Many States have only sent one person in the past, which creates additional openings for others. We will start a waiting list for those States that want to send more than 2 representatives to the national meeting and provide additional spaces as they become available. This has worked in the past. It is clear that we need to review this for next year given the growing numbers of Title II issues and the fact that the number of EMAs and States is now almost equal. Allowing four people from Title I has recognized the need for participation of the Planning Council as well as the grantee.

If you refer Title II grantees with questions/issues to the Division, we will be as responsive as we can.

Anita--

As you know, NASTAD is having their annual meeting this week. I heard from one state AIDS director a concern that your July meeting limits states to 2 people, while giving Title I grantees 4 slots -- yet encourages states to bring consumers. Is there any flexibility there -- since some of the state programs are big enough to warrant several representatives in addition to consumers?

Thanks.

Jeff

TEXT:

Pursuant to the Council's request for an update on the Department of Health and Human Services' position on the Ricky Ray Hemophilia Relief Fund Act of 1995, I have spoken to HHS and have learned the following:

The Department understands the importance of this legislation and recognizes the impact HIV transmission through the blood supply has had on the hemophilia community. The proposed approach to compensation is under active consideration by the Department. The Department plans to transmit to Congress its formal position in a few weeks. The Council's interest in this, I believe, will help assure that this occurs.

We will keep you informed as HHS develops its response.

TEXT:

THE WHITE HOUSE
Office of the Press Secretary

For Immediate Release

May 2, 1996

STATEMENT BY THE PRESIDENT

I applaud the members of Congress for this overwhelming statement of support for the Ryan White Comprehensive AIDS Resources Emergency Act. By extending this vital program for five additional years, lawmakers of both parties are sending a message of support to thousands of Americans who are living with HIV or AIDS and to their families and friends who offer them love and support each and every day. In its first five years of existence, the Ryan White CARE Act has provided high-quality medical care and support services that help to extend the length and improve the quality of life for people living with HIV/AIDS. I have been proud of our recent success in increasing funding for this program by more than 110 percent in the last three years, including a $105 million increase in the recently enacted budget agreement for fiscal year 1996. I look forward to signing this bill and continuing this record of bipartisan support.

TEXT:

Pursuant to the Council's request for an update on the Department of Health and Human Services' position on the Ricky Ray Hemophilia Relief Fund Act of 1995, I have spoken to HHS and have learned the following:

The Department understands the importance of this legislation and recognizes the impact HIV transmission through the blood supply has had on the hemophilia community. The proposed approach to compensation is under active consideration by the Department. The Department plans to transmit to Congress its formal position in a few weeks. The Council's interest in this, I believe, will help assure that this occurs.

We will keep you informed as HHS develops its response.

===== FACT OF THE DAY =====

Hypertension was the most common diagnosis (7.2%) for patients who visited general practitioners, family practitioners and osteopaths last year, according to a survey conducted by the health care consulting firm Scott-Levin Associates. The next most common ailment was acute upper respiratory infection (3.6%), followed by bronchitis (3.0%), chronic sinusitis (2.9%) and diabetes mellitus (2.8%). Routine exams were the 10th most common diagnosis.

===== POLITICS & POLICY =====

*1 KASSEBAUM/KENNEDY: CBO COSTS OUT MENTAL HEALTH PARITY

A Congressional Budget Office (CBO) report released 5/13 predicts that 800,000 people "could lose health insurance as a result of higher premiums" if the mental health parity amendment is included in the final version of the Kassebaum/Kennedy health insurance reform bill. The amendment, sponsored by Sens. Pete Domenici (R-NM) and Paul Wellstone (D-MN), would require insurers and health plans to provide coverage for mental illness equal to that provided for physical health conditions (see AHL 5/2). CBO estimates that the mandate "could impose new costs on many employers and lead some to drop health insurance altogether." N.Y. TIMES notes that the mental health proposal is one of several issues "still to be resolved" by a House-Senate conference committee that is meeting to iron out a final bill.

OPPOSITE EFFECT: Domenici and Wellstone "contend" that the parity amendment would help employers "save money in the long run" because workers with mental disorders would receive proper care, leading them to be more productive. However, in its report to the House Committee on Economic and Educational Opportunities, the CBO predicts that the parity amendment could result in 800,000 workers and their dependents losing employment-based coverage. According to CBO, the parity mandate would "impose direct costs of $11.6 billion on the employment-based insurance market" -- costs that would "ultimately be borne by workers" in the form of higher premiums.

TRUTH IN NUMBERS: According to the report, insurance premiums for workers would initially increase by an average of four percent, but employers "should be able to hold the average increase to 1.6 percent by reducing the generosity of health benefits." The total increase in annual premiums, the CBO estimates, "would average $110 a policy or $55 for each person covered." In its report, the CBO notes that its estimates have "a high degree of uncertainty because experts could not know for sure how employers would respond." But CBO Director June O'Neill said that any increase in premiums would more than likely "be passed on to workers in the form of lower wages or reductions in other fringe benefits."

MAJOR CHANGES: While almost all companies that offer health coverage to their workers provide some mental health benefits, the CBO report estimates that "fewer than 2 percent provide mental health coverage that is equivalent to that for other health services." Therefore, the CBO states that "employers would have to make major changes in health benefits to comply with the Senate bill." If the parity amendment is passed, the report notes that employers would have to provide unlimited outpatient visits for mental health services, compared to the current average limit of about 20 visits a year. Similarly, hospitalizations for mental services, which are now limited on average to about 30 days a year, would also be unlimited. The report also suggests that a patient's share of the cost for outpatient services, such as psychotherapy, which is currently set at 50%, would be reduced to 20%. Further, lifetime limits on coverage for mental health care would be eliminated; the current average limit set by policies is about $50,000.

THE OTHER SIDE: National Mental Health Association Pres. Michael Faenza "agreed" that the parity amendment "would cause some increase in premiums," but he said the increase "would amount to only a few dollars a month." Faenza added, "The costs of not providing mental health care to children and adults with disorders are astronomical. If you don't provide outpatient mental care, these people may end up being admitted to a public mental hospital, at a much greater cost to taxpayers" (Pear, 5/14).

DRUGMAKERS' TAX BREAK: Congressional Republicans plan to release the details of a small business tax relief package today that would pay for itself by repealing a tax break currently enjoyed by many pharmaceutical companies. Under the GOP plan, Section 936, "a tax break for pharmaceutical and other companies with plants in Puerto Rico and other U.S. territories," would be eliminated over a ten-year period (Georges, W.S. JOURNAL, 5/14).

2 HHS: MEDICARE/MEDICAID FRAUD PROGRAM PRODUCES RESULTS

Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) Secretary Donna Shalala said 5/13 that "new approaches" used by an HHS pilot program to crack down on fraud in the Medicare and Medicaid programs recovered $42.3 million in one year -- a $10 return for every $1 spent. Shalala touted the results on the first anniversary of HHS' Operation Restore Trust program, which operated in five states during the past year.

EXPANSION: Shalala said that the Clinton administration would like to expand the five-state pilot project to all 50 states in the next fiscal year. Clinton's FY '97 budget outline includes this proposal, along with "increased and more stable funding for anti-fraud efforts in Medicare and Medicaid." The Clinton budget would appropriate a total of $597 million for nationwide Medicare/Medicaid anti-fraud efforts -- an increase of $158 million from FY '96. The total savings expected from the additional spending is $3.5 billion over seven years.

ACCOMPLISHMENTS: The $4.09 million Operation Restore Trust program focused on "three high-growth" Medicare and Medicaid areas: nursing homes, home health agencies and medical equipment suppliers. During its first year, the effort returned $24.5 million to the Medicare Trust Fund from "criminal restitutions, fines and recoveries," $14.1 million from civil judgements, settlements and penalties and $3.7 million to the U.S. Treasury from fraudulent billing or services. HHS Inspector General June Gibbs Brown said that 244 out of 272 cases now being investigated by her office came to investigators' attention as a direct result of the pilot project.

NEW APPROACHES: Under Operation Restore Trust, HHS has teamed up with Health Care Financing Administration data staff, Inspector General's Office auditors and nurses from state agencies "to conduct comprehensive reviews of rehab and skilled nursing facilities with unusually high Medicare reimbursement rates." There has also been an increased emphasis on cooperating with the Department of Justice and "empowering" state aging ombudsmen to report cases of fraud (HHS release, 5/13).

*3 AIDS: DRUG CZAR BASHES NEEDLE-EXCHANGE PROGRAMS

The Clinton administration's newly appointed drug czar "has blasted needle-exchange programs for addicts as ineffective and misdirected," KNIGHT-RIDDER/ORLANDO SENTINEL reports. Retired General Barry McCaffrey, who took over as head of the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy earlier this year, said that public health officials should focus on treating addicts instead of offering them clean needles. "The problem is not dirty needles, the problem is heroin addiction. ... It's injection of illegal drugs," McCaffrey said. While McCaffrey did not recommend that states and municipalities halt their needle-exchange efforts, KNIGHT-RIDDER/SENTINEL notes that "as the administration's voice on drug matters, he sets priorities for how money is spent."

CLOSED-MINDED: Needle-exchange proponents "were disappointed" by McCaffrey's remarks, contending that clean needles help curtail the spread of HIV. Although he called needle-exchange programs a "short-term remedy" for combating the AIDS epidemic, Partnership for A Drug Free America Vice Chair Thomas Hendrick said that rejecting the exchanges "out-of-hand is wrong" (5/13).

===== STATELINES =====

*4 CONNECTICUT: MANAGED CARE BILL STALLS IN LEGISLATURE

A managed care regulatory bill "was effectively bottled up" in the state Senate as the Connecticut Legislature adjourned its 1996 session 5/8, HARTFORD COURANT reports. The proposal, which was a "top-priority" of House Majority Leader Moira Lyons (D), would have required HMOs to make public their coverage policies and to create appeals processes for denied claims (see AHL 5/8). Republican senators opposed the bill, charging that it "was unwieldy and over-regulated" the state's HMO industry. Lyons and others, however, "are vowing to do battle again with the HMOs and the Senate Republicans." Lyons said, "I hope the needs of the state, in the next session, take priority over the needs of the insurance industry."

OVERLOOKED?: Although the managed care bill failed, the Legislature approved two separate health insurance mandates this session. The first is a maternity-stay bill requiring insurers to cover 48 hours of hospital care following uncomplicated deliveries and 96 hours following C-sections. The other bars insurers "from denying coverage to breast-cancer survivors who have been free of the disease for at least five years."

OPTOMETRY BILL: The Legislature also approved a "compromise" bill granting greater practice authority to optometrists (see AHL 4/19). During the 1996 session, ophthalmologists and optometrists engaged in a "turf war" over the measure, a battle that "included competing press conferences at the Capitol, billboards and full-page newspaper ads." In the end, state Rep. Anne McDonald (D) brokered a final bill that allows optometrists "to treat glaucoma and dispense limited amounts of narcotics but not to perform laser surgery to correct nearsightedness and other problems."

MISCELLANEOUS: Lawmakers passed a separate bill that, beginning 7/1, will levy increased penalties against physicians, dentists and pharmacists "who overcharge the state for services provided to Medicaid recipients." A bill targeted at curbing youth access to tobacco products was also approved. It requires that cigarette vending machines be placed "in adult-only areas" and it boosts fines and penalties for store owners and other vendors found to be selling tobacco products to minors. The tobacco-control bill, however, does not include a proposed $0.12 per pack tax increase, which was "strongly opposed" by the tobacco industry (Keating/Daly/Levin, 5/12). Also during the session, Democrats introduced a measure to repeal the state's "sick tax" on hospitals; but their attempt was blocked by Senate Republicans (Dibella/Sullivan, HARTFORD COURANT, 5/12). The state currently levies a six percent sales tax and an 11% gross receipts tax on all hospital bills; the money is used to fund the state's uncompensated care pool (AHL's 50-State Report, Spring 1996 issue).

5 ILLINOIS: STATE WILL PLAY ROLE IN LONG-TERM CARE DECISIONS

A "little-publicized" law approved last year by the Illinois Legislature as part of Gov. Jim Edgar's (R) FY '97 budget will require that persons seeking admission to nursing homes -- regardless of income -- first consult with a state caseworker. The evaluations, which will begin 7/1, are part of the state's effort to "discourage unnecessary spending on nursing home care." The caseworker will not be able to prevent a person from choosing to enter a nursing home, but will make recommendations about what level of care would be appropriate and inform those interviewed about "alternatives" to nursing-home care. Persons seeking nursing home care would also be informed about "what criteria they must meet if they later seek Medicaid funding for long-term care."

CONSULTATION CRUNCH: CHICAGO TRIBUNE reports that similar evaluations have been in place for Medicaid recipients since 1983. But under the new law, the state Department of Aging estimates that the number of people evaluated would rise to 92,000 in 1997, from the 12,900 who receive such consultations currently. TRIBUNE notes that the effort "is another weapon in the state's struggle to control its soaring Medicaid costs." Illinois' spending on long-term care has grown by 90% over the past six years, to more than $1.5 billion in 1995.

NOT FAIR!: The nursing home industry opposes the consultations. A statement released by the Illinois Health Care Association said, "This program is an example of blatant government intrusion into the privacy of Illinois residents and should be eliminated before it is fully implemented." Other industry officials note that most people enter a nursing home on "written recommendation of a doctor," and others contend that there are no alternatives to nursing home care in many areas of the state. Life Services Network Vice President of Public Policy Kirk Riva said, "When making the decision to enter a nursing home, most people have exhausted other alternatives. This is not the first place they look. It's kind of a last option."

GOING FORWARD REGARDLESS: TRIBUNE reports that nursing home industry efforts to repeal the consultations "appear" to have failed in the Legislature. However, the industry "may win legislative approval of a request that the state auditor general examine the cost-effectiveness of the program." TRIBUNE notes that a 1995 Ohio study found that state evaluations only diverted a "few people" from choosing a nursing home (Grady, 5/13).

6 MISSOURI: BLUE CROSS FIGHTS STATE OVER FOR-PROFIT MOVE

Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Missouri filed suit 5/13 against the state Insurance Department and Attorney General Jay Nixon (D), asking the court to block the state's efforts to require the company to pay the public "hundreds of millions of dollars" in assets as part of its conversion to for-profit status. ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH reports that if the "case goes to trial, it would be the first in the nation to directly deal" with the issue of for-profit conversions of nonprofit health plans. The Blue Cross suit alleges that the company "owes the public nothing" and accuses state insurance regulators of "misconduct in pressuring the insurer."

PAYING THE PRICE: State Insurance Commissioner Jay Angoff approved Blue Cross' bid to become a for-profit entity earlier this year. But "shortly afterward," Angoff charged that the insurer "disclosed false and incomplete information, thereby illegally transferring its assets from its nonprofit parent" company to its for-profit managed care unit, RightChoice Managed Care Inc. According to Angoff, Blue Cross must return the assets that it gained as a tax-exempt non-profit to the public. In response, the insurer has "argued that since its tax-exempt status has long ended" and that since only "some" of its assets have been transferred to RightChoice, it should not have to pay anything.

NAILING DOWN A PRICE: POST-DISPATCH reports that "estimates of the money at stake range from $200 million to $500 million, depending on how you measure the company's net worth." Blue Cross has offered to pay the state $164 million in assets, but state regulators have asked that $187.45 million "be set aside for nonprofit use" (Amos, 5/14).

UNFAIR TREATMENT: The Blue Cross suit contends that the company "did not convert from non-profit status" when it formed its RightChoice subsidiary in 1994 and that the insurer remains a "financially sound, independently viable and active health services corporation." In addition, the suit contends that it is incorrect for the state to "characterize" Blue Cross as "a public benefit corporation serving a charitable purpose." Blue Cross Pres./CEO Roy Heimbarger stated that "there is absolutely no basis in Missouri law" for the Insurance Department to demand that the insurer hand over its assets to the public. "There is also no public policy approved by either the General Assembly or the voters which authorizes the Director of Insurance to weaken market competition, reduce consumer choice and flexibility, and increase costs," according to Heimbarger (Blue Cross release, 5/13).

GREAT FOR THE STATE: Tom Bixby, director of the state Insurance Department's consumer affairs division, said that if the court sides with the state, Missouri "will seek much more than $164 million" from the insurer. He added that the state expects to hire Bear Stearns Cos. to evaluate the market value of Blue Cross' assets, "a figure expected to exceed $200 million." Also, Bixby noted that the outcome of this case "could hold up a similar conversion" being sought by Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Kansas City (Amos, 5/14).

7 UTAH: MAY BE NUMBER NINE IN LINE WITH A TOBACCO SUIT

Attorney General Jan Graham (D) "is poised to lead Utah" into a suit against the tobacco industry to recover the Medicaid costs of treating smoking-related illnesses. SALT LAKE TRIBUNE reports that Graham and other state officials have been "quietly ... readying the state's case for months" by reviewing information from the Medicaid liability suits filed by eight other states. Noting the likelihood that she will go forward with a suit, Graham said, "Utah stands to gain a great deal here. ... I want to do it. We are not going to be left out." TRIBUNE reports that a final decision on the matter, which could be reached "within weeks," will rely "heavily" on meetings taking place between Graham and the state Legislature this week. Gov. Mike Leavitt (R) supports the proposed litigation.

MORE TO COME: Along with recovering Medicaid dollars, Utah's suit would seek court injunctions to prohibit tobacco companies from employing "advertising purportedly aimed at young people." Money would also be sought for adult and teen smoking-cessation programs, as well as a requirement that the industry conduct more research on "safer alternatives to smoking." The state would hire a private legal team to bring the case to court and would reimburse the attorneys on a contingency basis. If the state follows through on the suit, it will join Mississippi, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Maryland, Louisiana, Florida, West Virginia and Texas in suing cigarette makers (Semerad, 5/12).

===== INSIDE THE INDUSTRY =====

8 MEDPARTNERS/MULLIKIN: TO ACQUIRE COMPETITOR CAREMARK

The nation's two largest physician management groups -- Medpartners/Mullikin, Inc. and Caremark International Inc. -- announced today that they have agreed to a merger valued at $2.5 billion (release, 5/14). According to the W.S. JOURNAL, the agreement is "one of the biggest deals yet" in the "wave of consolidations sweeping through" the $800 billion independent and group physician practice business (Blackmon/Burton, 5/14). The new entity, named Medpartners Inc., will have 7,250 affiliated doctors, almost 1.5 million prepaid enrollees and combined first quarter profits exceeding $4.4 billion.

DONE DEAL: The boards of both companies have approved the merger, which is still subject to regulatory and stockholder approval. The deal is expected to close in the third quarter of 1996. Caremark Chair/CEO Lance Piccolo said of the deal, "The merger is a preemptive strategic move to build an organization that is ideally positioned to deliver quality patient care that is affordable. Our mutual commitment to physician-led, patient-centered care is enhanced by the depth of clinical data collected over more than a decade in our PBM and disease management businesses. Combined, we will be better able to provide physicians with the support they need to provide medical care and to shape the future of health care" (release, 5/14).

9 PHARMACIA & UPJOHN: PLAN TO ACQUIRE ALLERGAN IS SCRAPPED

Allergan Inc., a maker of eye and skin care products, announced yesterday that negotiations for a buy-out by drug manufacturer Pharmacia & Upjohn "have been called off." In a written statement, Allergan said that the talks between the two companies regarding a merger "ended because the companies decided they would be unable to use an accounting method known as 'pooling of interests'" (Sakson, AP/WASH. TIMES, 5/14). Allergan said that the pooling of interest method was "feasible for Allergan," but not for Pharmacia & Upjohn because it conflicted with plans by AB Volvo, a major Pharmacia & Upjohn shareholder, to "unload its stake" in the company.

CONFLICT OF INTEREST: W.S. JOURNAL reports that in 1994 Volvo announced a "back-to-basics" campaign which called for divesting all of the company's "non-core holdings by the end of 1996." If the acquisition of Allergan was completed, Volvo would be prevented from selling off its 14% share in Pharmacia & Upjohn temporarily because of rules governing pooling accounting treatment. JOURNAL notes that it is unclear how or when Volvo will attempt to sell its holdings in Pharmacia & Upjohn (Lipin/Moore, 5/14).

ENDLESS POSSIBILITIES: Industry analysts predict that Allergan will likely become a candidate for a merger in order to "help it compete in an industry that's becoming dominated by multibillion-dollar giants." Oppenheimer & Co. analyst Steven Gerber said, "We believe that Allergan has been smart enough to have had a number of conversations with a large number of potential partners in the pharmaceutical industry." L.A. TIMES reports that analysts have mentioned Merck & Co., Schering-Plough Corp., Johnson & Johnson and Bristol-Myers Squibb Co. as having possible interest in acquiring Allergan. According to industry analysts, Allergan, valued at $2.5 billion, is a prime candidate for a takeover because of its relatively small size and because "it stands to gain handsomely from the development of some new drugs for treatment of psoriasis and cancer" (Marsh, 5/14).

THE DOWNSIDE: JOURNAL reports that "the collapse of talks with Allergan underscores strategic gridlock likely to thwart Pharmacia & Upjohn's expansion ambitions until Volvo" divests its interest in the company. Pharmacia & Upjohn has expressed a desire in narrowing its interests to about a half-dozen disease areas, although company executives said recently that the company "is likely to buy more before shedding unwanted businesses to avoid reducing revenues" (Lipin/Moore, 5/14).

10 BAXTER HEALTHCARE: FORMS JOINT VENTURE WITH VALUE HEALTH

Deerfield, IL-based Baxter Healthcare Corporation and Avon, CT-based Value Health Inc. announced 5/13 that they will enter into a "50-50 joint venture" to provide medication management services to hospitals and other health care providers. Under the venture, the two companies will provide pharmacy operations, information systems and medication-process management services. The "mission" of the yet-to-be-named company will be to "work in partnership" with providers to "improve quality and reduce the total costs associated with medications and their use." Robert Patricelli, Value Health's president and CEO, said, "Together, we hope to become the leading provider of medication management services to hospitals and other health care providers."

WHAT THEY'LL GET: For Value Health, the deal continues the company's accelerated move into the $50-billion medication management business. Baxter will be able to "broaden the range of cost-management services" offered by its $4 billion cost management business, which is being spun off as a separate, publicly traded corporation. The venture will consist of Value Health's HPI Health Care Services business, the nation's second-largest provider of contract-management services for hospital pharmacies, providing services for 135 health care facilities. Value Health will also license its medication management information system, PreciseCare, to the joint venture. Baxter will provide cash, "key personnel, sales and marketing expertise and its medication process management service" (joint release, 5/13).

11 HEALTH INSURERS: FADING FAST IN MANAGED CARE'S WAKE

A new study of the life and health insurance industry conducted by Conning & Co. found that "traditional health insurers are losing market share to managed care companies so rapidly that they are being forced to consider big changes in their operations." Conning's Mark Trencher said that HMO membership is expected to climb to about 50% of enrollees in group health plans over the next five years, compared to about 25% last year. He said that the result will be a decline in premium volume from traditional medical insurance policies. Trencher went on to predict that the premium volume for traditional plans will fall about two percent in 1997, compared to growth of between two and three percent per year between 1990 and 1994.

MAKING CHANGES: According to Trencher, the decline in premium volume has prompted a number of large traditional health insurers "to explore whether they should buy or build a managed care operation." He said that "traditional health insurers that fail to move into managed care 'are going to be at a major disadvantage'" (REUTERS/INVESTOR'S BUSINESS DAILY, 5/13).

===== FOCUS ON TOBACCO =====

*12 SUPREME COURT: ALCOHOL CASE COULD DERAIL FDA REGULATIONS

The Supreme Court voted unanimously 5/13 to overturn a Rhode Island law that restricts the advertisement of alcohol prices, a ruling that "casts doubt" on the constitutionality of President Clinton's campaign to eliminate cigarette advertisements he contends are tailored towards youths. In the lead opinion, Justice John Paul Stevens wrote, "The 1st Amendment directs us to be especially skeptical of regulations that seek to keep people in the dark for what the government perceives to be their own good." The judges ruled that any advertising "that is not deceptive is entitled to full constitutional protection."

TOBACCO IMPLICATIONS: L.A. TIMES reports that while the court's opinion did not specifically mention tobacco, "its impact will surely be felt" by cigarette makers (Savage, 5/14). N.Y. TIMES notes that it was "unclear" from the ruling whether the "explicit reference to young people" in the Food and Drug Administration's proposed rules to limit tobacco advertising "might be more persuasive to the Court" than Rhode Island's argument that restricting liquor-price advertising lowered state alcohol consumption levels. While there are "no definitive answers" to this question, N.Y. TIMES reports that the 5/13 ruling makes it apparent that the court will "subject any new regulations to a searching examination" (Greenhouse, 5/14). American Advertising Federation Pres. Wallace Snyder said, "The court set a tough standard for government to meet if it tries to restrict truthful advertising for a legal product" (Barrett, W.S. JOURNAL, 5/14).

ADMINISTRATION LINE: In response to the ruling, the Clinton administration noted that the Rhode Island law impacted legal alcohol sales to adults, while the FDA's proposed rules attempt to limit illegal sales to minors (Biskupic, WASH. POST, 5/14). CHICAGO TRIBUNE reports that the ruling was not a "slam dunk" for all "vice" industries -- such as alcohol, tobacco and gambling -- because it only concerned "factual advertising of prices," not the "image" advertising that the FDA regulations seek to restrict (5/14).

INDUSTRY SPIN: "The tobacco industry cheered the ruling as ammunition in its battle over the Clinton administration's plan to restrict cigarette ads. ... The administration says it's not worried about today's decision, but the tobacco industry calls this a victory and finds itself in the unusual position of celebrating a court ruling," NBC's Williams reported. Freedom to Advertise Coalition's John Fitian said, "This Supreme Court feels that commercial speech deserves substantial protection, even when it concerns so-called 'vice' products like tobacco and alcohol" ("Nightly News," 5/13).

OUR TWO CENTS: Antismoking advocates said that the ruling was "tailored" to the Rhode Island law, adding that the justices had "shown displeasure with blanket bans," but not with more limited regulations like the FDA's. Richard Daynard, an antitobacco activist and Northeastern University law professor, said, "The FDA rules would survive because the court seems to have said that if you tailor this thing to the problem you're trying to deal with -- kids smoking -- and still allow some form of advertising expression by the industry, then you're OK" (Barrett, 5/14).

WAITING TO EXHALE: POST reports that because the "court's legal reasoning played out over four separate opinions, the overall significance in areas beyond liquor sales will not be clear until further litigation" (Biskupic, 5/14). Two related cases are currently before the court and both involve billboard restrictions on alcohol and tobacco by the city of Baltimore. N.Y. TIMES notes that the Baltimore cases will shed further light on the court's view of tobacco advertisement restrictions because Baltimore's cigarette advertising ban has the "explicit purpose of discouraging smoking by teen-agers" (Greenhouse, 5/14).

ASBESTOS DUST: A court ruling last week involving asbestos liability claims could strengthen the tobacco industry's hand in defeating smoking liability suits. The 3rd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals struck down a $1.3 billion settlement offer 5/10 that was designed to settle a class action suit brought by thousands of asbestos victims. DALLAS MORNING NEWS reports that the ruling "makes it less likely that the biggest suit facing the cigarette industry will survive as a class action" because the court found that the 100,000 asbestos plaintiffs are "too diverse" and cannot be grouped into an "amalgamation of factually and legally different plaintiffs." MORNING NEWS notes that the tobacco industry is citing "some of the same concerns" in a class action suit brought against cigarette makers on behalf of all addicted U.S. smokers. The 3rd Circuit Court ruling is not binding to the 5th Circuit Court in New Orleans, which is hearing the tobacco class action suit known as the Castano case. A three judge panel is currently considering whether the Castano case can go forward as a class action; a ruling is expected this summer (see AHL 4/3) (5/13).

Jeff,

I tried you again and you were out.

Regarding question #1, you were right, this was our attempt to simplify the application process and respond to concerns that state's have regarding completing so many applications for federal funds. We had a meeting on April 24th with some of our partners to discuss this issue and they also expressed concern over combining the applications (funding streams would have stayed categorical, it was just the application that was combined).

We have backed off our decision to have a combined program announcement . I can send you a draft of a letter that Helene will be sending out to those persons who attend that meeting.

Regarding questions #2, we have prepared some reports. I will contact the appropriate staff and share them with you as soon as I receive them.

The reason I was calling....

A number of advisory council members raised concerns about the combined HIV/STD/TB application -- they think this is a backdoor way to the PPG. I tried to assure them this was probably an effort at administrative simplification, but I was making this up since I know nothing about this. They have actually raised this in the draft of their assessment of the administration. Can you tell me something about this? Is there an official explanation of this new procedure that we can share with the Council?

Also, another question that was raised at the Council meeting related to the review of the 1996 applications and plans. I argued that CDC did a relatively thorough and tough review, that some states were sent back to revise their plans/applications, and that CDC had gained a good deal of insight regarding the TA that would be needed in individual states and was preparing to offer it. Again, this was based on sketchy information. Is there a report/summary/lessons learned document/statement that we could share with the council?

I now have a longer list of things to talk to you about, so maybe we should try to do this by e-mail.

(1) I have learned (but don't have a whole lot of detail, but I will get it), that the NIH Clinical Center AIDS program is now running a clinic specifically devoted to providing care (not dependent on participation in clinical trials) for people with HIV in the metropolitan area. With all due respect to Whitman Walker, it would seem that FREE care provided by NIH might certainly set a new standard of access to quality care for Medicaid recipients.

All this reaffirms our earlier discussion about a larger mix of providers who are already in place who should be networked that may be the solution, rather than creating a new infrastructure.

(2) Carol Rasco, Patsy, I, and several others are going to SF next week. One of the issues (actually, I get to chair a 1.5 hour discussion) will be managed care. SF is doing a managed care demo -- I will be meeting with Sophia Chang, who will be medical director and is an old colleague...but, is there anything you can tell me about this? any minefields we might be walking into?

(3) I got a call today from a Rhonda Goldstein of the AIDS Law Project of Pennsylvania, expressing concern about the 1915 waiver that will be coming in for a five county area including Philadelphia. I gave her your number...hope that was OK...and assured her that HCFA would be willing to hear community concerns once that waiver application was received, that I didn't think there would be any point in having an abstract discussion until then. Did I do the right thing?

Thanks for your help.

TEXT:

Dear PACHA Research Committee Members,

I talked yesterday with William Paul to clarify and learn directly from him his concerns over the PACHA recommendations promulgated on April 26th. I can fill you in tomorrow during our 10am EST conference call.

I also shared his concerns with the community interested in AIDS vaccine development, and below you will find some responses (which I have made anonymous).

At the bottom of all this, please find some suggested text that we might consider proposing for full Council approval at its next opportunity to respond to his concerns. But these would be IN ADDITION TO our previous assessment sentences and recommendations, which ought not to change. I think we raise controversial "process" issues if we try to delete or modify in a substantive way the statements of the Council (other than for format, layout, and typographical errors) after they have been discussed, debated, negotiated, crafted, finalized and formally voted on at an official public meeting.

Thanks,
Bruce

COMMUNITY COMMENT 1:

Thanks for the update. I can understand where NIH is coming from, though I think they are being a bit "sensitive" and somewhat defensive.

Your idea of adding another sentence about NIH's role in vaccine R&D seems appropriate, and you might also suggest adding that the committee will consider further recommendations concerning the NIH after they have an opportunity to review and discuss the full report of the recent review.

Thank you for your e-mail.

As I understand the charge of your group, you are to advise the President as representatives the people of the United States or, given the great responsibility the U.S. has in international infectious diseases, the world. In collecting information to make your recommendations to the President, you need to talk to many people. Dr. Paul is ONE of those people. But your group should not be overly influenced by that one person. PACHA, as I understand it, is not to represent NIH.

Indeed, when listening to Dr. Paul, PACHA must understand his background and NIH's track record in vaccine development. A small group of well-meaning people with very little experience in vaccine development has helped HIV vaccine development in some ways and made terrible mistakes in others. In general, they have assisted academic researchers with basic research and have helped some centers (and industry) in some phase I and phase II studies. But, outside of this, they have not understood, helped or encouraged vaccine development from industry. Indeed, it can be strongly argued that they have severely hindered it.

Our country is most interesting. When a hundred people die in a plane crash, we mobilize great pressure to improve the safety of flying. But when thousands of people a day are infected with a deadly virus, we sit around a table and listen to a basic researcher try to defend his organization's work in protecting monkeys from experimental infections with a distantly related virus. And with all of these "contributions" ask that they be given responsibility for directing this important effort.

From the vantage point of industry (where vaccines are actually developed), the HIV vaccine effort is seen as a small one hanging by threads. The reason is because there is no urgency, no interest, no value given to vaccines. PACHA could do much to improve that situation.

I have no problems with the NIH "basic" research paragraph. But I strongly disagree with removal of the recommendation for an independent vaccine development initiative. If NIH had a good track record with experienced vaccine development staff, I would support them directing vaccine development. Given reality, to have them direct it would, in my opinion, be a great mistake.

I wish you all the best in your important efforts.

+ + + + +

COMMUNITY COMMENT 3:

I hope you can hold the line on the original wording of the committee's recommendation.

One strategy is to object to the concept of interference by a federal official in the actions of an advisory group. i.e. Why did they ask for advice if they don't want the truth? If they want to dictate the recommendations why go through the charade of an advisory committee?

+ + + + +

COMMUNITY COMMENT 4:

It's interesting. As always, biopolitics is amazing. I think that if you are inclined to submit an additional statement regarding the NIH, the statement should be much broader. It should probably refer more to what has occurred recently under the President's mandate regarding a coordinated federal biomedical research plan and budget for HIV and AIDS.

I think -- I hope -- you have seen that report. I think it's still marked "administrative confidential." The section that deals with vaccines depicts a federal effort that spans the range of development issues: from initial concept exploration, discovery, preclinical development, transitioning to clinical development, and advanced clinical development. It shows that, in fact, there are many federal agencies that play important roles in this, and you should not specifically just mention NIH. That would be a big mistake. It would be, certainly, not in the best interests of advancing vaccines, which we are all interested in doing. I think we need all the parties involved in order to do that.

I think a statement that is more inclusive and broader would be better, and it could reference the Federal Biomedical Research Plan and Budget for HIV and AIDS.

SUGGESTED ADDITIONAL TEXT

The Presidential Advisory Council on HIV and AIDS looks forward to receiving and examining carefully (1) the full, final, detailed reports of all the area review panels commissioned by the NIH Office of AIDS Research external ("Levine") committee charged in May 1995 with evaluating its overall AIDS research agenda, and (2) the final "Federal Biomedical Research Plan and Budget for HIV and AIDS" prepared at the request of the Presidential.

The anticipated formal written assessments and responses to these reports by the involved agencies, and the actual restructuring and reforms undertaken as a result of them in the months and years ahead, will greatly influence the rate of development of technologies to control and conquer the AIDS epidemic.

All agencies of the U.S. Government with experience in various phases of vaccine research and development -- including but not limited to NIH, DoD, FDA, CDC, and the VA -- should contribute their unique institutional expertise, resources, population-access, and capabilities in a coordinated Federal effort towards the common goal to produce an effective preventive vaccine for AIDS as quickly as possible. As the world's largest sponsor of biomedical research, the NIH has an important role to play in advancing the basic science knowledge of HIV immunology and pathogenesis upon which AIDS vaccine designs are based, and by increasing its previous support for basic science, laboratory animal, and human clinical vaccine studies.

"Study Pinpoints Where AIDS Virus Is Spreading"

Wall Street Journal (05/16/96) P. B2; Bennett, Amanda

A new study by Centers for Disease Control and Prevention researcher Scott Holmberg provides comprehensive information about where HIV is most prevalent. The study, published in this month's issue of the American Journal of Public Health, is the result of Holmberg's analysis of hundreds of documents on how many people have HIV or are likely to become HIV-infected in 96 U.S. cities. The details are important because decisions about public education and funding for AIDS depend on knowledge about which areas are hardest hit. The report offers the first information on the epidemic in some local areas. Holmberg estimates that injection drug users account for almost half of all new HIV infections, a finding that could direct more money to needle exchange programs. The study also supports the widespread belief among scientists that HIV's spread into the heterosexual community is mostly confined to partners of injection drug users and bisexual men. Related Story: USA Today (05/16) P. D1

"FDA Approves Home HIV Test Kits for Texans"

Houston Chronicle (05/15/96) P. 1A; SoRelle, Ruth

Residents of Texas and Florida will be the first to be able to buy a home HIV test that was approved on Tuesday by the Food and Drug Administration. The company making the test, Direct Access Diagnostics, said it will be available in June in Texas drug stores, clinics, and student health centers. Texas and Florida residents will also be able to purchase the test by calling a toll-free number. The company said the test may be available in the rest of the country by 1997. Users of the test will get their results over the phone and will be connected to a counselor if the test is positive. Related Story: Los Angeles Times (05/15) P. A10; Chicago Tribune (05/15) P. 1-3

"Abortion, AIDS Proposals Survive"

Boston Globe (05/15/96) P. 11

In a House vote on the $266.7 billion defense bill, conservatives preserved--at least temporarily--a proposal requiring the military to discharge service members with HIV. The provision was offered by Rep. Robert Dornan (R-Calif.). Related Story: Chicago Tribune (05/15) P. 1-4

"AIDS Settlement Offer in Jeopardy"

Chicago Tribune (05/15/96) P. 3-1; Hutchcraft, Chuck

Lawyers for a group of HIV-infected hemophiliacs met on Monday with representatives of the four drug companies they are suing for selling tainted blood products to try to negotiate a settlement. The hemophiliacs had rejected the companies' offer of $640 million, taking issue with the amount--$100,000 for each of the 6,000 hemophiliacs, plus $40 million in legal fees--and the provision that no more than 100 plaintiffs could opt out of the agreement and file their own suits. Lawyers for the plaintiffs made suggestions for a settlement they could agree to, but their proposals were undisclosed. The companies agreed to lift the May 20 deadline for the plaintiffs to make a decision about the settlement.

"The Teen Age of AIDS"

Washington Post--District Weekly (05/16/96) P. 1; Hull, Dana

Metro TeenAIDS, a Washington, D.C., center for AIDS education and prevention, brings together teenagers from various high schools in the city. One program offered at the center provides training for teens on teaching HIV prevention, allowing them to take their message to their peers. Other services the center provides include street outreach and a program for African-American girls living in public housing. The D.C. Agency for HIV/AIDS reported that 17 percent of all AIDS cases in the city were among 20- to 29-year-olds, meaning that many people are infected with HIV as teenagers since full-blown AIDS generally takes several years to develop.

"Progress Reported in Talks Involving AIDS Bike-A-Thon"

Philadelphia Inquirer (05/16/96) P. B2

Progress has been made in resolving the dispute between minority-led Philadelphia AIDS groups and the AIDS organization sponsoring a Philadelphia-to-Washington, D.C. bike ride fundraiser. City Commissioner Estelle Richman reported Wednesday that the differing parties were considering a proposal to settle the dispute. The Minority AIDS Coalition had threatened to disrupt the event, claiming it was being unfairly cut out of the proceeds.

"HIV-Positive Pregnant Women: Success of Detection and Intervention Varies Regionally"

Reuters (05/15/96)

The success of programs that offer HIV-positive pregnant women zidovudine vary by geographic region, according to two studies published in this week's issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association. Susan A. Fiscus of the University of North Carolina and colleagues found that fewer women were tested in urban areas compared with rural areas. The percentage of HIV-exposed children in rural North Carolina who were identified and tested increased from 60 percent to 82 percent for 1994. By contrast, a study of HIV-positive women seen at an urban hospital in New York found lower rates of both detection and zidovudine treatment. Only 52 percent of the women in the study chose and successfully used the treatment. Drug use was found to be a factor in some women's refusal of the drug.

"Vaginal Microbicide Study Announced by UNAIDS"
Reuters (05/15/96)

The Joint United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS announced Tuesday that a vaginal microbicide has been shown to prevent the heterosexual spread of sexually transmitted diseases, including HIV. The product, Advantage 24, was developed by Columbia Laboratories of Miami, Fla. It contains the spermicide nonoxynol-9 and a bioadhesive gel and has limited toxicity. The product has already been tested in 600 women in Europe and Thailand and will be used in a larger trial in several locations, including South Africa.

"Effect of Immunization With a Common Recall Antigen on Viral Expression in Patients With Human Immunodeficiency Virus Type 1"
New England Journal of Medicine (05/09/96) Vol. 334, No. 19, P. 1222; Stanley, Sharilyn K.; Ostrowski, Mario A.; Justement, Jesse S.; et al.

To determine the effect of immunization on viral expression in patients with HIV-1, Sharilyn K. Stanley, of the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases, and colleagues compared the effect of tetanus shots on 23 people, 13 of whom were infected with HIV. Previous studies have demonstrated a relationship between activation of the immune system and altered regulation of HIV-1 in infected patients. The 13 HIV-infected patients in the study all showed a temporary viral increase--two to 36 times the original level, reaching peak levels about 13 days after immunization and returning to normal within six weeks. The peripheral-blood mononuclear cells (PBMCs) of seven of the 10 uninfected participants were more easily infected with HIV-1 in the lab after immunization than before immunization. The authors conclude that the benefit of immunization outweighs the potential risk of temporarily increased viral level. They say that their results may be useful in understanding HIV-1's pathogenicity.

"Politicians, AIDS Experts Wage Budget Debate"
Journal of the American Medical Association (05/08/96) Vol. 275, No. 18, P. 1390; Voelker, Rebecca

The budgetary role of the National Institutes of Health's Office of AIDS Research (OAR) was defended by three AIDS experts at a recent news conference in Chicago, Ill., as the debate over who should allocate funds for federal AIDS research continues. Mathilde Krim, chair of the American Foundation for AIDS Research; Mark Harrington, policy director of the Treatment Action Group in New York; and Steven Wolinsky of the Northwestern University Medical School in Chicago spoke in support of OAR's management and priority-setting roles. Harrington and Wolinsky participated in the recently completed review of NIH's AIDS research effort, which concluded that OAR's role should be preserved, especially because budget constraints are anticipated in coming years. The NIH budget through 1996 calls for NIH Director Harold Varmus to control AIDS research spending. Rep. John Porter (R-Ill.) led the effort to keep spending authority out of OAR's hands, arguing that spending has never been allocated for a specific disease and that giving the OAR such authority would lead to competition between scientists working on different diseases.

The reason I was calling....

A number of advisory council members raised concerns about the combined HIV/STD/TB application -- they think this is a backdoor way to the PPG. I tried to assure them this was probably an effort at administrative simplification, but I was making this up since I know nothing about this. They have actually raised this in the draft of their assessment of the administration. Can you tell me something about this? Is there an official explanation of this new procedure that we can share with the Council?

Also, another question that was raised at the Council meeting related to the review of the 1996 applications and plans. I argued that CDC did a relatively thorough and tough review, that some states were sent back to revise their plans/applications, and that CDC had gained a good deal of insight regarding the TA that would be needed in individual states and was preparing to offer it. Again, this was based on sketchy information. Is there a report/summary/lessons learned document/statement that we could share with the council?

thanks....

Jeff:

The language you have suggested, copied below, is quite reasonable from my point of view. Do I understand correctly that you would propose this in lieu of the prior recommendation?

Bill

The Presidential Advisory Council on HIV and AIDS looks forward to receiving and examining carefully (1) the full, final, detailed reports of all the area review panels commissioned by the NIH Office of AIDS Research external ("Levine") committee charged in May 1995 with evaluating its overall AIDS research agenda, and (2) the final "Federal Biomedical Research Plan and Budget for HIV and AIDS" prepared at the request of the Presidential.

The anticipated formal written assessments and responses to these reports by the involved agencies, and the actual restructuring and reforms undertaken as a result of them in the months and years ahead, will greatly influence the rate of development of technologies to control and conquer the AIDS epidemic.

All agencies of the U.S. Government with experience in various phases of vaccine research and development -- including but not limited to NIH, DoD, FDA, CDC, and the VA -- should contribute their unique institutional expertise, resources, population-access, and capabilities in a coordinated Federal effort towards the common goal to produce an effective preventive vaccine for AIDS as quickly as possible. As the world's largest sponsor of biomedical research, the NIH has an important role to play in advancing the basic science knowledge of HIV immunology and pathogenesis upon which AIDS vaccine designs are based, and by increasing its previous support for basic science, laboratory animal, and human clinical vaccine studies.

If Patsy and Bill Paul want to go ahead with a meeting w/o Greg and report back later, that's fine. (Not entirely kidding, Greg suggested hooking him up with Norman Lear).

I now have a longer list of things to talk to you about, so maybe we should try to do this by e-mail.

(1) I have learned (but don't have a whole lot of detail, but I will get it), that the NIH Clinical Center AIDS program is now running a clinic specifically devoted to providing care (not dependent on participation in clinical trials) for people with HIV in the metropolitan area. With all due respect to Whitman Walker, it would seem that FREE care provided by NIH might certainly set a new standard of access to quality care for Medicaid recipients.

All this reaffirms our earlier discussion about a larger mix of providers who are already in place who should be networked that may be the solution, rather than creating a new infrastructure.

(2) Carol Rasco, Patsy, I, and several others are going to SF next week. One of the issues (actually, I get to chair a 1.5 hour discussion) will be managed care. SF is doing a managed care demo -- I will be meeting with Sophia Chang, who will be medical director and is an old colleague...but, is there anything you can tell me about this? any minefields we might be walking into?

(3) I got a call today from a Rhonda Goldstein of the AIDS Law Project of Pennsylvania, expressing concern about the 1915 waiver that will be coming in for a five county area including Philadelphia. I gave her your number...hope that was OK...and assured her that HCFA would be willing to hear community concerns once that waiver application was received, that I didn't think there would be any point in having an abstract discussion until then. Did I do the right thing?

Thanks for your help.

On their conference call today, the research subcommittee has agreed to change the recommendation. It will be rewritten over the weekend. With one exception (guess who?), there was strong feeling that the Council dropped the ball and made a big mistake. You may want to touch base with Alexandra regarding the alternative she is drafting. In the long run, I think this has taught them a lesson to be far more careful about how they develop their recommendations -- which may be for the best.

-----Message not delivered to the following:

whitescj No matches to nameserver query

-----Error Detail (phquery V3.18):

The message, "No matches to nameserver query," is generated whenever the nameserver fails to locate either an alias or name field that matches the supplied name. The usual causes are typographical errors or the use of nicknames. Try sending to a more general form of the name, e.g., if mike-fox fails, try fox.

On their conference call today, the research subcommittee has agreed to change the recommendation. It will be rewritten over the weekend. With one exception (guess who?), there was strong feeling that the Council dropped the ball and made a big mistake. You may want to touch base with Alexandra regarding the alternative she is drafting. In the long run, I think this has taught them a lesson to be far more careful about how they develop their recommendations -- which may be for the best.

actually, I was just about to call you. George remembered and brought it up to me; I told him it would be a small ceremony and tough to get them in. He said regardless I should make sure that they get included.

You will be speaking to an audience of approximately 40 individuals representing national, state, and local AIDS service organizations. These individuals have strongly advocated for reauthorization of the CARE Act and are, for the most part, quite satisfied with the resulting legislation. There are some, however, who are unhappy with the language regarding the testing of newborn infants.

The Department of Health and Human Services is, today, awarding $350 million in CARE Act grants to all 50 states and 49 cities.

This includes new funding for seven cities that have not previously received such assistance. HHS also is announcing the availability of $52 million in funds for AIDS drug assistance programs. That money is to be distributed within 30 days.

TEXT:

Dear Alexandra, Debra, Helen, Jerry, Phyllis, Sandra, and Scott,

Below is an additional outside comment received after our conference call today. These comments have been pretty frank -- not the kind of opinions one hears in personal briefings and in the written statements from the public we have been soliciting since last year.

Unfortunately, AIDS vaccine development is a hotly contested and politicized subject, with enormous stakes involved, both for those working in the field and for the future cohorts of persons at risk who might be saved by a vaccine that comes sooner rather than later. I share this and the previous comments in the hope that it will contribute to the efforts of our committee to understand the many issues, agendas, and stakes involved by hearing analyses and opinions that courtesy would prevent being expressed in a public or attributable fashion.

I think this will ultimately help us chart an enlightened path among such competing and contradictory voices towards insightful assessments and thoughtful recommendations for the President and Administration to help solve the epidemic.

Thanks,

Bruce

COMMUNITY COMMENT 5:

I would comment on two qualities that are largely lacking in the research program at NIH and whose absence-- or presence-- bear scrutiny, namely coordination and accountability .

It should be obvious to everyone that nothing resembling proactive coordination is a likely byproduct of a system that relies predominantly on peer-reviewed, investigator-initiated research (priir) to establish the research agenda. Coordination, after all, is a programmatic concept, designed to achieve discrete, defined objectives. As such, it connotes management of the agenda, a willingness to establish and abide by stated priorities, abridge freedom of choice, concentrate influence. In contrast, the very nature of priir is to resist programmatic influence, to shun priorities, maximize freedom, disperse influence and control. Coordination and priir are inherently adversarial concepts.

If you are convinced (I am not) that coordination is essential, it is not reasonable to look to the NIH to get a vaccine-- or to achieve any discrete objective other than to advance the frontiers of knowledge. The problem with coordination is that it can lead to failure as well as to success. Someone with sufficient experience, wisdom, insight, etc. is needed to do the coordinating right. And I'm not at all sure who is the person, or the collection of persons, with the right stuff.

Under the circumstances, we may be better off to cast our lot with priir, and with the diversity it fosters, untrammelled by program, priorities, and proactive coordination. That clearly is the instinct of Harold Varmus, Bill Paul, and the basic research community and it demands considerable respect and support for its basic research achievements. It may not get us to a vaccine any time soon, but the priir system is the only viable option for

NIH.

On the other hand, if the goal be to produce an effective vaccine AS SOON AS POSSIBLE, I have serious doubts that can be done without much more accountability. As it stands, no one is accountable for the success or the failure of the vaccine effort, no person, group, committee, unit, institute, agency, or branch. No one has been accorded, and no one has accepted, responsibility to get a vaccine, not within a stated budget, not within a defined time frame, not ever. There is not a single person at NIH or elsewhere in the government whose job performance rating is determined by whether or not there is progress toward a vaccine.

Nor does anyone's salary, or bonus, or job security depend on getting a vaccine sooner rather than later. Nor anyone's job classification, or grade, or prestige, or promotion.

The war against HIV is a war with troops but not generals; without managers, milestones, or measures of performance; without rewards or penalties; without carrots or sticks. No one in his right mind would adopt such an approach to design an automobile, or a toaster, or a tv, or an ad campaign, or anything else. Why in the world would we expect a system without accountability to lead to a vaccine? We should not.

So when Dr. Paul or anyone else inquires about the role his agency will play in the vaccine effort, I would ask him to tell me first what level of accountability he and his agency will embrace. How long will be needed for him and for the rest of us to decide if he has the right stuff? How will that be judged? What are the milestones? the measures? Will the mantle pass to someone else unless he gets us to a vaccine in five years? In ten? Fifteen? Twenty? What are his expectations re his own performance? What should be ours? Will he commit to get us a vaccine? When? How?

I don't think we should expect to have a vaccine until someone is willing to accept responsibility for getting a vaccine. In the short term, I see little reason for optimism that anyone in the government would be willing to stand up and be counted. That is why it is so urgent to initiate extra-governmental initiatives toward a vaccine, vigorously, urgently!

Good luck!

Dear Alexandra, Debra, Helen, Jerry, Phyllis, Sandra, and Scott,

Below is an additional outside comment received after our conference call today. These comments have been pretty frank -- not the kind of opinions one hears in personal briefings and in the written statements from the public we have been soliciting since last year.

Unfortunately, AIDS vaccine development is a hotly contested and politicized subject, with enormous stakes involved, both for those working in the field and for the future cohorts of persons at risk who might be saved by a vaccine that comes sooner rather than later. I share this and the previous comments in the hope that it will contribute to the efforts of our committee to understand the many issues, agendas, and stakes involved by hearing analyses and opinions that courtesy would prevent being expressed in a public or attributable fashion.

I think this will ultimately help us chart an enlightened path among such competing and contradictory voices towards insightful assessments and thoughtful recommendations for the President and Administration to help solve the epidemic.

Thanks,

Bruce

COMMUNITY COMMENT 5:

I would comment on two qualities that are largely lacking in the research program at NIH and whose absence-- or presence-- bear scrutiny, namely coordination and accountability .

It should be obvious to everyone that nothing resembling proactive coordination is a likely byproduct of a system that relies predominantly on peer-reviewed, investigator-initiated research (priir) to establish the research agenda. Coordination, after all, is a programmatic concept, designed to achieve discrete, defined objectives. As such, it connotes management of the agenda, a willingness to establish and abide by stated priorities, abridge freedom of choice, concentrate influence. In contrast, the very nature of priir is to resist programmatic influence, to shun priorities, maximize freedom, disperse influence and control. Coordination and priir are inherently adversarial concepts.

If you are convinced (I am not) that coordination is essential, it is not reasonable to look to the NIH to get a vaccine-- or to achieve any discrete objective other than to advance the frontiers of knowledge. The problem with coordination is that it can lead to failure as well as to success. Someone with sufficient experience, wisdom, insight, etc. is needed to do the coordinating right. And I'm not at all sure who is the person, or the collection of persons, with the right stuff.

Under the circumstances, we may be better off to cast our lot with priir, and with the diversity it fosters, untrammelled by program, priorities, and proactive coordination. That clearly is the instinct of Harold Varmus, Bill Paul, and the basic research community and it demands considerable respect and support for its basic research achievements. It may not get us to a vaccine any time soon, but the priir system is the only viable option for NIH.

On the other hand, if the goal be to produce an effective vaccine AS SOON AS POSSIBLE, I have serious doubts that can be done without much more accountability. As it stands, no one is accountable for the success or the failure of the vaccine effort, no person, group, committee, unit, institute, agency, or branch. No one has been accorded, and no one has accepted, responsibility to get a vaccine, not within a stated budget, not within a defined time frame, not ever. There is not a single person at NIH or elsewhere in the government whose job performance rating is determined by whether or not there is progress toward a vaccine. Nor does anyone's salary, or bonus, or job security depend on getting a vaccine sooner rather than later. Nor anyone's job classification, or grade, or prestige, or promotion.

The war against HIV is a war with troops but not generals; without managers, milestones, or measures of performance; without rewards or penalties; without carrots or sticks. No one in his right mind would adopt such an approach to design an automobile, or a toaster, or a tv, or an ad campaign, or anything else. Why in the world would we expect a system without accountability to lead to a vaccine? We should not.

So when Dr. Paul or anyone else inquires about the role his agency will play in the vaccine effort, I would ask him to tell me first what level of accountability he and his agency will embrace. How long will be needed for him and for the rest of us to decide if he has the right stuff? How will that be judged? What are the milestones? the measures? Will the mantle pass to someone else unless he gets us to a vaccine in five years? In ten? Fifteen? Twenty? What are his expectations re his own performance? What should be ours? Will he commit to get us a vaccine? When? How?

I don't think we should expect to have a vaccine until someone is willing to accept responsibility for getting a vaccine. In the short term, I see little reason for optimism that anyone in the government would be willing to stand up and be counted. That is why it is so urgent to initiate extra-governmental initiatives toward a vaccine, vigorously, urgently!

Good luck!
