Dear Mr. Lee:

I was very pleased to hear that Ms. Gebbie may be able to visit our Second Family (adoption services for children of women dying of AIDS) and Positive Care Program (foster care for children who have tested positive for HIV) in March. The 10th and/or 11th would be fine and have been put on our calendars.

Our staff has indicated that several program participants would be glad to meet Ms. Gebbie and visit with her. Of course, our staff will be available to her, as well.

I think that the best place for the visit would be at our Open Arms program office in Oak Park, a site not terribly far from Hines Hospital. I can send you directions, if you think that location is acceptable.

You had indicated over the phone that Ms. Gebbie would anticipate a visit of about an hour. I look forward to continuing to work with you. Feel free to call or write with any questions, changes, etc.

Sincerely,

Mark A. Cole

Dear Ms. Gebbie:

I was impressed by your appearance, and grateful for it, on the Today show this morning. Your attitude and approach seemed to me to be right on target for the tasks ahead of you and our entire nation. One of my staff colleagues commented that: "It's refreshing to have someone speaking such level-headed wisdom." As one who also is not overly fond of military metaphors, let me say that I appreciate your intention to the way such words shape our attitudes and actions. Lutheran Social Services is a partner in efforts to help life go on in the face of, and in the aftermath of, AIDS. I appreciate how daunting the task can be.

For over 125 years, LSSI has been a partner with the government and community in a wide variety of human services...almost all of them now touched by AIDS. Through over 100 programs in 65 Illinois communities, LSSI's 3,300 staff were able to serve over 200,000 persons last year. Because of a significant grant from the federal government Health and Human Services, LSSI/Second Family program is working directly with parents dying of AIDS, assisting them to find adoptive homes (stand-by guardianship) for their children when death inevitably occurs. Our Positive Care program provides foster care homes for children with HIV. The staff of this program, and our legislative advocacy, working with concerned groups across the state resulted in landmark Illinois legislation establishing for the first time the possibility of "stand-by guardianship" for these children.

I am taking the liberty of enclosing some material about the special programs funded by HHS, specifically dealing with persons with AIDS. I extend to you a personal invitation to visit us to view first-hand this program, the only one of its kind, when you are next in the Chicago area. I also share with you a copy of the Time magazine article which makes mention of the program.

When AIDS Strikes Parents

Who will care for a new generation of orphans—and the youngsters soon to become orphans?

By CHRISTINE GORMAN

TWELVE-YEAR-OLD NICOLE KNOWS more about AIDS than most children her age. She doesn't have the disease or carry the virus, but she has felt its deadly sting just the same. AIDS has taken both her parents. "I was nine years old when my mother died," Nicole (not her real name) calmly begins her story. "She told me that my father did drugs and died of AIDS, and that she got it from him." Nicole's grownup demeanor disappears, however, when she starts to read aloud a letter she wrote in the year after her mother died: "Dear Mom . . . I miss you so much. That day at the funeral I just looked at you, and I saw someone else in the coffin. I was saying to myself, 'That can't be my mother.' She is still in the hospital . . . I knew people had to die. But I never thought about you dying."

Nicole's story is becoming an all too common one in the age of AIDS. At least 30,000 children in the U.S. have lost one or both parents to the scourge, and over the next seven years that number is expected to at least triple. Within this group, Nicole is relatively lucky. She lives with her aunt on Manhattan's Lower East Side, does well in school and dreams of becoming a pediatrician. But perhaps half the AIDS orphans could wind up living in the streets or falling into an overloaded foster-care system. "We're seeing some 3,000 children in the Chicago area who will need placement very soon," says Cathy Blanford of the Lutheran Social Services of Illinois. "I expect the numbers will grow way beyond what anyone can imagine."

No one thought much about this dilemma back when AIDS was considered a disease of unmarried homosexual men. Now women are the fastest-growing segment of the AIDS population. From 1991 to 1992 the number of new cases among women jumped 10%, compared with 2.5% for men. Some of these women have husbands or boyfriends who are bisexual; others pick up the virus because they or their lovers are drug addicts who use contaminated needles. The majority have children.

Although the toll is highest in drug-ridden ghettos, this is not just a big-city phenomenon. Rural Lancaster County, Pennsylvania, best known for Amish festivals and shoofly pie, has seen its drug problems increase as people have moved in from poor neighborhoods in New York City and Philadelphia. Some of the newcomers already harbor the AIDS virus; at least 400 children in the county have either lost or are about to lose a parent to the disease. Often, infected mothers leave large cities and return to places where they grew up, where aunts and grandmothers can take in the children. "Perhaps half the women we see have come home to die," says Jacquelyn Clymore of the AIDS Service Agency in Raleigh, North Carolina.

It is hard enough for a child to lose a parent. But when AIDS is the killer, the pain is all the more profound. Since most of the infected mothers are single parents, no father is around to fill the void. If the mother's drug use had caused her family to spurn her, relatives may be unwilling to care for her kids. Moreover, the stigma of AIDS causes many families to keep the cause of death quiet. The surviving children are isolated in their shame. "If they know, they usually don't tell anybody," Clymore notes. "Not their best friend, not their teachers, not anybody."

The silence takes its toll. With no acceptable outlet for their rage or grief, children often cause trouble in school. Boys, especially, may run afoul of the police.

A nine-year-old boy who lost both parents to AIDS drew his mother in heaven, hovering over his new family on earth

LA MARA NIE TO DEL MO—JP PICTURES FOR TIME

Some teenagers turn to indiscriminate sex or shooting drugs—as though they are daring the AIDS virus to do to them what it did to their parents.

But the cycle does not have to repeat itself. A growing number of community organizations are trying to prevent further tragedy by starting support groups for children orphaned or about to be orphaned by AIDS. Over the past three years, counselors at the St. Francis Center in Washington have helped the kids cope with depression, fear of abandonment, and the lifelike visions some have of their dead parents. "The teenagers, in particular, are caught in a squeeze," says Dottie Ward-Wimmer, a nurse at St. Francis who specializes in grief counseling. "They're older. They're smarter. They know that if their mother had cancer, people would feel sorry for them rather than shun them." Professionals at the Henry Street Settlement in New York City have found that if youngsters talk with one another about what they are going through, they are less likely to fall into self-destructive behavior. They also have an easier time adjusting to their new family.

Social and health agencies are trying to reach more AIDS sufferers before they pass away so that their children can be better prepared. That's not easy. Denial and shame are sometimes so strong that some parents never admit, to officials or anyone else, that they have AIDS. Marina Alvarez is not one of them. She founded a support group in the Bronx, New York, for mothers like herself who are HIV positive. "Information dispels fear," she says. "I can't say that my sons are absolutely O.K. with my illness. I don't think anybody's ever O.K. with a life-threatening illness. But they don't live in shame."

About half the ailing parents die before they designate anyone to take custody of their children. To improve that statistic, both Illinois and New York have enacted laws in the past year that allow parents to name a standby guardian to care for their children on a temporary basis. That way parents with AIDS do not have to give up permanent custody every time they go into the hospital, and they can know who will take in their children after death comes. "We try to match people up while the birth parents are still healthy enough to make good decisions," says Blanford of her Chicago program. "It helps the children make the transition because they have a sense from their parents that this is O.K."

In the Bronx, Michael, 11, and José, 9, learned from their mother that she is infected with the deadly virus

After the guardians take over comes the hard part. The orphans need counseling, and their new families, which may have doubled in size, often require temporary financial and housing support. "For many families a little help at a critical time can make a big difference," says Carol Levine of the AIDS Orphans Project in New York. Otherwise, the newly blended families can break apart under the strain, and the orphans end up in foster care.

Some social workers believe communities may have to open orphanages. But they envision institutions that are smaller and more homelike than the cheerless warehouses of old. Whatever the strategy, society will need to pay more attention to AIDS orphans. "In the next 10 years a lot of the families who are presently coping will not be able to do it any longer," Levine predicts. "There are not enough grandmothers to raise these children." ■

Second Family Program

“I’ve got AIDS. But I can still give my children
a future.”

- Medical care
- Help with laundry, cooking and cleaning
- Childcare
- Help managing bills and money
- Transportation

Second Family will help you plan your children's future.

- Your children can stay with you as long as possible.
- We'll work with you to choose family or friends to care for your children. Or we'll help you find another loving family.
- We'll give the second family you choose all the training and support they need to provide the best possible care for your children.

- You'll have peace of mind knowing your children are in good hands – permanently.

If you wish, we'll help you choose family members, friends or another loving family to care for your children.

Giving and receiving love...being safe...being cared for when you're sick...enjoying a smile or laughter...these are things we all need. The things that allow each individual to flourish. If you can help a child experience these wonderful aspects of life, there is a child waiting for you.

Positive Care

providing foster care for children who have tested HIV-Positive

Every child flourishes in a loving, nurturing home. Every child deserves that chance to flourish.

Tragically, many children are not getting their chance. Instead, they are viewing the world from a room in a hospital or shelter. These children are among the increasing number of infants born with the Human Immunodeficiency Virus (HIV). The good news is that between 50 and 80 percent of babies born HIV-positive will not develop AIDS (Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome) and will grow up to live healthy lives. The other babies, however, will develop AIDS and will eventually be symptomatic.

Open Arms, a foster care, adoption and maternity services program of Lutheran Social Services of Illinois, is looking for families who will open their arms to children born HIV-positive.

Many of the children's parents are too ill to care for them, or are unable to provide a home for their child for other reasons. Like all children, these babies, toddlers and older children need to be held, and talked to, and need to learn how to smile and to feel love. Like all children, these children need a home. Maybe a home like yours.

*Research on AIDS and the HIV virus shows that it is spread only from the exchange of body fluids through the following:

- sexual contact with an infected partner
- the sharing of contaminated needles and syringes
- perinatally (before or during birth)
- or, through blood transfusions infected with the virus

The majority of babies born HIV-positive are born to infected mothers who passed the virus on during pregnancy or birth.

*The HIV Virus and AIDS are not spread through:

- hugging
- sharing eating utensils
- kissing
- sneezing
- changing diapers
- sharing towels
- in short, any kind of casual contact

Caring for a child who has tested HIV-positive does not pose a danger to you, your family or your neighbors. The Surgeon General's report states, "AIDS comes from sexual contacts with infected persons and from the sharing of syringes and needles. There is no danger of infection with AIDS virus by casual social contact."

The "Pediatric Guidelines for Infection Control of Human Immunodeficiency Virus (Acquired Immunodeficiency Virus) in Hospitals, Medical Offices, Schools and Other Settings," reports that body fluids such as tears, saliva, urine and stool contain such low concentrations of HIV that there is no evidence of transmission through contact with these fluids.

Foster parents (families) can be married couples or single people of almost any age (at least over 21). The requirements to be a foster family are:

- good physical health
- adequate income to meet the family's existing needs
- a safe, clean and well ventilated dwelling (house or apartment) with proper space, lighting and heating.

The most important requirement for foster parenting is a love of children and an ability to provide for their physical, emotional and special medical needs.

The Surgeon General's Report on Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome, U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, October 1986.*

"Pediatric Guidelines for Infection Control of Human Immunodeficiency Virus (Acquired Immunodeficiency Virus) in Hospitals, Medical Offices, Schools and Other Settings," American Academy of Pediatrics, Task Force on Pediatric Aids, Pediatrics, Vol. 82, No. 5, Nov. 1988.

To prepare you for your special role as a foster parent, Open Arms provides:

- pre and post-placement training
- social workers available at all times
- a monthly stipend to help meet the special needs of the child
- a medical card for each child
- the expertise of doctors and nurses at specialized infectious disease medical centers
- a support group made-up of other families providing foster care for HIV-positive children
- other supportive services for the child, such as counseling or physical therapy.

Please call Open Arms, (708) 445-8341, to learn more about becoming a foster parent for a child who is HIV-positive.

Dear Friends,

During the past few years, we have asked you to join our 125th Anniversary Campaign to Keep A Light Shining. Your response has shown that you believe in brightening the lives of people in need. In June 1993, we conclude this campaign having surpassed our $10 million goal. The details of our success can be found on pages 10-11 and in the Financial Summary, which reports on 1992, our anniversary year.

But numbers are only a small part of the story. The real measure of success is people. People whose lives have changed because of LSSI services. People who dedicate their lives to helping others. People who give of themselves to support an organization they believe in.

This is the real story of LSSI's ministry. Our 1992 Annual Report is a tribute to the many people who make LSSI work: A young mother and former client, who now works as a student intern with clients like herself... a program board member devoted to improving his community... a foster mother who cares for numerous foster children and their parents. I invite you to turn the page and meet just a handful of the many individuals who sustain LSSI. Quite simply, these people are LSSI.

You, too, are LSSI. Thank you for your emotional and financial support during the campaign effort. Because of you, we look toward the future with confidence... and the light shines on.

Who: Rosy Stone
What: Foster Mom
LSSI Central Region
Where: Peoria, Illinois

Statewide, there were 181 reported "cocaine babies" in 1985. In 1992, that figure soared to 3,287. LSSI foster care parents are on the front line, responding to this startling increase in the number of children affected by their mothers' addiction to drugs.

Rosy is close to some of the parents of her foster children. "One of them calls me Mom," she says. "I treat her like I talk to my own. I tell her things nobody else can. I say, 'You want to make your life better, then you're gonna have to go out and do better things.'"

Rosy is LSSI.

"When my little girl died (I call her little, but she was 20), I just didn't have anything to do. She had Down Syndrome. I was in a depression and I'd just sit around. My daughter suggested I try foster care.

"I said, 'You've got to be kidding!'"

But Rosy Stone did try foster care. And over the past six years she's taken 39 children into her home. After raising 11 children on her own, she figured she was ready for anything. Right now she cares for three foster children, ages 1, 2 and 3, and three grandchildren, the oldest being 16. Visit her on any afternoon and her house is, well, busy.

Why does she do it? "Oh golly! If you come when I put them all to bed then I can tell you. They're laying there sleeping peacefully and you look back over the day and think about all the things you've done. You feel like you've really done something worthwhile.

"These kids have all kinds of problems. They say, 'Oh Granny, you have so much food. I only got pork chops and rice once a month, on my mother's payday.' Or 'Oh Granny, you wash your dishes everyday!'"

"It's the little, simple things they notice. A cookie or a cracker is like a big party to them. A bath, a parade, shopping—things most kids wouldn't even want to do."

Rosy also helps LSSI by recruiting more foster parents. "People ask me about it all the time. I say, go with Lutheran. Because we're just like a family. You know that when you call there you can always get help."

In fact, Rosy credits Janet Davis, her case worker, with helping to keep her sane. After all, living with a houseful of children can get to anyone after a while. "When I get disgusted, I just call Janet," she says.

She turns to Janet. "Close your ears," she tells her. "I brag on Lutheran all the time," she whispers.

It wasn't in her original plans, but Rosy is now adopting two of her foster children. They're brother and sister, and each arrived when they were just a week old. "They don't know anyone but us," Rosy says. "They're just like members of the family."

LSSI/LOGOS Habitat for Humanity
Where: Cairo, Illinois

More than 80,000 people in Illinois are homeless and close to 300,000 live in substandard housing. In partnership with Habitat for Humanity International and LOGOS, Inc., Lutheran Social Services of Illinois is rehabbing and building affordable and safe homes for people in one of the state's poorest regions.

"I want something good to happen for Cairo," says Bill. "I don't have all the answers, but I'm going to do what I can to make something good happen."

Bill is LSSI.

Eight-year-old D.J. held his arm up with great urgency. He had a question to ask Annette and Bill, the two people interviewing his parents about their new house. The adults in the room were talking about things like sweat equity and no-interest mortgages. D.J.'s question was about something more basic and important to an 8-year-old. "What is it, D.J.?" someone finally asked.

He looked at volunteer Bill Harrell and program director Annette Zilligen and asked, "Will there be rats in my new house? Because I'm afraid of rats."

Cairo Fire Chief Bill Harrell does many things and plays many roles in the LSSI/LOGOS Habitat for Humanity housing ministry. He serves on the board, he volunteers his time to work on the houses, he donates the hostel space where work crews stay, and he is often host and tour guide for work crews.

Explains Bill, "A number of years back I would complain about things and somebody said to me one day, 'you don't have a right to complain because you're not doing anything to make things better.' So I took that as a challenge."

Says Bill, "I'm involved with a lot of projects in town, but Habitat is my favorite. I really enjoy meeting the people who come here in the work groups. I'm drawn to them. I like the exchange of ideas, views and even cultures."

"I also enjoy working with the families we help. After they get in the house, their lives change. They see another life. The kids go to school and talk about their new house with pride."

Bill's work with LSSI/LOGOS Habitat over the past seven years has helped build one house and rehab four homes. Two more homes are in the process of being rehabbed now.

D.J., his mom and dad, and two little brothers moved out of the transient hotel they had lived in for five years and moved into their own home. For the first time in the children's lives, they each have a bed, the two older boys have bikes, and much to D.J.'s relief, there are no rats.

What: Parent, Volunteer and Cook

Head Start
Where: Humboldt Park, Chicago

Nationwide, 36 percent of staff at Head Start programs are parents of current or former students. At LSSI's four inner-city Head Start programs, the figure jumps to 51 percent, with 18 out of 35 staff members who are parents. This reflects a holistic commitment to the entire family by involving parents in their child's care and helping them find employment.

"I got plans for her," Tony says. "I don't want her to grow up here. There's too many gangs."

CLINTON LIBRARY PHOTOCOPY

Yolanda is LSSI.

Yolanda Velez started volunteering because she was bored. She was home and had nothing to do. At Trinidad Lutheran Head Start, where her daughter went to pre-school, she began helping to teach the kids their shapes and colors. She came every day for five months. Then a job opened up. Now, Yolanda is the cook at Trinidad, planning and preparing two meals a day for more than 70 people.

"I didn't know what to do before," Yolanda says. "At least when I came here I wasn't always sitting around. It felt good to be with kids and help them. Now I'm learning how to cook, different kinds of food, too."

Head Start's goal is to help children by working with the whole family. When Yolanda makes lunch, she makes enough for parents who may drop by the school, which is housed in a church basement in this low-income community. When parents feel good about themselves, they will begin to have aspirations for their children. That's why Trinidad Director Cindy Robertson gave Yolanda material to study for her G.E.D. With just a little more work, Yolanda will be ready to take the test.

There have been other changes in Yolanda's life since she got involved with LSSI. Tony, her husband, has become more involved in the family. He takes care of Jessica, who's 4, every morning and brings her to school in the afternoon. He's even come to some parent meetings recently.

"It helps with how you can talk to and treat your kids," Tony says. "How to teach them what to do, and what not to do."

Yolanda's new job is important for the family because after being severely beaten on the streets of Humboldt Park this summer, Tony suffers from blood clots in his head and can't work.

"I want Jessica to become someone," Yolanda says. "Maybe teach. That's what I want to do. I really want to be a teacher. But first I need my G.E.D."

Who: Dorothy Buresh
What: Resident
Forsberg Village
Where: Moline, Illinois

The number of Americans over 65 is increasing six times faster than the rest of the population. Forsberg Village presents a unique retirement living option for this group.

"What would I do if I didn't work?" asks Dorothy, who's still full-time at The Dispatch. "I would sit around and plan my funeral. Instead, I'm planning what I'm going to wear on my next date!"

Dorothy is LSSI.

"I have far more interesting things to do than worry about my finances." This is crystal clear as soon as you meet Dorothy Buresh.

She answers the door dressed for company, with a spread of food that could feed a king. And who knows, one might drop by. In 1977 she was knighted by the king of Belgium for her extensive news coverage of Moline's Belgian community. During 50-plus years as a reporter, Dorothy has interviewed celebrities such as Ronald Reagan and Jerry Lewis. She has two weekly columns in The Dispatch and also writes features and news—including the first story about Forsberg Village, the LSSI housing development for seniors. At the time she never dreamed it would become her home.

When she decided to move there and sell her house after her husband died, she wrote about the experience of packing and moving on in her column. Now at Forsberg for three years, she continues to write frequently about the new community she has found at the "home," as she calls it. "I write what pops in my head," Dorothy says. "It's the way I feel about it. I really like it here."

Her columns are printed testimony to the benefits of LSSI services. Her words proclaim the joy of an active older adult.

"I like the way Forsberg Village is set up financially," Dorothy says. "It's a different concept than ordinary condominiums. Fees are kept down because we are all tight seniors who believe in economizing where we can."

She also likes knowing her money will be spent well by the management. "The Swedes have centuries of experience making money stretch," she explains. "We Irish will continue to spend it."

Heritage is something Dorothy has been able to share since moving here. "I'm Catholic and I think the Lutherans were a little bit shaky about me to begin with," she laughs. "I think we've learned to talk about religion. Our church and the Lutheran Church get together on many projects. We get to know each other a little better if we live close together and have time to talk."

Talking is a pastime at Forsberg Village. There's plenty of food left tonight and many other nights. Dorothy loves to cook and has the neighbors over often. On Thursdays they have a movie and a catered dinner in the community room down the hall.

"I feel relaxed here," she says. "The place is very well run. They want me to be happy."

“I can get excited about LSSI,” says the Rev. Gerald Nelson. As chairperson of the Tri-Synod Campaign for LSSI's 125th Anniversary Campaign, Pastor Nelson convinced ELCA congregations and pastors across Illinois to join in his excitement.

“Because of the campaign,” he says, “more people know the story of LSSI, and they know it in a deeper way. It's a wonderful thing to be able to say, ‘This is what your church is doing.’”

Nelson, who is pastor at Our Saviour's Lutheran Church in Naperville, highlights two reasons why he supports LSSI:

“One, I admire greatly the way the agency is operated. There's purpose, planning and direction. We know where we're going and what our mission is.

“The other thing is that LSSI is an embodiment of what we preach. It's one way to carry out what the Gospel says—to walk the talk. It's the Gospel's love taking on form.”

125 Years of Ministry

...and the light shines on!

Thanks to you—congregations, individuals, foundations and corporations—it's already clear that when the 125th Anniversary Campaign to Keep a Light Shining draws to a close in June of 1993, the $10 million goal will have been far surpassed.

At the end of fiscal year 1992, campaign gifts and commitments already exceeded $12.1 million—a clear sign that you want to improve people's lives by making social services in Illinois more available and more extensive.

You responded with conviction to support LSSI in this multi-year effort. Many of you made outright gifts and grants. Others responded by making a gift in their will or estate plan. Thanks for ensuring that our work will continue. Together we will keep a light shining for people in need in the years to come.

Who: Gloria and Donna Lomax
What: Mother and Daughter
Staff Members
Augustana Center
Where: Rogers Park, Chicago

In 1992 Augustana Center provided intensive nursing care for 159 children with severe disabilities. Another 394 Augustana clients, or 71 percent, live in more homelike environments, such as foster care, group homes or their own family homes.

"I knew that kids like this existed," Donna says, "but I never knew that I would get as attached to them as I am now."

Gloria and Donna are LSSI.

Gloria Lomax's first day of work was horrible. She didn't think she'd come back. During orientation she saw a child having a seizure and she was terrified.

"I hadn't realized that there were children like this," she says. "They were kind of scary. But then all of that just left. You got a heart for them now and you feel it. You just feel good about them."

After 18 years as a child care worker at Augustana Center, Gloria obviously feels good about her job. So good, she recruited her daughter to come aboard. Donna has been teaching at the center for 10 years.

"Growing up you see babies born all normal, everything's OK, and it never clicks in your head that something can happen to make them become...", Donna reaches for a word.

Her mom finds it: "Special."

Donna nods and turns to Crystal, who's sitting in the wheelchair beside her. In a singsong voice Donna says, "Hey girlfriend, Mom talks about you all the time. She's always saying, 'Oh she's just so cute!'"

Gloria laughs heartily. "Sometimes I think my family thinks I put these kids before them. They say, 'Where were you Thanksgiving?' I say, 'With my family.' 'Where?' 'On the job,' I say. That's right! And I will be here Christmas, too."

Mother and daughter both give their all to the children in their care, and sometimes this has a price tag. Residents' severe medical problems mean that staff always know a client may die, but it still hurts.

"You're better than me," Donna tells her mother.

"Yeah, well sometimes I'll be thinking that it was for the best," Gloria says. "Some of these children can't walk or talk at all. I guess I feel when they pass on they're walking and talking in another place, doing the things that they didn't get the chance to do here."

There are sad moments, but Gloria is glad she stuck it out that first day. So is Donna. "It takes a while to make accomplishments," Donna says. "You don't want to stop right in the middle and say, 'well I'm going on to another job.' Because you'll never know if that child will learn what you were working on."

Donna smiles lovingly at Crystal and says, "I ain't going nowhere!"

Who: Ernest Bawkins
What: Alumni
Alcoholism-Drug
Dependence Program
Residence for Men
Where: South Shore,
Chicago

A client who stays at least three months in an LSSI halfway house has a 91 percent chance of recovery after discharge. A strong network of alumni serves as role models and significantly contributes to this high success rate.

"As a teacher in a low-income area, when Ernest brings someone into his classroom to talk about substance abuse it's wonderful," says Skip.
"Those kids need all the positive role models they can possibly get."

Ernest is LSSI.

Most families quarrel over dinner. Life at a halfway house isn't much different. Director Skip Land has his fork in mid-air when Tony comes in.

"Where you been?"

The excuses roll. "At the doctor. I needed to get checked. I'm OK. Really, I just had to go to the doctor."

Skip badgers Tony and other residents throw in a few jeers. It's clear to everyone that Tony isn't telling the whole truth. House rules say you have to stay drug-free and take care of yourself, and Tony's an addict and a diabetic who won't stay away from junk food. "He's got to want to make it work," Skip explains later.

The badgering is playful, but also serious. The message is, "Hey, we care. But you have to, too."

Ernest Bawkins, a former resident who's over for dinner tonight, sends Tony another unspoken message: "I made it. So can you." Ernest is living a sober, successful life as a musician and school teacher.

"Substance abusers think they know a lot more than they do," Skip says. "When you come back here when you're straight, you can't help but see this. You look at the guys and say, 'That was me!'"

Ernest laughs. "Right. And you say, 'I looked like that?'"

There's a feeling of easy comradie in this building on a quiet Chicago street. It's what made treatment here work for Ernest. It still helps him. He knows that if he gets too comfortable, he might slip back into using. "I need to be in touch with other people that suffer from this disease," he explains. "Coming here keeps me on the straight and narrow."

Ernest knows too well how easy it is to slip. He started using heavily after graduating from college, when he was playing his saxophone full-time. He went through treatment in 1987 but went right back out on the streets. Two years later he'd had enough. He had lost his apartment, his horns and his career. He'd seen a teenager accidentally kill his friend while playing Russian roulette with a gun in a drug house.

Now he's found some balance to his music career by teaching part-time for the Chicago school system, the Park District and Columbia College. He goes to 12-step meetings and is still linked to the LSSI residence. Ernest also chairs the all-city halfway house softball league, which he started when he was at LSSI. He's a real role model for guys like Tony.

"I'm coming back here for me," Ernest says. "To remind me where I came from. This keeps me on my toes."

Who: Lora Stephenitch
What: Program Graduate and Intern
LSSI First Steps to Parenting
Where: Dixon, Illinois

Sixty-eight percent of clients in the LSSI First Steps program went back to school after their child was born. Statewide, less than one-third of pregnant teens who quit school ever return.

"The girls need somebody their own age that's been through it," Lora says.

"Granted, older people have been through the parenting steps, but we've been through it in the 90s!"

Lora is LSSI.

"I was kind of scared, like, oh no, what do I say? But I thought, I'll just ask them about their problems and see if I can relate. And so far I have."

Lora relates well to the teenage mother she visits through LSSI's parenting program for young mothers. She just finished the program herself. A few months later she began an internship as a home visitor, earning credit toward her college course work.

Lora lives on her own with her 3 1/2-year-old daughter, Amanda, and plans to graduate this May from Sauk Valley Community College. Then, Lora hopes, they'll move to DeKalb where she'll continue her studies in social work.

"I want Amanda to have all these high aspirations in life," Lora says. "And I want her to know that you don't always need to depend on people."

Lora learned the hard way that you can't always depend on people, such as her daughter's father, who isn't really there for Amanda or Lora. "We've been through it all," the 21-year-old says.

Brook, her client who at 17 just gave birth to an infant son, finds Lora's experience reassuring. It gives proof to what the LSSI staff say, that she will make it.

"I think it helped me a lot when Lora came along because she's more my own age," Brook says, pausing to coo to her son, Jacob. She wipes some dribble from Jacob's face like she's been doing it for years and looks up. "It makes it a little less scary."

"At first I felt really bad. It kind of feels like your whole life's over," Brook laughs nervously. "When I told my mom I was pregnant, I wanted to take her to McDonald's so she couldn't yell at me."

Weekly visits with Lora definitely help. "Lora was mine first. I'm not sharing!" Brook jokes, when the LSSI supervisor talks about assigning Lora to work with a second young mother.

As Lora learns the ropes of the social work profession, she thinks her own experience helps her understand clients even better. "I just feel more... sophisticated," she explains. "I was really excited about doing this, talking with other girls. This is what I wanted to do. I feel like—" Lora clenches her hands, "YES!"

Treasurer's Report

After completing his tenure on the LSSI Board of Directors at the end of fiscal year 1992, Bob Jones continues to volunteer financial expertise by serving on the Board's Finance Committee.

As LSSI concludes its 125th year, we are proud to present the financial reports of our most recent ministry efforts.

For the fiscal year ended June 30, 1992, total revenues grew by more than 13% to a total of $75.4 million, marking the fourth consecutive year of more than 10% growth. Total agency incomes now have grown by more than 81% since fiscal 1988. In the past year, the largest growth area was in services to children, which grew by $3.6 million, or 24%. Services to people with substance abuse grew by $1.6 million, or 32%, as LSSI assisted in the management and successful opening of The Women's Treatment Center in Chicago.

Much of LSSI's growth has resulted from its partnership with the State of Illinois and other governmental entities. This relationship is, in many senses, a two-edged sword. It enables the agency to greatly expand services to many more people in need: governmental income has increased from 55% in 1988 to 63% of total fiscal income in 1992.

But increased reliance on government funding also severely constricts financial assets. From 1988 to 1992, while the agency's financial operations grew by 81%, the amount owed to the agency by its customers, primarily the state of Illinois, grew from $3.2 million to $11.2 million — a 250% increase. Other resources are tied up in advance payments to the state's Medicaid Assessment program — the "nursing home tax." And, as a result of financial pressures and economic declines within the state, rate increases for most services have been limited or nonexistent in recent years. To limit risk from these factors, LSSI has diversified its services over a number of state agencies and other governmental funding sources, while broadening services to fee-paying clients.

The success of the 125th Anniversary Campaign and other fund-raising efforts have further enabled the agency to decrease reliance on governmental income and to withstand payment delays. Some of the proceeds of the campaign have supported the agency's ongoing operations.

The agency has increased its financial base over the past years, sometimes significantly, but resources remain thin. Many of the traditional financial measurement tools and ratios reveal an agency with minimal resources available for expansion into services not governmentally funded or requiring significant capital investment.

Some assets shown on the agency's balance sheet are not readily available. For instance, more than $2 million represents the overfunding of the agency's pension plan. This asset is presented in conformance with accounting rules, but does not represent funds available for program support or operations. Significant assets consist of receivables awaiting payment by the state or other governmental funders. Property assets are highly leveraged. Surpluses enjoyed by subsidiaries funded by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development can only be expended at these projects. As of June 30, $1.3 million has been placed in reserve for these facilities. In short, LSSI's finances are improved, but continue to need the generous support of contributors.

One of the highlights in the financial area has been the growth and success of The Cornerstone Foundation. As of June 30, almost $3.4 million of the net assets of the agency has been raised by or entrusted to the Board of Trustees of the Foundation for the future support of LSSI. However, by action of the donors and/or the Board of Directors of LSSI, these funds are unavailable for current support of the agency — only the income earned on these funds will support future operations and thus assure future service delivery.

The following pages present the financial statements for Lutheran Social Services of Illinois and its subsidiary and supporting corporations; we invite you to review them, and to direct any questions to the agency's Business Services Division at 708/635-4650. Thank you for your past — and future — support.

Respectfully submitted,

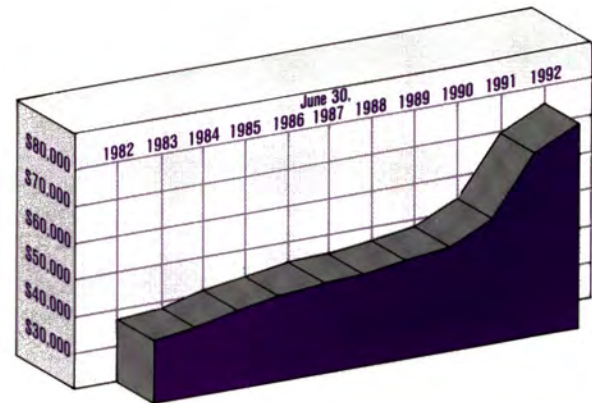

Robert H. Jones, Treasurer
Lutheran Social Services of Illinois

Operating Income Sources

As this illustration depicts, LSSI depends heavily on governmental partners and service fees for funding in order to provide programming — 88% of LSSI's budget comes from these two sources. Contributions represent 7% of total income, and provide the solid fiscal foundation that enables the agency to carry out its mission.

Expenditures

LSSI is proud of the fact that it spends only 6% of its total expenditures on administration and fund raising. The vast majority of expenditures — 94% — go toward programmatic services.

"I worked hard as a young father, and in my 30 years of conscientious, intense working I was able to support my family. My kids got through college and got married. At that point, I did not need a large bank account. I needed to do something that I felt was worthwhile. So I looked for some way that I could help.

"As chair of the LSSI Board of Directors, I get to help people who are helping people by sharing my management and real estate experience.

"I'm born and raised in Chicago and I like the fact that I'm helping generally, but specifically I like the fact that I'm helping in my big home town."

Wayne White, Sycamore
D. Ray Wilson, Dundee

"My mother — my adoptive mother — was a volunteer at Augustana Center when it first changed from being an orphanage to a home for disabled children. Her doctor, who was also affiliated with Augustana, arranged my adoption. Every time we drove by, my mother would say, 'That's where you were born, that's where we first saw you!'"

"To me it's the most special of all the parts of the agency because those children are the most helpless. They really depend solely on other people."

You are LSSI.

On the preceding pages you met a few of the individuals who make LSSI possible. Yet there are so many more. Several of our many outstanding volunteers are highlighted on the following pages. Here we also acknowledge those of you who made financial contributions or gifts-in-kind to the agency between January 1 and December 31, 1992. Thank you for sustaining this ministry.

Benefactors

Benefactors are those donors who made gifts totaling $10,000 or more to Lutheran Social Services of Illinois.

...Ben Westre, who chairs
The Cornerstone Foundation.
"The Cornerstone Foundation is another way of exciting people to be involved," Ben says. "It works with tomorrow's money — through wills, insurance and other estate planning. For one thing, it's easy — you don't have to dig in and write a check right now. And, it's for sure.
You sign a commitment. That money is going to be there. For me it's a way to carry out the values I was raised by: To leave this place a better spot than I found it."

...Juana Cosme, for running the food and clothing pantry at LSSI's Hispanic Ministry. Juana volunteers four days a week, distributing food and clothing to low-income families in Humboldt Park. "This is therapy for me," Juana says, explaining that her work carries out what her daughter started. Her daughter Marina was an LSSI case worker who died of cancer in 1991.

...Marge Pozzi, for more than 30 years of volunteer service to Salem Village. Marge is a former member of the LSSI Board of Directors and current president of the Friends of Salem, an auxiliary that sponsors fund-raising events to benefit the Joliet nursing home. She also works hands-on with residents and knows most of them by name. Marge's commitment is unbounded; she hosts a yearly picnic for residents at her home and invites them there again at Christmas, to enjoy her decorations.
