SUMMARY: FILING AND PRESS HOTELS

TRAVEL POOL FILING THROUGHOUT THE TRIP:

CELLPHONES FOR POOL: Travel Pool will use the same cellphone instruments on the entire trip. The cells work at all trip sites with the exception of some pockets where cell service is not great in Northern Ireland.

ALL POOLERS are asked to be very conscientious about returning the cells to the Travel Pool's WH Staff escort at each site to avoid having to pay for a cellphone which is lost or missing. Thank you.

-in: Tues Nov. 28 - 5:45 PM sharp.
Andrews AFB. * Baggage Call: Deliver bags by 5 PM Monday to the WH Press Briefing Room or to press plane baggage call at Andrews AFB on Tuesday, between 6:15 AM and 7:45 AM.

FILM DROPS: Available after each scheduled event to filing.

FOOD: Coffee/water will be in filing centers and Light food will be available for purchase. If there's to be a full meal, it will be noted on schedule, for your planning purposes.

SUMMARY: FILING AND PRESS HOTELS

TRAVEL POOL FILING THROUGHOUT THE TRIP:

CELLPHONES FOR POOL: Travel Pool will have cellphones with the pool at all sites on this trip. The cells work at all trip sites with the exception of some pockets where cell service is not great in Northern Ireland. Travel Pool will be taken to hard line telephones at pool holds wherever possible for data filing purposes.

ALL POOLERS are asked to be very conscientious about returning the cells to the Travel Pool's WH Staff escort at each site to avoid having to pay for a cellphone which is lost or missing. Thank you.

THE TRIP OF THE PRESIDENT

TO ENGLAND, NORTHERN IRELAND, THE REPUBLIC OF IRELAND, GERMANY AND SPAIN

November 29 - December 3, 1995

OVERVIEW

In a five day trip to England, Northern Ireland, the Republic of Ireland, Germany and Spain, President Clinton will reaffirm the important relationships between the United States and our European Allies, conduct meetings with these countries' Heads of State regarding the situation in Bosnia and other foreign policy concerns, address U.S. troops scheduled to be deployed to Bosnia, celebrate the ceasefire in Northern Ireland with the first visit of a U.S. President to that country, and participate in a U.S./European Union Summit that will produce new agreements to forge cooperation on fighting international crime and promoting free trade.

Brief overviews of the President's events follow. Substantial background material is also attached, including: History of U.S. Involvement in the Northern Ireland Peace Process; Historical Facts on Northern Ireland; Biographies of the Belfast Roundtable Participants, an article from the Belfast Telegraph; the Speech of the President to the U.S. Conference on Trade and Investment in Northern Ireland; the List of Guests of the President; the First Lady's Schedule; and Fact Sheets on Ireland, the United Kingdom, Spain and the European Union.

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 29, 1995
LONDON, ENGLAND

In his first official visit to London since taking office, the President will, through a series of events, underscore the importance of the alliance between the United States and England and the need for our countries to continue to work together on the full range of security and economic issues.

ARRIVAL CEREMONY Heathrow Airport

On their arrival at Heathrow, the President and First Lady will be met by the Queen's Colour Squadron and then proceed to the Royal Suite to sign Her Majesty's Guest Book, before boarding Marine One enroute the Ambassador's Residence in London. There are no public events planned for the Ambassador's residence. The President and Mrs. Clinton are, however, expected to participate in a brief, private, tree planting ceremony at the residence before proceeding to Westminster Abbey for the wreath

-laying at
the Grave of the Unknown Warrior.

-LAYING CEREMONY AT THE GRAVE OF THE UNKNOWN WARRIOR
Westminster Abbey

On his arrival in London, the President will participate in the traditional laying of a wreath at the Grave of the Unknown Warrior, which honors those lost in Britain's wars and is the British equivalent of the Tomb of the Unknowns in Arlington Cemetery. The President and Prime Minister John Major will be joined for the wreath

-laying by Dean of Westminster, the Very Reverend Michael Mayne. The Dean will offer a welcome before inviting the President to lay a wreath at the foot of the Grave.
Following the wreath

-laying, the Dean will escort the President and Prime Minister on a short tour of Westminster Abbey. At the conclusion of the tour, the Dean will invite the President to sign the Distinguished Visitors' Book. No remarks by the President are planned.

PRINTER FONT 12_POINT_ROMAN_ITALIC

Background on Westminster Abbey. The original Abbey was begun in 1050 by King Edward the Confessor and consecrated on December 18, 1065. The Abbey has been rebuilt and added to at various times up to the Victorian era. The Abbey has been the setting for every coronation since 1066 and for numerous other royal occasions. It is used for worship and celebrations of national events.

Background on The Nave. This is the location of the Grave of the Unknown Warrior and memorials to many statesmen, scientists and servicemen. The Nave is 35 feet wide and 100 feet high and took 150 years to build.

The Royal Chapels. These include the Chapel of St. John the Baptist, the Henry VII Chapel, St. Edward's Chapel, the Sanctuary, and the tombs of many English monarchs dating back to medieval times. There are also many other tombs and memorials to numerous heroes, literary figures, and statesmen.

PRINTER FONT 12_POINT_ROMAN

MEETING WITH PRIME MINISTER JOHN MAJOR AND PRESS STATEMENT

The Cabinet Room, No. 10 Downing Street

The President and Prime Minister Major will participate in a working meeting at the official Prime Ministerial residence, No. 10 Downing Street. The two leaders' meeting is expected to focus on Bosnia, but will also cover a wide range of issues, including NATO expansion, the Northern Irish peace process and the Middle East.

The President and Prime Minister will deliver a joint press statement at No. 10 Downing Street following their meeting.

Biography of John Major, Prime Minister; First Lord of the Treasury. John Major has served as Prime Minister, First Lord of the Treasury since 1990. Previously, he was the Chancellor of the Exchequer from 1989

-90 and the Foreign Secretary in 1989.

Other positions he has held include Chief Secretary to the Treasury (1987

-89) and Minister for Health and Social Services (1983

-85). Major was first elected to Parliament in 1979. Major was born on 29 March 1943. He is married and has two children.

PRINTER FONT 12_POINT_ROMAN_ITALIC

Background on No. 10 Downing Street. The residence and offices at No. 10 are made up of several buildings. The famous front door on Downing Street enters into a house built in 1682 by Sir George Downing. Passing through the corridor you come to the main part of the building, originally a separate mansion built for the Countess of Lichfield, one of the children of Charles II by the Duchess of Cleveland.

PRINTER FONT 12_POINT_ROMAN

In 1732, King George II presented the house to his chief minister, Sir Robert Walpole. He declined the house as a personal gift but accepted it on behalf of the government as a residence for the First Lord of the Treasury. In fact, it is as First Lord and not as Prime Minister that Mr. Major resides at No. 10. In the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries, several First Lords preferred to remain in their own London homes. The house was then often the residence of the Chancellor of the Exchequer. Since Benjamin Disraeli moved in 1877, every Prime Minister but one has lived at No. 10 Downing Street.

PRINTER FONT 12_POINT_ROMAN_ITALIC

The Cabinet Room is the most famous room in No. 10. A long narrow apartment, it was extended to its present length in 1781, when the Corinthian columns were added. Down the center runs the Cabinet table, with a seat for each Cabinet member. The Cabinet Room and the other offices on this floor form the real working hub of No. 10.

PRINTER FONT 12_POINT_ROMAN

ADDRESS TO BOTH HOUSES OF THE BRITISH PARLIAMENT
The Royal Gallery, House of Lords

The President will deliver a foreign policy address in London in remarks to a joint meeting of both houses of the British Parliament. The theme of the President's speech will be the continued need for America's leadership in the world, in Bosnia and other important foreign policy challenges. In his remarks at Westminster, the President will underscore that our transatlantic alliance, which was forged in war, must now be transformed into an alliance for building the global peace that must follow our victory in the Cold War. The President's address will emphasize American leadership in the world and the U.S. commitment to leadership in Europe.

The President will be accompanied into the Royal Gallery by Prime Minister Major, the Right Honorable Anthony Newton, MP, The Lord President of the Council and the Leader of the House of Commons, as well as the Right Honorable the Viscount Cranborne, the Lord Privy Seal and the Leader of the House of Lords.

The President will be introduced for his remarks by the Lord Chancellor. Following his remarks, the President will be thanked by the Speaker of the House of Commons.

Buckingham Palace

The President and the First Lady will meet with Queen Elizabeth and Prince Philip for a brief discussion and tour of Buckingham Palace. Upon the President and First Lady's arrival in the Courtyard, the Queen's Band will play the Star Spangled Banner. The President and the Duke of Edinburgh, accompanied by military aides, will then inspect the Queen's Guard.

The President, the First Lady, Her Majesty, the Queen of England and His Royal Highness, the Duke of Edinburgh, will then proceed inside the Palace for their private meeting and tour.

Biography on Her Majesty, Queen Elizabeth II, Head of State. Queen Elizabeth is the 61st British monarch in a line going back 1,000 years. As head of state, temporal head of the Church of England, and Commander of the Armed Services, she takes considerable interest in affairs of state. In March 1995, she visited Northern Ireland, her first trip there since republican and unionist paramilitary groups declared cease

Purchased by George III in 1792, the house was transformed into a palace under George IV in 1825. It was Queen Victoria, however, who made the palace the primary residence of the sovereign, living here from 1837 until shortly before her death in 1901. THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 30, 1995
BELFAST AND LONDONDERRY/DERRY, NORTHERN IRELAND

On Thursday, President Clinton will make a historic visit to Northern Ireland, the first

-ever by a U.S. President, with a full day of events in both Belfast and Londonderry\Derry. The fact of his presence underscores the dramatic changes in Northern Ireland since the ceasefire last fall and the progress made so far in improving the lives of the citizens of Northern Ireland. The primary purposes of the President's visit will be to underscore the importance of the cease fire, to celebrate with the people of Northern Ireland the new era of peace, and to support their continued efforts for peace. U.S. efforts to promote trade and investment in the region are an integral part of those efforts.

ADDRESS TO THE PEOPLE OF NORTHERN IRELAND The Mackie Plant

Highlighting the importance of strengthening the economic underpinnings in Northern Ireland, and the progress that is being made integrating Catholics and Protestants in the workplaces here, the President will deliver a major speech to workers at the Mackie Plant on Springfield Road in Belfast. The theme of the President's address will be to take stock of the changes the ceasefire and peace have brought to Northern Ireland and demonstrate U.S. support for all those who are willing to take risks for peace both in Northern Ireland and around the world. The President's remarks will also reaffirm the United States' view that, just as peace brings hope for prosperity, we must bolster Northern Ireland's economic underpinnings, which give people hope for a better future, in order for peace to succeed.

The Mackie Plant is situated on the Springfield Road on a site that adjoins Protestant and Roman Catholic communities. This is an area that has suffered greatly through economic decline and violence during Northern Ireland's Troubles. In the past, the Mackie company has been criticized for not employing enough Roman Catholics in its work force. Now, however, it is widely respected for its efforts to ensure fair practices and to maintain a neutral environment where members of both communities can work together. The President has chosen to speak at Mackie to symbolize both the importance of economic investment to peace and the importance of trying to eliminate the problems of discrimination in the area.

In his remarks, the President will speak out about the importance of trade and investment in Northern Ireland, and about America's role in the Northern Ireland peace process and in promoting peace around the world.

Additional Background on the Mackie Plant. "Mackies" has been one of Belfast's major business enterprises for the last 150 years. During that time, it has supplied textile and carpet manufacturing machinery throughout the world. Although it has some sales to the U.S., most of its business now is in China and South Asia. Today, it is the last large

ROUNDTABLE DISCUSSION WITH TENANTS AND MANAGERS OF ENTERPRISE PARKS FROM ACROSS BELFAST, AND VISIT TO SHOPS
The East Belfast Enterprise Park

After the President's speech at Mackie's in West Belfast, he will visit East Belfast, a predominantly Protestant area that for a long time was identified with the engineering industries. Industrial decline, in particular the contraction of the famous Harland and Wolff shipyard, has led to a high rate of unemployment in the area. As part of the response to this problem, the East Belfast Enterprise Park was completed in 1994 following a $2 million investment by LEDU (a public sector small business development agency), the International Fund for Ireland (IFI), the Making Belfast Work initiative, and the European Regional Development Fund.

At the Enterprise Park, the President will participate in a roundtable discussion with Protestant and Catholic shop owners working out of the park in order to get a sense of what life is like in Belfast since the ceasefire. The President will talk with them about the difference the Enterprise Park has made in the area and about the importance of business investment to the ongoing peace process. Information about those participants is attached.

Of the approximately $2 million that was needed to develop the park, $685,000 was provided by the International Fund for Ireland. The U.S. appropriates $19.6 million per year to the IFI. Other contributors are Canada, Australia, New Zealand, and the EU, the largest contributor per annum.

The park is supported by the Greater East Belfast Enterprise (Shadow) Partnership, a grouping of twenty representatives from the public, private and community sectors that responds to social needs in the most disadvantaged areas of East Belfast. The Shadow Partnership includes members of the leading Unionist parties as well as representatives from the predominantly Catholic Short Strand area.

The Park has been open for business since November 1994 and it consists of 34 units ranging in size from 400 to 1500 square feet, each suitable for a variety of service and manufacturing businesses. Presently, 30 of these units are occupied, housing some 27 businesses. This workspace is supported by an administration unit providing secretarial and business support services. The company also operates a revolving business development fund under the International Fund for Ireland's Business Enterprise Program which provides modest low

ADDRESS TO THE PEOPLE OF LONDONDERRY/DERRY

Londonderry/Derry City Hall Steps

In his remarks to the people of Londonderry/Derry, the President will talk about the changes that have taken place since the ceasefire and recognize the people of Londonderry/Derry, and in particular SDLP Leader John Hume, for their efforts to rebuild and city and preserve peace. (For a biography on John Hume, please see the entry for the reception at Queens University.)

INAUGURATION OF THE TIP O'NEILL CHAIR FOR PEACE STUDIES AT THE UNIVERSITY OF ULSTER

The Minor Hall, Londonderry/Derry City Hall

President Clinton will attend a ceremony at Londonderry/Derry City Hall to inaugurate the Tip O'Neill Chair in Peace Studies at the Magee campus of the University of Ulster. The Chair at Magee, funded in part by a $250,000 grant from the America Ireland Fund, is associated with the UN University of Conflict Resolution, which is on the University of Ulster campus. The funding of the Chair is the largest financial project undertaken by the America Ireland Fund.

Tip O'Neill, the late Speaker of the House (D supportive of constitutional democracy in Northern Ireland and worked along with Senators Kennedy, Kerry, and Moynihan to stop the flow of American money and arms to support violence in Northern Ireland during 1970's and 80's.

THE CITY OF DERRY CITY RECEPTION
Guildhall, Londonderry City Hall

The President will greet the members of the City of Derry City Council at a reception in Guildhall just prior to the Christmas Tree Lighting. No remarks are planned.

PRINTER FONT 12_POINT_ROMAN_ITALIC
Background on Guildhall. Guildhall is the seat of city government and, along with the city walls, is a traditional emblem of the city. The name derives from the historical association between the city and the medieval trade guilds of the City of London. At the time of the Ulster Plantation in the early 17th Century, the guilds were given a royal charter by James I to build a walled city on the banks of the Foyle. This is also the origin of the "London" in Londonderry. The current Guildhall is the city's fourth town hall and was built in 1890 on reclaimed land just outside the Shipquay Gate of the city walls. The Guildhall was built at a time of great expansion for the city, expansion which drew significantly from the city's role as a major embarkation point for departing emigrants. In 1908, the building suffered extensive damage in a fire. In 1972, it was badly damaged by two IRA bomb attacks which were only days apart.

CHRISTMAS TREE LIGHTING CEREMONY
Outside Belfast City Hall

The President will turn on the lights of the Belfast city Christmas tree in a ceremony that will also highlight children who recently won the "Bringing Peace to Northern Ireland Letter Writing Contest." The contest, sponsored by the Belfast Telegraph, encouraged children from Northern Ireland to write to President Clinton about their hopes for peace. The two winners, a Protestant boy and a Catholic girl, will each be awarded a two

Also of note, Belfast has a sister city relationship with Nashville, Tennessee and this year the 45

? The First Lady reads excerpts from the children's letters.

? The Lord Mayor leads the crowd in a countdown.

? The President, accompanied by the two children, lights the Christmas tree.

RECEPTION HOSTED BY SIR PATRICK AND MRS. MAYHEW
Queens University

Thursday evening in Belfast, the President will attend a reception at Queens University, hosted by Sir Patrick Mayhew, Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, and Mrs. Mayhew. All of the major political leaders in Northern Ireland will be invited to attend this reception with the President. Biographies on some of these leaders are below. The President's remarks to the reception will be open to pool coverage.

Biography of Patrick Mayhew, Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (since 1992). Mayhew is the first senior British official to volunteer for post of Secretary of State for Northern Ireland. As Attorney General (1987

-Irish affairs. He was first elected to parliament in 1974. Mayhew holds master's degree from Oxford and was knighted in 1983. Born on 11 September 1929, Mayhew is married and has four sons.

Biography of Gerald Adams, President, Sinn Fein (since 1983). Gerry Adams, head of the political wing of the Provisional Irish Republican Army (PIRA), has assumed a high profile in the Northern Ireland peace process since republican and unionist cease

-fires in August and October 1994, respectively. Adams has been a member of Sinn Fein since 1964 has served as the organizations vice president during 1978

-1983. Although he was elected to Parliament in 1983, he never took his seat, which he held until he was defeated in the 1992 general election. Born in West Belfast on October 6, 1948, Adams was educated in local schools until he dropped out of school by age 17. He has authored many works including Falls Memories (1982), The Politics of Irish Freedom (1986), and Cage Eleven (1990). He is married and has one son.

Biography of Ian Paisley, Member of Parliament (since 1974). Preacher and politician, Paisley is one of the original cofounders of the Democratic Unionist Party. Paisley was a member of the European Parliament from 1979 until mid on April 6, 1926, Paisley attended the South Wales Bible College and the Reformed Presbyterian Theological College in Belfast before being ordained a Baptist minister in 1946. He later received an honorary doctorate in divinity from Bob Jones University in Greenville, South Carolina. Paisley is married and has twin sons and three daughters.

Biography of John Hume, founding member of the Social Democratic and Labor Party (SDLP) and a member of parliament since 1984. The SDLP is the largest Catholic political party in Northern Ireland. Hume was nominated for the 1994 Nobel Peace Prize in recognition of the key role he has played in advancing the peace process in Northern Ireland. Hume was born on January 18, 1937. He has a M.A. in English and French History from St. Patrick's College in Northern Ireland. From 1969 until 1973, he was a member of the Stormont Assembly, a failed attempt at powersharing in Northern Ireland. He briefly served as Commerce Secretary in 1974 before becoming a counselor to the Irish Commissioner at the EC in Brussels in 1975. Hume was an associate fellow at Harvard University's Center for International Affairs in 1976. In 1979, he took over the reins of the SDLP and became a member of the European Parliament.

Biography of David Trimble, a lawyer and former university lecturer, who won the leadership of the Ulster Unionist Party

(UUP) following the resignation of longtime James Molyneaux in August 1995. Trimble, who was born on October 15, 1944, holds a law degree from Queens University Belfast (QUB). He was called to the bar of Northern Ireland in 1969; he has also worked at QUB as a junior (1968

REMARKS TO THE PEOPLE OF DUBLIN

Outside the Bank of Dublin at College Green

The President will address the people of Ireland in a large outdoor speech in downtown Dublin, outside the Bank of Ireland. In his remarks, the President will emphasize our common roots and shared ideals for a better world, touching on the unique ties between our two nations, beginning with the tremendous emigration that followed the potato famine more than 100 years ago. Following his remarks, the President will be conferred with The Freedom of the City, Dublin's highest civic honor, by Lord Mayor Sean Loftus.

PRINTER FONT 12_POINT_ROMAN_ITALIC

Background on the Bank of Ireland. The Bank of Ireland occupies the former Irish Houses of Parliament. Architect Edward Lovett Pierce designed the building in the late 1720's. The building was largely finished at the time of Pierce's death in 1733. Substantial renovations occurred in 1792, following a fire which destroyed the commons chamber. The Bank of Ireland purchased the premises in 1803 for 40,000 pounds. Founded in 1782 as a national bank, the Bank of Ireland received a charter from King George III in 1783 similar to that held by the Bank of England. The Bank of Ireland served as the Irish Central Bank until 1943 when the Central Bank of Ireland was established.

Background on "The Freedom of the City." The Freedom of the City of Dublin is an honorary award with roots in an ancient honor. From the late 12th century until 1918, becoming a "free citizen" conferred the right to vote and significant commercial privileges. The honorary Freedom of the City was established in 1876. The ancient Freedom of the City was then abolished in 1918, to allow for a more democratic franchise. The honorary Freedom of the City is granted by the Dublin City Council in the form of a resolution and then conferred in a ceremony conducted by the Lord Mayor.

BREAKFAST MEETING WITH PRIME MINISTER FELIPE GONZALEZ OF SPAIN
Moncloa Palace

Emphasizing Spain's important role in the Atlantic Alliance and to international security, the President will begin his events in Spain Sunday with a bilateral meeting with Prime Minister Felipe Gonzalez. The two leaders are expected to address specific issues of mutual interest, including Bosnia, the Middle East peace process and trade liberalization in the Mediterranean.

Biography of Felipe Gonzalez Marquez, Prime Minister; President, Council of Ministers (since 1982). Felipe Gonzalez won his fourth consecutive term as Prime Minister in June 1993. He joined the Spanish Socialist Workers Party (PSOE) in 1964 and served as a member of its provincial committee during 1965

-70. Gonzalez was elected to parliament and became party secretary general in 1977. Gonzalez was born on March 5, 1942 in Seville. His wife, Carmen Romero, is a schoolteacher and a member of parliament. The couple has three children.

UNITED STATES/EUROPEAN UNION SUMMIT
Moncloa Palace

The President will hold a U.S.\EU Summit meeting in Madrid with Prime Minister Gonzalez and European Commission President

Jacques Santer, the highlight of which will be the announcement of New Transatlantic Agenda -- an agreement between the U.S. and the E.U. that sets forth an ambitious agenda for U.S.

-ATLANTIC DECLARATION AND PRESS AVAILABILITY
Moncloa Palace

Following the Summit meeting, the President and Prime Minister will participate in a signing ceremony for the New Transatlantic Agenda (NTA) and action plan -- an unprecedented agreement which underscores the U.S. commitment to Europe and the need for more cooperation as we face the new global challenges of drugs and crime and the broadening agenda of trade issues. Following the signing the President and Prime Minister will take questions from the press.

relationship, which has contributed significantly to political stability and security in Europe and the world, and will generate new jobs on both sides of the Atlantic by increasing trade opportunities between us and around the world.

The NTA encompasses a broad range of initiatives that highlight key current and future areas of U.S.

-EU cooperation.

The NTA's agenda will focus on four areas of common interest, outlined below:

? Promoting Peace, Development and Democracy Globally: Including efforts in the former Yugoslavia and the Middle East.

? Responding to Global Challenges: Including international crime, trafficking in drugs and nuclear materials, terrorism, disease and destruction of the environment.

? Expanding Trade: Opening markets and creating jobs. Including setting out an agenda for creating a Transatlantic Marketplace, characterized by lower barriers and great integration between our two economies.

? Building Transatlantic Bridges: Expanding cultural and scientific exchanges.

TOUR OF PRADO MUSEUM

Prado Museum

At a time to be determined, either after dinner with the King and Queen or following the U.S./EU Summit, the President and Mrs. Clinton will visit one of the great art museums of the world and the chief cultural attraction of the Spanish capital: the Prado Museum. The visit will be closed press.

Background on The Prado Museum. The Prado displays one of the best and most carefully selected displays of European art in the world, the fruit of three centuries of Spanish empire. The Prado houses the definitive works of Spain's great masters, including Goya (Francisco Jose de Goya y Lucientes), Velazquez (Diego Rodriguez de Silva Velazquez) and El Greco (Domenikos Theotokopoulos).

Opened in 1819, the museum contains collections assembled by Spain's monarchs between the 16th and 18th centuries. It also includes important Italian and Flemish works; Italy and Flanders were part of the Spanish empire at that time. In addition to the works on display, the Prado has over nine thousand additional works of art in storage at any given time.

MEETING WITH JOSE MARIA AZNAR, LEADER OF THE POPULAR PARTY OF SPAIN

PRESS BRIEFING
 BY MIKE MCCURRY

The Briefing Room

12:10 P.M. EST

MR. MCCURRY: Good afternoon, ladies and gentlemen.
 First, the President and some of his meetings this morning on the subject of Bosnia -- he has just concluded a 45

-minute briefing with General Shalikashvili on the NATO operational plan, which is now coming together in Brussels. I think, as you know, General Shalikashvili, as our Chiefs of Defense staff person, participated in meetings yesterday in Brussels in which NATO military commanders finalized the plan that will now be presented to the North Atlantic Council in the next several days.

The President was gratified for the briefing, obviously, and impressed by the considerable detail with which NATO military commanders have addressed the issues surrounding the deployment of the implementation force, which will now help keep the peace in Bosnia.

Based on the briefing the President has received today, he will be able to instruct Ambassador Robert Hunter, who will represent the United States at the meetings of the North Atlantic Council we believe Thursday and possibly Friday as to the U.S. position on the integrated NATO operational plan. And I think, as you know, that plan is likely to be adopted sometime by the end of the week.

In addition, the President has been on the telephone in the hour since his radio -- or television address last night; has had contact with various members of Congress, including the leadership; also talked to former President Bush and former Chairman of the Joint Chiefs Colin Powell, among others. And he will depart shortly for Capitol Hill where he will address the Senate Democratic Caucus on the subject of Bosnia, although he will likely also have some conversations related to the budget and the coming budget discussions.

The President will participate in meetings with the congressional leadership this afternoon, and then a larger group of members of committees that have jurisdiction for armed services issues and national security issues. And the subject there, of course, will be Bosnia. You will have an opportunity to hear from him at the beginning of that meeting.

And sometime either just prior to those meetings this afternoon, or just after, he is expected to take action on both the Alaska bill and the highway bill. And I think you all got the general drift that he is likely to indicate his approval of both.

That is sort of an update of the President's schedule. He departs this evening for a trip to the United Kingdom, Northern Ireland, a visit with our troops in Germany, and then the US

Summit in Madrid, a trip that will be very important both in framing a larger international discussion of the issue of Bosnia. There has been very gratifying response to the President's remarks in European capitals.

In one way or another throughout Europe, European leaders are making it clear that the U.S. participation in this NATO force to implement the peace is an indispensable element of the plans to keep the peace in Bosnia. And literally, as one defense minister said, it would not happen if the United States were not to participate -- a point that the President, of course, made to the nation in his address last night.

So his work on the subject of Bosnia will continue. In the coming days, we'll also be monitoring closely the discussions between the Republic of Ireland and the United Kingdom on the Northern Ireland peace process --

Q Where is that going? Is there any break in that at all, or is it a stalemate?

MR. MCCURRY: That would be up to the parties to report. We have monitored those discussions and attempted to facilitate their direct dialogue, when that was the appropriate role to play -- that it would be up to the parties themselves to indicate the status.

Q You mean, you' going in there, you don't know what the situation is?

MR. MCCURRY: I think we have a very good idea of what the situation is, but as I indicated, it's up to the parties to report publicly how they're making in their -- what kind of progress they're making in their dialogue.

Q Mike, is there any presidential action likely today on the defense appropriations bill?

MR. MCCURRY: There is no action anticipated by the President on that subject. The Chief of Staff is meeting with the Chair of the Senate Appropriations Committee and the House Appropriations Committee at this hour. And we'll have to -- based on that conversation, there will then be subsequent conversations here. And I can't predict that the President will take any final action on the DOD appropriations bill today.

Q What was Bush's reaction, Powell's reaction?

MR. MCCURRY: I don't think it would be appropriate for me to characterize their responses --

Q Well, he was soliciting their support. Did he get their support?

MR. MCCURRY: They are public figures and entitled to make their own public statements on this subject.

Q When were they called? Were they last night, today? Which --

MR. MCCURRY: My understanding is that they were during the course of the evening last night.

Q Why did he call them? Was he looking for their support, or did he just want to explain what he was doing?

MR. MCCURRY: I think he felt it important to reach out to those who played important leadership roles in the most recent administration and to leaders on the Hill to both summarize his address, to stress its importance, and in some cases to thank those who had already commented publicly that they would keep an open mind TOP ODD and continue to hear the President as he makes his case to the nation.

Q Who else did he call besides Powell and Bush?

MR. MCCURRY: He called, among others, and this may not be an inclusive list, but I think it is -- represents most of the calls he made last night: Senators Nunn, Robb, Dole, Speaker Gingrich, Senator Daschle and Congressman Gephardt, as well as General Powell and President Bush. He also touched base --

Q What did he say -- how am I doing? They heard the speech. He didn't have to explain the speech to him.

MR. MCCURRY: Helen, as I already indicated, I think it would be appropriate for them, if they wish to comment publicly for them to comment --

Q -- the story a little to get it off the --

Q How long did he talk to Bush, and did they talk about anything else?

MR. MCCURRY: I didn't -- don't have a detailed readout on the call. I know that the subject was principally Bosnia, but I don't know whether they touched on other subjects.

Q Has he called Bush before?

MR. MCCURRY: He's had several conversations from time to time with former President Bush. They most recently reviewed U.S.

-China relations and Bosnia when they met in the Oval Office after the unveiling of President Bush's portrait in the Residence.

Q What's the White House assessment now for where things stand with Congress on Bosnia?

MR. MCCURRY: I'm sorry --

Q What's your assessment of where things stand with Congress now on Bosnia --

MR. MCCURRY: Well, the President and the White House are gratified that many members of Congress last night said what we believe to be the general public reaction -- that there is support for the President as the wrestles with a difficult decision that he had to make, while at the same time there is skepticism about the deployment of U.S. troops in connection with this effort to keep the peace. That's understandable in the President's view. We believe we will have to continue to explain to the American people the nature of this conflict, the precise details of the settlement, which has now brought that conflict, we hope, to an end, and the requirements of U.S. leadership as we work with the parties to implement that peace. Not one speech will convince a skeptical Congress or a skeptical nation that this is the right course. But the President believes in time the argument that he advanced considerably with a very good speech last night will prevail, because he believes the merits of the case he presented last night are so very strong.

Q There seems to be some sentiment in the House not to bring the nonbinding resolution to a vote. Do you have any assurance from Speaker Gingrich that the House will vote on this?

MR. MCCURRY: I believe it would be more proper for the Speaker to talk about congressional consideration of any expression of support they wish to offer to the President. We will certainly have further conversations, indeed, most likely this afternoon, with the leadership about the timetable for congressional consideration, but in our view that consideration and that expression of support are very important as we look to the eventual deployment of troops to Bosnia by mid

-December.

Q What is the likelihood that the President, at some point, would consider concessions on the budget in order to win support for the Bosnia plan?

MR. MCCURRY: The President does not see those as being directly related propositions. There is a funding issue associated with the deployment of U.S. troops. That is, indeed, one aspect of the conversation that Chief of Staff Panetta is not having on the Hill. We've got a $260 billion

-plus appropriations bill for defense that does not specifically account for the deployment that is now necessary, related to Bosnia. And how that funding is handled in the context of the overall appropriations bill is something the Chief of Staff certainly wanted to address. But the larger budget issues need to be addressed along the lines of the principles the President has articulated. And certainly the timetable that the Congress has made clear through its leadership, is the priority of Congress. And that's the process that will begin, we hope, with good

-faith discussions tonight.

The only thing the President hopes in connection with budget discussions is that we at least agree between the Executive Branch and the Legislative Branch, early and quickly, as the highest priority, that we avert another government shutdown on December 16th.

The President believes there is no reason for the U.S. taxpayers to foot another gigantic bill for the cost of a shutdown, nor should anyone have to negotiate these very difficult, contentious budget issues in an atmosphere of crisis.

Q Do you share the views of a lot of aides here at the White House who think it's unlikely that any sort of agreement will be reached by the 15th?

MR. MCCURRY: There is no way of telling at this point. And the people who are serious about the budget discussions coming forward I don't believe are predicting either a quick resolution or a quick failure. They believe they will be very difficult, tough negotiations, most likely going right up to mid

-December. But

there's a hope by the President we will avert any crisis atmosphere, and certainly a hope that they can resolve these issues amicably and get on with the nation's business.

Q Mike, in light of the Speaker's complaints about the flight to Rabin's funeral, would you expect any discussion of the budget at today's talks? (Laughter.)

MR. MCCURRY: I don't know that I see the direct connection there. It must be alluding me today. But I don't --

Q -- the President didn't take the opportunity aboard Air Force One to discuss the budget. He has another opportunity today.

MR. MCCURRY: Oh, well, they will be in the room together, and I think the President will be perfectly willing to discuss the budget if there's a desire to discuss the budget. I don't think he would be surprised if there is some discussion of the budget.

Q Mike, would you discuss some of the rationalization for the President's decision to go ahead and sign the highway bill?

MR. MCCURRY: I would prefer that you see the full statement that will explicate the President's reasoning. But it is essentially this -- there are gaps in the interstate highway system, which is really one of the testaments to America's ability to pull together as a community and complete massive and important public works projects. There's a gap, I think, of just over $5 billion of funding necessary to complete critical segments of that interstate highway system. And without the designation that is contained in this bill, many states would therefore not receive the federal funding they need to complete that necessary work to complete the system.

Now, the President's chief concern all along, and the transportation department's chief concern, has been highway fatalities. And we know that there is a direct correlation between speeds on interstate highways and highway fatalities. Now, the transportation department has been doing some very sophisticated work about how highways of the future can minimize the risk of highway fatalities, including high

-speech crashes that result in fatalities.

And that work will continue. It's important. It's important R&D work that, frankly, we hope won't be threatened by further budget cuts. And that will be a way in which we address highway safety issues in an environment in which states do have options to raise speed limits on those federal highways and, indeed, their own state highways.

Q So he's going to swallow his concerns about the fatalities on -- in this country that have diminished under these --

MR. MCCURRY: I don't know that I'd say swallow it. He's going to recognize that there's overwhelming support in Congress as it passed this bill. There's not a certainty that any veto that he would exercise would be sustained by the Congress. And in any event, his concern about the funding and the completion of the highway system remains.

Q What is his view just on this one specific issue, the speed limit? Would he veto it if it was stand

-alone piece of legislation?

MR. MCCURRY: Well, the President has said and the transportation department has said that if that were a stand

-alone issue, which it is not, we don't think there is a persuasive case for raising the current maximum federal speed limit, based on the public safety

-public health issues that arise. But it is not presented to the President in that fashion, and as everyone in this room knows, he unfortunately does not have the line

-item veto.

Q A lot of the questions on Bosnia on the Hill concern exit strategy. Can you put the year in context? Is that an estimate of how long it takes or is that a deadline, a rough deadline, that we'll leave once that time is up?

MR. MCCURRY: Well, I'd prefer to leave that discussion to after the formal adoption of the plan by the President -- first by the North Atlantic Council, then final approval by the President. The President will have an opportunity to review that in further detail when he meets with some of our senior military leaders on Saturday. But in a broad sense, the military mission as it has been very precisely defined by NATO, and the mission plan that has now been developed in Brussels by NATO estimates that in the period of one year, approximately year, you could accomplish the mission objectives. The mission objectives are to help the parties withdraw to the places that they have committed to withdraw to as a result of the agreement in Dayton and then to police in a sense the requirements to allow freedom of movement, freedom of access that are contained in the very detailed annexes that are part of the Dayton agreement. The President believes and the senior military leaders of the United States believes, and NATO military commanders believe, that that mission can be accomplished in approximately one year.

Q Is Panetta's meetings with the appropriations chairmen focused on the defense appropriations bill --

MR. MCCURRY: Yes, the meeting he is having today at noon is solely on that issue. As you, I think most of you know, that sometime this evening, I think after 6:00 p.m., there will be further discussions as they begin to talk about the budget talks. They're talking about talking beginning this evening.

Q Out of that budget meeting, do you there will become an agreement on how to proceed with budget negotiations? Is that what is expected?

MR. MCCURRY: Can I use a State Department word? They'll discuss the modalities this evening. But I don't know that they will necessarily resolve it. The President believes it's important to get on to the substance of the discussions, and we hope there will be a minimum amount of dispute over the nature of the talks or the process. But its clear that the White House has important, strong views; the congressional Republican leadership has strong views; and congressional Democrats have strong views. And all of those views need to be accommodated in reaching an agreement that will have, broad, bipartisan support. That's what we're going to need if we're going to achieve the objectives of a balanced budget in a time certain, reflecting the principles the President has put forward to the Congress, as the President and Congress have now agreed to in the recent continuing resolution.

Q Mike, what's the reaction to Republican efforts to even dictate who's in the room, the Democratic makeup, that Laura Tyson has never wanted a balanced budget, so she's out -- that kind of stuff?

MR. MCCURRY: They are the kinds of issues in an environment in which we are dealing literally with life and death issues that don't seem to be so significant that they are irreconcilable.

Q And do you know who's going to go tonight?

MR. MCCURRY: I'm not going to predict. I know Mr. Panetta will go, and we'll see where we go from there.

Q Do you have any reading of your White House comment line since the Oval address --

MR. MCCURRY: Yes, we do. I got a brief rundown on it. There were several thousand calls in the period, I guess, through last evening and probably into this morning as well. And I describe the results as not counter

-intuitive, to use a word the pollsters sometimes use, because it reflects some of the news organizations that have polled.

I'd say of the several thousand calls, they were pretty well evenly split on the subject of President's speech -- some Americans liking it, other Americans not liking it. On the subject of deployment of U.S. troops to Bosnia, there was a great deal of skepticism. And the American people clearly want to know more; they clearly are asking questions like why do we have to carry this burden; why aren't the Europeans doing more; what is this conflict about to begin with?

Obviously, I'm editing out -- the President got a lot of very complimentary comments from the American people, too, but people are skeptical about the need for U.S. troops. And that's -- the President began to make that case that night, and I think he will continue to make that case, and so will administration officials on the Hill. And we are fairly confident in time, particularly as Americans understand more about the role the Europeans have played in protecting the warring parties during the years of the UNPROFOR deployment, the commitment that they've made over time, and the requirement now that the United States participate as a matter of the ability of NATO to address a conflict of this nature. As they see that argument unfold, as they learn more about it -- and clearly they're anxious to learn more -- they will be supportive in time.

Q How many thousands -- how many calls were there, more narrowly -- 5,000, 7,000?

MR. MCCURRY: It looks to me there were probably in the neighborhood of between 2,500 and 3,000 calls, just on the information I have, and that's a rolling figure, as more people call into the line. But the President appreciates, you know, the response of the American people.

Q That's last night?

MR. MCCURRY: Last night through early this morning.

Q Is the President at least willing to consider the possibility that no matter how many speeches he gives and how many talks -- how many arms he tries to twist, that the American public just is not going to accept this; they have a gut feeling that this is not the right thing to do?

MR. MCCURRY: No, the President is not willing to accept that. And I think he feels the merits of this case, as they are understood in time by the American people, are strong. And that Americans rise to a challenge like this, even when they are initially skeptical about the need for such a deployment. They feel, and they know, that in this world that we live in now, we have some unique responsibilities. And we have those unique responsibilities because we've been fairly well blessed in this world. And there are times when our leadership role and the role that most Americans expect the United States to play in this world require stepping up to a challenge like the one we will face in Bosnia. The President is confident the American people, as they think through the issues here, will come to see that. And he hopes that the Congress will reflect that view in time.

Q It's interesting, because the President did accept public opposition to the deployment in Haiti and felt that it was something we needed to do despite the public opposition. You feel the situations are different enough that the President feels the argument will be made for Bosnia and would not go against public opposition?

MR. MCCURRY: I think the cases are different because the nature of the deployment is different. Our troops, as they went into Haiti, were facing a prospect of armed resistance. We believe the commitments of the parties in Bosnia lessen the likelihood of that, and every effort has now been made to minimize the risk.

And I think the bottom line is, that Americans as they come to understand we're not going to war but we're going for peace will appreciate that the United States has got a role that we must play of necessity because of the leadership role we play in the most important and endurable military alliance in world history; and also because of the moral commitment we have to both the security and stability of Europe and the need to end the type of atrocity we have seen in Bosnia over the last three and a half years.

Q Did the President call President Bush and Colin Powell because they had the experience of trying to build congressional and public support before the Persian Gulf War?

MR. MCCURRY: He felt it was just a good idea to touch base with them, two people who were instrumental in winning the Persian Gulf War; touch base with them and to advise them of the decisions that he had reached as Commander in Chief and make sure that they had an opportunity, personally, to ask any questions they might have of him as they, themselves learn more about the nature of our commitment to the peace process.

Q He wasn't seeking the benefit of their experience in -- before the Persian Gulf --

MR. MCCURRY: I wouldn't suggest that, but I'm sure -- without getting into the substance of the calls, which I don't think it would be proper to brief on, I think the President appreciated any insights that they may have had.

Q Let me make sure I understood this recent exchange. My understanding of the administration's position is that it would be vastly preferable to have an expression of support from Congress, but not essential. Is that still the case?

MR. MCCURRY: It's our view that we will seek an expression of support, and the President has some confidence he will get that expression of support.

Q Two -- you might have answered the first one -- is there a date yet for Paris?

MR. MCCURRY: There is not. We are still in consultations, and we still are aiming in the neighborhood of mid
-December.

Q And the second, Mike -- Claire had asked earlier about the prospect of no deal. And if the President is so sure about -- or hopeful that not only there can be a deal on the budget, but that there can be one without another shutdown, why is there so much currency in discussion the prospect of a no
-deal, including among the President's advisors, and often in public?

MR. MCCURRY: Well, because I think that most of -- they have to be realistic about what the prospects are. And there are deep differences in philosophy between the approach of the Republican congressional majority and the President on these issues.

And it's not clear at this point how those differences are going to be bridged. But the President also believes that Congress will most likely not want to endure the same type of crisis atmosphere we had most recently when the federal government had to shut down. And he is going to suggest they make a commitment not to go -- put the country through that type of situation again, as we attempt to resolve the issues.

Q Is a no
-deal deal a politically palatable outcome for the White House and the President?

MR. MCCURRY: Well, a no

-deal deal, quote, unquote, is impossible in a sense, because the federal government must function and it can't function without budget authority all the way through November of 1996. Now, it's a separate question to ask: Are the fundamental questions about priorities, of what commitments we expect of our federal government, of what we the people want from our federal government and how much we're willing to pay for it. Those fundamental principles are not going to be reconciled fully, in the President's view, in the coming budget discussions. And they will most likely form a part of the political discussion that this nation will have together as we approach November of 1996. And the President believes that's proper and very appropriate. And frankly, he relishes the notion that we'll have a presidential election in 1996 that's about something important, rather than something insignificant. We've had too many elections that have dwelt on the insignificant.

Q Are you saying you think Republicans have more riding on the deal, a reconciliation deal, a seven
-year balanced budget?

MR. MCCURRY: No. I'm not saying that.

Q Are you saying, then, that come December 15th, if no agreement is reached then the President wants a commitment from them to have some sort of either long
-term continuing resolution in effect, or stop
-gap measure so that talks aren't sidetracked?

MR. MCCURRY: Yes. Something to make sure that we have the orderly functioning of the federal government, absent a resolution of the larger issues, so that we don't go through the same type of shutdown scenario that we had to go through this month.

Q Do you have any briefing schedule in Europe? And also, when they say "press statements" what does that mean -- at Downing Street and --

MR. MCCURRY: Typically, I think in -- at 10 Downing we're doing a front door, as its called, which is a familiar press availability, as you know it here, when there is an important bilateral meeting here. And there will be other press availabilities the President will engage on during the balance of his schedule.

And we will brief regularly as necessary back here because the focus is going to be on budget discussions. I've encouraged the Chief of Staff to speak with reporters up on Capitol Hill when he is concluding meetings up there that will be of substantial interest to news organizations, because that's probably the best place for us to provide our thoughts on any deliberations that are occurring up there.

Q Is the President going to meet with the NATO commander when he's --

MR. MCCURRY: He will see General Joulwan on Saturday in Germany, yes. And I believe -- I strongly suspect that he'll see some other NATO commanders and also U.S. commanders who are dual

-hatted.

Q Japanese news reports are saying the President will reschedule his trip to Japan in April. Does it look like the trip will be later rather than sooner?

MR. MCCURRY: We've had discussions with the government of Japan about dates for a possible trip. To my knowledge, there have been no formal resolution of those discussions. There are dates that are being discussed in April.

Q Signing the Alaska bill today -- is the Tongass National Forest issue bill, or what are the big questions in this --

MR. MCCURRY: I had something on that earlier that described -- oh, I lost it. We'll look for it. It's got a variety of forest protection measures, I think, in it. Let me get a --

Q This is not --

MR. MCCURRY: No, this is not -- it does not relate to the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge.

Q Today's Bosnia meetings -- does the President expect to get into nuts and bolts discussion of funding, or does that come further down the road once the broader questions about what the force role is?

MR. MCCURRY: I think he fully -- is fully prepared to answer the question, how much do we estimate that this will cost if the deployment is along the lines that has been suggested in some of the initial work on the NATO operational plan. The mechanism for funding, whether it should be a supplemental or how it would be funded, I think, is going to have to develop after we consult further following Mr. Panetta's --

Q -- total pricetag on military and the nonmilitary aspects of --

MR. MCCURRY: I cannot. I know Secretary Perry has indicated the deployment of that component of the overall NATO force for the period that we've talked about is in the neighborhood of $1.5 billion.

Q But that doesn't include any of the subsequents

-the development work that's --

MR. MCCURRY: The type of financial assistance that is being discussed, and that I think will be a major focus of the London conference early next month, which it runs in the billions of dollars when you look at the total need to reconstruct Bosnia, which will be borne principally by the Europeans and by other nations. But our commitment that we have publicly discussed in the coming years for that reconstruction effort is in the neighborhood of $500 to $600 million, "m" as in million dollars.

Q Mike, when is the President going to announce his candidacy for reelection?

MR. MCCURRY: I don't know. Next year sometime. He's been very preoccupied with other matters, and he hasn't been thinking about that very much.

Q Is he running? (Laughter.)

MR. MCCURRY: Let me go through just on the -- this is a ban on oil exports from the Alaska North Slope. It does not affect new exploration or drilling in ANWR, to my knowledge. It's an administration

-backed measure that provides incentives that will stimulate oil and gas production in the U.S. and allows -- also allows sale -- there's been discussion of privatization of the Alaska Power Administration. It would allow the sale of the Alaska Power Administration -- other provisions in there.

Q It repeals the ban on exporting North Slope --
MR. MCCURRY: Yes, it repeals a 22

-year

-old ban on exporting crude from the North Slope.

Did you have another one? You didn't get any luck on that one. Let's try something else. Anyone else?

Q -- benefit our trade deficit, presumably, with Japan, if we can sell oil from the North Slope?

MR. MCCURRY: It would have positive impacts on our trade situation, but more importantly it also reflects a more comprehensive approach to our national energy strategy, as well.

Q So what did Bush and Powell say?

MR. MCCURRY: What did they say?

BOTTOM ALL

Q -- when they opposed going into Bosnia in the first place?

MR. MCCURRY: Well, you know, they -- I can't honestly say I've seen anything reported on President Bush's view, but I have seen some things reported on General Powell's view. And I think it just is more appropriate for them to speak for themselves. They certainly are very capable of doing so.

Thank you.

THE PRESS: Thank you.
