementary and Secondary Education Act." Most of the 15,000 school districts across this country were affected by the enactment of this law. The most popular section of the new law was "Title I of ESEA." Funding was categorical and intended to supplement local district funding sources. Students of urban school districts, so labeled "disadvantaged," were to receive all types of additional education, social and medical services.

The landmark piece of legislation was reauthorized by Congress with various amendments. District leaders factored in those dollars as an expected resource to close the educational gap between less advantaged and more advantaged children in America's schools.

After about 20 years of the categorical funding approach, the federal government adopted a new policy of "block grants" and Title I of ESEA became Chapter I of the "Omnibus Educational Act." The other eight title programs were consolidated into Chapter 2 of the Act and required competitive funding.

Once again the law has been changed. On July 1, 1995, a new Title I law took effect, but without the many funding advantages for urban districts.

National education groups project that a large number of schools will feel the effects of the changes in the massive federal compensatory-education program, as early as the beginning of school this fall. The $7.2 billion program is sure to have a positive, significant effect on the educational services available to our nation's youth. The

First Lady Greet Willingboro Students and Faculty

On Wednesday, May 31 Dr. Geraldyn O. Foster, superintendent of the Willingboro Public Schools, accompanied a group of 12 students and three teachers to Washington, D.C. where the group was granted a private audience with First Lady Hillary Clinton and a special tour of the White House, including the rose garden and the Oval Office. In addition to the White House tour, the group also visited the Washington Monument, the Vietnam Wall, the Lincoln Memorial and the Smithsonian Air and Space Museum.

The students selected for this event were members of the Superintendent's High Flyers Club, created to recognize Willingboro school students who have shown tremendous academic achievement or demonstrated leadership skills. Three pupils from Willingboro High School, two from Memorial Junior High, and one from each of the seven elementary schools were chosen to take this memorable trip. The teachers selected to accompany the students were nominated as Willingboro's Outstanding Teachers of the Year. ■

Local Legislators Head Agenda at Workshop

Charter Schools topped headlines across the nation in 1995. An important issue to our own local legislation, NJSBA has invited two assemblymen and two senators to sit on the panel at the Urban Boards Program at workshop this year and explain their positions and proposed bills.

Assemblymen John Rocco and Joseph Doria, Jr. will be on hand to explain A-592 and how it will effect urban education. Senators John Ewing and Richard LaRossa will be present to define and promote their bill, S-1796. All panelists have been invited to speak to the issues and entertain questions from the guests.

This year marks a change in our traditional location. Join members of the panel and Urban Boards Committee in the Trump Plaza Ballroom - Chelsea C (6th floor) at 9:30 a.m. The Urban Luncheon will immediately follow at the same location. ■

Committee Officers Elected

most dramatic changes and improvements are likely to take place within school districts, especially in large urban school systems.

The funding formula and proposed regulations include a new initiative that tie the program to the educational standards movement. The outcome could mean that high-achieving, high-poverty schools may receive increased funding.

There will be winners and losers, but for now, we welcome the final passage of the legislation and the return of Title I funding. Keep watching NJSBA publications as regulations and guidelines are finalized. ■

New Superintendents Appointed and Retirements Announced

The closing events of the 1994-95 school year represented the last high school prom, graduation exercises and, of course, board of education meetings for a number of school superintendents. Among those retiring after many successful years in the profession were John J. McGeehan, Kearny; Dr. Henry Oliver, Englewood City; Joseph Caruso, Keansburg; Joseph Wisniewski, Weehawken Township; and Rose Stahnten, Hillside Township.

Chairperson's Report

Annette D'Angelo

I hope you are enjoying what is left of summer 1995. Isn't it nice to have some leisure time to reflect upon the past school year and plan for the future? As school board members, we are proud of the successes in our districts. Our pride surely was shining brightly last May during the Urban Education Conference, when we shared with each other presentations of our most successful programs. For the sixth consecutive year we have proven that "urban" does NOT mean failure!

It is so rewarding to know that together we can raise the level of education throughout the state. Together we can give our children opportunities to participate in programs which have been tried and tested and truly work. We possess the camaraderie to work as a team and the drive to be successful. We're proud of who we are and it shows: our positive attitude is contagious. It spills over into our communities and suddenly, we have parents, teachers and most important, students who are proud and ready to succeed.

While I remember our success, I would like to thank all of the members of the committee and NJSBA staff, who worked so hard to plan a wonderful conference. Weren't the student performers fantastic? While we were being entertained, we received a special gift from them... a very strong message of love.

My warmest thanks are extended to Elaine Bey, immediate past chairperson, for being the beacon of light for us to follow in our quest for excellence. Her strength and perseverance make her a role model for all of us to admire. I welcome the opportunity to work closely with my vice chairperson, Ernestine Harris of East Orange — a truly dedicated board member.

Dear Evan,

Thank you so much for your kindness and understanding. I've had a wonderful time in Washington D.C. I'll never forget seeing the oval-office during my own little 'private' tour! ☺ Thank you so much for introducing me to Mrs. Clinton. Best of luck to you during the rest of your time with the Clinton Administration.

I wish you MUCH - success in grad-school and afterwards.

Thanks for
