RADIO ADDRESS BY THE PRESIDENT
TO THE NATION

The Map Room

10:06 A.M. EDT

THE PRESIDENT: Good morning. This week was another good week for America. We learned that growth is up and unemployment is down. That's good for American jobs and good for America's families. We also had more good news on America's families today involving the Family and Medical Leave Act, which I was proud to sign in 1993. This week the bipartisan panel Congress created to study it reported that the law has helped more than one in six American employees take time off because of a serious family health problem, without any danger of losing their jobs. And almost 90 percent of the businesses found that complying with Family and Medical Leave cost them little or nothing. This is making America's families stronger, promoting work and family.

That's what we have to do with welfare reform, too. Our job is to fix a welfare system that too often pulls families apart and turns it into one that helps families pull together, to fix a system that traps too many people in a cycle of dependency that ends up snaring their children as well, and, instead, to create one that promotes jobs and independence.

For the last three years, we have been working hard to turn the welfare system around. All across America, the welfare rolls are down, food stamp rolls are down, teen pregnancy rates are down, compared to four years ago. And compared to four years ago, more and more people on welfare today are working as a condition of receiving welfare.

A lot of this has happened because our administration has worked very hard to free states from federal rules and regulations which have built up over the years and which contribute to the flaws in the present system. We have slashed this red tape to 37 states, covering 75 percent of all the people on welfare in America, so that they can take steps to fix the broken system. State by state, we are building a welfare system that demands work, requires responsibility, and protects our children.

But more needs to be done. The American people need a welfare system that honors American values: work, family, and personal responsibility. In 1994, and again this year, I sent Congress a sweeping welfare reform plan that would impose strict time limits on how long people can stay on welfare and strict work requirements for people when they are on welfare. My plan would also provide more funding for child care, so single parents can go to work. And it would crack down on parents who skip out on their responsibility to pay child support.

If Congress sends me a welfare reform bill that is tough on work instead of tough on children and weak on work, I will gladly and proudly sign it. Meanwhile, I am going to keep moving ahead to fix the welfare system by promoting work and looking out for our children.

Today, I'm acting to help teen mothers break free from the cycle of dependency for good. The only way for teen mothers to escape the welfare trap is to live at home, stay in school, and get the education they need to get a good job. We must make sure the welfare system demands that teen mothers follow the responsible path to independence.

Ohio has used freedom from federal rules to implement a terrific program they call LEAP -- Learning, Education, and Parenting. LEAP cuts welfare checks when teen mothers don't go to school, and rewards them when they do. And it works. A report released just this week by the Manpower Demonstration Research Corporation shows that for an important group of teens LEAP significantly increased the number of teen mothers who finished school, got jobs, and got off welfare. Every state should follow this example.

That's why, today, I'm announcing that every state must put in place a plan to keep teen mothers on welfare in school. We are going to audit the progress of every state and make the results public.

Second, we are going to make teen mothers who drop out of school go back to school and sign contracts that spell out exactly how they are going to take responsibility for their own lives.

And third, we are giving states immediate authority to provide bonuses to teen mothers who go to school and graduate, and to cut back the checks of those who don't.

Finally, I'm challenging every state in the country to use its power to keep children who have children at home where they belong. There should be no incentive to leave home for a bigger welfare check. Unfortunately, even though they can, most states don't require teen mothers to live at home. That's wrong. Of course, if there is an abusive situation at home, children should be living in another safe, responsible setting.

But we have to make it clear that a baby doesn't give you a right, and won't give you the money, to leave home and drop out of school. Today, we are moving to make responsibility a way of life, not an option.

These commonsense steps have bipartisan support. They will help teen parents escape the cycle of dependency and start down the path to a successful future for themselves and their children. Now Congress needs to do its job and pass welfare reform. I'm glad that a group of bipartisan lawmakers is working on welfare reform. If Congress sends me a clean welfare reform plan that demands work, demands responsibility, protects children, and helps families stay together -- I will sign it. Until then, I'll keep working to do everything in my power to reform welfare, step by step and state by state.

Thanks for listening.

PRESIDENT CLINTON'S STRONG RECORD OF SUCCESS: MEETING OUR CHALLENGES BY THE NUMBERS
May 6, 1996

Helping all Americans by building a strong economy -- a solid week's work. Last week saw a flurry of hard economic numbers which gave more evidence that President Clinton's sound economic strategy is paying off for all Americans:

- * Strong growth. The economy grew 2.8 percent at an annual rate this quarter. Economists believe that without the General Motors strike and the blizzard of 1996, this number would have been at least 0.5 percent higher.
- * High consumer confidence. Consumer confidence reached its highest level in six years.
- * Higher wages. The Bureau of Labor Statistics released numbers showing that wages grew at their fastest pace in five years.
- * Growth in manufacturing. The National Association of Purchasing Managers Index went back above the 50 level, indicating future growth in the manufacturing sector.
- * Investment-led expansion. This continues to be an investment-led expansion. Business investment was up 14.5 percent at an annual rate this quarter.
 - * An historic level of investment under President Clinton. Business investment has been up by 11 percent annually since President Clinton took office, a better record on investment growth than any administration since John Kennedy was President.
- * Consumption was also up 3.5 percent in the most recent report, another positive indicator.
- * Private sector growth. Since President Clinton took office, the private sector has grown 3.2 percent, more than in either of the previous two administrations.
- * Low inflation. All this growth has occurred while inflation has remained low and stable. The most recent indicator is that the GDP deflator for the first quarter of 1996 was 2.5 percent, about the same as the increase for the four quarters of 1995.

Reversing the trend on violent crime. For five straight years before President Clinton took office, violent crime increased in America. Because of the President's tough and smart decisions to put more cops on the street and get kids, guns and drugs off the street, we are now beginning to reverse the trend in violent crime:

- * Fewer serious crimes. According to preliminary figures released yesterday by the FBI, serious crimes reported to the nation's law enforcement agencies decreased a full two percent in 1995. It was the fourth consecutive yearly decrease in reported crime.
- * Violent crimes, murders and robberies all down. Violent crime fell 4 percent last year, and murders dropped by 8 percent. Robberies went down by 7 percent, forcible rape fell by 6 percent, and both burglary and arson decreased by 5 percent.
- * Safer cities. Cities with over 1 million inhabitants saw crime fall by 6 percent last year.

BACKGROUND TALKING POINTS ON GAS TAX

We are concerned about the rising gas prices of Americans motorists.

That is why:

- . The President directed the Secretary of Energy to begin quickly selling 12 million barrels of oil from the Strategic Petroleum Reserve;
- . The President directed the Secretary of Energy to investigate the causes of the rise in prices and report back within 45 days; and
- . The Justice Department is appointing a 5-member panel to investigate the causes of the current gas price increase.

The President is committed to getting real tax relief for American families. He believes the best way to do that is through the package of middle class tax cuts in his balanced budget plan:

- . $10,000 education tax deduction
- . $500 children's tax credit
- . Expanded IRAs to encourage savings throughout one's lifetime

The only way to get this done is through a comprehensive balanced budget negotiations. If we can renew balanced budget negotiations we will bring the tax cuts we believe will be best for American families, and they can argue their ideas as well. But let's do it in a real and serious balanced budget negotiation.

Q: But would the President consider repealing the 4.3 cent gas tax increase?

A: The President's preferred way of cutting taxes for working families is through a education tax deduction, a $500 tax credit for children, and expanded IRAs that allow penalty-free withdrawals for first time homes and training as well as for retirement. But if Republicans are serious about negotiating a balanced budget that protects Medicare, Medicaid, education, the environment and doesn't tax hard-pressed working families, then he would be willing to discuss their ideas.

REMARKS BY THE PRESIDENT
PENNSYLVANIA STATE UNIVERSITY
GRADUATE SCHOOL COMMENCEMENT

Bryce Jordan Center
Pennsylvania State University

3:11 P.M. EDT

THE PRESIDENT: Thank you very much. Ladies and gentlemen, thank you for that very warm welcome. Thank you, President Spanier. Thank you, Mr. Arnelle, Dr. Brighton, Dr. Erickson, Mr. Hollander. I thank the University Brass for playing so well for me. It made me want to take them back to the White House.

Ladies and gentlemen, I am delighted to be here for many very personal reasons, many of which are obvious. I'm very honored to receive the University Scholars Medal and to be the first non-Penn State alumnus to receive it.

As it was said earlier, my family has a long history with this state and with this great University. Hillary's family is from Scranton and both my father-in-law and brother-in-law attended Penn State and both played football here. Back in the '30s, according to my father-in-law, he had to play offense and defense. (Laughter.) That's sort of what I do, so I understand that. (Laughter and applause.)

I have had some other good personal associations with this University, and for all those I am very grateful. I am grateful for the establishment of a scholarship at the College of Education in my late father-in-law's name. It means a great deal to my wife and to me and to our daughter. And I am grateful to be here because of what Penn State represents.

This school was made a land grant school in the darkest hours of our nation's history, because President Lincoln and his contemporaries knew even then that our nation's future depended upon the widest possible dispersion of knowledge. Though faced with the possibility of the very union of our states breaking up, our leaders were still thinking about the future. And to all the graduates here with advanced degrees, I say, a great nation must always be thinking about tomorrow. Therefore, even as you relish this day, I ask you to join me just for a few moments in thinking about tomorrow, for you will live a great deal of your lives in the 21st century, the most remarkable age of possibility in human history.

I have been told that today every student at Penn State is given an e-mail account and that more than one million e-mail messages are sent every day. That is just a taste of the world to come -- a dazzling, new global economy, giving more and more people a chance to work with their minds instead of their backs throughout a career, many of you in jobs that you have not even invented yet. You will have incredible choices in where you live and how you work. You will be able to raise your children in greater peace and freedom and in the most diverse and vibrant democracy history has ever known. At least that's what I want our country to be like as we move into the 21st century.

Almost five years ago at my alma mater, Georgetown, I gave three speeches about my vision of America's future in the 21st century and a strategy for how I thought we ought to achieve that future. I said then and I'd like to repeat now that my vision is pretty simple and straightforward: I want an America in which all Americans, without regard to their race or their gender or their station in life, who are willing to work hard have a chance to live out their dreams. I want an America that remains the world's strongest force for peace and freedom and prosperity. And I want an America that is no longer being driven apart by our differences, but instead is coming together around our shared values and respect for our diversity.

As my wife says in her book, I really believe it takes a village of all of our people working together to make the most of our lives. To build that kind of America, we have to be able to honestly meet our challenges and protect our values. We have to find ways to create these opportunities for all Americans. We have to find ways to build strong communities and we have got to find ways to get more personal responsibility from all of our citizens. Opportunity, responsibility, community -- these are values that have made our country strong, that have built great institutions like Penn State, that guide my actions as President. I believe they must guide our nation as we prepare for the tomorrows of the 21st century.

What I want to do here and in the other commencement addresses I will be making is to talk about what has occurred in the last four years and, even more importantly, what must still occur if we are going to realize this vision -- to give opportunities to everybody willing to work for them, to keep our country the strongest force for peace and freedom, and to rebuild our sense of unity and community around a shared ethic of responsibility.

Compared to four years ago, there is clearly more opportunity, a much lower deficit, increased access to education, a renewed commitment to a clean environment and safer streets, 8.5 million new jobs, low inflation, record numbers of new exports in businesses. But we all know there are also a lot of problems in this new economy, a lot of uncertainty, and much more to do to give all our people a chance to succeed.

Compared to four years ago the world is more peaceful and safer. The nuclear threat has diminished. Peace and freedom are taking hold from Haiti to South Africa to Northern Ireland to Bosnia to the Middle East. But there is a lot more to do to make the American people safe from the 21st century threats of terrorism, organized crime and drug-running, weapons proliferation and global environmental threats.

In future speeches I'll discuss both these things at greater length. Today I'd like to ask you to kind of travel along with me as we look at America's present and its future in terms of that third objective -- inspiring a stronger, more united American community, rooted in a greater commitment to personal responsibility and community service.

What you have done here today is in and of itself an act of responsibility. By getting this advanced degree you have honored yourselves and your families, and you have helped America. We need more people -- many, many more people -- with much higher levels of education and, even more importantly, with the developed ability to learn for a lifetime. We need this kind of personal responsibility from all of our citizens, doing the best to make the most of their own lives. And we must apply the lessons of your success as individuals to our common work as a nation.

I believe we are living through a period of most profound change in the way we work, the way we live, the way we relate to each other and the rest of the world in 100 years -- since we moved from the agricultural into the industrial age. At the turn of the century about 100 years ago, people who for generations had lived their lives by the rising and the setting of the sun moved from the country to the city, where they woke to the din of the streetcar and went home to the sound of the factory whistle. That time presented enormous opportunities, but also great challenges. A hundred years ago many people's lives were uprooted, but not improved. And for many, not only their livelihoods but the values by which they lived were threatened by the changes of the day.

In response to the challenges of that time, a gifted generation of reformers, led first by Theodore Roosevelt and then by Woodrow Wilson, worked to harness the power of our nation's government so that it could extend the benefits of the industrial era to all Americans, curb the excesses of the era, and enable our people to preserve their family and community values. They launched what we now call the Progressive Era. They brought us the antitrust laws, the earliest environment protection laws. They were all designed to harness the positive forces of the new -- age to give everyone a fair chance to protect the values of the American people.

Think what has happened in the 100 years since. The progressives built the foundation of what became known as the American Century -- a century in which America won two world wars and the Cold War, overcame the Great Depression, achieved decades of sustained economic growth, scientific breakthroughs, more opportunities for women and minorities, a cleaner environment, remarkable security and good health for senior citizens, and the largest and most prosperous middle class in human history. It all began in the Progressive Era.

Today we're living through another time of profound change. Like the dawn of the Industrial Age, the Information Age offers vast new opportunities. Today technology and information are dominating every form of work including agriculture, as I'm sure anyone in the College of Agriculture here can attest to.

But this time also presents great challenges -- people whose lives are uprooted, but not improved; and cherished values strained by the pace and the scope of change. I'd like to talk about that a little today.

When I was growing up, Americans could pretty much walk the streets of any city without fear of being hurt by violent crime. Having children out of wedlock was rare and a source of shame. Welfare was a temporary weigh station for widows and their orphans. It was far from a perfect time, the '40s and '50s and early '60s. Women and minorities didn't have the opportunities they have today. But in neighborhoods all across America, people knew it when you were born, cared about you while you lived, and missed you when you died.

For too many young people growing up today, that world exists only in black and white reruns on television. In our toughest neighborhoods and our meanest streets, we've seen a stunning and simultaneous breakdown of community, family and work -- the heart and soul of a civilized society. We've seen a buildup of crime and gangs and drugs, as young people turn to things that will destroy them, ultimately, in part because they are raising themselves without enough to say yes to.

We've seen so much of this now we've almost become numb to it. A lot of us may even be resigned to it. But I want to ask you to think today about what you want America to look like in the 21st century, and I want you to say to yourself, I refuse to accept this as a normal and unavoidable and irreversible condition. I believe we can mend our social fabric. We've done it before, and we have to do it today.

If we're moving into an era in which we will be judged and our success will be determined by how well we use our minds, we must first be able to function as orderly, law-abiding, decent human beings. We have to, in short, not only meet the changes of the day, but reaffirm our enduring values.

In this, to be sure, our government still has a role to play. But it's not the same role that government had to play in the beginning of the 20th century because the problems are different. The world of today has moved away from big, centralized bureaucracies and top-down solutions. So has your federal government. Indeed, there are 240,000 fewer people working for the United States government today than there were the day I became President of this great country.

But we still need a government that is strong enough to give people the tools they need to make the most of their own lives, to enable them to seize opportunities when they are responsible. That's why I have fought so hard for things like the student loan programs, the Pell Grant programs, the scholarship programs, the research programs, because we cannot, on the one hand, tell the American people, go out and be responsible, and on the other hand, jerk the rug out from under them. We have to give people the tools they need to make the most of their own lives. (Applause.)

And whenever we fight for a strong economy, or a clean environment, or safe streets, or investment in research and technology, or give a child a chance with the Head Start program, we are doing nothing more or less than giving people an environment in which they still have to make the most of their own lives.

And so what I ask you today is to think about that. What is the role of the individual citizen in making the America of our dreams in the 21st century? What is the role of the individual citizen in making sure that we will move into this global society, with everyone having the chance to live up to his or her dreams? It is clear to me that government alone cannot solve this problem. (Applause.)

If you look at any society's most fundamental requirements -- strong families and safe streets -- and you ask yourselves, what are all the causes for the stresses on those things in our country, you may come up with a whole laundry list of things that government can do about them. I know I have. But in your heart of hearts you know that many, many of the things from which we suffer are caused by the lack of personal responsibility on the part of millions of American citizens.

The teen mother who leaves school for a life on welfare, a father who walks away from or abuses a family, a criminal who preys upon the rest of us, the neighbors who turn their backs on the children in need -- I say to you we cannot tolerate this anymore if you really want your vision of the 21st century to become real. We have to be willing to give people a chance to escape lives that are destructive for them and costly for the rest of us. That is our responsibility. But we must also insist that people help themselves and assume responsibility for making their own lives and the life of this great nation better.

If you just take the welfare system, for example, you can see the point I'm trying to make. I took office believing that a lot of people on welfare were dying to get off it and were trapped in it. I still believe that. It's a system that is too weighted toward a lifetime of dependency instead of demanding responsibility; too willing to let fathers bring children into the world, turn their backs and walk away and load all the burden onto the young mothers who are left behind; too willing to give the young mothers a check to move out on their own if they have a child instead of staying at home, staying in school and strengthening the family.

For 15 years, going back to my service as governor, I have sat in welfare offices, talked to people on welfare, asked them what it would take to turn their lives around, asked them what had happened. I have worked to reform and change welfare from a system that encourages dependency to one that encourages independence, from one that does not encourage work to one that insists upon work, but also supports responsible parenting.

If you look at all these people here with their advanced degrees, why are we so proud of them? Because we believe they will be able to succeed not only in the world of work, but they will be good role models for the American society. Their children will be able to succeed. They will be able to look at their children and their children will be able to look at them, and they will be able to do great things together. That is what we should want for people on welfare -- the simple ability to succeed at work and to succeed at home, to be able to contribute their portion of the American Dream.

Now, in the past three years, by executive actions, we've been working on what The New York Times called "a quiet revolution on welfare." We've cut red tape for 37 states and now let 75 percent of the people in this country on welfare be a part of welfare reform experiments with little fanfare and no new legislation. We've done things like impose time limits and require work, and we've worked much harder to enforce the national government's role in child support enforcement across national lines.

And you know what? The welfare rolls have dropped by more than a million. The food stamp rolls are down by a million and a half. Child support collections are up 40 percent to $11 billion a year. And the teen pregnancy rate has even started to go down a bit. (Applause.)

What does all this have to do with you? They are part of your country. If their children wind up in your prisons, you will pay for them instead of investing more money in scientific laboratories at Penn State, or giving children a chance to work in a program to earn a scholarship, or otherwise building our future. When others regularly and systematically violate the values we all say we share, it weakens America and it weakens the future of your vision and your dreams.

We still have a lot to do. Nearly a third of our babies today are born out of wedlock; a whole lot of them end up on welfare. A few days ago, we took an action which should force more responsibility. Every state will have to require teen mothers to stay in school and to sign a personal responsibility contract and to stay at home unless the environment is abusive, so that they must work to turn their lives around if they want to keep those benefits.

I'm still working with members of Congress in both parties to pass legislation to overhaul the entire welfare system. And I hope we can do it even though this is an election year. There's really no call for a work stoppage, and by the time November comes around you'll have more politics than you can stand. Meanwhile, you ought to be working to give those people what we want for ourselves -- independence, work and responsible parenting. (Applause.)

But what I want to say to all of you -- you say, well, what's that got to do with me? I'll never be on welfare, I've got a Ph.D. today. (Laughter.) They are your fellow Americans. Those children are your future. And what I want to say is, it doesn't matter what laws we pass or what programs we put in place, we cannot reverse decades and patterns of behavior unless more of our citizens are willing to take some responsibility for other people's kids in the near-term. (Applause.)

We have to inspire our communities to support programs and adults to participate in programs that we know now will dramatically reduce teen pregnancy. They're out there, they're just not in every community. The hard truth is, too many of our young people don't have the kind of discipline or love, guidance or support that it takes to grow up into responsible adults. Church groups and neighbors and parents all need to send a clear message to all children, not just their own: We care about you, but you have to take care of yourself. Don't get pregnant or father a child until you're ready to take responsibility. But if you do, we'll help you as long as you are responsible. (Applause.) And you can't walk away from that responsibility. If you do, we'll make you assume it. (Applause.)

Let me say that, in addition to welfare, I have the same view of the crime problem, and it's remarkably similar. Only if we take responsibility for our own communities can we really achieve our objective in crime. We'll never thoroughly transform human nature, but even if you have a Ph.D., you don't want to be a victim of a crime; you don't want your children to be unsafe going to and from school; you don't want to have to worry your heart out if your kids drive to a city to see a play; you don't want to have any kind of country other than one in which crime is an exception.

Someone said to me the other day, Mr. President, you talk about all this all the time, but you will never eliminate crime. I said, that's not my goal. My goal is to create an America so that when people turn on the evening news and they see a report of a serious crime, they are surprised and shocked, instead of yawning about it. (Applause.)

Now, there are things that government can do. There are things that government can do. In 1994, we passed a crime bill and a Brady Bill. The Brady Bill has already stopped 60,000 felons and fugitives with criminal records from getting handguns -- 60,000. (Applause.) We took 19 deadly assault weapons off the street and not a single hunter in Pennsylvania or in my native state of Arkansas missed a deer season or a duck season or had to have a different weapon. They didn't lose anything. (Applause.)

We said to repeat violent criminals, three strikes and you're out. We said if you kill law enforcement officials, the death penalty is there. (Applause.) But we also said what every police officer in America knows, the best way to fight crime is to reach young people before they turn to crime in the first place. (Applause.)

Now, you all clap for that, but if you believe it, what it means is that you cannot leave the work of making our streets safe to the police alone. Citizens have the responsibility. Citizens have a responsibility. You can take advantage of opportunities provided in our education bills to keep schools open late so teens have someplace to go besides the streets; or to launch community drug courts to give nonviolent offenders a chance to get off drugs before they end up in jail; or to make community policing work, something that's making the rounds in Pennsylvania today.

Our crime bill fulfilled a commitment I made to the American people to put 100,000 new police officers on the street in community policing. It's an old-fashioned idea, really. It means put the police back on the street, in the neighborhood, working with neighbors to spot criminals, shutting down crack houses, stopping crime before it happens, getting to know children on the street and encouraging them to stay away from crime. But community policing only works by definition when there is a community for the police to work with. (Applause.)

Now, whenever this happens crime comes down. Violent crimes have dropped in this country for three years in a row now because we're finally getting enough police out there on the street and because people are working with them. In Lancaster County, a two-hour drive from here, our community police program put 12 new officers into the downtown area -- listen to this -- they patrolled on foot, bicycle and horseback, they worked with the community, the crime dropped by 67 percent. Pretty soon they'll be surprised when they hear a report of crime. (Applause.)

This can be done. But I have to tell you, there's a big hurdle up the road and it can't be solved without more citizen help. Because in spite of the fact that the crime rate had dropped for three years in a row, the violent crime rate by people under 18 is still going up. And any of you who are in education know that there is a huge group of young people under 18, now coming into grade school, coming up through our system of education -- a higher percentage of them than any previous generation, born out of wedlock, born without the guidance of two parents, born into difficult family situations, out there having to raise themselves.

So even if you have a Ph.D., you've got to care about these kids. They're your kids; they're coming home to your roost and they will affect your country and your children's future and what kind of America we live in. And we cannot solve the problem of rising crime among young people -- even with our antidrug strategy, even with our antigang strategy, even with 100,000 more police -- unless there are citizens who are willing to step into the gap in those children's lives to teach them right from wrong, to give them a good future to look forward to, to give them the character and values to walk into that future, to make it possible for them to imagine that one day they might get a degree from a place like Penn State. You have to be willing to do that wherever you live. (Applause.)

I will just give you one simple example. There are 20,000 neighborhood crime watch groups in America -- 20,000. If 50 people join each one of these groups we would have a citizen force of a million new community activists to work with those 100,000 police officers -- not just to catch criminals, but to keep kids away from crime. Fifty people in every group, a million Americans reaching out to children, stopping crimes, catching criminals. If that happened -- and no government program can make it happen -- if that happened in community after community after community in the United States, people would be surprised when they heard at night a news report of a serious crime. And America would be a better place. We'd be a lot closer to our shared vision of America in the 21st century. (Applause.)

And that brings me to the last point I wish to make. We have a lot of challenges as a people to rebuild the strength of our communities and our national community. We're still too divided over racial matters. We're still too divided over religious disputes. We still have other problems that are simply unmet that can't be met by government. Helping children on welfare to move off of welfare, helping communities to reduce the crime rate -- these are not the only areas in which we desperately need more citizen involvement to make America the place it ought to be.

Those of you have college degrees, those of you who may earn a great deal of money will still find that in too many ways where you live the bonds of community have been weakened. There are too many places where people are working harder, moving more often, spending less time with each other and more time exhausted in front of the television. Even prosperous, happy neighborhoods often find that not everybody knows their neighbors.

So I say to you: With this wonderful, precious commodity of a fine education, I hope you will go out into your community and find some way to give back some of what your country has given to you. No matter what you do or how busy you are, there is always a way to serve a larger community. The story of your generation should be the story of we restore broken lives and shattered promises through citizen service.

We're going to balance this budget over the next six years. We're going to have a big fight about how to do it, as you know. (Laughter.) But don't let that obscure the fact --this deficit is less than half of what it was four years ago. And it's coming down. Don't obscure the real fact. (Applause.)

And that's very important because as we move to balance the budget, we can keep interest rates down and we can keep investment and create jobs for the American people -- and get incomes rising again, which has been the source of constant anxiety in places like Pennsylvania where people lost really good jobs and couldn't get other jobs paying at the same or better wages. It's an important thing to do.

I will do my best to protect our investments in education, in the environment, in the quality and character of the Medicare and Medicaid programs. But make no mistake about it: As we shrink government, until we balance the budget, there will be even more reliance on citizen servants to meet the needs of the American people because we can't shrink from our challenges on the grounds that we're shrinking the deficit.

There's an emerging consensus in Washington, believe it or not, across party lines that we ought to do more to help charities and religious institutions and families and individuals to step in where government can't anymore or where it shouldn't. I'll give you just a few examples. Leaders in both parties, from Senator Joe Lieberman, a Democrat of Connecticut, to Senator Dan Coats, a Republican from Indiana, have proposed reforms to encourage private citizens to assume responsibilities that are not and cannot be fulfilled by government agencies alone. For example, making sure every child has a loving home is a national priority. But government doesn't raise children, only good parents can do that. That's why earlier this week -- (applause) -- earlier this week I urged Congress to enact one of these bipartisan proposals, a $5,000 tax credit to help families, working families, adopt children. (Applause.)

And just a few hours ago, that proposal passed with an almost unanimous vote in the House of Representatives. It is going to become the law of the land. (Applause.)

We created AmeriCorps, the national service program, in 1993, so we could give our young people a chance to earn their way through college by giving something back to their community and their country. Since that time AmeriCorps has given more than 40,000 young people all across this country a chance to serve, to work with troubled teenagers, immunize children, help seniors who don't have enough support, clean up the environment, do countless other things. I have met so many of these young people around the country who tell me that the experience literally changed their lives, and they'll never spend another year of their life without taking some time to rebuild their community. That is the kind of spirit we need to create in all of America.

I want to thank your former Senator, Harris Wofford, for agreeing to head the AmeriCorps program and for ensuring its continuation. (Applause.)

I want to thank our constructive critics, like Senator Charles Grassley of Iowa, the Republican Senator from Iowa, who worked with Senator Wofford to strengthen the AmeriCorps program and to preserve it.

Let me just suggest three other things that we could do to get more young people involved. First, I've asked Congress to increase funding for work-study programs for students so that we can have a million students earning their way through college by the year 2000. (Applause.) Today I'd like to ask Penn State and every other institution of higher education in the country to consider using more of this money to promote service -- to put thousands of college students to work in community service. If it's good for students to earn money by putting books back in library shelves or working in the Dean's Office, surely it makes sense for them to earn money helping teen mothers handle their responsibilities, helping older people get around, helping young people to look to a brighter future. (Applause.)

Second, I challenge every high school in America to make service a part of its basic ethic. Every high school student who can do so should do some community service. There are some schools, both public and private, that require community service as a part of their curriculum. I say, good for them. Commitment to community should be an ethic we learn as possible so we carry it throughout our lives. (Applause.)

And third, I challenge every community to help those high school students answer the call of service. Today I'm prepared to make an offer and challenge any school district or civic organization in the country to match it: If you will raise $500 to reward a high school student who has done significant work to help your community, the federal government will match your $500 and help that student go on to college. (Applause.) That would cost us, by the way, about $10 million if every high school in the country did it. It would be the best $10 million we ever spent. We would get hundreds of millions of dollars -- of improved quality of life and service to people as a result of it. (Applause.)

This fall I'll announce the winners of a nationwide competition to identify schools that have done the best job in encouraging this kind of service. Students at those schools will become National Service Scholars. A year from now I want it to be even bigger. I want every principal in America to be able to stand up before a graduating class and announce the name of a National Service Scholar. We should make service to the community a part of every high school in America and a part of life of every dedicated citizen in the United States. (Applause.)

So, my fellow Americans, in spite of all we have to do to create more opportunity, we also must find a way to urge, cajole, plead, generate, demand more responsibility for ourselves, our families, our communities and our country.

This summer in Atlanta we will celebrate the centennial of the Modern Olympics. It's a great honor to host those Olympics in the United States. But I ask you to think when you see these young people come out about more than medals and who will win and lose. The real meaning of the Olympics is what miracles happen to people when they make a deep and profound commitment to take personal responsibility for just becoming the best that they can be, and when they're willing to work with teammates to make their common endeavors even greater. That is the great strength of America. (Applause.)

You know, the president mentioned earlier that -- or maybe it was the chairman of your board -- about Pennsylvania's role in starting this country. And I want you to think about this as I close. Our founding fathers, who did so much of their work right here in Pennsylvania, would not be surprised that in this new era, with all of its possibilities, there are still a lot of tough problems. They were very smart. They knew there would never be a perfect problem-free time. They wouldn't be surprised at all. But they would be very surprised and bitterly disappointed if we were to give into pessimism about these problems, deny their existence and walk away from them. They knew -- you can read it in the Federalist Papers, you can read it in the founding documents -- they knew that freedom requires responsibility and service for personal prosperity and for the common good.

You graduates have been blessed with the richest educational experience the world can offer. As Americans, you've been blessed to inherit the greatest country on Earth. Now you have to honor that debt by asking yourselves, what do I want my country to be like in the 21st century and what am I prepared to do to make it a reality?

I will do all I can to give you the opportunities to make the most of your lives, but you must do all you can to assume responsibility for yourselves, your families and your communities. If you do that, I believe your life will be a lot happier and richer, and you will surely make the 21st century America's greatest days.

Thank you. God bless you, and God bless America. (Applause.)

PRESIDENT CLINTON IS FIGHTING FOR AMERICAN INTERESTS AND AMERICAN JOBS: EXTENDING CHINA'S MFN STATUS

May 20, 1996

Preserving America's long-term interests through engagement. President Clinton's vision is clear: U.S. interests are best served by a stable, open and prosperous China -- but also by a China that increasingly embraces international proliferation and trade rules, cooperates in regional and global peacekeeping and security initiatives and expands the rule of law and respect for the basic rights of the Chinese people. These interests are best promoted by renewing Most Favored Nation (MFN) status for China.

MFN is NOT special treatment. The phrase "Most Favored Nation" is often misconstrued. MFN means a normal trading relationship and ordinary tariff treatment -- it is not a privileged status. America has the same relationship with virtually every country in the world.

Renewal of MFN is the right approach. Engagement, aided by targeted sanctions when necessary, is the best means to achieve our policy goals with China. The President has not hesitated to use the other tools at his disposal to promote America's interests:

- * Protecting U.S. Intellectual Property. On May 15, the Clinton Administration announced a preliminary list of $3 billion worth of Chinese exports that may be subject to retaliation if China does not implement the 1995 IPR agreement.
- * Deterring Dangerous Proliferation. The Clinton Administration successfully used the threat of economic sanctions in the ring magnets case to secure a commitment by China not to assist unsafeguarded nuclear facilities.
- * Pressing for Human Rights Progress. The Clinton Administration has led international efforts to keep the spotlight on China's human rights record and to keep faith with those in China who are working to promote human rights and democracy.

Revoking MFN is the wrong approach. Continued economic engagement with China, including through renewal of MFN, is a major engine of change in China, exposing the country to our political process, economics and personal freedoms. Revoking MFN would undermine America's best long-term interests.

- * Keeping American Jobs. Revocation almost certainly would result in Chinese retaliation against America's $12 billion in annual exports to China, jeopardizing the 170,000 U.S. jobs dependent on these exports. This could reverse important export progress made in recent years. In 1995 alone, U.S. exports to China increased by nearly 27 percent, to more than double the 1990 level.
- * Preserving Other Critical U.S. Interests. Revocation would undermine other key U.S. interests with China on issues such as human rights, nonproliferation, drug interdiction, anti-terrorism, Taiwan, Hong Kong and others. Chinese cooperation already has resulted in significant progress in key areas: banning the export of ballistic missiles; stopping North Korea's nuclear program and preventing North Korea from destabilizing the Korean Peninsula; stopping aid to the Khmer Rouge; arresting narcotics traffickers; and repatriating illegal aliens trying to reach our shores. Initiatives like these could be jeopardized if MFN was revoked.

Renewal of MFN is widely supported. MFN has been supported by every President (both Republican and Democratic) who has confronted the issue. It is supported throughout Asia, including by Japan, Korea, and ASEAN. Revocation would be a serious blow to Hong Kong and Taiwan.

Megan's Law. Today, President Clinton will sign Megan's Law, requiring every state in the country to tell communities when a dangerous sexual predator enters its midst. Today's signing builds on the President's 1994 Crime Bill, which gave states the power to provide such information to their communities. The Administration has also filed amicus briefs in courts across the country in defense of that right. This afternoon, the President travels to St. Louis, Missouri to speak to high school students about making our schools safer and ending juvenile violence and drug use.

Success in the fight against crime, for the safety of all Americans:

- * More police. President Clinton is ahead of schedule in putting 100,000 new police onto the streets and into our communities, with 43,000 already funded.
- * Fewer guns on the streets. The Brady Bill has already prevented over 60,000 fugitives, felons and other criminals from buying handguns.
- * Reversing the trend: violent crimes, murders and robberies are all down. Violent crime fell 4 percent last year, and murders dropped by 8 percent. It was the fourth consecutive yearly decrease in reported crime, after five years of increase before President Clinton took office.

President Clinton is working to make schools safer and drug-free.

- * We have strengthened and expanded the Safe and Drug-Free Schools Act, an investment which provides school security, drug prevention and education programs.
- * President Clinton signed a directive enforcing "zero tolerance" for schools across the country -- you bring a gun to school, you don't come back for a year.
- * President Clinton has urged schools to adopt school uniform policies that promote discipline and respect, and have proven to lead to reduced crime and drug use at schools. The Department of Education has issued a guide to aid interested schools.

President Clinton has issued four principles in waging a full-scale assault against gang-related violent crime:

- 1) Use every available tool, such as racketeering statutes, carjacking penalties, etc.
 - 2) Improve cooperative efforts among state, local and federal law enforcement agencies
 - 3) Involve communities and community police in anti-gang efforts
 - 4) Support effective early intervention programs that help keep young people out of gangs in the first place.
- * A national gang tracking network. President Clinton announced funding for the first step of a National Gang Tracking Network. This computerized network will provide federal, state, local and municipal law enforcement agencies with the ability to share and exchange gang information quickly and efficiently.

President Clinton's juvenile violence/ anti-drug use legislative package. In addition to taking executive action, President Clinton has sent legislative proposals to Congress to help stop the rise of youth violence and drug use, including:

- * Trying juvenile offenders as adults for violent and drug crimes
- * A new strategy to stop the spread of methamphetamine
- * Reinstating the ban on guns in schools
- * A $75 million grant program for juvenile drug and gun courts
- * Increasing the penalties for drug dealers who sell drugs to children, or use children to sell drugs.

THE WHITE HOUSE CORPORATE CITIZENSHIP CONFERENCE

May 16, 1996

"[E]mployers and employees must do their part...as they are doing in so many of our finest companies -- working together, putting the long-term prosperity ahead of the short-term gain. As workers increase their hours and their productivity, employers should make sure they get the skills they need and share the benefits of the good years, as well as the burdens of the bad ones. When companies and workers work as a team they do better, and so does America."

-- President Clinton, State of the Union Address, 1/23/96

- * The White House Corporate Citizenship Conference builds on the President's State of the Union Challenge for employers and employees to join together to put long-term prosperity ahead of short term gain. President Clinton believes that employees have a duty to their companies to make them profitable, and employers owe a duty to employees to make them more valuable through job training and education.
- * President Clinton first called for the convening of this conference in his speech on corporate citizenship at Xavier University in Ohio on March 23, 1996. In that speech, President Clinton outlined Five Corporate Citizenship Challenges:
 1. FAMILY-FRIENDLY WORKPLACES: Create workplaces that allow workers to be both productive workers and caring and responsible family members. Family friendly policies can range from flexible work schedules, to help with child and elder care, to time off for parent-teacher meetings. Companies that recognize our broader obligations as parents, family members and citizens off-the-job get more committed employees on-the-job.
 2. HEALTH AND RETIREMENT SECURITY: Provide the security that a living wage, health care, and pension benefits can give.
 3. SAFE AND SECURE WORKPLACES: Protect the health and safety of employees through management commitment and employee involvement.
 4. INVESTMENT IN EMPLOYEES: Recognize that investments in your employees are every bit as important as investing in factories and equipment. Provide broad opportunities for education and training both in and outside the firm, for new skills and advancement.
 5. PARTNERSHIP WITH EMPLOYEES: Give employees a voice in the workplace and share the burdens and benefits of good times and bad. When restructuring and layoffs are essential to a company's long-term health: be open, be helpful, and be fair. Productive companies need committed employees.

PRESIDENT CLINTON AND VICE PRESIDENT GORE WILL MEET WITH BUSINESS LEADERS AND HIGHLIGHT SEVERAL COMPANIES THAT MEET THE PRESIDENT'S CORPORATE CITIZENSHIP CHALLENGES, to begin an important national dialogue on corporate citizenship.

- * Working Breakfast, 8:30 a.m. at the White House with members of the Clinton Economic Team and more than 100 business leaders.
- * Roundtable Discussion, 11:05 a.m. at Georgetown University with two panels with businesses leaders whose companies each highlight one of the President's Corporate Citizenship Challenges.
 - Panel 1: Discussion and examples of meeting Corporate Citizenship Challenges 1, 2, and 3.
 - Panel 2: Discussion and examples of meeting Corporate Citizenship Challenges 4 and 5.

PRESIDENT CLINTON AND AMERICA'S POLICE: MEETING OUR CHALLENGE FOR A SAFER AMERICA May 15, 1996

Honoring our nation's police. Today, President Clinton will speak at the Peace Officers Memorial, to honor those who have fallen in the line of duty and to praise those police officers who serve us every day. By announcing 9,000 new police for our streets, by asking for one million citizens to join them in volunteer neighborhood watch groups, by calling on states to create more truth in sentencing and Congress to pass a ban on cop-killer bullets, President Clinton is challenging all of us to help the police keep America safe.

100,000 new police on the street. Today, in a phone call with twelve of the nation's mayors, President Clinton announced more than $604 million in funding for almost 9,000 new police. The President is continuing to fulfill his pledge to put 100,000 new police on the street, increasing our nation's police force by twenty percent. Today's announcement brings the total to 43,000 since the signing of the 1994 Crime Bill. Over 700 of today's 9,000 police are going to Los Angeles alone.

One million volunteers supporting those police. President Clinton believes that we cannot rely solely on the police to make our streets into safe communities again. Today, he restated his call for 50 citizens to join each of the nation's 20,000 neighborhood watch groups, creating a new force of volunteers one million strong to help the police make America's streets safe once again.

Ending the use of cop-killer bullets. The President also repeated his call to Congress to listen to police officers across America and pass a permanent ban on the production and use of cop-killer bullets. These armor-piercing bullets have no sporting value, and serve only to endanger the men and women we ask to protect us every day.

Truth in sentencing. President Clinton has challenged every state to match federal policy to ensure that serious violent criminals serve at least 85 percent of their sentence. It is wrong to make America's police officers risk their lives to apprehend dangerous criminals, and then face those criminals on the street again before they've received the full punishment for their crime.

A strategy that works. Community policing is helping to fight crime in America. The 100,000 new police that President Clinton is putting on our streets, in our communities and neighborhoods are bringing new security to the lives of the people on their beat.

- * Reversing the trend on violent crime. For five straight years before President Clinton took office, violent crime increased in America. Because of the President's tough and smart decisions to put more cops on the street and get kids, guns and drugs off the street, we are now beginning to reverse the trend in violent crime:
- * Fewer serious crimes. According to preliminary figures released last week by the FBI, serious crimes reported to the nation's law enforcement agencies decreased a full two percent in 1995. It was the fourth consecutive yearly decrease in reported crime.
- * Violent crimes, murders and robberies are all down. Violent crime fell 4 percent last year, and murders dropped by 8 percent. Robberies went down by 7 percent, forcible rape fell by 6 percent, and both burglary and arson decreased by 5 percent.
- * Safer cities. Cities with over one million inhabitants saw crime fall by 6 percent last year.
- * Fewer guns on the streets. The Brady Bill has already prevented over 60,000 fugitives and felons from buying handguns, and the assault weapons ban is working.

DAILY POINTS

President Clinton is Leading the Fight To Crack Down on Gang Violence May 13, 1996

"Violent crime is coming down all across America...Our next step in the fight against crime is to take on gangs the way we once took on the mob. . .Let's stick with a strategy that's working and keep the crime rate coming down." - President Clinton, State of the Union Address, January 23, 1996

A Growing Youth Gang Problem in America. A generation ago, fewer than half of our cities reported gang activity. Now 95 percent of our largest cities and 88 percent of smaller cities suffer from gang-related crime, while cities with an emerging gang problem report that up to 90 percent of gang members are juveniles. With the advent of hard drugs like crack and the proliferation of assault weapons on our streets, gangs have become violent street families for too many of our young people.

Clinton Administration Cracking Down on Gangs. Federal prosecutors are working with state and local law enforcement and prosecutors to achieve a number of notable successes around the country. Attorney General Reno presented the President with a new progress report on the fight against gang violence, which details successful federal gang prosecutions across the country. In addition, the President received a briefing from three U.S. Attorneys who have successfully curbed gang problems and prosecuted gang members in Illinois, Massachusetts and Connecticut.

Strategies for the Future. In remarks before federal prosecutors, state and local law enforcement and local officials, the President urged the nation's prosecutors to embrace four principles in waging a full-scale assault on gang-related violent crime:

- 1) Use every available tool, such as racketeering statutes, carjacking penalties, etc.
- 2) Improve cooperative efforts among state, local and federal law enforcement agencies
- 3) Involve communities and community police in anti-gang efforts
- 4) Support effective early intervention programs that help keep young people out of gangs in the first place.

A national gang tracking network. President Clinton announced funding for the first step of a National Gang Tracking Network. This computerized network will provide federal, state, local and municipal law enforcement agencies with the ability to share and exchange gang information quickly and efficiently.

A juvenile violence/ anti-drug use legislative package. In addition to taking executive action, President Clinton has sent legislative proposals to Congress to help stop the rise of youth violence and drug use, including:

- * Trying juvenile offenders as adults for violent and drug crimes
- * A new strategy to stop the spread of methamphetamine
- * Reinstating the ban on guns in schools
- * A $75 million grant program for juvenile drug and gun courts
- * Increasing the penalties for drug dealers who sell drugs to children, or use children to sell drugs
- * Restoring the ability of the courts to enhance the sentences of criminals convicted of using or carrying a firearm in connection with a drug-related or violent crime.

A call for citizen involvement. We cannot leave the responsibility for making our streets safe to the police alone. That is why President Clinton has called for one million new citizen volunteers to join the 100,000 new police we are putting on the street, to help our neighborhood watch groups make our communities safe.

Today, in his commencement address at Pennsylvania State University, President Clinton will call on all Americans to take responsibility for ourselves and our communities, to honor our values and meet our challenges. The President will urge all Americans to help him reform welfare, stop teen pregnancy, hold fathers accountable, fight crime, and restore our community.

Preserving the values of opportunity, responsibility and community. As he did in 1991, President Clinton will deliver a series of commencement addresses in which he will begin to lay out his vision and direction for the country as we move toward the year 2000. In the first of this series, the President will outline a number of specific ideas, plans and challenges to help Americans enjoy and expand those American values. Today's speech will focus on responsibility, for ourselves, our families and our communities.

Responsibility to give back to our communities. President Clinton is proposing three challenges to give young Americans the chance to give back. They include:

- * A challenge to colleges to use work study funding to help promote service.
- * A challenge to every high school to make service a part of its basic ethic.
- * A challenge to every community to help high school students answer that call. This challenge was enhanced by the offer of matching federal funds of up to $500 that a community raises to reward high school students who perform significant service for their communities. This would create a National Service Scholar in every school.

Responsibility to fight crime in our communities.

- * President Clinton has a drug strategy targeted against juvenile drug use. We are taking on gangs like we took on the mob. President Clinton is putting 100,000 new police on the streets, in our communities. But parents and neighbors must teach our children right from wrong. President Clinton called on 50 new people to join each of the 20,000 neighborhood watch groups in America by the year 2000, adding to that force 1 million new recruits.

Responsibility to our families.

- * Last week, President Clinton acted to require teen mothers on welfare to be more responsible, to stay in school and sign "personal responsibility contracts," or lose their benefits.
- * President Clinton has proposed tougher child support enforcement, to make sure that both parents share the responsibility of raising a child.
- * We must continue to fight domestic violence. Today, the President called on Congress to pass the Kassebaum / Kennedy health care reform bill so that insurance companies will cover medical costs for women who have been abused, and stop calling being battered a "pre-existing condition."
- * Giving every child a loving home. President Clinton has urged Congress to enact a $5000 tax credit to help middle-class families adopt a child. The House is expected to pass this legislation today.

MEMORANDUM FOR CABINET MEMBERS AND AGENCY HEADS

FROM: LEON E. PANETTA
CHIEF OF STAFF

SUBJECT: Attendance at Olympic Events

Many of you, and some of your staff, are likely to be invited to attend events and functions at the Olympics this summer. Very few events will require official attendance by anyone in the Administration. In light of the very limited need for the presence of any Cabinet officials in Atlanta during the games, your attendance should be cleared with the White House prior to your departure. To insure a consistent approach throughout the executive branch, we are providing this memorandum outlining appropriate responses.

Support of the President's or Vice President's Attendance at the Olympic Games

Certain employees will be required to attend Olympic events with the President and Vice President or may be invited by the President or Vice President to be part of the "official delegation." Provided that their attendance is necessary to support the President or Vice President's participation in the events or they are members of the official delegation, such employees may attend Olympic events free of charge.

Participation in the Conduct of an Event

Certain employees will be required to be present at a sporting or other event at the Olympics due to the nature of their responsibilities. For instance, it will be necessary for federal law enforcement personnel to be present to support state and local law enforcement personnel in insuring compliance with laws, in preventing terrorist incidents, and in other law enforcement activities. Attendance at an event under these circumstances is appropriate. However, such individuals should be engaged in official activities and not merely observing the games.

Tickets to Sporting Events

As you know, the standards of ethical conduct prohibit a federal employee from accepting a gift, including a ticket to a sporting event, that exceeds $20 in value from a prohibited source or which is given because of the employee's official position. An exception is recognized for gifts based on a personal relationship. Thus, under the gift rules you are prohibited from accepting a ticket to a sporting event where the value of the ticket exceeds $20, unless the ticket has been provided to you by a relative or close personal friend. Please note that the close personal friend or relative should have paid for the ticket personally, as opposed to the friend's or relative's employer. Additionally, the rules permit you to accept a ticket for which you pay the "donor" the fair market value of a ticket. You also may accept a gift that has been offered as a result of your spouse's business or employment activities. As always, you may not solicit a gift from anyone.

Because an appearance of preferential treatment may be created by attendance at certain events where tickets are no longer available to the public, you must receive approval from me, through Kitty Higgins, before you purchase tickets other than through the process available to the general public. (Tickets for certain events are still available to the general public, and you may purchase tickets to those events under the ordinary process available to the public.)

Invitations to Receptions and Similar Events

If you are in Atlanta or any other Olympic venue, either on business or for personal reasons, you may be asked to attend a reception, cocktail party, or other similar event. Such invitations should be treated like other invitations you receive throughout the year. In other words, your ethics official will need to determine whether the invitation to the particular event may properly be accepted under the gift rules.

As always, your first point of contact on invitations and gifts is your agency ethics official. If they have questions about the application of this policy to a particular situation, I would encourage them to contact Kathleen Whalen, Associate Counsel to the President, at 456-6229.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE HEADS OF EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENTS AND ESTABLISHMENTS

FROM: Alice M. Rivlin
Director

SUBJECT:: Implementation of the Information Technology Management
Reform Act of 1996

This memorandum provides preliminary guidance to Federal agencies on the implementation of the Information Technology Management Reform Act of 1996 (ITMRA), Pub. L. 104-106, which President Clinton signed into law on February 10, 1996. ITMRA repeals Section 111 of the Federal Property and Administrative Services Act of 1949 (popularly referred to as the "Brooks Act") and establishes a new statutory scheme for information technology management and acquisition within the Executive branch. The Act's provisions take effect on August 8, 1996, 180 days after enactment. This memorandum addresses two areas -- the designation of the chief information officer (CIO) and the role of the General Services Board of Contract Appeals (GSBCA) in information technology protests.

In addition to this memorandum, OMB Circulars will be revised to provide further guidance to agencies. OMB will seek agency and public comment of draft revisions to Circular A-130, "Management of Federal Information Resources," so that these revisions will be final by early August 1996. In addition, OMB Circular A-11, "Preparation and Submission of Budget Estimates," will be revised as part of the annual update of that Circular.

Agency Chief Information Officers

Section 5125(a) of ITMRA amends Section 3506 of the Paperwork Reduction Act of 1995 (PRA), Pub. L. 104-13, 44 U.S.C. Chapter 35, by establishing the position of Chief Information Officer in place of the designated senior official for information resources management previously established by the PRA. This provision is intended to establish clear accountability for agency information resources management activities, provide for greater coordination among the agency's information activities, and ensure greater visibility of such activities within each agency.

One of the most important responsibilities of the CIO is to promote effective agency operations by implementing budget-linked capital planning for, and performance-based management of, information technology systems. Under the ITMRA, agencies are to determine, before making an investment in a new information system to support a particular function, whether the function should be performed or supported by the private sector or another agency. Agencies should also, where appropriate, reorganize and revise the way a function is performed to improve its effectiveness before making significant IT investments to support that work. To ensure that these strategic issues are addressed by the agency, the Act makes the CIO explicitly responsible for promoting improvements in agency work processes.

The CIO is also charged with facilitating the development, implementation, and maintenance of a sound and integrated information technology architecture for the agency, and promoting the effective design and operation of all major information resources management processes. The duties of the CIO are set forth at section 5125(c) of the ITMRA.

Designation and Organizational Placement of the Chief Information Officer.

Each agency head is expected to select and position a CIO to ensure the effective acquisition and use of IT and to carry out the agency's information resources management responsibilities. While the organizational placement of the CIO is to be determined by the agency head, the person selected should report to the agency head directly, and not through another official. The CIO must actively participate, with the agency head and other senior agency officials, in planning and budgeting deliberations, support of work process redesign in areas being considered for IT investment, and the development of information technology program performance measures. Consistent with the ITMRA, for the agencies listed in the Attachment, information resources management shall be the primary duty of the CIO.

The agency head may designate as the CIO any individual who has the professional qualifications and experience required for the duties of the position. The position may be filled by recruiting and appointing someone from outside the agency, by the current senior information resources management official, or by someone holding another position in the agency.¹

Agencies may also establish CIOs for major subcomponents or bureaus, and may also appoint deputy CIOs that have additional experience in work process redesign, design and management of information technology architectures, and data and telecommunications management.

Relation to Chief Financial Officer (CFO).

The head of the agency is responsible for defining the operating relationship between the CIO and CFO functions and ensuring coordination in the implementation of the ITMRA, the PRA, the Chief Financial Officers Act, and the Government Performance and Results Act. The CFO continues to be responsible for developing, implementing, and maintaining the financial management systems as provided for in the CFO Act. In agencies where financial systems represent a substantial part of the agency's information systems portfolio, it may be appropriate for the same person to serve as both CIO and CFO, so long as the mix of the CFO/CIO duties and qualifications is consistent with the intent of ITMRA. Finally, Section 5126 of the ITMRA encourages the CIO and CFO to work together under the direction of the agency head to ensure that the agency's information systems provide reliable, consistent, and timely program performance information.

Appointment Process.

By August 8, 1996, the head of each agency shall designate its Chief Information Officer, as required by ITMRA and the PRA.

Each agency listed in the Attachment should consult with the OMB Deputy Director for Management prior to establishing and filling the position, and provide the following information:

- the CIO's name, background and experience.
- an organization chart which identifies the CIO's position relative to the head of the agency, and other senior agency officials, and the agency staff and associated resources assigned, or to be assigned, to the CIO for the performance of functions assigned by the PRA and ITMRA.
- a description of the CIO's authority and responsibilities.

All agencies should provide the name, title, and phone number for the CIO to OMB once the position is filled. This information should be mailed to Room 10236, New Executive Office Building, Washington, D.C. 20503. This information should be updated as changes occur.

Role of the General Services Board of Contract Appeals (GSBCA)

The repeal of the Brooks Act revokes the GSBCA's authority to hear and decide bid protests. The GSBCA will continue to hear and decide protests received up to and including August 7, 1996. The GSBCA will not accept any protest received on or after August 8, 1996.

Inquiries. Inquiries or suggestions regarding the role of the Chief Information Officer may be directed to the Information Policy and Technology Branch in OMB's Office of Information and Regulatory Affairs (202) 395-3785. Inquiries regarding the role of the GSBCA should be directed to OMB's Office of Federal Procurement Policy (202) 395-6803.

INDEPENDENT AGENCIES

FROM: John A. Koskinan
OMB Deputy Director for Management

Bob J. Nash
Assistant to the President and Director, Presidential Personnel

SUBJECT: Selection of Chief Information Officers

As agencies begin the selection process for a Chief Information Officer (CIO), we wanted to remind you of our interest in this process.

As with the selection of agencies' Chief Financial Officers and Inspectors General, our offices will be working together to assure that we find the best qualified and most appropriate individuals for the position of Chief Information Officer. Accordingly, please ensure that the decision memorandum for this position, to be provided pursuant to the April 4, 1996 memorandum from Alice Rivlin (Implementation of the Information Technology Management Reform Act of 1996), is submitted for approval to the Director of Presidential Personnel, as well the Deputy Director of OMB. The Office of Presidential Personnel is currently gathering resumes of potential candidates and will share these with the agencies for their consideration.

When submitting the information, agencies are asked to follow the guidelines outlined in Director Rivlin's memorandum of April 4, 1996. In addition, agencies are asked to submit to OMB and PPO, by May 24, 1996, a status report on the selection of a CIO. If there are any questions regarding this memorandum, please contact Nelson Reyneri, Office of Presidential Personnel, (202) 456-5221 or by fax at (202) 456-2259.
