TEXT:

Do you know anything about the status of the AmFAR photo op. Apparently they want to bring Sharon Stone...even though this was not in the original request.

Krim is important, but I am feeling especially guilty about not inviting Jane Silver of AmFAR's DC office -- and I'd like to be able to tell her this is going to happen.

Sorry.

TEXT:

I've typed in all the new names I received from the RSVP forms you sent plus names of the Chairs, CoChairs from Jeremy.

I'm faxing the now five-page list. On the list, I explain the status of the name. For ex., there are a four folks we don't have dob's or SS# for.

We will add dobs and ss# for the rsvp folks you sent to us, add congressional folks (from Ann and LeAnn), and then give the whole list to Brian to WAVE.

One more thing for who's checking names - one more name to check spelling on: Winnie Stachelberg. I've marked a few on the lists like: Mario Solis Marich (?Marto?)

I was afraid I'd forget to tell you all this if I waited til tomorrow. We'll add workshops and conference roles whenever you're ready.

Thanks.

TEXT:

It is time to start looking at applications for the Spring Semester Interns. Please let me know by COB December 7 what you foresee as your needs for the spring.

Also, you might want to put some forethought into projects that are due before the Christmas holiday. The fall interns will begin to disappear in the next two weeks, leaving us with a gap in support between Christmas and the early part of January.

Thanks.

Another HOLIDAY PARTY and INTERN PARTY reminder
Thanks so much for contributing to the FOOD DRIVE COMPETITION.
The box in OEOB 213 is almost full. The NEC is on its third box, but we have two days to redeem ourselves.
Please do not forget to contribute your $$ for Friday's Holiday Party! I am turning in DPC funds before 6:00 p.m. today.
See you soon at the INTERN PARTY at 5:00 p.m. in OEOB 211 with your homemade desserts (you still have time to run out and buy something).
Thank you!

DISTRIBUTION TO ALL DPC STAFF
(even those who are not attending tomorrow's party)
A couple general holiday reminders:
The DPC is presenting its food drive box to a representative from Martha's Table at the party. No pressure, but the NEC is up to five boxes. If you plan to contribute, tomorrow is the last day. Also, please don't forget to bring your unwrapped toy to the party. Some staff members who cannot attend the party have asked me to take toys to the party for them. If you wish to do the same, please call me (65571).
Thank you.

Can you send/let me know what the specific recommendation on HOPWA from the AIDS Conference was? It will be helpful as I follow up -- particularly in looking into 97funding.

Also, I have heard that there were recommendations regarding nursing that the nursing community (or at least those involved with AIDS patients) is going to be monitoring closely. Do you know what those are? (I've been helping Jen out with some nurses issues and this was brought to my attention by s.o. in the nursing community as important for the Administration to try and respond well to.)

TEXT:
Jeff,

It was nice to finally meet you today after Al's glowing words of praise for you, although I would have preferred less contrived circumstances. I do, however, appreciate the opportunity to bring some of the very important issues (primary and secondary prevention, treatment, and continuity of care) faced by offenders, ex-offenders, and their families who are living with HIV.

The dialogue is overdue and I appreciate your commitment to continue this discourse. I unfortunately believe many of the important players were not at the meeting today, and I will suggest, at your request, some others who I believe might have pragmatic solutions to some of the difficult issues which were addressed.

Two issues emerged during the meeting today: 1) the need for a large national meeting to establish 'solidarity' among those already working in the area; and 2) the need for smaller working groups to work on policy and politics of establishing relationships between high level policy makers to eventually effect change at the organizational level. I initially did not believe that the larger meeting would have a major impact, however I'm not sure that I now agree with my assessment. It would ultimately establish linkages at community levels which would not be achievable through other means.

Unfortunately, it would be expensive since most of the community level constituents would be unable to afford tuition and travel needed for this meeting. I chaired a session at the First (and only) HIV in Prisons Conference a few years ago which was prohibitively expensive and ultimately was more politics and less work/skills building. It was also not about solidarity (although it was intended as such) since the activists had organized against the few who attended that were 'establishment'. Therefore, if a meeting like this were to take place, scholarships would be required for representation, and thus create a fairly costly meeting. Corrections, HUD, NIJ, ACA, etc. would be unlikely to attend this meeting.

Notably missing from the list today was Nancy Mahon, Esq. She is the Director of the AIDS in Prison Project at the Osborn Society (formerly the Correctional Association of New York) who chaired the first HIV in Prisons Roundtable Meeting a few years ago. In many ways, I believe she may be an ideal person to work with if a larger conference is considered. She has had the experience of organizing the first meeting, and is one of the most knowledgeable people in the field these days.

Regarding issue #2, corrections would be much more likely to attend meetings where their peers were highly represented, particularly ones who are interested in the needs of the HIV infected incarcerated population. Larry Meachum, formerly the Commissioner of Corrections in CT, is now at NIJ (I think) and has had considerable experience in dealing with health care and litigation for HIV infected inmates. Consider him in the future. I know a number of wardens who may also be instrumental. Otherwise, I am not well connected to the American Correctional Association.

Please let me know how I can best be of help. I imagine that I would be most useful to provide clear data and understanding of the correctional system and know where the barriers exist that make implementation of policy difficult. However I can be of help, do not hesitate to call on me.

Also, please tell Patsy that I send my regards and hope she feels well soon. Take care and good luck.

Rick

NEW/UPDATED FUNDING OPPORTUNITIES

The Clearinghouse's Funding Databases contain information on more than 800 current and archival funding opportunities. These Databases are primarily intended to serve as a starting point for people seeking support for HIV/AIDS education, prevention, service provision, and information dissemination. The grantmaking agency should be contacted for further information and application procedures.

The Clearinghouse makes these databases available to the public through their electronic bulletin board service, NAC ONLINE. Information and assistance about the Clearinghouse and NAC ONLINE can be obtained by calling a Reference Specialist at 1-800-458-5231 or 1800-243-7012 (deaf access/TDD). If you know of opportunities that we do not have in our databases, please contact us at aidsinfo@cdcnac.aspensys.com.

On Thursday, two funding records were updated. These are cited below:

ACCESSION NO: S 09037-001

FUND TITLE: AT & T Foundation: General Grantmaking Guidelines.

DESCRIPTION: The AT&T Foundation makes cash grants to nonprofit organizations to support projects in four program areas: arts and culture, education, health and human services, and international. In general, support goes to projects that are national rather than local, in scope or application. However, local grants are made support human services organizations through annual grants to United Way. HIV-related grants are made through the Health and Human Services Program. This program area focuses on projects addressing one of the following four topics. First, increase the availability of and access to health care and social services, with an emphasis on children, adolescents and their families; prenatal care and maternal and child health care; and people affected by HIV/AIDS. Second, improve community-based education for children and adolescents. Third, encourage diversity in the workplace and society through education and direct-service programs. Fourth, protect the environment, and fifth, support U.S. based national organizations that study broad public-policy issues related to governance and the social and economic issues.

NEW REPORTS DEFEND FOOD AND DRUG ADMINISTRATION APPROVAL RATES

An international analysis conducted by the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) to see if patients in other countries have access to important new drugs before patients in the United States, shows that compared individually to the United Kingdom (U.K.), Japan, and Germany, the United States was the first to approve more of the drugs that eventually became available in both countries, FDA reported last week.

"If there is a drug lag, it is not in America," FDA Commissioner, David Kessler, declared to the annual meeting of the Food and Drug Law Institute in Washington last Tuesday. Saying that it is time rumors that Americans suffer from a "drug lag" are put to rest, Kessler declared it a myth that "important, effective drugs are routinely available in other countries, but not here in the United States."

FDA released the comparative analysis, "Timely Access to New Drugs in the 1990s: An International Comparison," along with a report to Congress that reviews the agency's progress under the Prescription Drug User Fee Act.

In his speech, Kessler applauded the development of the user fee system as a model for reinventing government by including industry, consumers and Congress in the process. The system, he said, has made it possible in the most recent review cycle for FDA to review and act upon 96% of new drug and biologic applications on time, that is, within a year. In fact added, Kessler, the agency has already achieved the 1997 goal of 90% for on-time review of standard applications.

Kessler also cited a recent General Accounting Office report on FDA drug approval times that he said compares his agency favorably with the Medicines Control Agency, the drug approval system in the U.K. In 1994, said Kessler, the median time to approval for new molecular entities in the U.K. was 30 months; the fastest approval was granted in four months, and the slowest in 62 months.

That same year, said Kessler, FDA's median approval time was 18 months; the fastest FDA approval took about six months and the slowest about 40 months. GAO's conclusion, says Kessler, is that "the latest data published by the regulatory agency in the United Kingdom show that it does not have faster approval times than FDA."

FDA's head-to-head comparisons show that the United States first approved 30 of 58 drugs now approved in both the United States and the U.K. The 30 drugs were approved in the United States an average of 17 months ahead of the U.K. Twenty-eight of the drugs used in both countries were first approved in the U.K. at an average of 15.8 months ahead of U.S. approval.

Two U.K. drugs originally considered by FDA to be "priority" (new therapies, or advances over what is available here) were subsequently withdrawn from the worldwide market.

A greater lead time opened up when comparing U.S. approval rates with those of Germany and Japan, who with the United States and the U.K. account for 60% of global pharmaceutical sales.

Of the 214 new drugs surveyed for the report, 44 have been approved in both the United States and Germany; 34 have been approved in Germany but not in the United States; and 32 have been approved in the United States but not in Germany. The United States was first to approve 31 of the 44 mutually available drugs, approving them an average of 17.9 months ahead of the German approval. One possible priority drug, a vaccine for acellular pertussis, is being courted for submission in this country.

Fourteen of the new drugs have been approved in both the United States and Japan; 82 have been approved in Japan but not in the United States; and 62 have been approved in the United States but not in Japan. The United States was first to approve 10 of the 14 mutually available drugs, approving them an average of 22.4 months ahead of Japan.

Of three Japanese drugs classified priority by FDA, one is currently under FDA review and a second is undergoing U.S. trials. The application submitted to FDA by the third sponsor was found insufficient to recommend approval.

Gerald Mossinghoff, president of the Pharmaceutical Research and Manufacturers of America, applauded improvements in FDA approval times as "important and welcome."

However, he said, Congress needs to enact "more fundamental reform" to allow FDA to prepare the agency for the "sophisticated medical technology of the 21st Century."

KEY APPROPRIATIONS STAFF MEMBER WILL LEAVE HOUSE FOR PRIVATE SECTOR

After 25 years in government, 20 of which he spent working for the likes of the late Reps. Bill Natcher, D-KY, and Silvio Conte, R-MA, and current leaders such as Rep. John Porter, R-IL, and David Obey, D-WI, Michael Stephens will leave the House Appropriations Labor, Health and Human Services, Education, and Related Agencies subcommittee in early January.

Stephens said he will miss the "camaraderie and sense of purpose" he enjoyed as majority and then minority staff director on the subcommittee, but he also looks forward to a second career with continued involvement in biomedical research. He will be joining the consulting firm of Van Scoyoc Associates.

During his tenure on the subcommittee, Stephens counted himself an "aggressive protector" of the National Institutes of Health's (NIH's) nonpolitical, science-based peer review system. He was the moving force behind requiring NIH to develop a long range financial management plan.

2Budget Talks To Continue...Storm Strikes...Fed Cuts Rate

(Capitol Hill) -- President Clinton and Republican leaders have agreed to try to nail down a balanced budget agreement by the end of the year. After a two-hour meeting today, House Speaker Newt Gingrich said they'll talk about legislation to reopen the government at a follow-up session tomorrow.

(St. Louis, Missouri) -- A snowstorm has blanketed parts of the Midwest, causing power outages and traffic headaches, and it's hitting the Northeast. In Missouri, a woman gave birth in a car stuck on a snow-clogged road. New Englanders are preparing for up to a foot of snow.

(Washington) -- One analyst says the Federal Reserve has given the nation a badly needed Christmas present. The Fed cut a key interest rate by a-quarter percentage point, to five and a-half percent. The move is expected to herald lower consumer rates for (M) millions of Americans.

(Capitol Hill) -- A presidential veto on a defense bill would deprive U-S troops in Bosnia of a modest pay raise. The Senate has sent the 265 (B) billion spending bill to President Clinton. West Virginia Senator Robert Byrd says it's a ``virtual certainty" that Clinton will veto it.

(New York) -- New York City's mayor says a deadly shooting at a Bronx shoe store stemmed from a dispute over sneakers. He says a gunman angry that shoes he had ordered were not ready tried to rob the store. Five people were killed and four others were wounded, including the gunman.

Rick--Thanks for your email and your comments. I agree that there are two paths that we need to pursue. I actually think Ken South's proposal for having a one-day conference attached to the Skills Building meeting would make the most sense -- this would give the prisons people a chance to coalesce while also integrating them over the next several days with the service providers who need to learn more about these issues. There's a lot of government money in this conference already; so building some scholarship support would not be hard.

thanks also for your suggestions about additional people. There's a long story behind the invite list for this meeting. We know that there are others to whom we must reach out -- especially in identifying good people from within the system who can be peer educators as well.

Have a good holiday!

"Blood Bank Setup Faulted in HIV-Tainted Transfusion"

Los Angeles Times--Washington Edition (12/19/95) P. B1; Meyer, Josh

The Martin Luther King Jr./Drew Medical Center in Los Angeles has been named in a $1.5-million lawsuit alleging that the facility's mismanagement resulted in the transfusion of HIV-positive blood to Aleta J. Clemons. Clemons had entered the county-run facility for a routine hysterectomy. The suit, which also names the county, has been tentatively settled for $450,000. The county's acting director of health services, Mary Jung, called the incident "isolated," adding, "As soon as we found out about it, we took immediate action." However, citations from the FDA, an investigative report by the Department of Health Services, and Civil Service Commission records indicate that the blood bank suffered from inadequate staffing, employee training, communication, and safety policies. County investigators also found that hospital officials had altered computer blood bank records to protect the confidentiality of donors without informing employees who needed to know the blood's HIV status. FDA District Director Elaine C. Messa sent a warning letter to King/Drew last January, citing the blood bank with several violations.

"When Doctors and Patients Decide to Test the Far Limits of Treatment"

New York Times (12/19/95) P. C3; Altman, Lawrence K.

As the fifteenth anniversary of the discovery of AIDS approaches, doctors and patients are increasingly frustrated by the lack of effective treatments for the disease. As a result, they are collaborating with their patients to test the limits of experimental treatment. One of the most dramatic recent examples is that of AIDS activist and patient Jeff Getty, who has volunteered to undergo a baboon marrow transplant in the hopes of prolonging his life. Getty himself worked with researchers from the University of California at San Francisco and the University of Pittsburgh in developing the treatment. Karen Heit, executive officer of the Institute of Medicine of the National Academy of Sciences noted, "At times, AIDS activists have been in the driver's seat, saying what was needed in the way of prevention." Stephen Deeks, a principal investigator in the experiment, said Getty would persist in his commitment to the project because "clearly the AIDS community wants us not just to be trying new types of AZT, but doing more innovative, bolder, riskier things." However, critics contend that frustration does not justify the risks involved and criticize Getty's doctors for proceeding to human trials too quickly.

"Defense Bill Includes Automatic Dismissal For Those With AIDS"

Baltimore Sun (12/19/95) P. 2A

A defense bill awaiting final Congressional action this week would call for the automatic dismissal of service members who are HIV-infected. President Clinton has identified this provision as one that could prompt him to veto the bill. Senate negotiators proposed removing the provision, but House members passed the measure 267-149 last Friday. The bill makes an exception for service members within two years of retirement. The discharge papers would not mention AIDS.

"AIDS Patients' Stories Still Need to Be Told"

Houston Chronicle (12/19/95) P. 3D; Ager, Susan

In a Houston Chronicle editorial, Susan Ager writes that media coverage of AIDS has changed considerably since the disease's first appearance in this country. She notes that schoolchildren know all about the disease and that it is now referred to by name in obituaries instead of by euphemism. However, she is concerned that "as a society, we shoved AIDS aside once we grew weary of its poignancy," regarding it as "a tired, old story." Ager points to the example of an elderly woman who contracted AIDS from a sexual partner even though she knew he was a drug user because she believed AIDS was a "gay white man's disease." Cases such as this, explains Ager, is why AIDS must remain a focus of media attention and education.

"High Level of AIDS Needed to Infect Infants"

Baltimore Sun (12/19/95) P. 2A

Researchers from the New York State Department of Health report that high levels of HIV in the bloodstream of pregnant women are needed before the virus can be transmitted to the infants. The researchers, who studied 30 pregnant women, said that patients with 50,000 viruses per milliliter of blood had a 75-percent chance of transmitting the infection to their babies. Results will be published in Tuesday's issue of the Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences.

"Cytotoxic T Lymphocyte Lysis Inhibited by Viable HIV Mutants"

Science (11/24/95) Vol. 270, No. 5240, P. 1360; Meier,

Ute-Christiane; Klenerman, Paul; Griffin, Philip

Although it is not fully understood why the immune response fails to destroy HIV in most patients, the mutation of viral antigens may play a role. Meier et al. report that they observed significant inhibition of specific antiviral lysis when cytotoxic T lymphocytes were engaged in CD4-positive cells that were acutely infected with HIV carrying natural variant epitopes in reverse transcriptase. According to the researchers, mutant viruses that can produce such transactive effects could favor the persistence of several variants of HIV, despite the presence of an active and specific immune response.

"Trials of Marijuana's Medical Potential Languish as Government Just Says No"

Scientist (11/27/95) Vol. 9, No. 23, P. 1; Gwynne, Peter

Researchers say that at present, no trials involving the medical use of marijuana are being conducted. Supporters of such studies attribute the lack of action to the federal government, charging that the current administration, as well as its predecessors, is unjustly concerned about being thought of as lenient toward drugs if it approves research for the medical use of the drug. Although government officials seem wary to discuss clinical trials of marijuana on record, sources at the Drug Enforcement Administration (DEA) and the National Institute on Drug Abuse (NIDA) reject the notion that they are obstructing medical marijuana studies. They say that they will approve and then provide marijuana cigarettes for well-designed trials, but that no one has yet submitted an acceptable plan. Currently, NIDA has only approved eight patients to receive the cigarettes--the rest of the government's supply is reserved for laboratory animals and smoking machines. DEA administrator Thomas Constantine maintains that his agency "will remain opposed to the rescheduling of marijuana from" a class of drugs which has no proven medical use to a class which while still addictive, has some medical benefits, "because there are no proven applications for its use." Furthermore, both supporters and detractors of the medical use of marijuana agree that one potential danger of the drug is lung damage. However, the United States is not the only nation to lack human studies of the possible medical uses of marijuana.

Other nations, including Canada, Britain, and Switzerland, have also rejected such research.

TEXT:

Jeff,

It was nice to finally meet you today after Al's glowing words of praise for you, although I would have preferred less contrived circumstances. I do, however, appreciate the opportunity to bring some of the very important issues (primary and secondary prevention, treatment, and continuity of care) faced by offenders, ex-offenders, and their families who are living with HIV.

The dialogue is overdue and I appreciate your commitment to continue this discourse. I unfortunately believe many of the important players were not at the meeting today, and I will suggest, at your request, some others who I believe might have pragmatic solutions to some of the difficult issues which were addressed.

Two issues emerged during the meeting today: 1) the need for a large national meeting to establish 'solidarity' among those already working in the area; and 2) the need for smaller working groups to work on policy and politics of establishing relationships between high level policy makers to eventually effect change at the organizational level. I initially did not believe that the larger meeting would have a major impact, however I'm not sure that I now agree with my assessment. It would ultimately establish linkages at community levels which would not be achievable through other means.

Unfortunately, it would be expensive since most of the community level constituents would be unable to afford tuition and travel needed for this meeting. I chaired a session at the First (and only) HIV in Prisons Conference a few years ago which was prohibitively expensive and ultimately was more politics and less work/skills building. It was also not about solidarity (although it was intended as such) since the activists had organized against the few who attended that were 'establishment'. Therefore, if a meeting like this were to take place, scholarships would be required for representation, and thus create a fairly costly meeting. Corrections, HUD, NIJ, ACA, etc. would be unlikely to attend this meeting.

Notably missing from the list today was Nancy Mahon, Esq. She is the Director of the AIDS in Prison Project at the Osborn Society (formerly the Correctional Association of New York) who chaired the first HIV in Prisons Roundtable Meeting a few years ago. In many ways, I believe she may be an ideal person to work with if a larger conference is considered. She has had the experience of organizing the first meeting, and is one of the most knowledgeable people in the field these days.

Regarding issue #2, corrections would be much more likely to attend meetings where their peers were highly represented, particularly ones who are interested in the needs of the HIV infected incarcerated population. Larry Meachum, formerly the Commissioner of Corrections in CT, is now at NIJ (I think) and has had considerable experience in dealing with health care and litigation for HIV infected inmates. Consider him in the future. I know a number of wardens who may also be instrumental. Otherwise, I am not well connected to the American Correctional Association.

Please let me know how I can best be of help. I imagine that I would be most useful to provide clear data and understanding of the correctional system and know where the barriers exist that make implementation of policy difficult. However I can be of help, do not hesitate to call on me.

Also, please tell Patsy that I send my regards and hope she feels well soon. Take care and good luck.

Rick

"AIDS Patient Who Received Baboon Cells Is 'Doing Well'"

New York Times (12/18/95) P. A15; Altman, Lawrence K.

Physicians report that Jeff Getty, the man who received a baboon bone marrow transplant last week in an attempt to fight AIDS, is "doing very well." Getty is in an isolation room at San Francisco General Hospital to help prevent infection while his immune system is even more weakened by the chemotherapy and radiation he received prior to the surgery. The doctors check Getty twice a day--looking for signs of infection and signs of internal bleeding caused by a lack of platelets, and checking his white blood cell count. As expected, Getty's level has dropped from last week's counts because it takes time for his own immune system to be suppressed by the chemotherapy and radiation. "The hope is that his white blood cell count goes very low, but only for a brief period of time," said Dr. Paul A. Volberding, one of the primary investigators in the experiment. Volberding explained that if the number does not drop enough, there would be concerns that they did not give enough conditioning from the chemotherapy and the radiation to make room for the baboon cells. Another investigator, Dr. Steven Deeks of San Francisco General, noted that the most dangerous time for Getty will be in two to four weeks, at which time the immune suppression from the two treatments will be greatest. "Animal-to-Human Transplants Worry Disease Controllers"

Washington Times (12/18/95) P. A8

The U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) is entering the debate over the federal government's role in regulating cross-species transplants, or xenotransplants. CDC epidemiologist Louisa Chapman says that the question of whether such transplants could spread new diseases among humans is real. Some 150 diseases can be transmitted from animals to humans, and some can become even more dangerous in humans. Xenotransplants could facilitate that transmission, Chapman says, noting that the greatest fear is another pandemic like AIDS. "It probably won't happen, but it would be an event that could have a tremendously adverse public health impact," she explains. The CDC is developing guidelines for xenotransplants because both it and the U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) want to be prepared in case the method is found useful and can help alleviate the nation's organ shortage. Some xenotransplant experts claim that the government has no cause to intervene and say the CDC and FDA are overstating the risks.

"Voices: Is It Morally Acceptable to Use Baboon Cells to Combat AIDS?"
USA Today (12/18/95) P. 10A

Last week, AIDS patient Jeff Getty had baboon bone marrow cells infused into his body in an attempt to slow disease progression. The technique is controversial, with concerns being voiced about transmitting animal diseases to humans and cruelty to animals. USA Today surveyed its readers on these issues, asking whether it is morally acceptable to use baboon cells in the fight against AIDS. A researcher from Herndon, Va., observed, "If this is an issue of disease transmission, then this is an issue of technology, not morality." Meanwhile, an Emlyn, Ky. agency director said, "I guess it's OK to see if the baboon cells will help this man develop immunity to AIDS, but it is regrettable that the baboon died." Also supporting the transplant is a high school student from Center, Texas, who said, "Experimentation like this is justified for medical purposes." Furthermore, a Lynwood, Calif., aircraft mechanic said, "I don't see a problem if it doesn't pose a risk to humans, and I do have some concern for a new human disease cropping up. But synthetic drugs pose risks too."

"On AIDS Drug, Profits over Patients"

New York Times (12/18/95) P. A16; Greene, Jeffrey B.; Kramer, Larry

The U.S. Food and Drug Administration's (FDA's) recent approval of Hoffmann-La Roche's Invirase will be welcomed by HIV-infected individuals and health care providers, write Jeffrey B. Greene, a clinical associate professor of Medicine at New York University, and Larry Kramer, co-founder of Gay Men's Health Crisis, in a letter to the editor of the New York Times. Until that point, the authors note, the protease inhibitor had only been available to 1,500 advanced HIV patients. Concurrent with the approval announcement, however, was the news that those subjects in Hoffmann's "compassionate" protocol were informed that both their participation and their supply of the drug were finished. Greene and Kramer note that the company obtained substantial pre-marketing information from the data it required for entry into the lottery. Also, by having the lottery itself, they conclude, Hoffmann focused on the demand of the drug before Invirase's efficacy in AIDS had been clinically determined.

"The Fight Goes On for Thalidomide's Victims"

Reuters (12/18/95); Fox, Maggie

Thalidomide, the drug that was found in 1961 to have caused thousands of severe birth defects when taken by pregnant women, is making a comeback. The drug is being tested as a possible treatment for AIDS, Alzheimer's disease, arthritis, multiple sclerosis, and other conditions; has been approved for use in AIDS patients with severe wasting; and has been used to treat leprosy for years. While some doctors, including William McBride, one of the first to speak out about the dangers of thalidomide, think the drug is useful provided patients are aware of its risks, others think it should not be permitted back on the market. Nigel Brown, an expert in birth defects for Britain's Medical Research Council, thinks the drug is far too dangerous to be approved as patients frequently share drugs and the effort to regulate dangerous medicines often breaks down.

"Potent New Weapon"

Los Angeles Times--Washington Edition (12/15/95) P. A9; Cimon, Marlene

Protease inhibitors are an apparently effective new class of AIDS drugs that attack HIV at a later stage than the family of drugs known as nucleoside analogs do and cause a remarkable drop in the amount of virus detectable in HIV-infected patients' blood. However, like the older nucleoside analogs, such as AZT, ddI, ddC, D4T, and 3TC, protease inhibitors are also subject to drug resistance when the virus mutates into new forms. When taken in combination with other drugs, however, protease inhibitors can blunt the virus' ability to resist these and other drugs. At present, at least six protease inhibitors are undergoing various stages of development, and researchers predict that even stronger versions of this class of drugs may be in development soon.

"Blood Processing Plant Crucial, Red Cross Says"

Toronto Globe and Mail (12/15/95) P. A8; Picard, Andre

To avoid a tainted blood tragedy similar to the one experienced in the 1980s, the Canadian Red Cross must proceed with construction of a $300-million fractionation plant, the head of the agency said. According to Douglas Lindores, secretary-general of the humanitarian group, if the organization loses control of the blood it collects from donors, it might have to leave the blood program. "We have serious reservations about our continuing willingness to operate a blood program, collection plasma under the Red Cross symbol, and giving up our stewardship in the view of the events in the 1980s," he said. Lindores noted that at that time, large amounts of donated blood were wasted because of a "highly politicized and highly inefficient decision-making process." Currently, the Canadian Red Cross and pharmaceutical maker Bayer Inc. are building the Canadian Red Cross Fractionation Corp, which is expected to save the blood program more than $400 million in the next decade. Consumer groups oppose the plant, claiming that it will inhibit their ability to get state-of-the-art products and that Bayer alone should construct the plant.

"Across the USA: Nebraska"

USA Today (12/15/95) P. 8A

The Nebraska Supreme Court will not review a case in which a court ruled that a four-year-old child should be returned to the home of a foster mother who has AIDS. The boy has been cared for by the woman and her husband since he was three months old.

"Grapefruit Juice and Saquinavir"

AIDS Treatment News (11/17/95) No. 235, P. 5; James, John S.

Hoffmann-La Roche's saquinavir has very low bioavailability, in part, because it is poorly absorbed and because it is quickly destroyed by an enzyme called CYP3A4. A small study of the protease inhibitor in 12 HIV-negative subjects showed that chemicals in grapefruit juice inhibit that enzyme. Participants who drank one glass of grapefruit juice with the saquinavir, and then another glass an hour later saw their AUCs (areas under the curve, a measure of the total exposure of the drug) increase 50 percent to 150 percent. The AUC of saquinavir was increased to 220 percent when double-strength grapefruit juice was given. Despite such results, there could be some uncertainties or drawbacks in taking grapefruit juice saquinavir to increase the efficacy of a low dose. First, the effects of the juice--which can vary from batch to batch--can also vary from person to person. Also, there is no way to determine for oneself whether the juice is working because the test to measure saquinavir in the blood is not generally available. A third concern is that some other drugs are also metabolized by the same enzyme and large amounts of grapefruit juice could therefore increase their levels in the blood enough to cause toxicity. For these and other reasons, Hoffmann-La Roche will not pursue the grapefruit juice method, and is instead designing a new formulation of saquinavir which raises bioavailability by about 300 percent.

"The Czar Trip"

Advocate (12/12/95) No. 696, P. 22; Moss, J. Jennings

The Dec. 6 White House conference on AIDS will mark President Clinton's most public involvement with the disease since he took office. However, one difficulty that the president--and thus Patricia Fleming, the national AIDS policy director--may face is that his dealings with AIDS often produce two contradictory criticisms. Clinton has done more for the disease than his two predecessors, some say, yet he has not lived up to his campaign promises. "Some critics would say that this administration, like those before it, opted for the political equation rather than for the public-health equation," notes Kristine Gebbie, the Administration's first AIDS policy coordinator. Meanwhile, Fleming points out the current administration's successes in battling for more funds for AIDS programs, streamlining the regulations related to the disease, and enabling local governments and organizations to develop their own AIDS prevention programs. For her part, Fleming's greatest battle now is to keep Medicaid safe from congressional attempts to release it to the states. AIDS activists want her to ensure that Clinton will not make a deal with Republicans that will substantially change the program, but Fleming merely says, "I will do what I can."

"Agouron's AIDS Drug Races Against Time and Titans"

Wall Street Journal (12/20/95) P. B4; Rundle, Rhonda L.

Agouron Pharmaceuticals is fourth in the rush to commercialize a new class of AIDS drugs called protease inhibitors. Leader Hoffmann-La Roche recently became the first to receive approval for a protease inhibitor. To win a piece of the HIV market, the small company must demonstrate that its Viracept compound is superior--a task which is difficult because there are fewer untreated patients. Another consideration is that the effectiveness of this compound and other protease inhibitors may be reduced in patients who have already used other drugs in the same family. Martin Markowitz, one of the physicians investigating Viracept at the Aaron Diamond AIDS Research Center, comments, "Bottom line is that Agouron has to move quickly before [second- and third-place drug companies] Merck and Abbott get approved." Agouron expects to launch large-scale trials in early February, with as many as 1,500 patients enrolled before the other companies' drugs are approved. If all goes well, the company says it hopes to be selling Viracept by mid-1997.

"The Healing Power of Prayer Is Tested by Science"

Wall Street Journal (12/20/95) P. B1; Pereira, Joseph

Researchers across the country are trying to determine what effect prayer has on healing. Critics, however, are outraged that public funds are being spent on such studies. Interest in prayer was boosted in the mid-1980s, when a study of nearly 400 coronary patients found that the prayed-for group was much less likely to require drugs or develop fluid in the lungs. One current AIDS experiment involves 20 praying people who were asked to "send intentions" from such cities as New York and Washington, D.C. Ten members of that group received intentions, while the remaining 10 did not. The researchers are looking for unusual changes in T-cell levels to determine prayer's effect on the advanced AIDS patients. The study is being sponsored by the Noetic Sciences Institute in Sausalito, Calif.

"New Drugs Hurt BioChem Shares"

Toronto Globe and Mail (12/19/95) P. B13; Northfield, Stephen

Within the past few weeks, both Canadian and U.S. health authorities have granted approval to 3TC, an AIDS drug discovered by BioChem Pharma Inc. and co-developed with Glaxo Wellcome, but BioChem stock has dropped. The company says it cannot explain the sudden dip in share price, but analysts blame several factors, including competing AIDS therapies and the fact that the share price had already jumped on the promise of approval. Reijer Lenstra of Smith Barney Inc. dropped his rating of the company to "neutral" after the stock hit a target price of $40. Shekhar Basu of Punk Zeigel & Knoell, however, rates BioChem a "buy" and advises investors to take advantage of the currently low price to load up on the stock.

"Krever Given More Time to File Blood-Probe Report"

Toronto Globe and Mail (12/19/95) P. A5

Canadian Justice Horace Krever has been allotted additional time to sift through the enormous amount of evidence given in the country's tainted-blood scandal before filing his final report. The federal Privy Council Office has given Krever until Sept. 30, 1996 to complete the report, said government spokesman Gerald Simoneau. The report was due by the end of 1995, however hearings will not be completed until late this week. Krever is the head of an inquiry which is attempting to determine how more than 1,000 Canadians became HIV-infected from the blood supply between 1978 and 1985.

"About Face: City to Pay for AIDS Housing"

Houston Chronicle (12/19/95) P. 22A; Robinson, James

The city of Houston is expected to reverse itself and provide about $700,000 for AIDS housing. The move would basically undo a decision made by the City Council last November, in which it deferred to local opposition and essentially ended the project being undertaken by Brentwood Baptist Church. By providing the money, the council would also settle a lawsuit filed by the church, which has filed complaints under the federal Fair Housing Act. City Attorney Gene Locke said that some of the neighborhood's fears--which included increased traffic, drug use, and the possible HIV infection of children playing nearby--have been addressed by changing the housing's location. Still, Rick Holden, president of the Hiram Clarke civic club, maintains that neighbors still have not received assurances regarding the three-home, 18-person housing, including whether or not drug users would be barred from the project.

"AIDS Ministry Names Another New Director"

Richmond-Times Dispatch (12/19/95) P. B5

The Richmond AIDS Ministry (RAM) has tapped Sheila Crowley, former head of The Daily Planet, to be its third executive director in two years. According to Claire Forsyth, president of RAM's board of directors, Crowley possesses "the right management experience and skills necessary to help guide [us] through our next phase." RAM recently announced that financial problems have caused it to lay off more than half its employees since last spring.

"Sequus Pharmaceuticals Inc. Filed Form 8-K"

CDA Investnet (12/19/95)

The FDA has granted marketing approval for Sequus Pharmaceuticals Inc.'s Doxil for the treatment of Kaposi's sarcoma in AIDS patients for whom conventional combination chemotherapy is ineffective or who are intolerant to such therapy. Furthermore, the company has established a Patient Assistance Program to help selected AIDS patients who might benefit from treatment with Doxil but are unable to obtain the drug because of a lack of health insurance. Sequus has also submitted an application to the Committee on Proprietary and Medicinal Products for market clearance in Europe and expects to be reviewed in February 1996.

"A Preliminary Study of Ritonavir, an Inhibitor of HIV-1 Protease, to Treat HIV-1 Infection"

New England Journal of Medicine (12/07/95) Vol. 333, No. 23, P. 1534; Markowitz, Martin; Saag, Michael; Powderly, William G.; et al.

Markowitz et al. conducted a study of the safety and efficacy of ritonavir, a potent inhibitor of HIV-1 protease in vitro, in 62 HIV-1-infected patients. The 12-week trial consisted of a four-week randomized, placebo-controlled, double-blinded stage which was followed by an eight-week dose-blinded phase. Among the 52 patients who completed the study, the most frequent side effects were diarrhea and nausea; reversible elevations in serum triglyceride and (gamma)-glutamyltransferase levels were the most common laboratory irregularities. Overall, ritonavir produced rapid antiviral effects, with a mean maximal reduction in HIV-1 RNA copies per milliliter of plasma between 0.86 and 1.18 log in the four treatment groups. This effect was partially maintained after treatment, with mean plasma-viremia reduction of 0.5 log, though a more sensitive HIV-1 RNA test found a mean 1.7-log reduction. Based on the significant reductions in plasma viremia as well as substantial increases in CD4 levels, the researchers concluded that zidovudine is both well-tolerated and a potent antiviral, and that further clinical trials are therefore justified.

"Chronic Diarrhoea in HIV+ Patients: Role of Enterocytozoon Bieneusi"
Journal of the American Medical Association (12/06/95) Vol. 274, No. 21, P. 1657

Bernard et al. studied HIV-infected individuals to determine the various characteristics of chronic diarrhea related to the disease. The researchers isolated 34 pathogenic agents in some 50 percent of the patients. The most frequently identified pathogen was Enterocytozoon bieneusi, which was found in nearly one-quarter of the patients, followed closely by Cryptosporidium sp. The patients with microsporidiosis were all observed to be in stage C according to the 1993 Centers for Disease Control and Prevention classification, and experienced a longer duration of diarrhea, greater weight loss, and a lower Karnofsky index. Patients without microsporidiosis were more likely to receive prophylaxis with dapsone or pyrimethamine in the three months prior to inclusion in the study. The researchers concluded that microsporidiosis should be considered as a potential cause of chronic diarrhea in HIV-infected individuals with CD4 levels of less than 100.

"5 Tips for Running Program That Exchanges Needles"
AIDS Alert (12/95) Vol. 10, No. 12, P. 149

Although it seems unlikely that the federal government will act on recommendations to fund needle exchange programs (NEPs), individuals can still work for state and local efforts, according to Prof. Peter Lurie of the Center for AIDS Prevention Studies at the University of California in San Francisco. Lurie, an author of a critical 1993 report on NEPs, believes there is a compelling reason for this. "The feds are playing politics, and people are dying," he notes. For people who want to start an NEP in their community, Lurie offers several suggestions on how to get started. He suggests that advocates should first try to obtain input and support from all potentially affected areas, including businesses, residents, and law enforcement agencies. "People need to be involved from the earliest phase," he explains. "That way, they can feel a sense of ownership." Lurie recommends that advocates should also attempt to become exempt from anti-NEP laws. Next, he advises consulting drug users--the target audience--to maximize participation. Furthermore, the emphasis of the NEP should be distributing syringes--such extras as drug treatment referrals should be considered optional, Lurie claims. Finally, one must determine whether community activists or the local health department is better equipped to deal with the program. Either way, Lurie notes, it is critical that whoever is in charge forge a trusting relationship with the drug-using community.

R. Scott Hitt, M.D.

Chair

Presidential Advisory Council on HIV/AIDS

c/o Pacific Oaks Medical Group

150 N. Robertson Boulevard, Suite 300

Beverly Hills, CA 90211

Dear Scott:

The President has asked that I thank you, on his behalf, for transmitting the most recent recommendations of the Presidential Advisory Council on HIV/AIDS. He is most grateful to the Council for the investment of time and energy in both the very successful White House Conference on HIV and AIDS and the subsequent Council meeting.

I can assure you that we are committed to a careful review of these recommendations, led by Patsy Fleming and the Office of National AIDS Policy.

Thank you again for all you and the Council have done to help move forward our nation's response to this epidemic.

My best wishes for the holiday season.

Sincerely,

Carol H. Rasco

Assistant to the President for Domestic Policy

I won't even answer in the way I had planned....Jeremy, would you work with Jeff to answer this crucial question of letterhead here in the midst of the fight of our lives on budget....people never cease to amaze me. I will pledge to only explode if Scott starts his usual phone-a-thon around the White House on the issue. I think exposing the advisory group to criticism of having stationery is totally unnecessary but we should at least explore the legal options.

As to the transmittal on recommendations: (a)will not literally go in until after Jan. 1 as it will get lost in the shuffle of these critical budget talks and POTUS already fully understands the critical nature of elements of budget to AIDS; have this to me by my return Jan. 2 (b) as you suggest there should be a cover note attached saying what we are doing on each to date; and (c) a draft letter (on official stationery I guess although that will probably only provide fuel to his fire....I couldn't resist that!) should be prepared from me to Scott to be mailed by tomorrow that says the President asked me to respond that the recommendations have been received by the White House, again thanking them for their commitment, he looks forward to a careful review of the recommendations, blah, blah, blah.

Thanks!

Thanks for finding me today. I need to talk with Patsy about this in the morning....my inclination is to feel that this is a good solution to a problem, however, I am uncomfortable with our putting it on the table unless there has first been some discussion with the groups. My quick conversation with OAR indicates two things: (1) their version of the language was the Bill Paul, in consultation with Varmus, could order a rearrangement (as I recall your reading of the language it is the other way around), and (2) they feel the advocacy groups will be fine with this -- but they have not vetted this with them. I would be a lot less nervous if we do that vetting before we put this on the table -- and it would take two or three phone calls to do it. (The question is whether we do it or OAR does it.) So...to make a long story short -- I will get back to you in the morning.
Thanks.

MEMORANDUM FOR WHITE HOUSE STAFF

FROM: NANCY HERNREICH

OVAL OFFICE OPERATIONS

SUBJECT: WHITE HOUSE CHRISTMAS GIFTS
FOR KRAMER JUNIOR HIGH STUDENTS

Kramer Junior High School was adopted by the U.S. Secret Service two years ago as a Christmas gift to the President. Since then, the Secret Service has sponsored picnics, White House tours and other events with the school. This holiday season, the White House Office will be donating Christmas gifts to 26 "needy" students at Kramer Junior High School.

If you are interested in contributing to this effort in the form of a monetary contribution or a gift, please contact Janis Kearney at x6-1997 by noon on Friday, December 21. Any gifts or contributions may be delivered to OEOB 145.

Thank you in advance for your support.

Kimberly -- if you have not fled town yet... a couple of questions:

- (1) Any ideas yet about funding for between meeting support for the Council?
- (2) Scott wants to mail out the latest set of recommendations to the 300 people who attended the White House Conference. No small task. We have all the names on disk (or will very shortly) -- would it still be in your scope of work to do the reproducing and the mailing?

Thanks. And I hope you have wonderful holidays not thinking about any of this!
