>Sandy -- I think it may be a bit long, and there is nothing here that talks about the VP's personal record on the issue. Can you think of a few things that could be tied into a tight paragraph. Maybe he could incorporate some personal reference to something he did, saw, or said on this issue. Also -- you and Michael go nuts on this -- I trust your emotion. Let's be cowriters of this speech

Vice President Al Gore
International AIDS Announcement
Monday, July 19, 1999

Olivia, Welcome to America. Thank you for bringing us one of the most touching and triumphant stories of hope I have ever heard. Your mother and father must be the proudest two parents in heaven.

I am so honored to be here today to announce an important step forward in our fight together against global AIDS. ~~The AIDS epidemic is not in Africa -- it's around the world!~~
AIDS

[acknowledgments]. I want especially to thank the Congressional Black Caucus for its ever-out-front leadership in sounding the alarm about the growing epidemic of AIDS in Africa and around the world. I also want to thank AIDS Action Council, not only for its long and successful record of fighting AIDS here at home; but also for convincing so many of us in this part of the world, that we must do more to fight AIDS in the rest of the world.

There is nothing in our memory or experience that rivals the scope and scale of the crisis of AIDS in Africa. More than twelve million have already died. More than twenty million are now infected. 11,000 more become HIV positive every day. Families are falling apart; businesses are going broke; economies are collapsing; and the epidemic is galloping onward ever faster, with no slowdown in sight.. The story Olivia just told us -- that ~~tore~~ ^{suggested} out our hearts and ~~made us cry~~ ^{to bring tears to our eyes} -- multiply it by forty million. That is how many children will become orphans from AIDS in Africa over the next ten years.

This is a crisis that cries out for leadership. I am proud to say the United States is the world's leading donor for the prevention and control of HIV/AIDS in the developing world. We have spent more than $2 billion in medical research. We have committed $200 million this year alone on the development of a vaccine. And just last week, the National Institutes of

Subject: Please invited the Working Group chairs to Monday's event

Sandy--

Please make sure that the other co-chairs of the NORA International Issues Working Group are invited to Monday's event. They have all worked very hard to support the initiative and global AIDS programs in general. The event would be quite important to them.

They are:

Kim Green-Global Health Council-833-5900

Mary Lyn Field and Pam Norick- International Center for research on Women 797-0007

Amy Slemmer-Mother's Voices- (202) 624-3961

Rebecca Firestone and Megan Gottemuller- Center for Health and Gender Equity-(301) 270-1182

I also think it is very important that Jairo Pedraza-the North American community representative to the UNAIDS PCB be invited- (212) 569-6023.

Thanks--

Paul Boneberg

Mother-to-Child Transmission Prevention

Ten percent of all new HIV infections in Africa occur through mother to child HIV transmission, with nearly 600,000 infants becoming infected per year. In Africa today, for every ten children born to HIV-positive mothers, two become infected during delivery, one becomes infected through breastfeeding, and seven remain HIV-negative.

Developing methods to reduce mother-to-child transmission of HIV that are feasible in Africa is a high priority. For the past three years, multiple studies have been initiated to find realistic interventions that could be used in low resource settings. In February 1998, data from the first of these studies was released from Thailand, which demonstrated that a short course of AZT (Zidovudine) could reduce mother to infant HIV transmission by nearly 40% in non-breastfeeding infants. Even more recently, on July 14, 1999, NIH announced a joint Uganda-US study breakthrough identifying a low cost drug, nevirapine (NVP) that can reduce mother to child transmission of HIV at birth by an additional 50% as compared to the short course AZT regimen. These drug regimens are far simpler and less expensive than the antiretroviral regimens used in the United States, and potentially just as effective. These new interventions will give pregnant women an incentive to come in and receive HIV testing and counseling and if infected then receive antiretroviral treatment .

Both of these developments are extremely encouraging news. However, a host of additional issues need to be explored and addressed before this knowledge can be effectively translated into productive action. For example, to receive maximum benefit from these drugs, particularly, AZT, mothers should not breastfeed. In many areas of sub-Saharan Africa, infant formula is unaffordable and lack of clean water often make it unworkable. In some cases, babies are as likely to die from diarrhea resulting from incorrect use of formula as they are from AIDS.

The lack of health care infrastructure is also a serious issue. At least 95% of pregnant women do not know they are HIV-positive and currently lack access to the testing and counseling services needed to find out. In many areas, most women deliver their children with the assistance of midwives in their homes, or in makeshift clinics unequipped for drug interventions. In the poorest parts of Africa, nearly 80% of women lack access to any kind of health care at all.

Further, the stigma of AIDS is often so great that fear of discrimination, violence and abandonment dramatically restrict the ability of women to make safe choices. In cultures where breastfeeding is the norm, women who choose not to breast feed are assumed to be HIV-positive, often with dire consequences. Recently, a woman in South Africa with HIV went public with her status and was stoned to death by her neighbors. Countless other women and children have been left destitute after their husbands discovered, or decided, they were HIV-positive.

These technical and ethical challenges must be addressed urgently, so that these exciting

This initiative will pursue a variety of strategic opportunities for challenging other partners to join in an enhanced effort, including:

- Multi-lateral Partners Meeting On September 7, 1999, First Lady Hillary Rodham Clinton will convene a meeting of donors, The World Bank, UNAIDS, international foundations, CEOs and others to discuss how we can best enhance and coordinate our AIDS efforts in Africa and around the world.
- African Leaders Summit By the end of the year the National Security Council in conjunction with the Office of National AIDS Policy will promote an AIDS summit for select African Heads of State to address the critical need for political leadership in addressing this pandemic. Topics will include the economic impact of HIV/AIDS, examination of models of success in reducing the transmission of HIV, and addressing the need for increased investment in health programs. Additional topics will include AIDS care and treatment and support for children orphaned by AIDS.
- UN Conference on Children Orphaned by AIDS On December 1, 1999 (World AIDS Day), The United Nations in conjunction with the National Black Leadership Commission on AIDS, The White House Office of National AIDS Policy, The Magic Johnson Foundation and a variety of NGOs, will organize a conference to focus attention on the growing number of children orphaned by AIDS worldwide. Special emphasis will be placed on assessing the needs of orphaned children in sub-Saharan Africa and the Americas. Participants will include noted experts on the priority issues identified by UNAIDS, UNICEF, and other UN agencies.
- Business The Department of Commerce will facilitate a meeting of business leaders active in Africa to encourage them to increase their efforts to rise to the AIDS challenge. The meeting will be co-chaired by the CEO of Ford Motor Company, currently a leader in providing a variety of AIDS programs in Africa. Given the impact that AIDS is having on businesses as well as the overall economic-impact on African countries, such a meeting will seek enhanced business commitment and involvement in AIDS programs.

The Department will work with American Chambers of Commerce abroad and other business organizations to publicize the successful AIDS efforts of US firms in Africa and to support others in taking similar action. In addition, the Department will direct that there be closer coordination in Africa between Commercial Service Offices, USG agencies, and African NGOs in a united effort to promote corporate funding of AIDS programs.

- Labor The Secretary of Labor will facilitate a meeting of US and African labor leaders, and will be co-chaired by the AFL-CIO. The success of the AFL-CIO and its Solidarity Center in South Africa (supported by USAID) in working with the South African Trade Union Federations to include AIDS as
