9 NOVEMBER 1993

Mr Chairman and Members of the Subcommittee:

Thank you for the opportunity to speak to you today on the subject of the convergence of civilian and Defense polar-orbiting environmental satellites. The Departments of Defense (DOD) and Commerce (DOC) and the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) are seeking to identify realistic opportunities for additional cost savings through further integration of all or parts of the DOD and DOC operational polar-orbiting environmental satellite programs and the NASA Earth Observing System (EOS) research and development program.

Over the past 20 years, eight major studies have examined convergence of the DOD Defense Meteorological Satellite Program (DMSP) and the DOC Polar-Orbiting Operational Environmental Satellite (POES) program. As a result, there is a significant amount of technical commonality between DMSP and POES to include a common spacecraft bus and launch vehicle and shared ground processing duties. The fundamental differences in DOD and DOC missions and requirements have in the past precluded total convergence. While the missions and requirements remain different, the landscape has changed enough that there is a renewed opportunity and commitment in examining how we might merge our two programs, capitalize on NASA R&D efforts, and produce a national system that satisfies core civil and national security requirements. We have made progress with regard to most of the historical roadblocks and are looking at a range of alternatives that will satisfy both civil and military requirements. Initial results of our ^{Triagency} effort will be available by the end of December to the Office of Science and Technology Policy (OSTP) for the White House review that will produce the implementation plan. ✓

Over the last four years the world's political climate has changed dramatically from bi-polar to multi-polar. Nevertheless, DOD requirements for polar-orbiting environmental satellite data have not changed. An assured capability to obtain timely, accurate environmental satellite data on a global basis is critical to supporting military operational forces and national systems. Therefore, how DOD core requirements will be met with certainty by a single U.S. converged system is critical to the way we view any convergence option.

DUSD(A) S&SS M&SS

Nov 8.93 9:49 No.002 P.04

DOD's polar-orbiting environmental satellites provide data for a broad range of missions. Cloud imagery data can be immediately read out by the Air Force, Navy, Marine, and Army theater warfighters to support contingency operations. These data also provide input to the unique cloud analysis and forecast capability at the Air Force Global Weather Central supporting national systems and missions worldwide. Microwave imagery data provide the only means for the Navy to determine wind speeds over the open ocean for fleet operations and are not available from any other source. These data also provide the Army with precipitation information to determine cross-country mobility of armor forces. Temperature and moisture measurements optimize electro-optical weapons performance, are critical for army artillery and missile targeting, and are used as numerical weather prediction model input to forecast weather patterns over data-denied areas. In addition, space environmental data enable alerts and warnings for space system operations.

The DOD believes converging to a single U.S. operational system is not contrary to satisfying national security requirements. Our vision is for a joint national operational program where both DOD and DOC have a significant role and involvement and where DOC and NASA would continue to be the interface to the national and international civilian communities.

The triagency study is addressing all the dimensions that will have to be successfully resolved or executed in order to achieve the goal of a converged system. Some of the items being addressed are: (1) how a converged system will be acquired, managed, and operated, so as to be responsive to both civil and military requirements; (2) a range of converged architectures; (3) how the current DOD and DOC programs will be brought into synchronization to enable convergence at the same time; (4) agency roles and responsibilities; (5) and how the agencies will budget for the converged system. The most cost-effective convergence solution that meets core civil and national security requirements has yet to be fully defined and agreed upon. A final study report will be presented to the Triagency Steering Committee in mid-December. At that point, ^{an} ~~the~~ OSTP-led interagency Working Group will ~~begin to~~ develop the Administration's implementation plan for a converged system. The OSTP will be the Administration focus for reviewing the final decisions on converged system architecture, management, operations, budgeting, and agency roles and responsibilities and will report to Congress in April of next year.

The driving force behind this convergence effort is the need to reduce development, production, and operational costs and save the nation money. However, it is premature to address cost savings. The triagency study is currently developing rough order of magnitude cost estimates for different convergence options. Preliminary estimates of savings will be available in the report submitted to Congress in April 1994, along with preliminary budget profiles.

This concludes my remarks. I will be pleased to respond to any questions you might have.

Statement of
Mr. William F. Townsend
Deputy Associate Administrator
Office of Mission to Planet Earth
National Aeronautics and Space Administration

before the Subcommittee on Space
Committee on Science, Space and Technology
U.S. House of Representatives

November 9, 1993

Mr. Chairman and Members of the Subcommittee:

I am pleased to appear before the Subcommittee today to report on the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's (NASA) discussions with the Departments of Commerce (DOC) and Defense (DOD) on the establishment of a converged polar satellite program.

Process of Convergence

Prior to the current triagency effort, NASA initiated discussions on convergence by approaching DOC's National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA) regarding the merger of NASA's follow-on Earth Observation System (EOS)-PM flights with the NOAA Polar Orbiting Environment Program (POES). These discussions were based on a mid 1992 recommendation from NASA's Internal Red/Blue Teams to examine NASA-NOAA polar satellite convergence. Specifically, the teams considered converging NOAA's POES program with instruments scheduled to fly on the second and third of NASA's EOS PM spacecraft, currently planned for launch in 2005 and 2010, respectively. Progress continued with additional NASA-NOAA discussions in the fall of 1992 and continuing through the winter. In February of this year, Chairman Brown requested a triagency study to assess convergence of appropriate elements of DMSP, POES and EOS PM-2/3. Also in February, discussions were underway to integrate DOD's Defense Meteorological Satellite Program (DMSP) and NOAA's Polar Orbiting Environmental Satellite (POES) Program. These efforts were integrated last July when NASA, DOD and DOC joined forces to determine how a converged polar orbiting environmental satellite system could meet DOD and NOAA operational requirements, while preserving the research goals of NASA's EOS-PM series and reducing overall costs to the U.S. Government.

To foster interagency cooperation, the three agencies initiated a study under the guidance of a Triagency Steering Committee to discuss and identify potential solutions to outstanding convergence issues. This committee will make recommendations based on studies that focus on policy and implementation of a converged program, which include international cooperation, program management and cost, and data accessibility.

NASA has actively participated in the activities of the Steering Committee, and cooperation among the agencies has been excellent. With the recent National Performance Review (NPR) recommendation on creating a "single ~~civilian~~ polar satellite system," the Office of Science and Technology Policy (OSTP) has become a key participant in the process. The goal of this overall activity is to develop a system that reflects overall government requirements, satisfies each agency's specific needs to the extent possible, and is consistent with the NPR recommendation.

civilian)

Objectives of Convergence

If elements of all these systems converged, the U.S. Government could reduce costs and increase the measurement capabilities of NOAA/DOD operational satellites, while still fulfilling the requirements of the U.S. Global Change Research Program (USGCRP) for a 15 year data set. NASA's EOS-PM spacecraft series is a critical part of the Earth Observing System, and instruments on EOS-PM spacecraft will provide research support to many of the most important science objectives of the USGCRP. The capabilities of these instruments not only satisfy but in many cases exceed the operational measurement requirements of the DOD and NOAA. The performance of these instruments would be proven in their flight on the first EOS-PM spacecraft (EOS-PM1) beginning in 2000, thus potentially enabling their inclusion on subsequent operational spacecraft. However, it is important to note that NASA's observational requirements in support of the USGCRP require instrument capabilities beyond and at times distinct from those required by NOAA and DOD. The preservation of these capabilities is one of the highest NASA objectives in the convergence process.

To the extent that certain of the EOS-PM 2/3 instruments could be accommodated as part of a converged satellite, both NASA and NOAA/DOD requirements could be satisfied. In addition, valuable research experience and technical expertise could be shared by all three agencies through a converged program.

Status of Convergence

As noted above, triagency studies are underway to develop a converged polar satellite system. These studies will determine potential cost savings as well as exploring the pros and cons of implementing a converged system. As a result of this cooperation, a set of recommendations will be provided to the Secretary of Defense, the Secretary of Commerce, and the NASA Administrator in January 1994. OSTP has formed a Senior Interagency Group on Convergence to oversee the triagency effort and to prepare a final recommendation for approval by the President. This should enable OSTP to submit a detailed implementation plan to Congress by April 30, 1994.

Peter,

The answer is as follows: if someone at the NSC (Bob Bell, Nancy Soderberg) determines that you will be at the christening on official business, then the NSC may accept the Newport News Shipping Co.'s payment for your travel, etc. If you are not on official travel, then you may not go (because their offer would be a gift given to you because of your official position and not subject to any available exception as far as I can tell).

With respect to your wife: although GSA travel regs. provide for acceptance of spousal travel when on official business, I think we would be hard pressed to make the case that her presence would be necessary for you to carry out or in furtherance of your official duties. I think, therefore, that should ought not accompany you.

Ethics and Stennis Christ

As we discussed, I have been invited to attend the Christening of CVN-74 Stennis, the newest aircraft carrier. The ceremony is in Norfolk on 10-11 November.

The host is Newport News Shipping -- a private company. They have offered transportation down to the ceremony (I will return on AF 2), dinner the night before, hotel the night before, and brunch the day of the ceremony. As far as I know, I will be the only NSC representative although the VP and Leon Fuerth will also be there to represent the White House.

My wife has also been invited for the dinner and hotel, although if she attends we will use our own transportation.

What hoops, if any, do I need to go through to abide by ethics regulations?

MEMORANDUM FOR BOB BELL

FROM: Rudy de Leon R

RE: General Mundy's Comments This Morning

To: Nancy Soderberg:
Per our telecon re
Mundy's remarks on
"60 Minutes." Give me a call and I will tell you what else
Rudy said.
Bob

This morning the Marine Corps Commandant Carl Mundy spoke at the Marine Memorial on the occasion of the 218th anniversary of the Corps.

In introducing Senator Glenn -- the featured speaker -- General Mundy spoke to his "words on another occasion." He corrected the impression that "some Marines are not as capable" as others. He concluded by saying that those were neither the thoughts in his mind, or his heart.

I'm enclosing a copy of the remarks for your review.

TODAY, OUR CORPS IS 218 YEARS OLD. . .AND WE COME AGAIN TO THIS VERY SPECIAL PLACE TO REMEMBER AND COMMEMORATE THOSE WHO HAVE SERVED OUR NATION AS MARINES. THERE IS NO MORE FITTING PLACE TO DO THIS THAN HERE. . . AGAINST THE BACKDROP OF THIS MAGNIFICENT WAR MEMORIAL.

IT IS ALMOST A HALF CENTURY. . . FIFTY YEARS . . . SINCE THE WORDS WERE SAID: "AMONG THOSE WHO FOUGHT AT IWO JIMA. . .UNCOMMON VALOR WAS A COMMON VIRTUE". THOSE ARE THE WORDS INSCRIBED ON THIS GREAT MONUMENT. THERE ARE INSCRIBED AROUND ITS BASE ALSO THE NAMES OF MANY OTHER BATTLES WHICH HAVE CRAFTED THE SPIRIT OF WHAT OUR CORPS IS. ONES

BUT AS ONE LOOKS AT THE MONUMENT, WITH THE NOBLE WORDS AND PLACES INSCRIBED ON IT, I AM REMINDED THAT THAT SPIRIT. . . THOSE HEROIC ACHIEVEMENTS. . .HAVE BEEN. . . AND ARE TODAY. . .BORNE OF THE PEOPLE WHO ARE THE CORPS. IT IS PEOPLE WHO MAKE OUR CORPS WHAT IT IS. . . WHAT IT HAS ALWAYS BEEN. . .AND WHAT IT WILL ALWAYS BE.

ONE OF THE PAIRS OF HANDS OUTSTRETCHED TO RAISE OUR NATIONAL FLAG ON THE BATTLE-SCARRED CREST OF MOUNT SURIBACHI SO MANY YEARS AGO, ARE THOSE OF A NATIVE-AMERICAN. . . IRA HAYES. . . A MARINE NOT OF THE ETHNIC MAJORITY OF OUR POPULATION.

WERE IRA HAYES HERE TODAY. . . I WOULD TELL HIM THAT ALTHOUGH MY WORDS ON ANOTHER OCCASION HAVE GIVEN THE IMPRESSION THAT I BELIEVE THAT SOME MARINES. . . BECAUSE OF THEIR COLOR. . . ARE NOT AS CAPABLE AS OTHERS. . . THAT THOSE WERE NOT THE THOUGHTS IN MY MIND. . . NOR ARE THEY, OR HAVE THEY EVER BEEN. . . THE THOUGHTS OF MY HEART.

I WOULD TELL IRA HAYES THAT OUR CORPS IS WHAT WE ARE BECAUSE WE ARE OF THE PEOPLE OF AMERICA. . . THE PEOPLE OF THE BROAD, STRONG, ETHNIC FABRIC THAT IS OUR NATION. AND LAST, I WOULD TELL HIM THAT IN THE FUTURE, THAT FABRIC WILL BROADEN AND STRENGTHEN IN EVERY CATEGORY TO MAKE OUR CORPS EVEN STRONGER. THAT IS A COMMITMENT OF THIS COMMANDANT. . . THAT IS A PERSONAL COMMITMENT OF THIS MARINE.

BUT LET ME TURN NOW TO ANOTHER GREAT AMERICAN . . . A MAN WHO HAS ALSO HELD THE FLAG OF HIS NATION HIGH. AT THE SAME TIME THAT IRA HAYES, AND THOSE THERE WITH HIM, HOISTED THE FLAG ON IWO JIMA, LIEUTENANT JOHN GLENN ALSO FOUGHT AND DISTINGUISHED HIMSELF IN THE BATTLES OF THE PACIFIC. HIGHLY DECORATED, HE WOULD GO ON IN ALMOST A QUARTER OF A CENTURY OF SERVICE AS A MARINE TO DISTINGUISH HIMSELF FURTHER. IN THE YEAR I ENTERED THE CORPS, MAJOR GLENN SET THE TRANSCONTINENTAL SPEED RECORD AT SUPERSONIC SPEEDS. FIVE YEARS LATER, HE BECAME THE FIRST AMERICAN TO ORBIT THE EARTH. . . AND WAS AWARDED THE SPACE CONGRESSIONAL MEDAL OF HONOR. FOR ALMOST THE PAST TWO DECADES, HE HAS CONTINUED HIS SERVICE TO THE NATION IN THE UNITED STATES SENATE, AND HAS BEEN AT THE FOREFRONT AS A SPOKESMAN FOR A STRONG DEFENSE. . . BUT MORE THAN THAT, AS A LEADING SPOKESMAN FOR THE PEOPLE WHO MAKE UP ALL OUR ARMED FORCES. IT IS THE CORPS' PRIVILEGE TO HAVE HIM AS OUR GUEST OF HONOR TODAY.

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN, A DISTINGUISHED AMERICAN. .
.SENATOR JOHN GLENN, OF OHIO.

THE WASHINGTON TIMES

A look at key members of the National Security Council staff reveals many are State Department or Foreign Service detailees and holdovers from the Bush administration.

Several worked in think tanks or as staff aides on Capitol Hill before moving into NSC offices at the Old Executive Office Building.

In terms of influence, Richard A. Clarke is said by administration officials to be one of the most powerful members of the NSC staff, after the director and deputy director.

As the NSC staff's special assistant for global issues and multilateral affairs, a new post, Mr. Clarke sits in on many meetings with President Clinton.

Senior State Department officials who want their policies to prevail in NSC debates try to craft their bureaucratic strategies for getting things done so as to avoid involving Mr. Clarke in discussions, said officials who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Many key staffers came up under Bush

"He has a way of gobbling things up," said one policymaker.

As a result of policy coordinating problems, Mr. Clarke was appointed co chairman of an NSC interagency group to oversee U.S. policy toward Somalia. James Dobbins, a career Foreign Service officer, is the other chairman.

Mr. Clarke worked in the Pentagon as an analyst from 1973 to 1977 and spent 1979 to 1992 at the State Department. He was one of the key architects of the pending presidential order on peacekeeping.

The draft order outlines U.S. involvement in international peacekeeping operations, including the use of U.S. troops under U.N. commanders, a point that has met with widespread resistance on Capitol Hill because it is viewed as a policy that will entangle the United States in United Nations peacekeeping operations.

Martin Indyk, the NSC's director for Middle East policy coordination, is viewed as the most pro-Israel official within the White House staff. He was previously executive director of the Washington Institute for Near East Policy, an offshoot of a powerful pro-Israeli lobbying group.

Mr. Indyk, who was born in England and became a U.S. citizen shortly before his NSC appointment, worked for Australia's government as a senior intelligence official, according to his NSC biography.

His past work for the Australian government raised concerns among some U.S. intelligence officials who were concerned about granting Mr. Indyk access to the most sensitive U.S. intelligence information, according to government sources.

Mr. Indyk could not be reached for comment.

Another holdover from the Bush administration who is in a key NSC staff position is R. Nicholas Burns, a career Foreign Service officer. In July, Mr. Clinton appointed him the NSC special assistant for Russian, Ukrainian and Eurasian affairs, also a new post.

A key member of the NSC staff is Richard Schifter, one of the few neoconservative Clinton supporters appointed to a post in the administration. Mr. Schifter was an aide to Jeane Kirkpatrick at the United Nations during the Reagan administration and also was an assistant secretary of state for human rights.

Mr. Schifter, NSC counselor, said in an interview he could not judge the current NSC staff because he had no experience with past NSC teams.

"I think things are working very smoothly," he said. "There are a lot of very capable people."

George J. Tenet is the NSC's top intelligence official, although he has no formal background as an intelligence professional.

Mr. Tenet worked as a legislative aide to the late Sen. John Heinz, Pennsylvania Republican, and also on the staff of the Senate Intelligence Committee, becoming staff director under Chairman David Boren, Oklahoma Democrat.

Associates say Mr. Tenet is politically astute but lacks a thorough understanding of the intelligence business. CIA Director R. James Woolsey, for example, often bypasses Mr. Tenet in his dealings with the White House and members of Congress involved with intelligence oversight.

Daniel B. Poneman, a Harvard-educated lawyer, holds the newly created position of special NSC assistant for nonproliferation and export controls.

Sources close to the NSC say Mr. Poneman is ill-suited for the new NSC post and his appointment reflects a lack of interest by top Clinton policy makers in nonproliferation policy, despite claims that the issue is one of the highest national security priorities.

"He is one of the reasons counter proliferation is not going anywhere right now," said one knowledgeable source.

For the NSC's defense policy and arms control post, Robert G. Bell is one of the bright spots on the staff, according to administration sources. A former defense aide to Georgia Sen. Sam Nunn, chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, Mr. Bell is said to be a consummate professional and widely respected defense expert.

Mr. Bell was credited with crafting legislation to supply several hundred million dollars in aid to the former Soviet Union to assist in dismantling nuclear weapons.

SUBJECT: Staff Retreat

I think the current initiative to refine the Administration's foreign policy message makes the time ripe for you to convene a full NSC staff retreat, bringing together all your advisors for an extended review of NSC strategy and operations.

Corporate CEOs regularly face circumstances similar to the ones confronting us today: the perception of setbacks in a highly competitive environment; the need to hone a message for a wider audience; and, above all, the challenge of adopting a strategic plan of response. In such circumstances, successful leaders have adopted the time-honored tactic of assembling their senior management team for an extended and focussed review -- a retreat off-site, away from office distractions, where the principal and his or her staff can fully vet alternatives.

You have mentioned several times your desire to ensure: (1) that you get the benefit of a full hearing of a wide-range of viewpoints; and (2) that the NSC staff give consideration to the way their particular portfolios relate to the broader national strategy. I believe this forum would serve both purposes.

Logistics need not pose insurmountable hurdles. I envision a day-long affair, perhaps a Saturday at Camp David or some other suitable site away from the glare of cameras and the jangle of telephones. In any case, the venue is secondary to the exercise of bringing your entire team under one roof for an extended and productive session.

Can the Administration convince an isolationist-leaning America why and how we should remain engaged in the world? To a very great extent, history will evaluate this NSC according to how we answer that question. I believe a retreat would contribute significantly to this process.

RECOMMENDATION

That you direct a staff retreat to review NSC strategy and operations.

POINTS TO BE MADE FOR MEETING WITH SELECTED SOLDIERS WHO SERVED IN SOMALIA

- I want you to know how very proud I am and I think all Americans are of the way you conducted yourselves in Somalia.
- I know that the battle that began on October 3 was one of the most intense fire fights American soldiers have seen since Vietnam. The refusal of the Rangers to leave their comrades, and the bravery of all the American soldiers that participated in the action, should never be forgotten.
- We are determined now to complete our mission in Somalia on our terms and in a way that offers the Somalis and the United Nations the best possible opportunity to secure the future of that country. Your efforts, and the efforts of all the other Americans that have served there, have saved hundreds of thousands of lives. And we are determined to do what we can to make sure that the sacrifices that have been made will not have been in vain.

(Recommend you then call on some of the NCO and enlisted and ask about the missions of their units and their individual impressions of Somalia and experiences there.)
