NIDR

NATIONAL INSTITUTE FOR DISPUTE
RESOLUTION

12 April 1994

Dear Colleague:

On behalf of the National Institute for Dispute Resolution's Board of Directors and staff, I invite you to an informal reception on Thursday, May 5, 1994 from 5:30 p.m. to 7:30 p.m. at the Rayburn House Office Building, Room 2237. NIDR is pleased to co-host this reception with the National Black Caucus of State Legislators.

The reception will honor the leaders of the National Council of State Dispute Resolution Programs (NCSDRP). The Council serves as a forum for information exchange and technical support among the country's statewide offices of dispute resolution. For the past decade, NIDR has supported the development of these programs. These offices, located in seventeen states, serve as resources to promote and provide dispute resolution services to state governments, communities and citizens. The state offices' programs address a range of issues, from the courts and legislation to healthcare policy and prevention of youth violence.

NIDR wants to acknowledge the significant contributions that these state leaders have made as mediators of complex public issues involving communities and government at all levels. Thank you for your consideration of this invitation.

Please share this invitation with colleagues interested in using mediation, consensus building, collaborative problem solving, and dispute resolution to address conflicts in the public arena.

We look forward to your attendance.

Sincerely,

Margery F. Baker
