RE: An invitation for The First Lady to be invited to a lecture by Dean Ornish M. D. on Reversing Heart Disease sponsored by The Wilkes-Barre General Hospital and George E. Cimochoowski, M.D., Chief of Cardiac Surgery

Dear Ms. Solis:

On behalf of the Wyoming Valley Health Care System and Cardiac Surgery Associates and The Wilkes-Barre General Hospital where I am the Chief of Cardiac Surgery, I wish to invite Mrs. Clinton to be our guest at a lecture by Dr. Dean Ornish, to be given on February 21, 1994 at the Kirby Center in Wilkes-Barre, Pennsylvania. I had the honor of operating on Ms. Caputo's father recently. During his convalescence in the hospital, Ms. Caputo mentioned Dr. Dean Ornish, whose diet Mrs. Clinton is quite familiar with and whose diet I have strongly encouraged my patients to adopt in the post-operative period. In light of Mrs. Clinton's immense interest and immersion in the health care situation of the 1990's and her personal respect for Dr. Ornish, Ms. Caputo suggested that maybe Mrs. Clinton might be interested in coming to this forum. We are having him give two lectures, one in the afternoon and 2:00 pm for primarily the patients and the 7:00 pm lecture for physicians, Mayors of the local counties, hospital administrators, and other invited guests. We expect to have approximately 2000 people for each lecture by invitation only. If Mrs. Clinton was interested in attending, she would be more than welcome to comment on the lecture or whatever else she would like to comment on.

I am keenly aware of the demands of of her position and husband's position and recognize that it may not be feasible. I am sure it would add to the entire milieu of the lecture on Reversing Heart Disease and preventing heart surgery, such as I am trained to do at great cost. Your attention and time in addressing this matter is sincerely appreciated.

With kindest regards,

George E. Cimochoowski, M.D.

Dear Ms. Williams:

Laurel Stavis at Wellesley College suggested that I send the enclosed invitation for Mrs. Clinton to you. As you will see from the letter, Oxford University Press and Wellesley College are co-sponsoring a lecture series featuring distinguished women whose work and ideas have made a major contribution to contemporary intellectual life, and we would like Mrs. Clinton to be the inaugural speaker. The lectures will be preserved in book form under a special Oxford University Press/Wellesley College imprint.

We feel that the lecture series will produce an exceptional collection of books by women, and that Mrs. Clinton's contributions to society and her ties to Wellesley single her out as the ideal woman to launch the series. If her busy schedule, however, precludes her from being the inaugural speaker, we would also be eager to discuss a time further ahead when she might be able to entertain the commitment of time.

Please feel free to contact me if you have any questions, and thank you for whatever help you can give to getting this invitation to Mrs. Clinton's attention.

The Oxford University Press/Wellesley College Lectures

18 October 1993

Hillary Rodham Clinton
The White House
1600 Pennsylvania Avenue
Washington, DC 20500

Dear Mrs. Clinton:

We are writing on behalf of Oxford University Press and Wellesley College to invite you to participate in an exciting and, we believe, groundbreaking project we are jointly sponsoring.

Wellesley and Oxford are about to launch an annual lecture series modelled on the distinguished Clarendon lectures given at Oxford University. It will be called "The Oxford University Press/Wellesley College Lectures," and will feature distinguished women whose work and ideas have made a major contribution to contemporary intellectual life.

Each year one woman will be invited to deliver these lectures on a topic of her choice. The work should be original, and the lecturer will be given free reign to pursue any topic so long as it addresses questions of broad social or cultural significance. The series will be the centerpiece of Wellesley's public lecture program and, unlike other lectures at the college, will consist of multiple lectures by one speaker. We envision two large public lectures and a third talk to a smaller more interactive audience, perhaps a joint student-faculty colloquium linked to the subject matter, sometime during the week. You may require a different format, and we would of course be open to alternatives.

These lectures will be permanently preserved in book form under a special joint Oxford University Press/Wellesley College imprint, in what we hope will grow to be a unique body of creative criticism by leading women in the world of letters, the arts, public policy, the sciences, and history. With the participation of distinguished lecturers such as yourself, we anticipate that the books spawned by this venture will be widely read and will help shape both international and public policy discussions in years ahead. In the past, Oxford and the New York Public Library have entered a similar venture. Last spring, Oxford and the Library jointly published Robert Hughes's Culture of Complaint: The Fraying of America (copy enclosed). The book is based upon the Oxford/Public Library lectures he delivered in January 1992. At the time the lectures attracted a good deal of attention. The book has attracted much more, and indeed was on the New York Times bestseller list for several months.

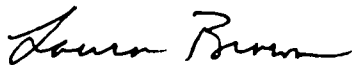

Hillary Rodham Clinton

Both Oxford and Wellesley feel that you would be ideal to inaugurate this undertaking. We're certain that your participation would not only guarantee a wonderful piece of work in and of itself, but would garner immediate distinction to a long-term project which is close to the hearts of both of our institutions, and which we intend to support as fully as possible. In setting up the lectures, and in converting the lectures to book form, we can assure you of the respect and whole-hearted cooperation of everyone at Wellesley and Oxford.

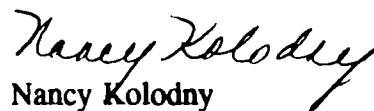

In return for the considerable time they take to prepare, we can offer you a generous fee for the lectures and a further advance against royalties on the proceeds from the sale of the book. Wellesley College will also benefit from a share of the book royalties and these royalties will be used to establish a fellowship fund for graduates of the College. Fellowships of up to $10,000 will be awarded to recent Wellesley graduates to help them complete a book or other substantial intellectual project that explores women's diverse contributions to contemporary thought. If you would rather waive the lecture fee and advance, you may want to consider some other way to designate the proceeds from the sale of the book--perhaps you could designate the Wellesley fellowship as the beneficiary of any funds generated by the lectures and the sale of the book. We would be happy to discuss other alternatives.

We hope you will give this invitation serious consideration. Please let us know if you are interested, and, if you are, when you might be able to fit the lectures into your busy schedule.

Sincerely yours,

Laura Brown

Dear Ms. Solis,

In your job as scheduler for the First Lady, we can appreciate that you are besieged with requests. However, we hope you will consider ours a compelling one, as it is so closely linked with Hillary Clinton's leadership role as healthcare advocate for children.

We would be honored to have her address any Medical Grand Rounds at Children's Hospital in Boston. We extend our invitation for any Wednesday from noon to 1 p.m. from January to June 1994.

Grand Rounds is a weekly forum presenting current topics in Pediatric Medicine. Her audience would typically consist of approximately 300 healthcare workers from the hospital and neighboring communities. Since we are affiliated with Harvard Medical School, we can set up videocam coverage to their larger amphitheaters for greater audience capacity.

We hope you will agree that Grand Rounds would be a perfect setting for Ms. Clinton to convey her message regarding children's rights.

In order to suit Ms. Clinton's schedule, we can be more flexible about days of the week. We have enclosed background information on Children's Hospital. As you may already know, it is the oldest teaching hospital for children in the United States.

We await your response with great anticipation. Please call us at 617-735-6217 with any questions or requests. Thank you in advance for your time and consideration.

Dear Hillary:

As one of my first official acts as President of Duke, it is my great pleasure to extend to you a most cordial invitation to deliver the 1994 Commencement address on Sunday, May 8. Our Commencement selection committee of faculty and students met in April, and notified me that you were their unanimous and enthusiastic first choice. I have delayed contacting you until I could do so officially as President of Duke, knowing also that April and May were especially difficult and busy times for you.

Duke has a tradition of inviting Commencement speakers representing a variety of professions who share the characteristics of having something substantive to say, and of being able to say it well to an audience approaching twenty thousand students, parents, friends, faculty, Trustees, etc. -- you are familiar with all the constituencies involved. I know from our experience at Wellesley how superbly well you perform this assignment; we would be very fortunate to have you with us.

If you can accept this invitation (and we most sincerely hope you can), I would like to invite you to be my guest at the President's House. We hope you can arrive Saturday afternoon in time to join us for a special reception and dinner that evening. The graduation exercises themselves begin at 10 o'clock Sunday morning and are concluded before 11:30 a.m. We will of course reimburse you for all expenses associated with your visit.

If you are able to accept I shall begin the procedures that will result in your receiving an honorary degree at those exercises. It would be a true honor to confer such a degree on you and to have you join us as a member of the Duke family.

I am aware that you also have on your desk an invitation from Dr. David Matchar of Duke University Medical Center to deliver the keynote address at the Annual Meeting of the Society for Medical Decision Making to be held here in North Carolina on October 24-27, an invitation that I was happy to endorse. Patti Solis from your office has let us know that you are considering this request and that you will give us an answer as soon as you can. We hope, of course, that you might be able to accept both invitations, even though realistically, given the press of your many commitments, I know that is unlikely.

It would be wonderful to welcome you to North Carolina for either occasion. I know how much the members of the Class of 1994 and their families would look forward to having you as their Commencement speaker, and it would of course be a distinct personal pleasure for me to join you on the podium for my first Duke Commencement. Let us know what might be possible as soon as your schedule is sorted out for the year.

Yours sincerely,

RE: Scheduling request

Thank you for referring the article on the Kotzebue Senior Center which is unfortunately closing its doors soon. The senior citizens are forced to move to another center outside of their home district because of the closure. This brings me to the reason why I am writing to you.

Attached is an invitation letter inviting First Lady Hillary Rodman Clinton to the 1993 Alaska Health Summit on November 30, 1993 in Anchorage, Alaska. This is our state's only health summit much like the one chaired by the First Lady. Alaskan health care issues like developments in public health, health care and health financing, among other health care topics. This is an opportunity for the First Lady and her staff to become familiar with health care issues affecting Alaskans.

If First Lady Hillary Rodman Clinton cannot attend, the group invites Ira Magaziner, Secretary Shalala, or another high ranking administration official to attend this meeting.

Please keep me posted on this invitation. Thank you.

Dear Maggie Williams,

First of all, I thought the First Lady was fabulous last night with Katie Couric. Very warm, very real. And I didn't know she was so funny. A lot of wit was being flashed between them!

I am writing as editorial director of the largest magazine for young girls in the country--Barbie, The Magazine for Girls. We are a lifestyle publication for girls 5 to 11 and we celebrate those wonderful years with our 750,000 subscribers. We feature women in many empowering situations, plus we cover careers, science, cooking, crafts and offer reviews of notable books, movies, videos, etc.

Our magazine is 10 years old this year. And to honor and thank our readers, we have chosen 10 Outstanding Girls of America. The ten winners are from all over the country--from New Jersey to Washington State--and are an amazing group. We have a gymnast, a photographer, several writers, a girl who is the only female on her Little League team, a publisher of a multicultural newspaper...they are fantastic! We were so impressed with the things young girls are accomplishing in this country. And it is rare that this age group is honored. They are coming to New York in the fall, plus receiving scholarship money.

We would like to have Hillary Rodham Clinton pen two or three lines honoring these fine young woman to run with her photograph in our fall issue of BARBIE, The Magazine for Girls. If need be, as I realize the First Lady is as busy as it is humanly possible to be, we would write a sample of what we want for her to approve.

Andrea Posner will be following up on my letter as vacation calls! We do hope the First Lady can find time to honor these Ten Outstanding Girls of America.

Sincerely,

Katy Dobbs

CLAREMONT MCKENNA COLLEGE

Marian Miner Cook Athenaeum

May 25, 1993

Hillary Rodham Clinton
The White House
1600 Pennsylvania Avenue
Washington, D.C.

Dear Mrs. Clinton:

On behalf of President Jack Stark, Claremont McKenna College, and the Marian Miner Cook Athenaeum it is my privilege to invite you to visit the College as our guest during fall semester 1993.

Claremont McKenna College is located near the San Gabriel mountains east of Los Angeles and is one of the six colleges associated in The Claremont Colleges. The mission of CMC is to train and develop leaders in business and government. In the past decade it has risen to the front ranks of American liberal arts colleges.

You may already know that four graduates from CMC were directly involved in the Clinton presidential campaign. Tim Wright '77, who served the campaign as domestic policy director, recently visited the CMC campus and kindly offered to forward this letter to your office. Bill Podlich '66, a trustee of Claremont McKenna College, was co-chair of the campaign in Orange County. Chris Townsend '82 served as deputy director of the California campaign and Araceli Ruano '92 traveled to Little Rock as assistant to the national Latino coordinator.

I direct a program at the Marian Miner Cook Athenaeum on the CMC campus which brings individuals of distinction to speak with students, faculty and members of the college community on topics of national and global concern. During the 1993-94 academic year the Athenaeum is inviting speakers who will address some of the more cogent issues pertaining to health care reform. It would be an honor to have you participate as the keynote speaker in this series.

Should your schedule permit a visit to Claremont you will be pleased to know that the venue is quite flexible. The usual format consists of a small dinner one evening followed by lunch and dinner speeches the next day. The first dinner, usually at the California Club in Los Angeles, is hosted by the Res Publica Board of Governors and includes 15 to 20 prominent business executives. This is a social occasion with no formal address. President Jack Stark and Vice President Jon Keates would escort you to this event.

The lunch on the next day is also in Los Angeles, this time at a downtown hotel. On this occasion you would be addressing between 300 to 500 prominent community and business leaders in southern California. Here we would ask you to speak for 20 to 30 minutes and take questions for 15 to 20 minutes. Again you would be escorted by President Stark.

The evening address follows a dinner with students at the Marian Miner Cook Athenaeum on the CMC campus. Here the audience would consist of approximately 500 students and faculty from the college community. The format would be similar to the luncheon address and you could repeat the same formal remarks.

The College will pay all travel costs and the Athenaeum has two lovely guest apartments for your use during your visit to Claremont.

The enclosed information includes the copy of Profile which highlights the CMC alumni who worked on the Clinton campaign; the schedule of speakers from the 1992-93 academic year; a Fortnightly, the newsletter which we publish every two weeks; an article about the Athenaeum from the Christian Science Monitor; and a brochure which discusses the aims of the Res Publica Society of CMC.

We are truly desirous of having you as our guest this fall and will make every effort to accommodate your schedule.

Thank you for your consideration and I look forward to hearing from you.

Most respectfully yours,

Dear Ms. Rodham-Clinton:

I am very pleased to write you in this capacity; today's health care arena is in disarray and it is reassuring for those of us entering the health field to know that our government is helping to make health care available to all Americans.

As a Student Registered Nurse, I also wonder what role I can play in helping to make health care more affordable and accessible once I begin my practice. Many of my peers are questioning the same issues as we study Nursing and Medicine here in central Ohio.

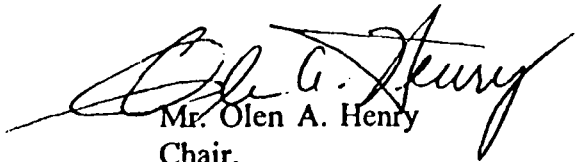

That is the reason that the Mount Carmel Student Organization's Community Service Community is sponsoring a symposium on health care and the effects on the underserved communities in Ohio, we cordially invite you to be our keynote speaker for this day long event.

We will have members of all segments of our community as panelist in our morning workshops highlighting ways that individuals as well as health professionals can help create a Ohio health care system that will offer the underserved in our community the health care that they deserve. One amazing statistic that I received from our hospital's outreach program is that the "povertization" of women and children in our nation is making both groups stand out when it comes to the lack of affordable health care.

As we invite students from all of the Nursing Colleges and Medical Colleges, as well as members of our health care communities together to discuss our roles in addressing this dilemma, we would be most honored if you would accept our invitation.

Finally, I offer my personal wishes for "great success" with the daunting task ahead of you and please know that whatever decisions that your task force recommends and the President and Congress implement, there is a force of new health professionals that are ready, willing and able to implement them.

Most Sincerely,

Mr. Olen A. Henry

Dear Shirley Sagawa:

This letter is to ask whether Mrs. Clinton would be available to host a reception for the attendees of the National Forum on Community Planning on Early Education and Care at 5:30 p.m. on Wednesday, September 22, 1993 (or, alternatively, 5:00 p.m. on Thursday, September 23, 1993). We expect approximately 400 attendees.

Community Planning is, from our vantage point, the most hopeful new phenomenon in the early childhood field. It involves the convening of key decision makers—from government, business, social services, health, education, family support and early education and care to create a vision of what their early childhood education and care system should look like and then engage in concrete actions to bring that vision to reality. States as diverse as West Virginia, Indiana and Florida, cities as diverse as Boston, Miami, St. Paul and Kansas City have begun to weave their patchwork of early care and education services into systems. The community planning activities include developing a comprehensive, degree-granting professional development system for child care staff, integrating services; developing seamless funding and new financing mechanisms; developing family-centered, neighborhood-based programming; improving quality, etc.

This Forum, the first time that the leaders of these efforts in community planning in early education and care have ever been brought together, is a historic event. Mrs. Clinton will be familiar with such efforts, as Glenda Bean from Arkansas has been a national as well as a local leader, and we plan to include her in the Forum. We have also invited Carol Rasco to be the closing speaker.

The Forum is being co-sponsored by the Families and Work Institute and the National Association for the Education of Young Children. As a measure of high interest and support in the field for this event, a number of national organizations are working with us as "endorsers" in planning it, including the Child Care Action Campaign, the Family Resource Coalition, the National Association for Child Care Resource and Referral Agencies, the National Black Child Development Institute, Parent Action, Quality 2000, and the United Way of America. The Forum is funded by the AT&T Foundation, Carnegie Corporation of America, The Ford Foundation, and the A. L. Mailman Family Foundation.

On behalf of our staff for this project—Dana Friedman, Joan Lombardi, Terry Bond, Julie Levine, Jerlean Daniel and myself—and NAEYC's staff—J.D. Andrews, Marilyn Smith, Barbara Willer and Sue Bredekamp—I would like to thank you very much for your assistance.

First Lady Hillary Rodham Clinton
The White House
1600 Pennsylvania Avenue
Washington, D.C. 20500

Dear Hillary:

Although Susan Prager, Dean of the UCLA School of Law, did not ask me to write this letter, I have taken it upon myself to urge you to consider participating in the UCLA School of Law's May 1994 graduation ceremonies. I believe the UCLA School of Law uniquely exemplifies many of the values that you and President Bill Clinton exemplify.

UCLA Law School has a long history of reaching out to and encouraging a diverse population of students. As both a student at UCLA and now as a recruiter for my law firm, I have long been familiar with the fact that UCLA is one of the law schools that regularly graduates highly qualified students of all backgrounds. With the exception of exclusively minority law schools, UCLA has the largest diverse/minority population of the 175 ABA approved American law schools.

As a public school, UCLA offers equal educational opportunity to persons who otherwise would not be able to afford to enter the legal profession. It does so in large part through the leadership and excellence of its faculty, led for over a decade by Dean Susan Prager. It continues to do so in times of budgetary crisis by securing funding from private, as well as public, sources.

The school's commitment to women in the profession is also longstanding. Dean Prager was the second woman law professor ever to have been made dean of a major law school (now Ninth Circuit Judge Dorothy Nelson from the University of Southern California was the first). Susan's success in that position is widely recognized by students, alumni and other law school faculty. Many of UCLA's alumni have remained in Los Angeles and are involved in all aspects of our community here.

I am sure you will be besieged by invitations for commencement addresses in this and the coming years of your administration, but I hope you will consider what the UCLA Law School represents in making your choice.

With warm regards.

Very truly yours,

Dear Mrs. Clinton:

It is my pleasure on behalf of the UCLA School of Law Class of 1994 to extend an invitation to you to serve as our graduation speaker at ceremonies in May, 1994. You are a unique figure in American public life and we would be elated if you could join us for this occasion which is so important to our students and their families. Each year about 3000 family and friends attend this ceremony to celebrate with our approximately 300 graduates. The commencement ceremony will take place on Sunday afternoon, May 22, 1994 on the UCLA campus.

Knowing that the number of invitations you can accept is limited, I thought the following information would be helpful to you in making your decision. The UCLA School of Law is the only public law school in all of Southern California. We are the youngest law school generally ranked among the nation's top law schools, having been established in 1949. We have an extraordinarily strong record of educating minority lawyers for the profession, dating back to the class which entered in the fall of 1967. Thirty-five to forty percent of recent entering classes are drawn from these groups. We see our diversity as an enormous strength of the school. We have been a pioneer in clinical legal education and our clinical faculty continue to provide national leadership, especially in the publication of teaching materials and articles for clinical training. During the past thirteen years, we have built an outstanding international law program with special emphasis on East Asia. Apart from all this, we are generally known to combine considerable intellectual diversity in the approaches to law, with a genuinely warm spirit. By and large, students like being here.

The current group of UCLA law students reflects broad interests and high energy. Spring and fall have been marked by student organized initiatives to focus on efforts to help the homeless, on projects to stimulate public interest work, and on the importance of creating work environments free from discrimination. In recent years, our new Women's Law Journal has gotten off to an exciting start. Contrary to popular conceptions, this generation of law students does care about others. In short, I think you would find contact with our students stimulating and enjoyable.

Our alums have demonstrated considerable commitment to civic responsibility and public service. Many, for example, were involved with the Christopher Commission, as Commissioners or as volunteer staff, and, of course, we count Kim McLane Wardlaw and Bill Wardlaw as among our most outstanding alums.

We would be greatly honored if you could join us as our 1994 graduation speaker. We hope very much that your schedule will permit you to come to Los Angeles in May. We would, of course, provide travel expenses as well as an honorarium of $1,000. My assistant, Nancy Berkowitz, will call your scheduling assistant soon to see if you have any questions.
