Message:

As you move on to new career opportunities, I wanted to say how much I appreciated your hard work and dedication during the past year. You said what needed to be said and you did it well.

You took on a very difficult assignment with courage and spunk. As usual, the public health message was not easy for all to accept. Your friends in public health applaud your efforts.

Congratulations and best wishes in the future.

Dear Kristine:

Thank you again for participating in the tribute to Russ Radley. Your contributions were appreciated greatly by Russ' family and loved ones.

As you may recall, we have just recently produced a publication targeted at the business community entitled AIDS IS YOUR BUSINESS. We see this guide as an important tool in educating business leaders about how they can respond to AIDS-related initiatives in their communities. We have had an initial conversation with Priscilla Holman at the CDC about inclusion of the BUSINESS RESPONSE TO AIDS kit. We have also written Rob Stein in Secretary Brown's office, inquiring if the Secretary could send out a letter with a copy of the guide to business CEO's.

Could you facilitate either or both of these requests? If you have any questions, I will be available until July 1. You would be able to reach either Fred Silverman at (408) 974-2975 or Vincent McGee at (212) 212/757-7680. Both Fred and Vinny are familiar with this project.

We look forward to hearing from you.

Sincerely,

Dear Rob:

Hope you're well!! I am delighted to write you in your capacity as a member of the Administration, and in my capacity as Executive Director of Funders Concerned About AIDS.

As you may recall, Funders Concerned About AIDS is an association of 1,200 grantmakers in 42 states. Our mission is to advance the philanthropic response to HIV/AIDS pandemic.

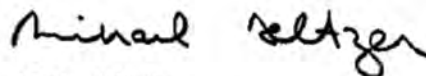

Recently, we produced a new publication entitled AIDS IS YOUR BUSINESS (a copy is enclosed). We are interested in getting this publication in the hands of U.S. business leaders, and would like to enlist the assistance of the Secretary of Commerce.

Would you advise us if the Secretary would be willing to send out a letter to corporate chief executive officers on the importance of charitable business involvement in AIDS-related efforts? The letter could offer copies of this guide, or we might even be able to enclose complimentary copies.

I look forward to hearing your thoughts. I will be away from July 4-10. If you would like to discuss this matter further during that period, you can contact Fred Silverman, Co-Chair of our Communications Committee and Manager, Community Affairs, Apple Computer, Inc. (phone: 408/974-2975) or Vincent McGee, Co-Chair of our Outreach Committee and Executive Director of the Aaron Diamond Foundation (phone: 212/757-7680).

Thank you in advance for your attention to this request.

Dear Dr. Curran:

Thank you for the CDC's help with the Federal Workplace AIDS Education Initiative. Both BRTA and the Clearinghouse have been invaluable allies in the development of the Federal Guidelines and of the FWAEI in general.

Various Federal Agencies have produced some outstanding workplace training materials. We believe the addition of some of these materials to the BRTA package would provide much needed workplace training materials to the private sector.

Lance Alworth, Program Manager for the FWAEI, will be contacting your office shortly to set up a meeting.

Dear Bill:

Thanks you for your letter following my recent visit to Westchester County. I appreciate the information you provided regarding your efforts to bring all of those interested in Title II of the Ryan White CARE Act together. I agree that a unified Title II position will have a greater impact on the overall effort that will several uncoordinated, divergent presentations.

I encourage you to continue this work, which I assume will include not only the community organizations which receive Title II contract funds in the states, but also the representatives of state health agencies, which are the primary grantees. This group has been much slower to coalesce than those involved with Title I funding through the cities, but is an essential part of the overall effort.

My best wishes to you in all of your continuing efforts to respond to the HIV epidemic. Wherever I end up for my next position, I will be supporting our national response and trying to widen the circle of those involved.

Sincerely,

RE: Your recent visit to Westchester County (Pepsico Headquarters).

Dear Ms Gebbie:

I found this program to be very interesting, and most supportive to local community people working on HIV/AIDS issues. I enjoyed your remarks, and was particularly pleased about the AIDS 101 program for White House staff and Cabinet members. Wearing another hat as Chair of the Dutchess County AIDS Consortium (since 1988), a countywide local organization of people concerned with HIV/AIDS issues, I was able to persuade the County Executive to mandate a 2 hour AIDS 101 for every single County Employee (almost 3,000 people) in 1991. That move alone probably did more for awareness and "talk seriously about AIDS" in the entire county than any other single act. Many (even in AIDS work) don't seem to understand how basic that simple piece is. President Clinton's (and your) similar mandate for Federal Employees will have more impact than many seem to realize.

I gave you my card, and after you mentioned Doug Nelson (The Campaign for Fairness) it occurred to me that perhaps, for the record I should set that issue straight. It is intended that T II NAC will evolve into an organization which will provide structure for the many Ryan White "Consortia & Care Network" participants to evolve consensus, debate & develop policy & priorities and generate coordinated national action around issues of importance to organizations (and their clients & volunteers) dependent upon Title II funding streams.

For many in this group the evolving epidemic is now their "emergency" and existing organizations have not been totally successful in generating either a formal forum & structure (or an adequate place at the table) for this very important group. It is my intent that T II NAC provide the formal structure that enables ALL Title II entities to step forth publicly AFTER internal debate and consensus with positions and issues which reflect the input of ALL Title II States, Territories, regions and "care networks". I have made my views known privately to Doug Nelson on the particular timing, tactics and strategy as it is presently playing out. I'm not at all suggesting that the issues raised are not valid. My concern is that the non AIDS committed world will (and perhaps already has) assume that a particular position reflects ALL Title II areas and interests when it might not. I am also VERY concerned about possible political exploitation of anything which looks like a rift in the AIDS community's national posture on needs and priorities. I believe a competent T II NAC will provide a structure to reduce such dangers in the future.

It was nice to meet you, and I appreciate your visit to our area. I wish you well in what is next for your in AIDS work.

Very Sincerely Yours,

William E. Arnold

Mr. Bill Clinton

1600 Pennsylvania Avenue
Washington D.C.

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

August 2, 1994

Mr. Joseph M. Salvato
45 Parker Avenue
New York City, NY 10956-1722

Dear Mr. Salvato:

You ask a number of questions based on my appearance at Clarkstown South High School last May. That was a gathering at which I spoke about how prevention fit into the national policy on HIV, and on how we must work as communities to provide our young people with opportunities to grow up healthy, making safe decisions about their own lives.

I will attempt to answer each of the points you raise.

1. I did not ask people to raise their hands "if they have or would commit to a lifetime monogamous relationship". As I have done with adult audiences (and this was an adult as well as high school audience) I indicated, as a reality check, an awareness that there were probably people in the room who had at some point engaged in sexual activity outside of such a relationship, though I would not ask them to raise their hands.
2. I do not know why the wording now on condom boxes was established. I say "condoms work when used consistently and correctly" because that is a true statement.
- 3, 4, 5, 6. My discussion of condoms as a means of significantly reducing the risk of HIV infection is always presented within the context of understanding that either complete celibacy or lifetime mutual monogamy being the sure approaches. That said, I am concerned that all individuals know how they can reduce their risk within the choices they make--hence factual information on condoms, which are over 90% effective when used consistently and correctly every time.
7. A source of research is reliable when it is recognized in the scientific community, as in a peer-reviewed journal or panel presentation. I also look, as do others, to the weight of the evidence and the logical consistency of information.
8. Pelvic Inflammatory Disease has been present for generations, though it has not always been accurately diagnosed, and its relationship to sexually transmitted diseases was not originally understood. No one knows exactly how long HIV infection has been present in human populations; what we do know is that it reached epidemic proportions about 15 years ago, though we did not identify it by name until several years later.

9. Morality is an important part of the heritage we give our children; so are the facts within which one makes moral choices. As a public health official my responsibility is primarily to facts, while acknowledging the various choices people make.

10. We have experienced, as humans, devastating plagues at many times over our history. One of the greatest, the influenza pandemic which followed the first World War, occurred almost exactly 75 years ago. We all tend to pay most attention to the problems facing us directly, and lose sight of the range of issues occurring to other individuals, in other times and places.

Thank you for your continuing concern about these issues. An identical letter has been sent to Ms. Wendy J. Kyvik.

Dear Ms. Gebbie,

This letter is in response to your conference at Clarkstown South High School in Rockland County New York, on Thursday May 19, at 9:00 a.m..

Our compliments to you on making people aware of the risk involved when sexually active. We agree with the importance of letting young people from 13-20 years old know that because they are having intercourse and not using condoms, their age group is at high risk of contracting sexually transmitted diseases (STD's).

Lets look at the basic structure of the lecture. 'Sex is dangerous without a condom. Using a condom makes sex safer, so here is how to use it correctly... Abstinence is the only way to eliminate contamination from STD's but if your going to have sex, take care of yourself and your self image by using a condom.'

Now on the surface, this appeal appears innocuous, but there were many points made in this conference that we feel put more pressure on the young people attending to engage in sex and reject the idea of abstinence. Your answers to the following questions will be greatly appreciated.

- 1.) Why, in an incredulous tone, would you ask a room full of mostly students, if they would raise their hands if they have or would commit to a lifetime monogamous relationship? Instead why not ask, 'how many people would make a marriage commitment to someone who they knew would engage in sexual relationships outside of the marriage?'
- 2.) Why would you say that 'condoms do work when used correctly', when the manufacturer doesn't say that on the box of condoms?
- 3.) When defending the use of condoms to a person in the audience who submitted research documenting the failure rate of condom usage, why would you bring into question the research presented without presenting any to back up your claims?
- 4.) When you speak about the spread of AIDS & STD's you say, "This is real", and then you seem to treat condom usage as an alternative with little risk involved. But why appease young people by making them feel safer with condom usage instead of telling them outright that abstinence is the only sure measure without flirting with death?

5.) Finally, when pressed by a minister in the crowd to honestly state the success rate of condoms, you said 'about 90%'. What research do you base your information on?

6.) Why didn't you include the success rate of 'about 90%' in the body of your lecture?

7.) What criteria do you use to decide whether a source of research is reliable?

8.) Why didn't we have problems such as AID's and Pelvic Inflammatory Disease 75 years ago?

9.) In school and at home we set our goals for being the best we can be and try to help our children to pursue this goal as a life path. Why then in conferences like these do we down play morality? Why not make abstinence the theme and express the alternatives as an afterthought rather than the other way around?

10.) Seventy five years ago more people were God fearing and had a sense of right and wrong. People abstained from having intercourse until they found a husband or wife and then stayed in monogamous relationships. Could this be the reason why as a society we have a plague of horrible incurable diseases now and we didn't have them then?

Perhaps it's time to take a different approach. People are dying and this program appears to give our young a sense of security in using condoms that sources disagree about. Documented research published by the British Medical Journal in 1987 shows that condoms slip and break. Documented research also show that there are gaps in condoms large enough to let in HIV, (Journal of American Medical Association 257, May 1, 1987; Nature 335, Sept. 1, 1988; American Journal of Nursing, Oct. 1987). Lets be honest with our young people and tell them that if they are sexually active, even if they are using condoms, it's just a matter of time, a game of roulette. Chances are they will die.

We look forward to a response from you.

Sincerely,

Joseph M. Salvato

Dear Ms. Kyvik:

You ask a number of questions based on my appearance at Clarkstown South High School last May. That was a gathering at which I spoke about how prevention fit into the national policy on HIV, and on how we must work as communities to provide our young people with opportunities to grow up healthy, making safe decisions about their own lives.

I will attempt to answer each of the points you raise.

1. I did not ask people to raise their hands "if they have or would commit to a lifetime monogamous relationship". As I have done with adult audiences (and this was an adult as well as high school audience) I indicated, as a reality check, an awareness that there were probably people in the room who had at some point engaged in sexual activity outside of such a relationship, though I would not ask them to raise their hands.
2. I do not know why the wording now on condom boxes was established. I say "condoms work when used consistently and correctly" because that is a true statement.
- 3, 4, 5, 6. My discussion of condoms as a means of significantly reducing the risk of HIV infection is always presented within the context of understanding that either complete celibacy or lifetime mutual monogamy being the sure approaches. That said, I am concerned that all individuals know how they can reduce their risk within the choices they make--hence factual information on condoms, which are over 90% effective when used consistently and correctly every time.
7. A source of research is reliable when it is recognized in the scientific community, as in a peer-reviewed journal or panel presentation. I also look, as do others, to the weight of the evidence and the logical consistency of information.
8. Pelvic Inflammatory Disease has been present for generations, though it has not always been accurately diagnosed, and its relationship to sexually transmitted diseases was not originally understood. No one knows exactly how long HIV infection has been present in human populations; what we do know is that it reached epidemic proportions about 15 years ago, though we did not identify it by name until several years later.

9. Morality is an important part of the heritage we give our children; so are the facts within which one makes moral choices. As a public health official my responsibility is primarily to facts, while acknowledging the various choices people make.

10. We have experienced, as humans, devastating plagues at many times over our history. One of the greatest, the influenza pandemic which followed the first World War, occurred almost exactly 75 years ago. We all tend to pay most attention to the problems facing us directly, and lose sight of the range of issues occurring to other individuals, in other times and places.

Ms. Catherine G. Lynch
Executive Director

Dear Ms. Lynch:

Thank you for sharing your concerns about counseling and testing with me. As you know, HIV antibody counseling and testing is one of the most controversial issues we face in preventing the spread of HIV. I will try to address some of the issues you raised on your letter.

Reporting the names of those who are diagnosed to have HIV infection has been supported for two primary reasons: 1) the belief that individuals who test positive for any disease should be integrated into a system of care; and 2) the perception that individuals who test positive to a communicable disease must be informed of their status and must be assisted in informing their sexual partners. In the case of HIV, however, due to the stigma and discrimination that an HIV diagnosis carries, individuals have been reluctant to submit to the test, especially in the absence of a cure. This reluctance is magnified when it is feared that reporting of names to public health officials may lead to a breach of confidentiality.

The issues are further complicated by the changing nature of prevention activities. With other sexually transmitted diseases (STDs), individuals are interested in being diagnosed primarily as a way of obtaining treatment. In the absence of a cure for HIV/AIDS, many individuals do not feel the need to be tested. The HIV antibody test alone has very limited impact on those behaviors that place individuals at risk, while targeted, linguistically specific, developmentally appropriate and culturally-based messages have proven effective in impacting risky behaviors.

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) have recently published the report of the HIV External Review Committee, which examined prevention activities at CDC for a period of time. The working groups of the committee consisted of: Media Campaigns, Knowledge of Serostatus, Measuring the Epidemic, Partnerships and Youth Programs. The working group on knowledge of serostatus examined many of the issues that you identified related to name reporting, and its impact on the willingness of individuals to voluntarily obtain a HIV antibody test.

The working group examined some research, which though inconclusive on some points, indicated that individuals living in areas where name reporting is mandatory, but who, because of geography, had access to anonymous testing services in a neighboring state, opted to obtain those anonymous services. This research can be obtained through the Office of the Associate Director (HIV) at CDC. The person you may want to contact is Gary Conrad, Director of Planning, at (404) 639-2918.

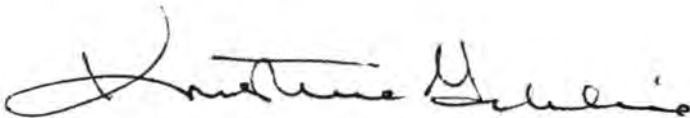

As a result of the findings of the External Review Committee, CDC is engaging in extensive research on the impact of name reporting. The most important aspect of this research is the use of unique identifiers to prevent the duplication of positive results, which is a concern for adequate measurement of the epidemic. Five demonstration grants have been awarded by CDC in 1994 to seek additional answers on this issue.

It is my belief that if unique identifiers are able to account for HIV positive diagnoses without duplication, and that if comprehensive treatment and service regimes are made available to persons who test positive upon delivery of diagnosis, there will be no need for the use of name reporting. I also believe that to prevent the further spread of HIV, we need to reinforce our primary prevention messages and interventions aimed at individuals at high risk for HIV. I also support the notion that the decision-making of what will be the most appropriate approach is to be determined based on local priorities. That is why this Administration set up the Community Planning Process, so that individual states and communities can determine what will be the best course to follow.

I hope this information will be helpful to you. Although my tenure as National AIDS Policy Coordinator will end on August 2, I want to assure you that this Administration is committed to preventing the spread of HIV, providing adequate care for persons living with HIV/AIDS and finding a cure as soon as possible.

Thank you again for sharing your concerns with me.

Dear Kristine:

Thank you for your note after our meeting last month. I enjoyed meeting you and am following up both on your invitation to stay in touch and on your offer to look for more information on the pros and cons of mandatory name reporting.

I had mentioned to you that in Florida we had just finished a heated legislative battle on the mandatory reporting of all those testing HIV positive at confidential sites, plus the prohibition of continued anonymous testing by M.D.s and the elimination of mandated post-test counseling for all those testing negative, plus the elimination of informed consent for pregnant women coupled with mandatory testing of all pregnant women. All this in one bill. The supporters of this legislation stated that the CDC had a study to which they had access, but the public did not, showing that mandatory name reporting has had no deleterious effect on testing, and will give us much needed data on the epidemiology of the disease that is not otherwise available.

I certainly do not want to impede legislation that will benefit people affected by HIV or stop the spread of the disease, but I have been unable to find anything more than anecdotal accounts of several states' experience, bolstering both sides of the argument. We also have two local incidents where confidentiality of test results has been violated, and numerous anecdotes given by state employees during a recent state video conference, where it is clear that security of client medical data is considered more a nuisance than a mandate.

I would be very grateful for any solid information you can provide me with or refer me to that would indicate the impact of mandatory name reporting (a) on previously documented rates of anonymous and confidential testing in a given locality; (b) on previously documented rates of anonymous and confidential testing in contiguous jurisdictions (e.g., over state lines); (c) when the availability of anonymous testing is held constant or allowed to increase; and (d) when anonymous testing is simultaneously restricted. I would also appreciate any information on the above analyzing for variables of time (e.g., 1987 cf. 1993) and risk population (e.g., low - cf. high-income, straight cf. gay; age, ethnicity).

I appreciate your offer of help and look forward to hearing from you.

If you should decide to visit South Florida again, Health Crisis Network would be delighted to serve as host. We have an excellent Title I Council, a diverse and articulate population with tremendous need, and several excellent service agencies.

I am working with several established organizations and the newly formed National League of Non-Profit Organizations to develop a conference for the non-profit sector in the spring of 1995. The purpose of the conference is to organize and disseminate information pertaining to the resources which are available to the non-profit sector.

It has come to my attention that you have been appointed as one of the Clinton Administration's liaisons to the non-profit world. My colleagues and I would like to schedule a meeting with you to discuss the role your office plays in providing services and assistance to non-profits. We believe that it is only through effective communication with the public and private sector that we can all achieve our missions, servicing our individual communities; therefore our nation.

Please contact me as to when we can meet. I am sure you have an abundance of information which will be an invaluable part of the conference.

The Honorable Tom Harkin
Chairman

Committee on Appropriations

Washington, D.C. 20510-6034

Dear Mr. Chairman:

I am writing to seek your assistance in supporting the President's funding proposal of $2.9 million in FY 1995 for the National AIDS Program Office (NAPO) in the Public Health Service (PHS), Department of Health and Human Services (HHS).

The Assistant Secretary for Health, who directs PHS, performs an essential role in coordinating the Nation's broad-based attack on the AIDS epidemic. This role cannot be carried out without NAPO. Specifically, NAPO plays a unique and important leadership and coordination role for PHS and HHS in ensuring that AIDS research, services, and prevention activities are carried out in an efficient and comprehensive manner. Funding for NAPO represents one-tenth of one percent of PHS's annual spending on AIDS, which is now about $2.7 billion.

As you know, AIDS activities are conducted in all of the PHS agencies, as well as other parts of HHS. In total, HHS supports 85 percent of the Federal government's response to HIV/AIDS. NAPO, as part of the Office of the Assistant Secretary for Health (OASH), has served the Secretary of HHS and the Assistant Secretary for Health well as the locus for convening intra- and inter-departmental groups to resolve problems, develop policies, and implement them in a unified manner.

In the year ahead, NAPO will play a crucial role in streamlining and restructuring HIV/AIDS priority setting. This new process will build on the successful model developed by NIH through its new Office of AIDS Research. NAPO's strategic leadership will also be critical as we resolve issues emanating from a reformed health care system. This will necessarily include a review of the effect of new insurance coverage for people with HIV/AIDS on existing discretionary and entitlement benefits programs. It will become important to elucidate areas of coverage overlap and how best to deploy precious resources in a time of great change. As these issues unfold, NAPO will continue to play a key role as honest broker, not only for issues within PHS and this Department, but throughout the Executive Branch as we pursue government-wide efforts to address the AIDS crisis.

We also expect NAPO to continue to play a leadership role in developing and disseminating information important to the issue of AIDS in the workplace. This extends not just to the Federal workplace, but to all sectors.

The AIDS epidemic is now well into its second decade. As the multifaceted aspects of the disease become more intertwined and more complex, and as the economic impact and human suffering become more severe, it is more important than ever to have strategic support for our attack on the epidemic on a broad level.

When the Conferees meet on H.R. 4606, the Labor/HHS/Education Appropriations bill, I urge you to take the lead in supporting the President's request and House allowance of $2.9 million for NAPO for FY 1995.

Dear Mr. Mendel:

Thank you for sharing with me information about the organization "Le Patriarche." It is my understanding that this organization has been working with substance abusers in various parts of the world and has also been one more ally in the fight against HIV/AIDS. As you know, the Clinton Administration has made great strides in our nation's fight against this epidemic. My appointment as Interim National AIDS Policy Coordinator was intended to send a clear message to the nation of the President's continued commitment to address the difficult issues of this epidemic.

I am encouraged by the interest of individuals like yourself in the complex issues of HIV and substance abuse. I have forwarded the information on this organization to the office of the Associate Administrator for HIV/AIDS at the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration (SAMHSA). This is the Federal agency that works with issues of substance abuse prevention and treatment. A news article in N.Y. Newday Aug 3rd mentioned your temporary appointment by the Clinton Administration as an AIDS policy coordinator.

I would like to recommend for your interest and study a well known world-wide agency titled "The Patriarche, Inc." that has treated successfully over 40,000 drug addicts, presently treating AIDS patients in their overseas health clinics approved by many foreign governments.

Serving mostly European youth for the past 20 years Lucien F. Engelmaier, founder and director, stationed both France and Spain, he has a success history that we can copy for our country.

My letters to New York State health officials has not had results in their study of his programs; likewise letters to Federal health officials have shown some interest, but nothing further.

Perhaps, you can study their drug and AIDS programs and find them useful in our country.

THE PATRIARCH

THE REAL CURE AGAINST DRUGS IS OUR FIGHT

EDITORIAL

LUCIEN J. ENGELMAJER

Ten years ago, Professor Nahas and other American friends repeatedly asked me to come to the United States of America, maintaining that the ideas and the methods of The Patriarch would be most welcome in their country. I was invited to important conferences and each time, however, other important commitments made me postpone my trip. Concerns about our survival and about the creation of a dynamic movement in Europe absorbed all my time and my energy.

So, why today? Now, it is time for me to apologize. Despite the dynamic originality of our program, it has failed to reach acceptance in Europe, although it has an almost unanimous public support. In quality and numbers, we are the most significant organization in Europe. However, we are shunned by the media, even though some of the greatest scientists support us; socialist politicians and some psychiatrists reject us, but we receive a favorable response from democrats and moderates...

I have always declared that the addiction to drugs, and now the pandemic outbreak of AIDS, are actually easy conditions to contain and to defeat. But, we should give ourselves the proper means in which to do so. Our example, with 20 years of success, has been exported to many countries and has proved its validity.

Because the U.S.A. is more affected than Europe by the dual plagues of drugs and AIDS, it is perhaps a more mature, more enterprising country, with a great determination to make a big effort (i.e. speech by President Bush, Sept. 5 1989). I intend to provide the means to succeed. To start with, the verified source of all the positive results and alternative dynamics, which is to say: The action should be practically put in the hands of rehabilitated drug addicts. and it is within the drug addict himself that one must seek, find the answer and the alternative; each active drug addict is a potential helper. The very same passion to destroy themselves can be converted into a passion to build, help, and be worthy and responsible for the future of their country. All I am asking for is a chance to prove my point.

In the first year, I propose to treat 1,500 Americans, HIV positive or not. In the second year, 10,000 with the help of 100 or 200 American former addicts who, once cured and trained, will join us to take care of the American program.

Without their participation, no significant overall action can be carried out. But with God's help and everyone's good will, we will finally stop the advancement of drugs and AIDS, and even make them regress. Have confidence in the future and in youth, and your wishes will be fulfilled.

Past failures teach us precious lessons for our future. The alternative approach proposed by The Patriarch to treat drug addiction, is built on 20 years of successful experience, acquired in 21 countries, with the rehabilitation of 38,000 drug abusers. I trust that our success will give you enough faith and hope to start with us a new fight, together, against drugs, until the ultimate victory.

Many thanks to friends in America, for your attention and your understanding

Dear Ms. Pugh:

Thank you for the invitation to attend Bike-Aid '94 on August 19, 1994. Unfortunately, our efforts to find a new National AIDS Policy Coordinator has dominated much of our time and Ms. Fleming's schedule does not permit her to participate. I apologize for the late response. In the future, I hope the new Coordinator or Ms. Fleming will have a chance to work with you.

If I can be of any assistance, please call me at (202) 632-1090.

Sincerely,

Gus M. Ventura

re: Request for speaker at Press Conference to speak to Bike-Aid's cyclists in DC after their cross country bicycle trek for AIDS education.

Dear Ms. Flemming:

Congratulations on your new position! I know you must be busy getting started, but I have a special request to ask you. Bike-Aid '94 would like to invite you to share in a wonderful moment that will be the culmination of an inspiring summer spent raising money and educating folks about global AIDS. Sixty people cycling on five routes across the country have dedicated their summers and their lives to educating folks around the world about AIDS. Bike-Aid cyclists raise money for AIDS education, participate in education and outreach in the communities they pass through and lend a hand in community service on "rest" days to local AIDS organizations.

We would love for you to be a part of our celebration and Press Conference to speak to the riders about why their summer's work is so important in the struggle against AIDS. Bike-Aiders are from all walks of life, but one thing that they have in common is how they dedicate their energy to creating positive change in this country and this world. We are looking for a speaker to address the press as well as inspire the riders to keep on working to educate folks about global AIDS. Bike-Aid '94 will roll into DC for a Press Conference on August 19, 1994 at 12:30 pm at the Lincoln Memorial.

I hope you will consider this request at this busy time for you. If you are not able to attend the Press Conference, we would like to extend this invitation to someone from your office. I hope to hear from you soon. Thank you for your time.

Yours truly

Mr. Dan McDonald
P.O. Box 423684

Dear Mr. McDonald:

Thank you for sharing your thoughts on the creation of a National AIDS Service Corps with the Assistant Secretary for Health. As you know, this Administration is committed to taking steps to stop the spread of HIV, to care for persons living with HIV/AIDS and to find a cure for AIDS as soon as possible. Part of the work we have done in prevention has been to collaborate with various components of the Federal government in expanding their current programs and activities to include HIV/AIDS-related prevention, services and research. To that end, we have worked with the National Youth Service Corps and the Peace Corps to include HIV/AIDS prevention in the curriculum for training of new inductees so they will carry their expertise in HIV/AIDS prevention to whatever task they are assigned to do.

I see your idea of a National AIDS Service Corps as one with great potential and I believe that the work we do in HIV/AIDS prevention must be a part of our lives and those of the younger generations in all aspects of our lives. I believe that by incorporating HIV/AIDS prevention in all existing components and institutions, including schools, churches, businesses, the media, social clubs and all others, we will be able to impact on those behaviors that place individuals at risk.

I have forwarded a copy of your letter to Ms. Patricia R. Fleming, Interim National AIDS Policy Coordinator, for possible submission to one of the bodies being contemplated for the coordinated national response to the HIV/AIDS epidemic. In this fashion, the Federal government will be able to give full consideration to your concept.

I would like to thank you again for sharing your thoughts.

Sincerely yours,

George W. Allen

Dear Dr. Lee:

During May & June I had gotten out a number of copies of the enclosed letter to the President but my list was not all-inclusive. Your name among PCZ's top 50 list fighting AIDS pretty much slipped my oversight albeit somewhat late. Forgive me.

Whether the substance of the letter impacts your responsibilities directly prevention is everyone's business. To this end whatever you and Secretary Shulaker can do to bring about an AIDS SERVICE CORPS will be greatly appreciated. Thank you.

With best wishes, I remain

President Bill Clinton
The White House
Washington, D. C.

Dear President Clinton:

Your admiration for President John F. Kennedy has been the hallmark of your yearning for the presidency over the past few decades. Let me suggest a way in which you might move from admiration to emulation. You might recall that in 1961 at the University of Michigan President Kennedy proposed a Peace Corps, an opportunity for volunteers to share their skills and expertise with the impoverished nations of the world.

Today, Mr. President, many of the same lands visited yesterday face a more insidious devastation that not even peace can eliminate or mitigate. I speak of the AIDS pandemic. Many in the communities most affected by this plague urge you to propose an AIDS SERVICE CORPS launched on a scale proportionate to the magnitude of the crisis. For the first thirty years 133,000 volunteers served in Peace Corps; looking toward the next century we need to recruit more than a million volunteers for an AIDS SERVICE CORPS in the next five years.

You might ask, What's the rush? and Why so many? With all due respect for ongoing research and potential vaccines, Mr. President, the world cannot forever await the fruition of possibilities. The world needs an army of trained volunteers in the millions reaching every corner of the globe with not only the message of prevention but the means as well. Mr. President, at this late date, prevention is still all we've got!

An AIDS SERVICE CORPS will help you with two of the most important items on your domestic agenda, the Health Security Act and finding opportunities for the unemployed. Preventive care should be the most salient feature of any health care act; without it the balance is doomed to either failure or result in little or no significant increase in savings. For the unemployed out of college or high school voluntary deployment in the Corps eases the pressure on jobs creation; returning to the job market their value enhanced by diverse experiences working with peoples of other nations, other cultures. Because AIDS prevention is understandable to most adults the Corps may recruit volunteers right out of high school. These volunteers might merit scholarships as compensation for their time in service, similar to the rewards cited in the National Service

Corps enacted by the Congress last fall.

The season of commencement addresses is upon us. Choose a venue from which you might expect volunteers. Or confound the critics by launching the idea at a conservative institution. Or dramatize the proposal by speaking at a high school in the Bronx where the proposal and the battleground meet, where possibly a generation is already lost! Failing these sites a United Nations address in September might be the next best venue.

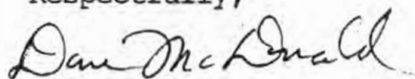

Let me close this letter with the opening paragraph of chapter seven entitled Africa: A Continent In Catastrophe, from "The Slow Plague" by Peter Gould, Blackwell Press, 1993, Oxford UK and Cambridge USA:

Africa...is the ur-continent for the entire human family, our common place of origin 100,000 years ago, our genesis as homo sapiens, and the origin of our thousand tongues. There is something perverse in that the cradle of east and central Africa that gave us all birth should now be the origin of a virus bringing us death. Sometimes the gods are not kind. From that nurturing origin it took us, in all our changing human variety, tens of thousands of years to cover the globe, to reach the tip of Tierra del Fuego, the cold wastes of Greenland, the coral strands of the South Pacific. It took ten years for the HIVs, both 1 and 2, to hopscotch around the same globe and entrench themselves in almost every people on earth. The virus is now in native Canadians in the far north, in pygmy people deep in equatorial forests, in Polynesia on once-remote and seldom-visited tropical islands, and in the Shan people of the remote hill country of eastern Burma. In long chains of human relationships and movements every place seems connected to all the others. There is no hiding place down here.

Mr. President, in our inability to grasp the enormity of AIDS as catastrophe we glimpse darkly why 'the center does not hold': AIDS is apocalyptic in its dimensions. Millenarists need search no further. As the pandemic grows apace our world will not end in a bang but in a whimper, the implosion of our collective wills collapsing upon the 'will vs wallet' syndrome. On AIDS do not let your presidency lapse passive in the way of your predecessor. An AIDS SERVICE CORPS is an opportunity for greatness. Sieze it.

With all best wishes for the coming years, I remain

Respectfully,

Dan McDonald

Dear Bob:

We are writing to thank you for having taken the time to meet with us recently about the future of the National AIDS Policy Coordinator's office. These meetings have provided valuable input to our process -- and we hope that they have contributed to the community's understanding of the role of the National AIDS Policy Coordinator within the White House and our efforts to find the right person for this critical position.

As we said at the meetings, President Clinton is committed to assuring that this Administration has a comprehensive and compassionate policy on HIV/AIDS -- from the White House to every agency of the federal government. Regular discussions with the community, such as those we had last week, are an integral part of assuring that we remain on course.

We know how important the National AIDS Policy Coordinator position is to the HIV/AIDS community. But we also heard how important it is to choose the right person. To that end, we want you to know that we intend to fill this position as expeditiously as possible -- while also being thorough in our outreach and consideration of all qualified candidates.

Thanks again for coming to the White House. We look forward to continued communication in the weeks and months ahead.

Dear Jane:

We are writing to thank you for having taken the time to meet with us recently about the future of the National AIDS Policy Coordinator's office. These meetings have provided valuable input to our process -- and we hope that they have contributed to the community's understanding of the role of the National AIDS Policy Coordinator within the White House and our efforts to find the right person for this critical position.

As we said at the meetings, President Clinton is committed to assuring that this Administration has a comprehensive and compassionate policy on HIV/AIDS -- from the White House to every agency of the federal government. Regular discussions with the community, such as those we had last week, are an integral part of assuring that we remain on course.

We know how important the National AIDS Policy Coordinator position is to the HIV/AIDS community. But we also heard how important it is to choose the right person. To that end, we want you to know that we intend to fill this position as expeditiously as possible -- while also being thorough in our outreach and consideration of all qualified candidates.

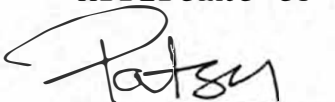

Thanks again for coming to the White House. We look forward to continued communication in the weeks and months ahead.

Sincerely,

Dear Joseph:

We are writing to thank you for having taken the time to meet with us recently about the future of the National AIDS Policy Coordinator's office. These meetings have provided valuable input to our process -- and we hope that they have contributed to the community's understanding of the role of the National AIDS Policy Coordinator within the White House and our efforts to find the right person for this critical position.

As we said at the meetings, President Clinton is committed to assuring that this Administration has a comprehensive and compassionate policy on HIV/AIDS -- from the White House to every agency of the federal government. Regular discussions with the community, such as those we had last week, are an integral part of assuring that we remain on course.

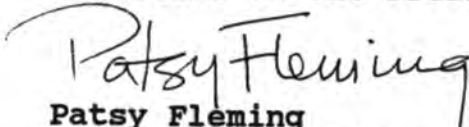

We know how important the National AIDS Policy Coordinator position is to the HIV/AIDS community. But we also heard how important it is to choose the right person. To that end, we want you to know that we intend to fill this position as expeditiously as possible -- while also being thorough in our outreach and consideration of all qualified candidates.

Thanks again for coming to the White House. We look forward to continued communication in the weeks and months ahead.

Sincerely,

Carol H. Rasco
Assistant to the President for Domestic Policy
