Can you hear this cry for help?

Of the 1.5 million Americans with HIV/AIDS, an alarming 88% of children with HIV/AIDS are minority children.

And, although women of color make up only 21% of the total U.S. population, 69% of women with HIV/AIDS are women of color.

Please give where your help is needed the most — on the front lines of the AIDS epidemic.

The AIDS PROGRAMS OF THE NATIONAL MINORITY AIDS COUNCIL was formed in 1987 to develop leadership within communities of color to address issues of HIV infection. Our 600+ member organizations are community-based organizations that deal with AIDS on the front lines — in hospitals and clinics, shelters and schools, storefronts and streets. Thousands of men, women and children of color rely on such organizations for outreach, care, education, housing and support services.

We need your help.

Please wear this red ribbon to spread awareness of your support in the fight to stop the spread of AIDS.

And during the Combined Federal Campaign, please remember to designate your pledge to

MRS. CLINTON VISITS PCI'S NICARAGUA PROGRAM

First lady Hillary Clinton recently visited Project Concern International's (PCI) program in Nicaragua. The visit was part of a trip Mrs. Clinton made to Latin America to see successful programs by U.S.-based organizations.

Mrs. Clinton met with PCI's Nicaragua Country Director Dr. Leonel Arguello and some of the children and PCI-trained health workers in the program. Dr. Arguello told Mrs. Clinton about PCI's many approaches to protecting the health of children there, including PCI's widely recognized "puppet shows."

Mrs. Clinton was delighted by the puppet show that children from the school in Santa Clara presented. These puppet shows are part of PCI's "Niño-A-Niño" program, which trains fifth and sixth grade student leaders in simple ways to communicate health messages with their classmates and neighbors. Students have found that the puppet shows are one of the most effective ways to spread messages about hygiene and basic health.

With PCI help, the students make their own puppets and write and stage the presentations.

The students presented a puppet show entitled "The Dream for a Clean Neighborhood" for Mrs. Clinton. The show dramatized the importance of hygiene for preventing disease. The puppet show also discussed simple ways to treat childhood dehydration.

Following the show, the children presented Mrs. Clinton with a puppet in traditional Nicaraguan dress they had made for her. Mrs. Clinton said she was going to name the puppet Victoria, the middle name of her daughter.

"Mrs. Clinton was very interested in hearing how we use the puppet theater and other techniques to ultimately reach mothers with messages of good health," said Dr. Arguello.

Mrs. Clinton also met and spoke with volunteers PCI has trained to be community health workers. PCI teaches these volunteers, known as "brigidistas," to recognize problem pregnancies and children needing treatment. The volunteers spoke with Mrs. Clinton about monthly meetings they organize with mothers of newborns.

Dear Maggie and Evan,

I sincerely want to thank you both for arranging the White House tour for Steve Williams, me, and our daughters. It was a once in a lifetime experience for our daughters and was wonderful. Instead of telling their friends they went to Washington D.C. they are simply saying with a smile "We went to the White House!"

Our guide, Gary Bryne, was more than terrific! He was informative and fun. He took time to get to know our daughters and showed us many of the behind the scenes areas of the "House."

I can't tell you how much I appreciate you and your gracious support offered to me, and more importantly, Children's Miracle Network. CMN has launched a new year-round media effort titled Always Kids. I am focusing most of my attention on Always Kids, and hope to find time in the future to tell you both about it.

Please accept these Always Kids shirts as a token of our appreciation and let me know if there is anything we can do to help you.

Warm regards,

Max

THE WASHINGTON POST
THURSDAY, JUNE 6, 1996

WORDS FROM THE FIRST LADY

BY MIKE THEILER—REUTERS

First lady Hillary Rodham Clinton visits with children at John Tyler Elementary School at 10th and G streets in Southeast Washington. She visited during celebrations at the end of the school year to promote the Everybody Wins literacy program at the school.

Muriel Pearl Alper Dies at 78; Volunteer in First Lady's Office

Muriel Pearl Alper, 78, a Chevy Chase resident and a volunteer with the White House's Office of the First Lady, died of pneumonia June 5 at Georgetown University Medical Center.

Mrs. Alper, who was born in Brooklyn, N.Y., graduated from New York University. She was a high school teacher in Springfield, Mass., before she moved to the Washington area in 1967 and began many years of volunteer work.

For the last two years, she was a volunteer with the Office of the First Lady, handling phone calls, faxes and correspondence. Earlier, she was a volunteer with the Kennedy Center, Folger Shakespeare Library and Women's National Democratic Club. She was an officer on the board of the Washington branch of the American Israel Cultural Foundation and a past vice president of the Women's Committee of the Washington Performing Arts Society.

Her marriage to Dr. Milton H. Teitel ended in divorce. Her second husband, Milton Pearl, died in 1971.

Survivors include her husband, Jerome Alper of Chevy Chase; two children from her first marriage, Jeffrey H. Teitel of Guttenberg, N.J., and Robin L. Howe of Great Falls; and four grandchildren.

Cleaner Paper Trail Leads Out Of Woods

The National Park Service has received, in the parlance of the government's accountants, a clean opinion. Now the Park Service can prove its numbers add up, that its annual financial statements are accurate.

That did not seem to be the case last year. Bad data and math errors had led the Park Service to list a $150 vacuum cleaner as worth more than $800,000 and a $350 dishwasher as a $700,000 asset, according to testimony at a House hearing.

The Park Service, stung by the portrayal and the criticism by House Republicans, began an intensive effort to meet new accounting standards and prove that it knew where and how every dollar was being spent.

"We needed to restore that confidence," said Park Service Comptroller C. Bruce Sheaffer. In less than a year, the agency has overhauled its accounting practices and recently produced financial statements for fiscal 1995 that met with approval from the Interior Department's inspector general.

"The Park Service took aggressive action," Interior Assistant Inspector General Judy R. Harrison wrote, noting that the agency "has made significant improvements in the internal control structure."

The Park Service turnaround is but one of several underway in the executive branch. Until Congress wrote the Chief Financial Officers (CFOs) Act of 1990, the government did not have a comprehensive set of accounting standards. Since then, agencies and the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) have been working to improve federal financial management so that essentially the same standards applied to corporate America are applied to the government.

It has been a tough climb. Twenty-four departments and agencies are covered by the CFO Act, but only four have achieved across-the-board clean opinions: the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, the General Services Administration, NASA and the Social Security Administration.

But parts of Cabinet departments, like the Park Service, are meeting the new standards. More than half of the "entities" audited were judged clean last year, up from 33 percent in 1990.

One of the biggest tests will come next March, when the law will require the 24 agencies to submit audited financial statements to OMB. The next major step comes in fiscal 1997, when the law calls for a government-wide financial statement to be prepared and audited.

Members of Congress—Republicans and Democrats—have consistently pressured agencies to comply with the CFO Act. Senate Governmental Affairs Committee Chairman Ted Stevens (R-Alaska), for example, will look at the Internal Revenue Service's financial management practices at a hearing scheduled for today.

By most accounts, the move to clean financial statements should give agencies a new way to demonstrate their integrity and enhance their chances of preventing financial scandals. Still, it has been a shock to several agencies that they are being held to technical standards they were never subject to before.

The Park Service, for example, was faulted by the Interior Department inspector general's office because the agency could not vouch for the accuracy of its debts or the money it was owed. All those concerns can now be set aside, Sheaffer said.

"We argued from the outset that nothing the IG found in any way supported the notion that we were wasting money," he said. "We believed then and now that we can account for every dollar spent . . . and now we've proved it."

The Park Service financial statement for fiscal 1995 recounts that the agency received about $1.4 billion in congressional appropriations and another $200 million from other revenue sources, such as fees and trusts. The agency employed about 19,000 full-time workers, but also relied on more than 77,000 volunteers.

The financial statement also includes "customer satisfaction survey results" for 1993-94. At 15 parks, for instance, 68 percent of the 2,533 survey respondents rated the quality of park personnel as "very good," the top category.

The statement shows the Park Service is cutting down on delays in repaying travel advances and now pays its suppliers and vendors more promptly. It also shows where the agency is spending its money, such as $37.9 million last year for "fire and emergency operations."

There's also eight pages of tables summarizing acreage within park boundaries. The grand total: 369 park areas containing 83 million acres. The government can claim "absolute ownership" of about 77.6 million acres of that land.

The cascade of numbers in the financial statement provides only a one-time snapshot of Park Service operations. The annual reports will assume more significance five and 10 years from now, Sheaffer said. "The measure of change has some importance to us, and over time, these numbers will take new meaning as they show change," he said.

While trend analysis may prove useful in the next century, Sheaffer noted there are some things financial statements can never measure or answer, starting with the mountains, lakes or historic buildings held in trust for the American people by the park system.

"How do you set a value on these assets," he asked. "How could you put a value on the Washington Monument?"
