A rather disturbing incident for SSS has been created by Bruce Weniger. It seems that he does not prefer to arrange or verify conference calls for the Research Committee through SSS.

He sent me an email on Oct. 15 requesting the "host" access codes for the Research conference calls in case Dr. Levine or someone from ONAP was not on the call and the committee needed to access the AT&T operator. I sent the code to both Bruce and Jane S. He the proceeded to telephone AT& T directly (without contacting me) to "verify" the arrangements for the future conference calls. Normally, AT&T will not adjust any of the calls with notifying the "arranger/host" since this affects costs, billing, etc., but since Bruce was able to provide them with the access code they made adjustments that he requested. I was quite upset with AT&T for doing this without contacting me first, since this can cause big problems for us and the accounting of our contract funds. AT&T then further "investigated" to find out which AT&T staff person had spoken with Bruce. It seems that Bruce did not dial into AT&T using the SSS (800) account number and when questioned by the AT&T operator as to why he didn't use our normal number, he informed them that he "worked" with Kimberly Farrell at SSS, leading them to believe he was a member of our staff and was authorized to make these changes.

As you can understand, this could potentially lead to big trouble for us...especially considering how SSS must carefully account for use of all contract funds, the authorization of their use, billing, etc...we must provide tons of back up documentation for any and all contract costs.. I cannot adequately account for changes -- increases or decreases -- if I am not aware of what is being arranged...

You may want to contact Bruce to "explain" to him the standard procedures everyone else on the PACHA is working under....

NNIH Reconsiders Funding Needle Exchange Study

WASHINGTON (AP) The government agreed to reconsider Thursday whether to pay for a $2.7 million study of needle exchanges in Alaska after a consumer advocate charged the experiment was "highly unethical."

The study would have recruited 600 intravenous drug users, but only allowed 300 of them to get free clean needles in a newly established needle-exchange program, said Dr. Sidney Wolfe of the consumer group Public Citizen.

The other 300 would be blocked from trading their used needles for clean ones, Wolfe wrote Thursday to director of the National Institutes of Health, Harold Varmus. They would be told to try to buy syringes from pharmacies. Then University of Alaska researchers would test members of each group to determine which became more infected with hepatitis B and the AIDS virus, diseases spread by dirty needles, Wolfe said.

But previous studies have found needle exchanges cut new cases of HIV infection by 33 percent in Connecticut and caused an eightfold drop in hepatitis in Washington.

"It is simply unconscionable for the NIH, the nation's leading health research institution, to fund a project that so clearly violates basic research ethics in a manner that the researchers themselves admit in their grant proposal 'represents the withholding of a potentially lifesaving service,'" Wolfe wrote.

By noon, Varmus had decided to review whether the study, scheduled to start in Anchorage in December, should proceed.

"This study, when it was conceived and designed, was recognized as ethically sensitive," said NIH spokeswoman Anne Thomas.

She noted that the study had been approved both by the University of Alaska's review board and the federal Office of Protection from Research Risks. But she could not immediately say why the two groups deemed the study appropriate.

University of Alaska lead researcher Dr. Dennis Fisher did not return a phone call.

The National Research Council and the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention have declared needle exchanges effective, but Congress in 1988 banned federally funded needle exchanges until the surgeon general declared they work. The Clinton administration has drawn the ire of AIDS activists for refusing to do that. Critics charge the exchanges could encourage drug use.

The scientific findings make it unethical for Alaska researchers to deny drug users the chance to use a needle exchange, Wolfe said. Most such studies compare disease rates between addicts who voluntarily use the nation's 55 privately funded needle exchanges with addicts who do not, he said.

Also, the Alaska study did not offer the addicts a highly effective vaccine against hepatitis B, he said.

About one-third of AIDS patients are infected through intravenous drug use.

Dates of Shadowing Assignment: October 9 - October 11, 1996

Executive Shadowed:
Jeffrey Levi, Deputy Director
Office of National AIDS Policy
750 17th Street, NW, Suite 600
Washington, DC 20503

Biography:
Jeffrey Levi has served as Deputy Director of the White House Office of National AIDS Policy since 1994. The Office of National AIDS Policy is part of the President's Domestic Policy Council and is responsible for coordinating the federal government's response to the HIV epidemic. Mr. Levi has been involved in AIDS policy issues since the beginning of the epidemic. From 1990 to 1994 he was director of government affairs and director of public policy and program development for the AIDS Action Council and AIDS Action Foundation. AIDS Action is the only national organization devoted solely to AIDS public policy advocacy. Mr. Levi has worked on AIDS issues since 1983, when he joined the staff of the National Gay and Lesbian Task Force as its Washington representative. He served three years as its executive director.

Outline of a typical day:

I'm not sure I would describe any of the three days I was there as "typical" from my viewpoint, but there were some standing agenda items that facilitated the Office's work on a daily basis:

1. President's Domestic Policy Council conference call: 15-minute summary of the President's activities for the day; information of concern or activity needed from Office.
2. Office of National AIDS Policy check-in meeting: 10-minute summary for Office staff of the day's meetings, conference calls, scheduling, and events. Opportunity for each staff member to discuss high-priority activities for the day.
3. Daily meeting with the Director: to bring Ms. Fleming up-to-date on activity on any of a list of standing issues related to AIDS policy (e.g., immigration, welfare reform, SSI/SSDI, housing, Office administration issues, strategy).

In addition, Mr. Levi's calendar was full of meetings that required his attendance on behalf of the Office. These included: a meeting to discuss involvement of the President and First Lady, and the Vice President and Mrs. Gore in the display of the Names Project AIDS Memorial Quilt on the National Mall; a meeting at the Office of Management and Budget with Department of Health and Human Services agencies on FY1997 AIDS funding and activities; and a meeting of the Treatment Access Subcommittee of the Presidential Advisory Council on HIV/AIDS. The only activity from which I was excluded (because of my status as a permanent career employee in the Executive Branch) was Mr. Levi's participation in the Administration's response team for the Vice Presidential Debate on October 9, 1996.

Finally, Mr. Levi kept a running list of telephone calls that needed to be made. He was on the phone much of the time that he was not actively engaged in another activity.

Notable characteristics:

Excellent oral communications skills: clear, direct, polite, sensitive (e.g., specifically reminded caller to discuss particularly sensitive issues with third party in advance of a public forum, so as to allow the third party an opportunity to prepare for public forum).

Assertive problem solver: directly follows up to get responses or results. Takes responsibility to resolve questions/issues rather than waiting for others to offer the information. Explicitly asked in meetings what the Office could do to move issues forward toward resolution.

Highly flexible: able to move easily from list of planned activities to respond to an issue that needs immediate response, and then pick up again with planned activities. Willing to assume whatever responsibilities are necessary to complete the work of the Office.

High level of technical expertise: experienced dealing with full range of issues related to HIV/AIDS policy: epidemiologic, biomedical, social, health care financing, legal, political.

Recommendation for future programs:

I would highly recommend that the USDA Graduate School contact the Office of National AIDS Policy in a formal manner to discuss future collaboration to meet the needs of EPP participants and the Office. The Office functions with only two White House FTEs (the Director and Deputy Director positions). The rest of the staff consists of permanent employees on voluntary, temporary assignments from other Agencies. The Office's obviously strong leadership brings these people together into a cohesive unit. EPP participants with knowledge of health care issues (AIDS in particular, or general issues related to health care financing, access, etc.), or with a desire to see how policy development occurs at the highest level of the Executive Branch, would benefit from such an assignment."

CDC National AIDS Clearinghouse
Educational Materials Database

NEW MATERIALS
October 16, 1996

The Clearinghouse's Educational Materials Databases contain bibliographic information about more than 14,000 brochures, videos, booklets, and other materials with education/prevention messages.

NAC ONLINE users can search these databases by selecting "Clearinghouse Databases" from the NAC ONLINE main menu. When asked to enter a database name, specify "UNPB" (which stands for unpublished materials) to search all materials, regardless of availability; "CNPB" (which stands for current materials) to search only materials currently available from the distributor; or "ANPB" (which stands for archival materials) to search only materials which are no longer available.

To access the NAC ONLINE BBS, set your communications software to dial (800) 851-7245, and set the options for 8 data bits, N parity, 1 stopbit, full duplex, and complete a new user questionnaire. Only non-profit organizations, government agencies, educational institutions, and health departments are given full access to NAC ONLINE and the NAC databases.

Over the weekend, 10 newly catalogued materials were loaded to the UNPB Educational Materials Database. This brings the total number of materials on the Database to 17,664.

AB This is a step-by-step guide to planning and evaluating community-based AIDS education and prevention programs. The book explains structured planning and evaluation processes in an effort to help the reader develop expertise in planning and evaluation at the community level. It includes sample work sheets and models designed specifically for AIDS education and prevention programs. The four types of evaluation reviewed are needs assessment, process evaluation, outcome evaluation, and causal evaluation. The causal evaluation process, including the program logic model, enables community-based groups to demonstrate the link between their activities and changes in participants' attitudes, knowledge, and behavior. Extensive worksheets and references are included.

NNIH Reconsiders Funding Needle Exchange Study

WASHINGTON (AP) The government agreed to reconsider Thursday whether to pay for a $2.7 million study of needle exchanges in Alaska after a consumer advocate charged the experiment was "highly unethical."

The study would have recruited 600 intravenous drug users, but only allowed 300 of them to get free clean needles in a newly established needle-exchange program, said Dr. Sidney Wolfe of the consumer group Public Citizen.

The other 300 would be blocked from trading their used needles for clean ones, Wolfe wrote Thursday to director of the National Institutes of Health, Harold Varmus. They would be told to try to buy syringes from pharmacies. Then University of Alaska researchers would test members of each group to determine which became more infected with hepatitis B and the AIDS virus, diseases spread by dirty needles, Wolfe said.

But previous studies have found needle exchanges cut new cases of HIV infection by 33 percent in Connecticut and caused an eightfold drop in hepatitis in Washington.

"It is simply unconscionable for the NIH, the nation's leading health research institution, to fund a project that so clearly violates basic research ethics in a manner that the researchers themselves admit in their grant proposal 'represents the withholding of a potentially lifesaving service,'" Wolfe wrote.

By noon, Varmus had decided to review whether the study, scheduled to start in Anchorage in December, should proceed.

"This study, when it was conceived and designed, was recognized as ethically sensitive," said NIH spokeswoman Anne Thomas.

She noted that the study had been approved both by the University of Alaska's review board and the federal Office of Protection from Research Risks. But she could not immediately say why the two groups deemed the study appropriate.

University of Alaska lead researcher Dr. Dennis Fisher did not return a phone call.

The National Research Council and the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention have declared needle exchanges effective, but Congress in 1988 banned federally funded needle exchanges until the surgeon general declared they work. The Clinton administration has drawn the ire of AIDS activists for refusing to do that.

Critics charge the exchanges could encourage drug use.

The scientific findings make it unethical for Alaska researchers to deny drug users the chance to use a needle exchange, Wolfe said. Most such studies compare disease rates between addicts who voluntarily use the nation's 55 privately funded needle exchanges with addicts who do not, he said.

Also, the Alaska study did not offer the addicts a highly effective vaccine against hepatitis B, he said.

About one-third of AIDS patients are infected through intravenous drug use.

It seems I've started a war with Bruce!!

Anyway in an attempt to explain -

All PACHA calls are always set up with the chair person being the "host" and I send the host access codes to you guys as well...

The problem with the last Research call being cut off was because the call was only scheduled for one-hour. It wasn't made clear to me ahead of time that they needed more time than that. For example, when Prevention provided me with their "schedule" for calls they indicated they wanted 1 1/2 hours which I arranged.

And...after the last Research problem...I now went back and scheduled all the Research calls for 2 hours. (I don't want to decrease this time in case they run over.) Also, AT&T does not charge us for time that is not used...so, it's better to schedule for more time than may actually be needed...

I think he is really overreacting...I just don't want him arranging, adjusting calls because I then can't track the charges until we receive the AT&T bill..I have to provide Linda with estimates of costs on a weekly basis...

TEXT:

MORBIDITY AND MORTALITY WEEKLY REPORT

Centers for Disease Control and Prevention

October 18, 1996

Vol. 45, No. 41

Ten Leading Nationally Notifiable Infectious Diseases -- United States, 1995

The National Notifiable Diseases Surveillance System (NNDSS) is a national passive surveillance system comprising 52 infectious diseases designated by the Council of State and Territorial Epidemiologists as reportable to CDC (1). This report is based on the Summary of Notifiable Diseases for 1995 (2) and presents the most commonly reported nationally notifiable diseases for 1995. During 1995, sexually transmitted diseases (STDs) predominated and were reported among all age groups.

The 10 most frequently reported nationally notifiable infectious diseases for 1995 were, in descending order, chlamydia, gonorrhea, acquired immunodeficiency syndrome (AIDS), salmonellosis, hepatitis A, shigellosis, tuberculosis (TB), primary and secondary syphilis, Lyme disease, and hepatitis B (2). The STDs of chlamydia, gonorrhea, AIDS, primary and secondary syphilis, and hepatitis B accounted for 87% of cases reported for these 10 diseases.

Although 1995 was the first year genital infections with Chlamydia trachomatis were nationally notifiable, this condition was the most commonly reported disease for 1995. Most cases were reported among women; infection with C. trachomatis is tested for and reported less frequently for men than for women. Rates for AIDS and TB were substantially higher among males than females. Consistent with previous surveillance data, the rate of AIDS reported among men was more than four times that for women, and for TB, nearly twice that for women. Except for AIDS, TB, and genital infection with C. trachomatis, sex-specific rates of notifiable diseases were similar.

The most commonly reported infectious diseases varied by age group. Salmonellosis and shigellosis continued to be the most common notifiable diseases reported among children aged less than 5 years (61.8 and 46.3 per 100,000 population, respectively). Among children aged 5-14 years, gonorrhea and shigellosis (rates of 21.8 and 20.1, respectively) were the most frequently reported diseases. Gonorrhea remained the most common disease reported among persons aged 15-24 years (645.0), and rates for both gonorrhea and AIDS were high among persons aged 25-44 years (162.4 and 65.3, respectively) and persons aged 45-64 years (22.3 and 27.8, respectively). Among persons aged greater than 65 years, TB was the most commonly reported notifiable disease (16.3). Age-specific data about chlamydial infections were not available for 1995.

Reported by: Council of State and Territorial Epidemiologists.
Div of Public Health Surveillance and Informatics (proposed),
Epidemiology Program Office, CDC.

Editorial Note: The findings in the Summary of Notifiable Diseases reflect only diseases that are diagnosed by health-care or laboratory workers and reported to state and local health departments, who then report to CDC. Resources available for conducting surveillance vary widely by disease (3). In addition, patterns of detection and reporting probably vary by disease, age or population group, state, and locality. Consequently, for many of these conditions, the true incidences in the United States probably are underestimated. Despite such limitations, however, these and other surveillance data are useful for monitoring trends and for determining relative disease burdens.

As part of the MMWR series, CDC will release on October 25 the Summary of Notifiable Diseases, United States, 1995 (2). This publication contains summary tables of the official statistics for the reported occurrence of nationally notifiable diseases during 1995. Data for 1995 are presented by month; geographic location; and patient age, sex, and race/ethnicity in maps and graphs for many conditions. Also included are a brief history of notifiable disease reporting, highlights of important developments in the reported occurrences of selected nonnotifiable diseases (e.g., dengue fever, hantavirus pulmonary syndrome, penicillin-nonsusceptible Streptococcus pneumoniae, and Ebola hemorrhagic fever), and data from the Public Health Laboratory Information System.

Morbidity and Mortality Weekly Report (10/18/96) Vol. 45, No. 41,

Last year, sexually transmitted diseases (STDs) represented 87 percent of all cases of the 10 most frequently reported infectious diseases in the United States, federal researchers report. According to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, the 10 most prevalent infectious diseases in the United States in 1995 were, in descending order: chlamydia, gonorrhea, HIV/AIDS, salmonellosis, hepatitis A, shigellosis, tuberculosis (TB), syphilis, Lyme disease, and hepatitis B. Rates for HIV/AIDS and TB were significantly higher among men than women, with more than four times as many AIDS cases reported in men than in women, and twice as many TB cases.

"Questions on Ethics Lead to Review of Needle-Exchange Study"
New York Times (10/18/96) P. A22; Leary, Warren E.

Amid charges that a proposed needle exchange study in Alaska is unethical, the National Institutes of Health announced Thursday that it would review the plan. The $2.7 million, three-year study at the University of Alaska at Anchorage was slated to begin recruiting patients in December. The researcher will attempt to determine whether injection drug users can reduce their risk of viral infection by exchanging their used needles and syringes for clean ones. The Washington-based Public Citizens' Health Research Group said the study was unethical because it would deny access to clean needles to half of the drug users, those in the control group. A spokeswoman for the NIH said that the study had been approved by two ethics boards, but that it would be reviewed again soon. Dennis G. Fisher, the researcher leading the study, has defended it. He pointed out that the control group would be told where to go for needles and how to get them. He explained the study design is necessary to prove that needle exchanges work.

"Biotech Firms Find Structure of Protein for Hepatitis C"
Wall Street Journal (10/18/96) P. B3; Johannes, Laura

Vertex Pharmaceuticals and Agouron Pharmaceuticals have separately identified the structure of a protein necessary to the reproduction of the hepatitis C virus, sparking a more intense competition between the two to find a drug for the treatment of hepatitis C. The discovery, published in separate articles in the Friday edition of the journal Cell, provides a starting point to develop a drug that would interfere with the protease that helps the virus to replicate. The research builds on the success of HIV protease inhibitors, but the hepatitis C virus protease may well be a more difficult target than the HIV protease, because its working end is "broader and more open," notes Agouron CEO Peter Johnson. Analyst Rachel Leheny of Hambrecht & Quist, meanwhile, predicts that an effective drug for the treatment of hepatitis C could bring in $2 million to $3 million in annual revenue.

"Merck Looks to Attack Price Variations in EU With Launch of AIDS Treatment"

Wall Street Journal (10/18/96) P. A13A; Moore, Stephen D.; Murray, Shailagh

Merck is introducing its AIDS drug Crixivan in the European market, hoping to prevent "parallel trading" of the drug between countries by selling the drug at a fixed price across the European Union (EU). The legal practice of parallel trading, buying goods in the cheapest EU states and selling them for higher prices in other places, is opposed by drug companies because it harms the market and denies patients a steady supply of medicine. While pharmaceutical makers have opposed such trade for years, they now have on their side AIDS activists, who are demanding access to powerful new drugs like Crixivan. However, EU officials have not yet been persuaded that parallel-drug trading is as detrimental as the industry claims.

"Ten-Year-Old Fraud Suit Settled for $14.5 Million"

Wall Street Journal (10/18/96) P. B5

ICN Pharmaceuticals reports that it has settled a 10-year-old class action investor lawsuit for $10 million in cash and $4.5 million in common stock. According to an attorney for the plaintiffs, the suit alleged that ICN had defrauded investors by making claims about possible effects on patients of its AIDS drug ribavirin. A New York jury rejected seven of 13 claims made in the case, but was deadlocked over the remaining six and a new trial date needs to be scheduled. A spokesman for the drug maker notes that the company "has consistently maintained that the allegations upon which it was based were false."

"Hospitals Keep Drug Packs in Case of AIDS Accidents"

Toronto Globe and Mail (10/17/96) P. A7; Coutts, Jane

Hospitals in Toronto are starting to prepare for the accidental exposure of health-care workers to HIV by keeping drugs to treat such exposures on hand. The plan is based on recommendations made by the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention in July, which call for treating HIV-exposed workers with a combination of antiviral drugs that includes a protease inhibitor. Studies in the United States have found that immediate treatment can reduce a worker's risk of developing AIDS by 70 percent. The CDC recommends that the drugs, which cost about $1,200 per person, are used only in very high-risk cases, like a deep prick from a needle that has been used on an AIDS patient. The agency said the level of risk should be balanced against the effects of the drug. The government of British Columbia has stocked every emergency room in the province with five-day starter packs of the drugs, to be available for anyone accidentally exposed to HIV.

"PM's Brother Testifies at Blood Probe"

Toronto Globe and Mail (10/17/96) P. A12; Grange, Michael

Concerns about the possibility of HIV being transmitted through the blood supply had diminished by 1987, testified Michel Chretien, co-chairman of a study about the disease with Justice Horace Krever in 1987-1988, on Wednesday. Chretien, the brother of Canadian Prime Minister Jean Chretien, was called by the province of Ontario to testify at the federal inquiry into the country's tainted blood scandal. Ontario is one of the parties that could be cited for misconduct in Krever's final report for failing to take precautions to protect the blood supply from HIV. The Ontario government called Chretien to show that little was known about AIDS, or how to protect the blood supply, at the time.

"Inside Politics: Dating Clinton"

Washington Times (10/18/96) P. A6

Members of the AIDS Coalition to Unleash Power, or ACT UP, have placed an ad in the Washington Blade, Washington, D.C.'s gay newspaper, urging AIDS activists not to support President Clinton. "He keeps toying with our affections. Do we really want another date with this man?" asks the ad.

"Physicians Try Unusual Drugs to Fight Cryptosporidium"

American Medical News (10/07/96) Vol. 39, No. 37, P. 19

Creative new therapies are being developed to treat cryptosporidiosis, the diarrhea-causing infection for which nearly 100 potential drugs have been tried. NTZ, a drug initially developed for dogs with worms, will enter final testing at the National Institutes of Health in November. AIDS patients are demanding the drug, and are importing supplies from Mexico, where it is used to treat both humans and animals. Moreover, of the first 29 U.S. AIDS patients given NTZ, one-third experienced at least some benefit. UniMed Pharmaceuticals is offering NTZ to 150 patients as an experimental therapy. Another drug is being developed using the milk produced by cows just after giving birth. The mothers' antibodies are thought to attach to Cryptosporidium and help block its spread through the intestines.

Meanwhile, the biotechnology firm GalaGen is pretreating 250,000 cows to increase their antibody production. About half of the 21 AIDS patients treated in initial testing have reported significant declines in diarrhea. The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention's Dan Colley noted, "We need to be cautious," though "we clearly need to think outside the normal" drug therapies, which have failed.

"Tosoh Says it Has Created Way to Count Viral Particles in Blood"

Nikkei Weekly (10/07/96) Vol. 34, No. 1743, P. 10

Tosoh Corp., a Japanese chemical maker, has developed a new method for measuring the number of viral particles in a blood sample. The test, which uses a special ion-exchange resin to isolate viral genes, may be used to diagnose viral infections and has the potential to be automated. The company has reported that the test can detect as few as 100 viral particles and is able to give a count if at least 10,000 particles are present. The new assay has been successfully tested on blood samples that contained HIV and cytomegalovirus, Tosoh said.

MORBIDITY AND MORTALITY WEEKLY REPORT

Centers for Disease Control and Prevention

October 18, 1996

Vol. 45, No. 41

Ten Leading Nationally Notifiable Infectious Diseases -- United States, 1995

The National Notifiable Diseases Surveillance System (NNDSS) is a national passive surveillance system comprising 52 infectious diseases designated by the Council of State and Territorial Epidemiologists as reportable to CDC (1). This report is based on the Summary of Notifiable Diseases for 1995 (2) and presents the most commonly reported nationally notifiable diseases for 1995. During 1995, sexually transmitted diseases (STDs) predominated and were reported among all age groups.

The 10 most frequently reported nationally notifiable infectious diseases for 1995 were, in descending order, chlamydia, gonorrhea, acquired immunodeficiency syndrome (AIDS), salmonellosis, hepatitis A, shigellosis, tuberculosis (TB), primary and secondary syphilis, Lyme disease, and hepatitis B (2). The STDs of chlamydia, gonorrhea, AIDS, primary and secondary syphilis, and hepatitis B accounted for 87% of cases reported for these 10 diseases.

Although 1995 was the first year genital infections with Chlamydia trachomatis were nationally notifiable, this condition was the most commonly reported disease for 1995. Most cases were reported among women; infection with C. trachomatis is tested for and reported less frequently for men than for women. Rates for AIDS and TB were substantially higher among males than females. Consistent with previous surveillance data, the rate of AIDS reported among men was more than four times that for women, and for TB, nearly twice that for women. Except for AIDS, TB, and genital infection with C. trachomatis, sex-specific rates of notifiable diseases were similar.

The most commonly reported infectious diseases varied by age group. Salmonellosis and shigellosis continued to be the most common notifiable diseases reported among children aged less than 5 years (61.8 and 46.3 per 100,000 population, respectively). Among children aged 5-14 years, gonorrhea and shigellosis (rates of 21.8 and 20.1, respectively) were the most frequently reported diseases. Gonorrhea remained the most common disease reported among persons aged 15-24 years (645.0), and rates for both gonorrhea and AIDS were high among persons aged 25-44 years (162.4 and 65.3, respectively) and persons aged 45-64 years (22.3 and 27.8, respectively). Among persons aged greater than 65 years, TB was the most commonly reported notifiable disease (16.3). Age-specific data about chlamydial infections were not available for 1995.

Div of Public Health Surveillance and Informatics (proposed),
Epidemiology Program Office, CDC.

Editorial Note: The findings in the Summary of Notifiable Diseases reflect only diseases that are diagnosed by health-care or laboratory workers and reported to state and local health departments, who then report to CDC. Resources available for conducting surveillance vary widely by disease (3). In addition, patterns of detection and reporting probably vary by disease, age or population group, state, and locality. Consequently, for many of these conditions, the true incidences in the United States probably are underestimated. Despite such limitations, however, these and other surveillance data are useful for monitoring trends and for determining relative disease burdens.

As part of the MMWR series, CDC will release on October 25 the Summary of Notifiable Diseases, United States, 1995 (2). This publication contains summary tables of the official statistics for the reported occurrence of nationally notifiable diseases during 1995. Data for 1995 are presented by month; geographic location; and patient age, sex, and race/ethnicity in maps and graphs for many conditions. Also included are a brief history of notifiable disease reporting, highlights of important developments in the reported occurrences of selected nonnotifiable diseases (e.g., dengue fever, hantavirus pulmonary syndrome, penicillin-nonsusceptible Streptococcus pneumoniae, and Ebola hemorrhagic fever), and data from the Public Health Laboratory Information System.

"Ten Leading Nationally Notifiable Diseases--United States, 1995"

Morbidity and Mortality Weekly Report (10/18/96) Vol. 45, No. 41,

Last year, sexually transmitted diseases (STDs) represented 87 percent of all cases of the 10 most frequently reported infectious diseases in the United States, federal researchers report. According to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, the 10 most prevalent infectious diseases in the United States in 1995 were, in descending order: chlamydia, gonorrhea, HIV/AIDS, salmonellosis, hepatitis A, shigellosis, tuberculosis (TB), syphilis, Lyme disease, and hepatitis B. Rates for HIV/AIDS and TB were significantly higher among men than women, with more than four times as many AIDS cases reported in men than in women, and twice as many TB cases.

"Questions on Ethics Lead to Review of Needle-Exchange Study"
New York Times (10/18/96) P. A22; Leary, Warren E.

Amid charges that a proposed needle exchange study in Alaska is unethical, the National Institutes of Health announced Thursday that it would review the plan. The $2.7 million, three-year study at the University of Alaska at Anchorage was slated to begin recruiting patients in December. The researcher will attempt to determine whether injection drug users can reduce their risk of viral infection by exchanging their used needles and syringes for clean ones. The Washington-based Public Citizens' Health Research Group said the study was unethical because it would deny access to clean needles to half of the drug users, those in the control group. A spokeswoman for the NIH said that the study had been approved by two ethics boards, but that it would be reviewed again soon. Dennis G. Fisher, the researcher leading the study, has defended it. He pointed out that the control group would be told where to go for needles and how to get them. He explained the study design is necessary to prove that needle exchanges work.

"Biotech Firms Find Structure of Protein for Hepatitis C"
Wall Street Journal (10/18/96) P. B3; Johannes, Laura

Vertex Pharmaceuticals and Agouron Pharmaceuticals have separately identified the structure of a protein necessary to the reproduction of the hepatitis C virus, sparking a more intense competition between the two to find a drug for the treatment of hepatitis C. The discovery, published in separate articles in the Friday edition of the journal Cell, provides a starting point to develop a drug that would interfere with the protease that helps the virus to replicate. The research builds on the success of HIV protease inhibitors, but the hepatitis C virus protease may well be a more difficult target than the HIV protease, because its working end is "broader and more open," notes Agouron CEO Peter Johnson. Analyst Rachel Leheny of Hambrecht & Quist, meanwhile, predicts that an effective drug for the treatment of hepatitis C could bring in $2 million to $3 million in annual revenue.

"Merck Looks to Attack Price Variations in EU With Launch of AIDS Treatment"

Wall Street Journal (10/18/96) P. A13A; Moore, Stephen D.; Murray, Shailagh

Merck is introducing its AIDS drug Crixivan in the European market, hoping to prevent "parallel trading" of the drug between countries by selling the drug at a fixed price across the European Union (EU). The legal practice of parallel trading, buying goods in the cheapest EU states and selling them for higher prices in other places, is opposed by drug companies because it harms the market and denies patients a steady supply of medicine. While pharmaceutical makers have opposed such trade for years, they now have on their side AIDS activists, who are demanding access to powerful new drugs like Crixivan. However, EU officials have not yet been persuaded that parallel-drug trading is as detrimental as the industry claims.

"Ten-Year-Old Fraud Suit Settled for $14.5 Million"

Wall Street Journal (10/18/96) P. B5

ICN Pharmaceuticals reports that it has settled a 10-year-old class action investor lawsuit for $10 million in cash and $4.5 million in common stock. According to an attorney for the plaintiffs, the suit alleged that ICN had defrauded investors by making claims about possible effects on patients of its AIDS drug ribavirin. A New York jury rejected seven of 13 claims made in the case, but was deadlocked over the remaining six and a new trial date needs to be scheduled. A spokesman for the drug maker notes that the company "has consistently maintained that the allegations upon which it was based were false."

"Hospitals Keep Drug Packs in Case of AIDS Accidents"

Toronto Globe and Mail (10/17/96) P. A7; Coutts, Jane

Hospitals in Toronto are starting to prepare for the accidental exposure of health-care workers to HIV by keeping drugs to treat such exposures on hand. The plan is based on recommendations made by the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention in July, which call for treating HIV-exposed workers with a combination of antiviral drugs that includes a protease inhibitor. Studies in the United States have found that immediate treatment can reduce a worker's risk of developing AIDS by 70 percent. The CDC recommends that the drugs, which cost about $1,200 per person, are used only in very high-risk cases, like a deep prick from a needle that has been used on an AIDS patient. The agency said the level of risk should be balanced against the effects of the drug. The government of British Columbia has stocked every emergency room in the province with five-day starter packs of the drugs, to be available for anyone accidentally exposed to HIV.

"PM's Brother Testifies at Blood Probe"

Toronto Globe and Mail (10/17/96) P. A12; Grange, Michael

Concerns about the possibility of HIV being transmitted through the blood supply had diminished by 1987, testified Michel Chretien, co-chairman of a study about the disease with Justice Horace Krever in 1987-1988, on Wednesday. Chretien, the brother of Canadian Prime Minister Jean Chretien, was called by the province of Ontario to testify at the federal inquiry into the country's tainted blood scandal. Ontario is one of the parties that could be cited for misconduct in Krever's final report for failing to take precautions to protect the blood supply from HIV. The Ontario government called Chretien to show that little was known about AIDS, or how to protect the blood supply, at the time.

"Inside Politics: Dating Clinton"

Washington Times (10/18/96) P. A6

Members of the AIDS Coalition to Unleash Power, or ACT UP, have placed an ad in the Washington Blade, Washington, D.C.'s gay newspaper, urging AIDS activists not to support President Clinton. "He keeps toying with our affections. Do we really want another date with this man?" asks the ad.

"Physicians Try Unusual Drugs to Fight Cryptosporidium"
American Medical News (10/07/96) Vol. 39, No. 37, P. 19

Creative new therapies are being developed to treat cryptosporidiosis, the diarrhea-causing infection for which nearly 100 potential drugs have been tried. NTZ, a drug initially developed for dogs with worms, will enter final testing at the National Institutes of Health in November. AIDS patients are demanding the drug, and are importing supplies from Mexico, where it is used to treat both humans and animals. Moreover, of the first 29 U.S. AIDS patients given NTZ, one-third experienced at least some benefit. UniMed Pharmaceuticals is offering NTZ to 150 patients as an experimental therapy. Another drug is being developed using the milk produced by cows just after giving birth. The mothers' antibodies are thought to attach to Cryptosporidium and help block its spread through the intestines.

Meanwhile, the biotechnology firm GalaGen is pretreating 250,000 cows to increase their antibody production. About half of the 21 AIDS patients treated in initial testing have reported significant declines in diarrhea. The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention's Dan Colley noted, "We need to be cautious," though "we clearly need to think outside the normal" drug therapies, which have failed.

"Tosoh Says it Has Created Way to Count Viral Particles in Blood"
Nikkei Weekly (10/07/96) Vol. 34, No. 1743, P. 10

Tosoh Corp., a Japanese chemical maker, has developed a new method for measuring the number of viral particles in a blood sample. The test, which uses a special ion-exchange resin to isolate viral genes, may be used to diagnose viral infections and has the potential to be automated. The company has reported that the test can detect as few as 100 viral particles and is able to give a count if at least 10,000 particles are present. The new assay has been successfully tested on blood samples that contained HIV and cytomegalovirus, Tosoh said.

PRESIDENT CLINTON: FIGHTING FOR POLITICAL REFORM

OCTOBER 21, 1996

PRINTER FONT 11_POINT_ROMAN_ITALIC

"America's challenge to those of us in this hallowed hall tonight [is] to reinvent our government and make our democracy work for [all of us]...I challenge Congress to go further -- to curb special interest influence in politics by passing the first truly bipartisan campaign reform bill in a generation. You, Republicans and Democrats alike, can show the American people that we can limit spending and open the airwaves to all candidates."

President Clinton, State of the Union

Address, January 23, 1996

PRINTER FONT 12_POINT_ROMAN

President Clinton has consistently fought to open up the political process, toughen ethics codes for government officials, and reform the nation's campaign finance laws. He has enacted the most sweeping reforms in decades, and is pushing to go even further.

THE RECORD:

Toughest ethics code ever. President Clinton imposed the strictest administration ethics code ever to close the "revolving door"-- including a lifetime ban on lobbying for foreign governments, and a five-year ban on lobbying your own agency after leaving government service. (January, 1993.)

Toughest lobbying reform in half a century. President Clinton fought for and signed the Lobbying Disclosure Act -- the toughest lobbying reform bill in 50 years. It requires lobbyists to disclose who they work for, what they are spending, and what legislation they are trying to pass or defeat. President Clinton also closed the tax loophole for lobbying, ending the tax deductibility of lobbying expenses for lobbyists and corporations. (December, 1995.)

Banning gifts from lobbyists to lawmakers. President Clinton pushed for and won a ban on gifts, meals and entertainment from lobbyists to lawmakers. (Summer, 1995.)

Making Congress live under the laws it passes. President Clinton pushed for and signed the Congressional Accountability Act, to ensure that the same laws that apply to the rest of America apply to Congress as well. (January, 1995.)

The Line-Item Veto. President Clinton pushed for and won the line-item veto, allowing the President to eliminate wasteful, special interest spending and tax breaks -- closing the door on business as usual in Washington. (April, 1996.)

Expanding voter rolls through "Motor Voter." President Clinton made it easier for more than 11 million Americans to vote by pushing for and winning the National Voter Registration Act ("Motor Voter"). It has already created the greatest expansion in voter registration since the 19th century. (May, 1993.)

Saving limits on campaign spending. President Clinton worked to defeat the effort by Senators Dole and McConnell to effectively end presidential spending limits by repealing public funding for presidential campaigns. (May, 1995; May, 1996.)

PUSHING FOR BIPARTISAN REFORM:

Strongly endorsed McCain-Feingold bill to ban PAC's and "soft money." President Clinton has publicly and repeatedly urged passage of the bipartisan McCain-Feingold bill, to limit campaign spending, end the "soft money" system, ban PAC's, and give free and discounted broadcast time to open up the airwaves to candidates. (February, 1996.)

Tried to appoint bipartisan commission with Speaker Gingrich. President Clinton publicly shook hands and agreed with House Speaker Newt Gingrich to appoint a bipartisan commission on campaign finance reform, and asked two prominent Americans to get the commission started, although the Speaker did not follow-up on this agreement. (June, 1995.)

SPEAKING OUT FOR REFORM:

"I have...strongly supported campaign finance reform... if you want to cut the costs of campaigns, you have to open the airwaves, because what drives the costs of campaigns are the costs of advertising on television, radio, newspaper, mass mailings... For every one of you who stood up here and asked a question tonight, I promise you, there's 100,000 Americans who say, 'I wish I could have asked that question'...we have to change the nature of politics."

President Clinton, San Diego Presidential Debate,
October 16, 1996

"We have...passed political reform, the line-item veto, the motor voter bill, tougher registration laws for lobbyists, making Congress live under the laws they impose on the private sector, stopping unfunded mandates to state and local government. We've come a long way; we've got one more thing to do. Will you help me get campaign finance reform in the next four years?"

President Clinton, Democratic National Convention,

August 29, 1996

PRINTER FONT 12_POINT_ROMAN

"Influence groups too often promote their own interest at the expense of the public interest. Too often they operate in secret. Too often they have special privileges ordinary Americans don't even know exist...If we truly believe in a government that puts ordinary Americans ahead of the powerful and privileged, then we must act and act now."

Subject: Problem definition -Reply

Aimee-

Your write-up looks great to me, the only real problem I think we face is defining quality!

All of the reading I have been doing alludes to two aspects of health care quality, something that is very subjective, (1) patient satisfaction with treatment and (2) health outcomes (mortality, morbidity, functional status, quality of life) for specific indications. What do you think of the following?

quality: providing the necessary diagnostic tests and treatments that already are known to lead to good health outcomes and that also satisfy patient expectations.

I really like your expanded definition. It mirrors the background info I compiled. I will try to work the two together by Thursday. I have supported what you wrote with information on the number of individuals under managed care today. I use cites from the extensive JAMA study finding the impoverished and elderly have poorer physical and mental health outcomes under managed care vs. FFS and the 1995 Common Wealth Fund (an independent group) Study finding poor perceptions of and satisfaction with care for low income managed care patients vs. FFS patients. I also have a JAMA meta-analysis, cited by AAHP, that finds no difference between managed care and FFS. I have included the rate of conversion to managed care for Medicaid and Medicare. Finally, I noted the current trends, both toward state legislation (400 new pieces of legislation introduced this year) and toward increasing demand for quality measures by sponsors, Medicare, and other purchasing agents.

Do you think this is too much??

I am hesitant to use the graph on page three - only because it brings up problems with managed care that we are not really addressing, or that we are not addressing at that level - such as directly addressing preventative care. But I'm open. Off the cuff, I would be inclined to do a similar chart using the three problems of managed care cited in the problem definition.

Also, for our policy objective - I have come up with the following.

policy objective: To ensure a minimum level of quality care in the managed care setting for all plan members.

Any thoughts?

Thanks again for the consumer bill of rights, I have found it very useful. I Hope I haven't taken too much of your time - See you Wednesday.

Chris

If staying on in another capacity is not likely to work out, I will need to be able to talk with some specificity with potential funders (for some independent policy work) by mid-November -- in order to have some projects in place by the first of the year. Don Baer - Message

Undescoring vision for 21st century & plan to lead us there.
Drawing more contrast between himself & his opponent. Making clear there is a real practical consequence to the vote. Look at his closing statement from the final debate for talking points. Issues like Education, welfare to work, & all family values issues, crime, youth crime in particular, finishing the job of welfare reform.

New report from Dept. of Education on how well the new direct lending program has worked. Will have more college loans if he is elected.

Daytona - Welfare reform, may have some announcement to be made there w/ a welfare to work program.

Values/family community issues message will start in Birmingham, Grumman factory in Lake Charles & then in New Orleans.

Atlanta, large youth rally hooked up throughout the country.

He'll make a strong contrast point where he is & where the opponent is on education.

No real hot news. Continuing to press the old themes.

End of Call 11:15am.

Meg--the agenda looks good. One comment: we need to be careful about how we articulate this issue -- we have only short-term data on the impact of protease inhibitors. We certainly need to be careful about not reopening the case definition at this time.

Two related issues we may want to raise:

(1) It would be useful to discuss what is happening with the DA&A recertification process. There are many people with HIV who got their original eligibility through DA&A but also need SSI because of their HIV.

(2) About a month ago our office did a conference call between client services managers of some of the AIDS service providers and SSA to discuss the problems some of them are experiencing getting presumptive eligibility for their clients. SSA is supposed to be following up with some training and guidance for their field offices. It would be good to get a status report.

Thanks for all you help on this.

The meeting on AIDS disability will take place in the New Executive Office Building at 725 17th Str, NW in room 9104 from 2-4. The purpose for the meeting is to discuss current disability policy with respect to AIDS and how this might change given the protease inhibitors.

There will be representatives from the White House Office of National AIDS Policy, HCFA, SSA, ASPE, ASMB and OMB.

The agenda will include:

Clinical and Medicaid Policy Context

SSA statistics for People with AIDS (PWA)

How many people does SSA estimate will be on SSI and SSDI who are disabled due to HIV/AIDS in FY 98?

How much will be spent on an aggregate basis in SSI and SSDI on the HIV/AIDS population in FY 98? How much is spent on a per capita basis?

Please describe collaboration between HCFA and SSA in terms of AIDS policy and baseline estimation.

Could SSA estimate the change in expenditures and enrollment of changes in disability policy?

Current Disability Policy for People with AIDS

What are the current disability policies for AIDS?

Should AIDS still be considered a permanent disability leading to death or should it be considered a nonperment disability, given the new Protease Inhibitor drugs?

Please describe the continuing eligibility review process for AIDS beneficiaries. What is the periodicity of the reviews? How might this be impacted by the changes in AIDS therapy (i.e. disability cycling)?

For how long are PWA typically eligible for SSI and SSDI? How often are redeterminations actually done?

Current Work Incentive Policies

Please explain the policy allowing Medicare or Medicaid coverage to continue after entitlement to SSDI or SSI ends.

How many people are using the 1619(a) and 1619(b) programs? How many could be eligible for it who are not taking advantage of it? How many are HIV-positive?

What type of outreach is done to attract people into the 1619(a) and (b) programs?

Good News: We are not doing another weekly before the election.

Bad News: The President has asked for daily briefing memos. Per attached, we should send worthy items in paragraph format to COS office by 3:00 pm every day.

Leanne will consolidate. Please save any entries on the i drive by 2:00 pm each day -- save as daily.[your initials] -- and send Leanne an e-mail when you've done so.

All -- Carol asked that we err on the side of providing too much info.

JBA and Diana -- Carol asked that you do a paragraph on this morning's meeting, noting that you met w/family service agencies before they met w/WP and noting their concerns.

Jill -- Carol will forward daily updates on her trip activities in the evenings for inclusion in the following day's report.

(2) Reference the drug meeting earlier this year -- the purpose is similar: demonstrate that the President is engaged in leading the work of the administration on the issue

(3) List some of the specific folks who would be included -- both Cabinet and non. Our old request on this topic listed specific people.

MEMORANDUM TO THE PRESIDENTIAL ADVISORY COUNCIL ON HIV/AIDS

FROM: Patricia S. Fleming, National AIDS Policy Director

SUBJECT: Assistance to Native Americans under the Ryan White CARE Act

Many of you have expressed concern about the recent developments regarding Federal assistance to organizations serving Native American populations under the Ryan White CARE Act. My office has worked closely with the Department of Health and Human Services and the Health Resources and Services Administration to resolve this issue.

For the past five years, the National Native American AIDS Prevention Center (NNAAPC) has received assistance under the Ryan White CARE Act through two grants awarded under the Special Projects of National Significance (SPNS) program. These grants have enabled NNAAPC to establish a network of case management programs to serve Native Americans living with HIV. Earlier this year, NNAAPC applied for a third SPNS grant but that application was recommended for disapproval by an external peer review panel. As a result, NNAAPC was not awarded one of the 19 SPNS grants recently announced by HHS.

HHS, HRSA, and ONAP agreed that it was important to find ways to continue to support the case management work being done by NNAAPC. Through some very hard work by HRSA, a plan has been developed to support NNAAPC and its 10 sites around the country. While the details are still being sorted out with NNAAPC, the following is the basic plan:

- o NNAAPC will be permitted to utilize $85,000 in unobligated funds to support its center in Oakland and Oklahoma until January 31, 1997;
- o HRSA will provide an additional $405,000 in transitional assistance to NNAAPC to enable it to meet its contractual obligations to provide case management services until January 31, 1997;
- o In November 1996, HRSA will issue a Request for Applications to "ensure the ongoing availability of services for Native American communities to enable such communities to care for Native Americans with HIV disease." A total of $1 million will be made available for this RFA under the SPNS program. An award or awards will be made on a competitive, peer review basis in January 1997.

I want to thank Jeremy Landau and other members of the Advisory Council who expressed concern about this matter and provided assistance to this office, HHS, and HRSA in developing a flexible, workable solution. I especially want to thank Carole laFavor for her input, her determination, and her passion in this matter.

I just wanted to touch base with you about the Mathematica Medicare/HIV study. I am happy to be the heavy on this -- but someone -- ASPE, OMB, or ONAP -- needs to make sure we are fully briefed on the Mathematica study well in advance of the release at APHA so we can discuss how it is presented and how we deal with the budgetary/political implications of their findings. Let me know...

I have looked at the scheduling request and have the following thoughts:

- (1) this isn't a "Cabinet meeting" technically. People will react negatively to that term. Instead say "Meeting with Agency Heads and Cabinet Members" -- both in the request and in the purpose and background sections.
- (2) Reference the drug meeting earlier this year -- the purpose is similar: demonstrate that the President is engaged in leading the work of the administration on the issue
- (3) List some of the specific folks who would be included -- both Cabinet and non. Our old request on this topic listed specific people.

MEMORANDUM FOR PRESIDENTIAL ADVISORY COUNCIL MEMBERS

FROM: Patsy Fleming

RE: USAID Management and Staffing

DATE: October 16, 1996

Yesterday I attended a meeting convened by Brian Atwood, Administrator of the U.S. Agency for International Development (USAID). He made a commitment that the agency would address the issues you raised in your resolution during the September Presidential Advisory Council meeting.

Administrator Atwood underscored the importance of the HIV/AIDS program and stated that it would continue to be an important priority for the Administration. He also focused on the staffing issue, noting that 9 of the 12 designated HIV/AIDS staff positions had already been filled. The remaining three positions, including that of Chief of the Division, are expected to be filled by the end of the year.

I wanted to inform you of this progress.

Problem Statement:

There is increasing public debate about the apparent disparity between the quality of health care offered by managed care programs and traditional fee

-for

-service plans. There is increased public pressure for the government to resolve this problem.

What do we mean by managed care? We are essentially talking about an approach that changes the financial equation between provider and consumer. Under managed care plans, providers are offered a flat fee -- known as a capitated rate -- to provide for all the care an individual might need (with some exceptions); under a traditional fee

-for

-service plan, providers are reimbursed based on the services they provide. Put differently: quote from Finkelstein, et al.:

Unlike traditional insurance, managed care combines the roles of insuring against risk and arranging or providing for the actual delivery of medical care. Under the traditional insurance system, there was a clear distinction: providers delivered care and insurance companies paid at least a portion of the charge. Patients perceived that physicians were focused primarily on treating their health needs. Under the new system, providers generally work for or are under contract with the managed care plan, which not only acts as the insurer by bearing the risk; but also, sets the rules under which care is delivered to patients. Today's managed care patients may perceive that their physician has two clients: the plan and the patient.

The trend toward managed care, in both public and private settings, has been offered as a more efficient -- and less expensive -- way to deliver health care. While the conversion to managed care has sometimes been shown to reduce cost, there are others who suggest this trend reflects that managed care companies tend to have among their clients those who need less costly forms of care. (For example, demonstration programs putting Medicaid clients into managed care have usually excluded those with disabilities.)

The number of people in managed care has increased dramatically over the last several years. In 1991, 47% of those with employment based insurance were in some form of managed care; in 1994 that increased to 65%. The increase is more profound in Medicaid: 14% in 1993, 23% in 1994, xx% in 1995.

To repeat, the fundamental difference between managed care and fee

-for

-service is the discretion given both patients and treating physicians in choosing health care options. Managed care plan managers define limits on treatment options (with difficult appeals processes when patients or providers wish to challenge it) and often offer providers financial incentives to limit care. Because this is the only plan their employer offers or their Medicaid program limits their switching options, the capacity for individuals to switch plans based on dissatisfaction with care is not a natural limit on the plans.

There are a number of studies suggesting problems in the quality of health care delivered by managed care plans -- the most recent being (cite JAMA), as well as consumer dissatisfaction with managed care (Commonwealth Fund). While these have not gone without challenge from the managed care industry, the perception is firmly entrenched in the political arena that this is a problem in the health care system -- even as public policy continues to drive more people into managed care under both Medicare and Medicaid.

To date, there have been several approaches taken to this problem. At the state level, 33 states passed legislation regulating HMOs in some way in the last year; New York State passed a comprehensive consumer bill of rights; [add outcome of CA initiative] and the Congress passed legislation restricting one HMO practice -- setting minimum hospital stays for childbirth to eliminate so -called "drive by" deliveries. In addition, the President has created an Advisory Council on Health Care Quality and Consumer Protection [verify name], designed to address this issue in a more comprehensive way.

This is a problem. It is more than perception, given the number of studies that have suggested that there are better health outcomes and greater consumer satisfaction (the two are not necessarily the same) in fee

-for

-service plans than in managed care plans. However, this runs up against a competing problem:

cost containment in the health care setting. Clearly any analysis of this problem must be particularly cognizant of the financial implications to the public and private sectors. The options we will consider as potential strategies for addressing this problem reflect different analyses for the cause of the problem as well as different philosophies. For example -- is the disparity caused by a lack of competition among HMO providers as there is among fee

-for

-service providers? Will an ever increasing (and more middle class) population in managed care provide a natural correction as they advocate for themselves within the system? Is it a money problem -- do reimbursement rates diminish quality? Is this a problem to resolve at the federal or state levels?
