Message Creation Date was at 14-NOV-1996 10:45:00

This year's budget process has not allowed the time for the formal Director's reviews involving White House staff that we have done in the past. Therefore, Frank wanted each of the PADS to invite the relevant folks to sit down and review our recommendations for how we would meet the budget targets for the agencies in our portfolios. To do this, I'm inviting you to a meeting next Tuesday, November 19, from 10-11:30 AM. We'll convene in Room 248.

If there is someone else in your office who should be invited (instead of, or in addition to, yourself), or if I have left a relevant White House office off this list, please let me know. Also, please confirm your plans to attend by e-mail or phone to my assistant, Sarah Bianchi, at 55178.

I'll look forward to seeing you next week.

Also, Nancy Ann is meeting with AIDS Action today at 5 and asked that I attend. I will do so -- but you can page me when you are ready to begin the strategy discussion, if you need me for that.

This year's budget process has not allowed the time for the formal Director's reviews involving White House staff that we have done in the past. Therefore, Frank wanted each of the PADS to invite the relevant folks to sit down and review our recommendations for how we would meet the budget targets for the agencies in our portfolios. To do this, I'm inviting you to a meeting next Tuesday, November 19, from 10-11:30 AM. We'll convene in Room 248.

If there is someone else in your office who should be invited (instead of, or in addition to, yourself), or if I have left a relevant White House office off this list, please let me know. Also, please confirm your plans to attend by e-mail or phone to my assistant, Sarah Bianchi, at 55178.

I'll look forward to seeing you next week.

Jeff,

I haven't heard anything official, but the AIDS rumour mill is spinning furiously. Thought I would check in and ask you directly - the word is that you've given notice that you're leaving in a few weeks and that Patsy is publicly announcing today that she's going to leave her post.

Any truth to these? (You're not even waiting around until our next council meeting in December - I'm hurt...)

Where next for you (assuming this is true)? How about Patsy? Any inside scoop on replacements?

I hope we'll get a chance to sit down sometime over coffee and debrief on this -- you probably have some great stories and, I hope, some ideas and directions on where to go with things that you couldn't share in your present position. I have to say that, while I understand how frustrating and exhausting the position must be, I'd rather you were staying. Your departure will be a huge loss -- one of the few people inside asking the right/hard questions and really working for answers.

Likewise for Patsy -- the office is, I fear, bound to chew people up and spit them out -- high expectations, little real power to do anything. I know she's been exhausted by the while thing, but she really deserves credit for trying as hard as she has and hanging in there while being totally outgunned in the grand scheme of Washington power struggles.

I, of course, would be quite happy to hear that none of this is true.

Phone (802-863-7572) or e-mail me

Talk with you soon -

TEXT:

I have no strongly held views on the rest of the comments. But here is my reaction to them -- starting with the fourth bullet under Care on page 4:

4. It is possible to change the goal to ensure that all people living with HIV have access to care and services, including housing....

5. Good point.

1. No. This requires clearance. In the past we have block granted HOPWA into a larger program; we don't know what our legislative proposal will be this year.

2. No. The numbers we have are all we can get cleared. And what is the difference between more than 50% and 53% -- since all the numbers are made up.

3. Did that in earlier discussion.

4. No. We're going to eliminate income eligibility requirements for Medicaid????

5. No. This would be a new issue for clearance.

6. No. We should not say our own rules changes are threatened; I also think people should think twice about revisiting these rules in any way -- overblown optimism about protease may make it harder to get disability.

Page 6:

1. Reference to the President's health care quality advisory council would address this concern.

2. The first sentence in the text already says this.

3. #1 would address this also.

4. Good point -- but would this need clearance?

5. Maybe -- but I think this would need clearance and is not that big an issue -- can this be covered by the advisory council above?

6. Bullshit rhetoric. But -- it could be addressed by repeating the litany about ADA on page 27, column 2 as is mentioned on the previous page re ADA accomplishments.

7. No.

8. No. No. No.

Page 7:

1. No.

2. No.

3. Yes, we're doing it.

4. I think this applies more to prevention than to care. It could be added to the dissemination of prevention models on page 34 about this being a multi-faceted communication -- from government to groups from groups to government and among groups.

5. No.

I am in paging distance until about noon. Will probably check in before then.

Have fun!

I'm sorry, I could kick myself. I think you've done an extraordinary job at the AIDS office, and I should have brought it up on the conference call today so that you could get some of the accolades that you deserve. You've been incredible, and I know we (the Council) and I personally haven't always been a joy to deal with. Thanks for everything.

Rumors are true...I will be leaving at Thanksgiving (seems an appropriate time) and Patsy has announced she will leave when a successor is chosen sometime next year.

Thanks for your kind note...I would love to sit down and talk with you; it's been an interesting time. I especially appreciate your comment about my willingness to ask hard questions, which, as you can imagine, is not always appreciated (on the inside or outside). One thing I have learned: it is a lot easier to ask the hard questions on the outside.

I have no very specific plans...I am ready for a new role, am not averse to government service if the right thing came along -- but neither am I ready to sit and wait during what looks likely to be a very long transition. In the meantime, I will be taking December off -- and figuring out a new place from which to push these issues.

It's been a pleasure working with you -- and I am sure we will continue to do so in our new roles.

You can reach me after Thanksgiving at home: 202-291-0277 or by e-mail: 74551.2202@compuserve.com.

Hi Bopper,

How are you?

Despite a number of attempts, we still have not been able to make progress on the Forum funding issue via Eric's office. At last hearing, they feel that Dr. Lee would need something "in writing" verifying/detailing the VP's commitment. Jack tried to get the issue on the agenda of this week's inter-agency AIDS meeting; however, that meeting has been cancelled. I'm going to NYC for the APHA meeting today. It might be worth your talking with Jack about where to go from here, as I know we need to resolve this issue in a timely fashion. Let me know what you think.

Take care,

Mark

Hi! What a surprise to hear from you! Thanks for the kind words. Neither Elise nor I are really "out front" kinda gals - but we hoped that the article would provide an educable moment for folks.

I'm truly sorry to hear that you're leaving the Policy Office. For all of us who do this work and the many people living with HIV disease - your departure will be a significant loss. Although it was brief and designed not to succeed (b)(6) I am honored to have worked with you.

I have faith that you will land in a place where your knowledge and compassion (and your HUMOR!) will continue to make a difference and make things better.

Through the transition - remember to be gentle with yourself and take care.

What a wonderful story in today's paper...role modeling for the world, complete with coping with the sadness as well as the joys in our lives.

Hope you are doing well...I am leaving here a week from today -- time for a change, not sure yet what that change is -- but it's time!

Best,
Jeff

Carol--

This may be a lot more than you asked for, based on this morning's staff meeting. But this is relevant to the discussion, and is something that I was preparing to leave with you as some thoughts about the AIDS office when I leave next week.

A few caveats: these are my opinions, I have not discussed this with anyone else in this office; my guess is that Patsy would disagree with some of the assumptions here. This is also an attempt to be honest about what we have accomplished and what we haven't -- without casting judgment on anyone involved. (I should also note that from the beginning, within the community, I argued against the notion of an "AIDS Czar" -- with all the trappings that implies; my view remains the same and this reflects that view.)

In its current incarnation, this office has five roles: (1) serving as a community liaison -- a lightning rod for the community's concerns and being visible within the community (which is different from the bully pulpit role mentioned below); (2) assuring adequate attention to HIV in the budgetary process; (3) assuring appropriate policy responses; (4) attending to the Advisory Council; and (5) serving as a "bully pulpit" to raise the country's awareness about HIV/AIDS and to demonstrate to the general public the Administration's special commitment to this issue. (Note: this last item may not have been our view, but it was a clear expectation of the community that keeps recurring when it is critical of our office.)

I think we have been largely successful in all but the last area. The community's expectation of the bully pulpit role was never achievable -- either having what they consider to be a major personality capable of commanding media attention on his/her own, or having the President be more involved on a routine basis with this issue. I think the community has learned from the first term the value of the substance of what this office does -- and as they respond to a search for new leadership there will be a variety of viewpoints about what this office should look like (from wanting the functional equivalent -- including all the staff -- of the Drug Czar -- to a more modest (and appropriate) policy operation).

I think there are at least three options for how to structure this office in a second term:

(1) Increase the prominence of the director. This would essentially retain the current structure, but recruit someone who is more of a public person. Very few people come to mind -- someone like Gerry Studds might fit the bill as a high political person who would be seen by the community as able to be more aggressive in internal deliberations. He would obviously bring great credibility within the community.

(2) Keep the current structure in place and recruit a director who has solid HIV policy experience (preferably some government experience) whom the community would respect, the bureaucracy would know and respect -- but might not command the kind of attention in the media that a former member of Congress would.

(I remain unconvinced that the visibility in the media role is as critical as some feel, so this would not bother me that much.)

For example, there are several excellent state AIDS directors who, if they had a deputy with some Washington experience, could do a very credible job.

(3) The heretical approach. I firmly believe that the real work of this office can be done with a very small staff and that, in fact, a separate "office" is not necessarily the best approach, especially given our successes of the last four years. In the first term we needed to establish with clarity the priority HIV must have throughout the Administration -- from a budgetary and a programmatic standpoint. I think those goals have been achieved, both within the government and in the eyes of the community. In a second term, I think the substantive issues we are going to be facing that will require time and new ideas are much more closely related to more general issues being addressed within the DPC. For people with HIV, the key issues in the next year or two will be the future of Medicare and Medicaid, how we make the disability system friendlier to people able to go back to work, etc. -- issues for which there needs to be an HIV voice, but not a separate voice. In fact, that would be counterproductive and what the AIDS

-specific staff should be doing is linking the AIDS community to the larger communities working on these issues, rather than identifying separate agendas and approaches to common problems.

This is heresy to some. But I think from a policy standpoint, this is the way we should go. How could we do it?

First, I would consider limiting the AIDS staff to two substantive policy people, one person working on liaison to the Advisory Council (and somewhat to the community -- though that should be a shared function based on issue area), and a support staff person shared by the three others. (The Advisory Council person could be an HHS FTE, since the Council is chartered by HHS.) This would permit continued addressing of major policy areas (without detailed meddling in day

-to

-day functions of the agencies), continued involvement in budgetary issues, communication with the community, and, if travel and speaking engagements are shared, more than adequate outreach and visibility with the community. This would not permit some of the more involved work with the press that this office has done -- but there might be something healthy about having this better integrated with the White House press office anyway. (This would not rule out the use of temporary agency representatives and/or detailees to work on specific projects as they arise.)

Second, I would integrate these folks as equal members of the DPC staff -- rather than a separate office. While some would argue that not having a separate office is a downgrading -- if the staff are working within the complex, this can be presented as a step up in status. (Besides, we can always call this team an office, as long as substantively it operates differently.) And physical integration and proximity would increase the likelihood of the cross

-fertilization with broader policy issues that is in the interest of good HIV policy and in the interest of adding the HIV constituency to the coalitions supportive of the Administration's efforts in other areas.

I need to emphasize that this might require something of a sales job within the community -- but I also think that there are some very substantive people for whom this kind of structure might make working here more attractive.

This is a quick version of my thoughts. I should close by saying that I also believe that continuing the current structure can also be successful -- this is just one other way of looking at it.

Questions:

1. Describe in no more than three phrases your job description as you understand it.
2. How would you redesign your job if you had the option?
3. How can the DPC better function:
 - a) internally to DPC itself;
 - b) with other divisions of the White House;
 - c) with government entities outside the White House, including other levels of government outside DC; and
 - d) groups/individuals outside government.

MFormer Dole Chief Of Staff Named Harvard Dean

BOSTON (AP) Sheila Burke, who served as Bob Dole's chief of staff for 10 years, has been named executive dean at Harvard University's John F. Kennedy School of Government.

Burke, a 45-year-old California native, will help direct the college's management strategy and assist with curriculum development and projects concerning the role of government.

Burke will answer to Dean Joseph S. Nye, Jr. She will also teach courses. She starts on Dec. 2.

"I look forward to joining this dynamic community of scholars and practitioners," Burke said in a statement released by the college Wednesday.

Burke joined the office of Sen. Dole as a legislative assistant in 1977. In 1985, she was named deputy chief of staff, and Dole made her his first chief of staff in 1986. She was responsible for managing all aspects of Dole's office.

Burke, a trained nurse and longtime medical school instructor, was Dole's personal staff person on health, welfare and social security issues, according to the statement.

Richard and Greg have given you the latest (and last) incarnation of the National AIDS Strategy. It has minor changes from the last version you saw -- putting in final FY 1997 numbers and incorporating some language changes (not policy changes) suggested by the Advisory Council and some of the community groups. The plan -- to get this baby to bed for World AIDS day with a presentation to the President.

TEXT:

Just an F.Y.I....(and I quote from Ben "....well I'll just take this up with the White House.")

Ben is quite upset...he wants to travel to Philadelphia a few days prior to coming to DC for the December PACHA meeting. He doesn't want to have to pay a standard coach fare for this travel and asked if NIH would authorize his travel to Philadelphia at the Government rate and he would then "reimbursed" OAR for this amount. Unfortunately this is not legal. Since the PACHA meeting is not in Philadelphia, there is no justification for authorizing the government fare to Philadelphia (not to mention the fact that there isn't a mechanism in place for him to "reimburse" OAR). I told Ben this and suggested he first travel to DC a few days early and then make his own arrangements to Philadelphia and back. This is not the answer he wanted to hear.

What Ben is predicating this all on was that he was able to travel to Philadelphia and then come to DC in September -- but the contract carrier was United in September and the fare SF to DC to SF was more expensive than SF-Phila-DC-SF (obviously this was a dangerous precedent).

You may also hear a few other rumblings from other San Fran. PACHA members -- the contract carrier is now American (not United) and most of them are refusing to take American. I have told them that unfortunately as a Federal Employee using Government money, they must use the contract carrier (unless than can provide some justification why they can't travel on the American flight)....or, there is always the option of making their own travel arrangements.

I just wanted to keep you updated...

Just an F.Y.I....(and I quote from Ben "....well I'll just take this up with the White House.")

Ben is quite upset...he wants to travel to Philadelphia a few days prior to coming to DC for the December PACHA meeting. He doesn't want to have to pay a standard coach fare for this travel and asked if NIH would authorize his travel to Philadelphia at the Government rate and he would then "reimbursed" OAR for this amount. Unfortunately this is not legal. Since the PACHA meeting is not in Philadelphia, there is no justification for authorizing the government fare to Philadelphia (not to mention the fact that there isn't a mechanism in place for him to "reimburse" OAR). I told Ben this and suggested he first travel to DC a few days early and then make his own arrangements to Philadelphia and back. This is not the answer he wanted to hear.

What Ben is predicating this all on was that he was able to travel to Philadelphia and then come to DC in September -- but the contract carrier was United in September and the fare SF to DC to SF was more expensive than SF-Phila-DC-SF (obviously this was a dangerous precedent).

You may also hear a few other rumblings from other San Fran. PACHA members -- the contract carrier is now American (not United) and most of them are refusing to take American. I have told them that unfortunately as a Federal Employee using Government money, they must use the contract carrier (unless than can provide some justification why they can't travel on the American flight)....or, there is always the option of making their own travel arrangements.

I just wanted to keep you updated...

We had only one comment. On p. 28 in the second paragraph the second sentence should be changed to:

Individuals who receive Social Security Disability Insurance (SSDI) benefits for 29 months including a five month month waiting period are eligible to receive Medicare benefits.

The underlined parts are new.

TEXT:

I know that you have had an exchange with SSS about your travel to the Council meeting. Please know that they are working as hard as they can to be as flexible as possible...but they MUST stay within the law about government travel. And the law says that the government cannot write you a ticket for a place where there is no government business taking place. (The prior experience only occurred because the fare was cheaper at the time to send you via Philadelphia.) I know that this is frustrating, and may cost you some additional travel time if you do go to Philly, but those are the constraints under which we all must operate. Sorry about that. Let me know, in these waning moments of my time here, if you have any questions.
