H. CON. RES. 29

Expressing the sense of the Congress that a national summit of sports, political, community, and media leaders should be promptly convened to develop a multifaceted action plan to deter acts of violence, especially domestic violence and sexual assault.

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

FEBRUARY 27, 1997

Mr. SANDERS (for himself and Mrs. MORELLA) submitted the following concurrent resolution; which was referred to the Committee on Education and the Workforce

CONCURRENT RESOLUTION

Expressing the sense of the Congress that a national summit of sports, political, community, and media leaders should be promptly convened to develop a multifaceted action plan to deter acts of violence, especially domestic violence and sexual assault.

Whereas involvement in sports commonly places individuals in a unique context of competition that provides an opportunity to teach, learn, and hone qualities of responsible citizenship, including values that promote self-respect and respect for others, and deter acts of violence, especially domestic violence and sexual assault;

Whereas professional and amateur athletes and sports coaches are role models with great national influence and have helped to positively shape the lives of countless individuals;

Whereas professional and amateur athletes, and sports coaches, administrators, volunteers, and team owners have participated in a variety of outstanding and valuable community service projects throughout the Nation;

Whereas many professional and amateur sports organizations have instituted educational programs and other measures to deter and sanction misconduct, including abuse of legal and illegal drugs, illegal gambling, discriminatory practices, and other unethical behavior;

Whereas acts of domestic violence and sexual assault are serious, indefensible crimes;

Whereas acts of domestic violence and sexual assault committed by athletes are often not taken seriously and go unpunished, sending an insidious and harmful message that this behavior is excusable and is not criminal;

Whereas most athletes do not commit acts of domestic violence or sexual assault and these athletes, as role models, can have a profound impact in deterring others from committing acts of domestic violence and sexual assault;

Whereas there exists a Citizenship Through Sports Alliance that is made up of the National Collegiate Athletic Association, the National Junior College Athletic Association, the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics, the National Federation of State High School Associations, the United States Olympic Committee, Major League Baseball, the National Football League, the National Basketball Association, and the National Hockey League; and

Whereas the Congress supports the existing activities of the Citizenship Through Sports Alliance and its member organizations and encourages a broader array of efforts to promote responsible citizenship by teaching administrators, coaches, and athletes values that will help all who participate in our Nation's sports culture to become better citizens: Now, therefore, be it

- 1 Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate
- 2 concurring), That it is the sense of the Congress that—

- 16 leaders with specific expertise in education and
- 17 advocacy programs that serve to deter acts of
- 18
- 19
- 20

1 violence, especially domestic violence and sexual
2 assault;

3 (3) the action plan referred to in paragraph (1)
4 should—

5 (A) be designed to encourage the participa-
6 tion of all administrators, coaches, and athletes,
7 from those involved in youth leagues to those
8 who are involved in professional sports;

9 (B) emphasize and promote values such as
10 self-respect and respect for others, tolerance,
11 non-discrimination, and gender equality as well
12 as teamwork, discipline, responsibility, and com-
13 mitment;

14 (C) encourage and promote participation in 15 sports as a positive character building activity;

16 (D) promote a sports culture that encour-
17 ages integrity, honesty, fairness, inclusion, tol-
18 erance, nonviolence, and a commitment to excel-
19 lence; and

20 (E) include a high-profile public education
21 program and media campaign to deter acts of 22 violence, especially domestic violence and sexual 23 assault; and

1 (4) the members of the national summit re-
2 ferred to in paragraph (1), and other sports, com-
3 munity, political and media leaders should assume
4 leadership roles deterring acts of domestic violence

25 of property and assets, child custody orders, and

CONCURRENT RESOLUTION

Expressing the sense of Congress with respect to child custody, child abuse, and victims of domestic and family violence.

Whereas spousal violence has serious detrimental effects on children, even when they do not directly witness such violence;

Whereas courts still hold women to higher standards of conduct than they do men;

Whereas gender bias still exists within the courts, particularly those making and affecting child custody determinations;

Whereas gender bias has long existed and still exists within the mental health system;

Whereas, as a result of this gender bias, many myths are that women make false allegations of domestic violence or child abuse, and most particularly of child sexual abuse, during divorce and custody proceedings;

Whereas false accusations by women are in fact rare, occurring no more often than do other false reports of crimes, such as bank robbery;

Whereas the myth that women make false accusations is so widely believed that many child protective service agents have policies of not bothering to investigate such allegations when made during the pendency of divorce or custody proceedings or only superficially investigate such allegations;

Whereas there are many myths that fathers are discriminated against in custody proceedings, even though fathers fighting for custody actually win sole custody or joint custody in 70 percent of these disputes;

Whereas the American Psychological Association's Presidential Task Force on violence and the Family has found that—

- (1) many therapists lack training to identify or assess family violence;

- (2) fathers who abuse their children's mothers are more likely to dispute custody and visitation than are fathers who are not violent;

- (3) those who batter their partners deny, lie about, or minimize their abusiveness and manipulate the courts and even their therapists, often by making false accusations that their victim is abusing them or the children;

- (4) mutual violence between spouses is rare;

- (5) witnessing one parent abuse the other is a form of psychological maltreatment of the child;

(6) children often become the secondary victims of batterers;

(7) physical separation often increases a man's need to control his partner and his children;

(9) mediation is generally inappropriate when there is domestic or family violence and may increase the violence;

(10) couples counseling is controversial in families where there is domestic or family violence because it may increase the violence;

(11) joint legal or physical custody arrangements forced on one or both parents are often detrimental to the well-being of the child and lead to worse outcomes for the child than when only one parent remains present and active in the child's life;

(12) women seldom make false reports of child abuse or battering;

(13) child sexual abuse allegations do not increase during divorce, but occur in only two to three percent of divorce cases and less than 10 percent of contested custody cases, and that child sexual abuse allegations are confirmed as often in custody cases as at other times when objective investigations are performed;

(14) it is common for children to recant child sexual abuse allegations, but that this does not mean that their earlier report was false;

(15) there is no data to support the phenomenon of parent alienation syndrome, although courts and custody evaluators frequently use the term to discount the children's fear in hostile and psychologically abusive situations;

(16) psychological evaluators not trained in domestic violence ignore or minimize the violence and give inappropriate pathological labels to women's responses to chronic victimization, including "parental alienation" to blame mothers for their children's reasonable fear or anger toward their violent fathers;

(17) because of the intergenerational cycle of abuse, a child is often at risk of abuse from grandparents who have raised an abusive child;

(18) removing children from their homes is not always safe or helpful as children in foster homes are at high risk for abuse by other adults or other children in foster care; and

(19) children who have a strong relationship with their mothers are most able to heal from abuse;

Whereas many courts and professionals use the baseless parental alienation syndrome to force mothers into joint or shared parenting arrangements or to give custody to fathers, especially when mothers try to protect themselves or their children from men who abuse them or their children;

Whereas parental alienation syndrome thinking has largely influenced legislation and judicial preference for "friendly parent" provisions, which favor giving custody to the parent who better fosters a good relationship between the child and the other parent;

Whereas almost every custody evaluator or judge recognizes how important it is for a child to have its comfort object particularly in times of stress, but often fails to recognize the importance for the child of maintaining its living arrangement with the child's fit prime custodial parent;

Whereas Congress never intended that the Parental Kidnapping Prevention Act be used—

(1) to encourage forcing shared parenting arrangements when it is not in the child's best interest;

(2) to prohibit an abused or protective parent from protecting themselves or their child;

(3) as a tool to punish a child for the parent's behavior by removing physical custody from a fit abused or protective parent; or

(4) as a tool to punish abused or protective parents who act to protect themselves or their children;

Whereas when there is domestic or family violence or major discord between the parents, shared parenting arrangements, couples counseling, or mediation arrangements only exacerbate the difficulties of the children and give the abusive parent more tools with which to victimize the other members of the family;

Whereas children who grow up not seeing abusive parents clearly held accountable for their abuse are reinforced in believing that domestic and family violence are socially acceptable and effective means of behavior; and

Whereas every State has legislation or judicial decisions that base its custody determinations on what is in the best interests of the child, but that only West Virginia recognizes the importance of the child maintaining its primary residence with a fit custodial parent: Now, therefore, be it

1 Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate
2 concurring), That it is the sense of Congress that—

3 (1) for purposes of determining child custody, it
4 is not in the best interest of children to—

5 (A) not have a presumption that children
6 should have their main physical residence with

1 their prime custodial parent unless that parent
2 is unfit;

3 (B) force parents to share custody over the
4 objection of one or both parents or when there
5 is a history of domestic or family violence;

6 (C) punish abused or protective parents
7 who protect themselves or their children;

8 (D) presume that allegations of domestic
9 and family violence are likely to be made falsely
10 or for tactical advantage during custody and di-
11 vorce proceedings; and

12 (E) make "friendly parent" provisions a
13 factor when there is abuse by one parent
14 against the other or a child;

15 (2) child abuse and child sexual abuse allega-
16 tions should be fully and impartially investigated re-
17 gardless of when they are raised or whether the child
18 has recanted the allegation; and

19 (3) States should be far more protective of vic-
20 tims of domestic and family violence in custody and 21 visitation determinations and not order inappropri-
22 ate mediation, couples counseling, shared custody,
23 mutual orders of protection, unsupervised visitation,
24 or other measures than endanger true victims of do-
25 mestic and family violence.

JULY 14, 1997

105TH CONGRESS
1ST SESSIONH. R. _____

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES*(for herself + Mr. Schumer)*Mrs. MORELLA introduced the following bill; which was referred to the Committee on _____

A BILL

To provide grants to establish and operate supervised visitation centers for the purposes of facilitating supervised visitation of children and visitation exchange

1 Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representa-
2 tives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

3 SECTION 1. FINDINGS AND PURPOSES.

4 (a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds the following:

5 (1) Family violence does not necessarily cease
6 when family victims are legally separated by divorce
7 or otherwise not sharing a household.

1 (2) During separation and divorce, family vio-
2 lence often escalates, and child custody and visita-
3 tion become the new forum for the continuation of 4 abuse.

5 (3) Current child custody and visitation laws
6 are based on incorrect assumptions that divorcing or 7 separating parents share equal positions of power
8 and control. These assumptions are particularly 9 faulty when there is a history of domestic violence.
10 The abused spouse or intimate partners divorcing
11 and separating under such circumstances may con-
12 tinue to experience violence which is exacerbated by 13 and often escalates during child visitation and/or vis-
14 itation exchanges.

15 (4) Some perpetrators of violence use the chil-
16 dren as pawns to control the abused party and to 17 commit more violence during separation and/or di-
18 vorce.

19 (5) Approximately 90 percent of children in 20 homes in which their mothers are abused witness the 21 abuse.

22 (6) Women and children are at an elevated risk
23 of violence during the process of separation and/or 24 divorce.

1 (7) 50 to 70 percent of men who abuse their
2 spouses or partners also abuse their children.

3 (8) Up to 75 percent of all domestic assaults
4 reported to law enforcement agencies were inflicted 5 after separation of the couple.

6 (9) In one study of spousal homicide, over half
7 of the male defendants were separated from their 8 victims.

9 (10) 73 percent of battered women seeking
10 emergency medical services do so after separation.

11 (b) PURPOSES.—The purposes of section 2 are—

12 (1) to protect children from the trauma of wit-
13 nessing or experiencing violence, sexual abuse, ne-
14 glect, abduction, rape, or death during parent and 15 child visitation and/or visitation exchanges;

16 (2) to protect victims of domestic violence from 17 experiencing further violence during child visitation
18 and/or visitation exchanges; and

19 (3) to provide an ongoing safe haven for par-
20 ents and children during visitation or visitation ex-
21 changes.

22 SEC. 2. GRANTS TO STATES TO PROVIDE FOR SUPERVISED
23 VISITATION CENTERS.

24 (a) GRANTS TO STATES.—The Secretary of Health
25 and Human Services (hereafter in this section referred to

1 as the "Secretary") is authorized to award grants to
2 States to enable States to enter into contracts and cooper-
3 ative agreements with public or private nonprofit entities
4 to assist such entities in establishing and operating super-
5 vised visitation centers for the purposes of facilitating su-
6 pervised visitation and visitation exchange.

7 (b) CONSIDERATIONS.—In awarding such grants,
8 contracts, and cooperative agreements under paragraph
9 (1), the Secretary shall take into account—

10 (1) the number of families to be served by the 11 proposed visitation center to be established under 12 the grant, contract, or agreement;

13 (2) the extent to which supervised visitation
14 centers serve underserved populations; and

15 (3) the extent to which the applicant dem-
16 onstrates cooperation and collaboration with advo-
17 cates in the local community served, including the 18 State domestic violence coalition, State sexual as-
19 sault coalition, local shelters, and programs for do-
20 mestic violence and sexual assault victims.

21 (c) USE OF FUNDS.—

22 (1) IN GENERAL.—Amounts provided under a
23 grant, contract, or cooperative agreement awarded
24 under this subsection shall be used to establish su-
25 pervised visitation centers and for the purposes de-

1 scribed in subsection (a). In using such amounts,
2 grantees shall target the economically disadvantaged
3 and those individuals who could not otherwise afford
4 such visitation services. Other individuals shall be
5 permitted to use the services provided by the center
6 on a sliding fee basis.

7 (2) REGULATIONS AND APPLICANT REQUIRE-
8 MENTS.—The Secretary shall award grants, con-
9 tracts, and cooperative agreements under this sec-
10 tion in accordance with such regulations as the Sec-
11 retary may promulgate. The applicant shall—

12 (A) demonstrate recognized expertise in 13 the area of family violence and a record of high
14 quality service to victims of domestic violence
15 and sexual assault;

16 (B) be an entity located in the State or lo-
17 cality where State law requires the court to con-
18 sider evidence of domestic violence, whether or 19 not there is a conviction of any offense of do-
20 mestic violence or child abuse or the existence
21 of an order of protection against domestic vio-
22 lence, in making a custody decision; and

23 (C) demonstrate collaboration with and
24 support of the State domestic violence coalition,
25 sexual assault coalition, and local domestic vio-

1 lence and sexual assault shelter or program in
2 the locality in which the supervised visitation
3 center will be operated.

4 (d) REPORTING.—Not later than 60 days after the 5 end of each fiscal year, the Secretary shall report to Con-
6 gress information concerning—

7 (1) the number of persons served and the num-
8 ber of persons turned away from services categorized
9 by State and type of presenting problem that
10 underlies the need for supervised visitation or visita-
11 tion exchange (e.g. domestic violence, child abuse,
12 sexual assault, emotional assault, emotional or other
13 physical abuse, or a combination of factors);

14 (2) supervised visitation or visitation exchange
15 ordered by custody determination under a separation
16 or divorce decree or protection order, through child
17 protection services, or social services;

18 (3) other appropriate information designated in 19 regulations promulgated by the Secretary; and

20 (4) safety and security problems occurring dur-
21 ing the reporting period.

22 (e) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—

23 (1) IN GENERAL.—For the purpose of awarding
24 grants, contracts, and cooperative agreements under 25 this section, there are authorized to be appropriated

1 $75,000,000 for fiscal year 1998, $85,000,000 for
2 fiscal year 1999, and $95,000,000 for fiscal year
3 2000.

4 (2) DISTRIBUTION.—Of the amounts appro-
5 priated under subparagraph (A) for each fiscal year,
6 not less than 90 percent shall be used to award
7 grants, contracts, or cooperative agreements.

8 (3) DISBURSEMENT.—Amounts appropriated
9 under this section shall be disbursed as categorical
10 grants through the 10 regional offices of the Depart-
11 ment of Health and Human Services.

105TH CONGRESS
1ST SESSION

H. R. _____

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Mrs. MORELLA introduced the following bill; which was referred to the Committee on _____

A BILL

To address domestic violence and child custody and child protection interventions.

1 Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representa-
2 tives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

3 SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

4 This Act may be cited as the "Domestic Violence,
5 Child Custody, and Child Protection Act of 1997".

6 SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

7 The Congress finds the following:

1 (1) In passing the Violence Against Women Act
2 of 1994, the Congress correctly identified domestic
3 violence, sexual assault, and child abuse as pressing
4 national problems.

5 (2) Witnessing domestic violence has a dev-
6 astating impact on children, placing them at a high
7 risk for anxiety, depression, substance abuse, and 8 suicide.

9 (3) Domestic violence is strongly correlated
10 with child abuse. Studies have found that between 11 50 and and 70 percent of men who abuse their fe-
12 male partners also abuse their children. A 1997
13 study documented that in 30 to 40 percent of cases
14 of child abuse and child fatalities, the child's mother
15 was also being abused. One study reported that girls
16 in violent homes are at a higher risk for sexual 17 abuse than girls in nonviolent homes.

18 (4) Discovery that domestic violence in their
19 home is affecting their children, or that a batterer
20 is also physically or sexually abusing a child, is fre-
21 quently a motivation for a protective parent to seek 22 divorce or custody of their children.

23 (5) Domestic violence often escalates during 24 marital separation and divorce, and abuse of a

1 batterer's children also escalates when their mother
2 is no longer available.

3 (6) According to the American Psychological
4 Association, individuals who batter their partner are
5 twice as likely to seek sole custody of their children
6 than nonviolent individuals, and they may misuse
7 the legal system as a forum for continuing abuse
8 through harassing and retaliatory legal actions. Cus-
9 tody and visitation disputes are more frequent when 10 there is a history of domestic violence.

11 (7) Batterers often take advantage of court-or-
12 dered visitation to threaten or harm their partner.

13 (8) A batterer's threats to take custody of chil-
14 dren are a reason adult victims of abuse frequently
15 cite for staying in abusive relationships. More than 16 50 percent of abductions result from domestic vio-
17 lence.

18 (9) Although courts should diligently protect
19 the interests of both parents in frequent and con-
20 tinuing contact with their children, in the case where 21 one parent has committed domestic violence or child
22 abuse, protection of the other parent and the chil-
23 dren is a vital consideration that should take prece-
24 dence.

1 (10) To respond to the problems of domestic vi-
2 olence in determining child custody, in 1990 the 3 Congress passed a concurrent resolution expressing
4 the sense of the Congress that there should be a pre-
5 sumption against granting custody to an abusive
6 spouse.

7 (11) Approximately 40 States require persons
8 making child custody and visitation determinations
9 to consider domestic violence when evaluating the 10 best interests of the child, and the model code devel-
11 oped by the National Council of Juvenile and Family
12 Court Judges recommends a rebuttable presumption
13 against giving custody to an abusive parent.

14 (12) Despite this trend in law against granting 15 custody to abusive parents, parents across the coun-
16 try have reported losing custody to abusive parents,
17 despite evidence of domestic violence against the 18 protective parent or sexual or physical abuse of the 19 child.

20 (13) According to the American Judges Foun-
21 dation, batterers are able to convince authorities
22 that the victim is unfit or undeserving of custody in 23 approximately 70 percent of contested cases and, ac-
24 cording to one study, in cases where abuse is re-
25 ported, the batterer is more likely to win custody

1 from a non-abusive parent than in cases where no
2 abuse is reported.

3 (14) Although the documented rate of any child
4 abuse allegations in custody cases is approximately 5 2 percent, and the rate of false accusations is the 6 same in the presence or absence of custody litiga-
7 tion, there is a widespread myth that parents fre-
8 quently make up allegations of domestic violence or 9 child abuse to gain an advantage in custody or di-
10 vorce proceedings.

11 (15) In some jurisdictions, in direct violation of 12 Federal statutory mandates to investigate all allega-
13 tions of child abuse, child welfare officials have an
14 unwritten, illegal policy of refusing to investigate
15 charges of child abuse if there is a pending custody
16 or divorce action.

17 (16) Child welfare officials too often wrongly
18 charge protective parents who report domestic vio-
19 lence or child abuse with failure to protect, with ne-
20 glect, or with criminal violations for false reporting,
21 resulting in the wrongful removal of the child from 22 the home, a temporary or permanent loss of custody,
23 visitation, or even termination of parental rights.

24 (17) Parents who report domestic violence or 25 child abuse may face unjust retaliation in the State

1 justice systems, including loss of custody, visitation,
2 termination of parental rights and, in some cases,
3 incarceration.

4 (18) Many of these cases feature the use of
5 spurious psychological "psyndromes", such as paren-
6 tal alienation syndrome, which has no scientific sup-
7 port according to the American Psychological Asso-
8 ciation, or malicious mother syndrome, which simi-
9 larly lacks well-documented supporting data in peer-
10 reviewed literature, to shift blame away from the 11 abusive parent and to punish the parent reporting
12 the abuse. These so-called syndromes are overwhelm-
13 ingly used against women seeking custody.

14 (19) Many of these cases include egregious
15 abuses of due process of State judicial officers,
16 guardians ad litem, and child welfare officials, such
17 as extensive ex parte communications with counsel
18 for the abusive parent, refusing to permit the protec-
19 tive parent to present evidence of domestic violence
20 or child abuse even when State law requires it to be
21 considered, or changing custody or visitation rights
22 without proper notice and opportunity to be heard.

23 (20) Too often guardians ad litem and custody
24 evaluators lack basic knowledge about the dynamics
25 and indicia of domestic violence and child abuse,

1 leading to erroneous decisions about what is in the 2 best interests of the child.

3 (21) Although the Federal courts do not handle
4 divorce or custody cases, the failure of the State jus-
5 tice systems to properly address domestic violence
6 and child abuse in custody, visitation, and termi-
7 nation of parental rights proceedings, where fun-
8 damental rights of parents to the care of their chil-
9 dren are at stake, in view of documented instances
10 of due process violations, may in some circumstances
11 invoke the civil rights jurisdiction of the Federal 12 courts.

13 SEC. 3. DOMESTIC VIOLENCE TRAINING AND STANDARDS
14 FOR CHILD PROTECTIVE WORKERS.

15 (a) AMENDMENTS TO CAPTA FOR DOMESTIC VIO-
16 LENCE TRAINING.—Section 106(b) of the Child Abuse
17 Prevention and Treatment Act (42 U.S.C. 5106a(b)) is 18 amended—

19 (1) by redesignating paragraph (4) as para-
20 graph (5); and

21 (2) by inserting after paragraph (3) the follow-
22 ing:

23 “(4) DOMESTIC VIOLENCE TRAINING.—To be
24 eligible to receive a grant under this section, a State
25 shall provide training in domestic violence, sexual as-

1 sault, and child abuse to all staff responsible for the 2 screening, intake, assessment, investigation, and re-
3 view of [reports of abuse and neglect] through the 4 development and implementation of training pro-
5 grams in cooperation and collaboration with advo-
6 cates in the [local community served,] [Note that
7 the grant money goes to the State to assist in im-
8 proving the “child protective services system of the 9 State”] including State domestic violence and sexual 10 assault coalitions, and local shelters, programs, and 11 crisis centers that serve domestic violence, sexual as-12 sault, and child abuse victims.”.

13 (b) STANDARDS FOR EVALUATING FOSTER CARE
14 PLACEMENT WHERE A PARENT HAS COMMITTED DO-
15 MESTIC VIOLENCE.—

16 (1) IN GENERAL.—Section 475(5) of the Social
17 Security Act (42 U.S.C. 675(5)) is amended—

18 (A) by striking “and” at the end of sub-
19 paragraph (C);

20 (B) by striking the period at the end of 21 subparagraph (D) and inserting “; and”; and

22 (C) by adding at the end the following:

23 “(E)(i) in any case in which any individual
24 residing in the home of the child has committed
25 domestic violence, any review or determination

1 of the child's status (including any evaluation of
2 the child's health and safety or a determination
3 of reasonable efforts) shall give strong consider-
4 ation to keeping the child in the care of a non-
5 abusive parent, or returning the child to the 6 care of a nonabusive parent, and if, as a result
7 of such a review or evaluation, it is determined
8 that assistance (including assistance in enforc-
9 ing any court orders or otherwise assisting in 10 removing the abusive individual from the 11 home), support services, or referrals to domestic 12 violence programs are needed to accomplish
13 that goal, the State shall provide such assist-
14 ance, services or referrals;

15 "(ii) in any case in which an individual
16 who has abused the child is a victim of domestic 17 violence, the State shall consider whether pro-
18 viding assistance to the individual to address
19 domestic violence can prevent further abuse of 20 the child; and

21 "(iii) in any case in which there are allega-
22 tions of domestic violence by both parents of 23 the child, the State shall take into consideration
24 which parent is the primary aggressor."

1 (2) DOMESTIC VIOLENCE DEFINED.—Section
2 475 of such Act (42 U.S.C. 675(5)) is amended by 3 adding at the end the following:

4 “(7) The term ‘domestic violence’ means a sex-
5 ual or physical assault or a threat of death or seri-
6 ous bodily injury against the child, a parent of the 7 child, or another individual as covered by the domes-
8 tic violence laws of the State.”.

9 (c) AMENDMENTS TO THE SOCIAL SECURITY ACT
10 FOR DOMESTIC VIOLENCE TRAINING.—

11 (1) Section 474(a)(3) of the Social Security Act
12 (42 U.S.C. 674(a)(3)) is amended by inserting “, in-
13 cluding domestic violence training” after “training”
14 the 1st place such term appears in each of subpara-
15 graphs (A) and (B).

16 (2) Section 475 of such Act (42 U.S.C. 675) is 17 further amended by adding at the end the following:

18 “(8) The term ‘domestic violence training’
19 means training and educational programs on domes-
20 tic violence, sexual assault, and child abuse, which 21 programs are developed and implemented in coopera-
22 tion and collaboration with advocates in the local 23 community served by such programs (including the 24 State domestic violence and sexual assault coalitions,
25 and local shelters, programs, and crisis centers that

1 serve victims of domestic violence, sexual assault, or
2 child abuse).”.

3 (d) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—[TO BE 4 SUPPLIED]

5 SEC. 4. DOMESTIC VIOLENCE TRAINING AND STANDARDS
6 FOR GUARDIANS AD LITEM.

7 (a) TRAINING REQUIREMENTS AND STANDARDS FOR
8 GUARDIANS AD LITEM.—Section 106(b) of the Child
9 Abuse Prevention and Treatment Act (42 U.S.C.
10 5106a(b)), as amended by section 3, is further amended—

11 (1) by redesignating paragraph (5) as para-
12 graph (6); and

13 (2) by inserting after paragraph (4) the follow-
14 ing:

15 “(5) GUARDIAN AD LITEM DOMESTIC VIOLENCE
16 TRAINING.—To be eligible to receive a grant under 17 this section, a State—

18 “(A) shall provide training in domestic vio-
19 lence, sexual assault, and child abuse for any 20 individual appointed to represent a child during 21 judicial proceedings where allegations of abuse
22 or neglect are raised through the development
23 and implementation of training programs in co-
24 operation and collaboration with advocates in 25 the [local community served,] [Note that the

1 grant money goes to the State to assist in im-
2 proving the "child protective services system of
3 the State"] including State domestic violence
4 and sexual assault coalitions, and local shelters,
5 programs, and crisis centers that serve domestic
6 violence, sexual assault, and child abuse victims;
7 and

8 "(B) shall establish mandatory guide-
9 lines—

10 "(i) to ensure that any individual ap-
11 pointed to represent a child during a judi-
12 cial proceeding where allegations of abuse
13 or neglect are raised—

14 "(I) must consider how abuse
15 and domestic violence impact the best
16 interest of the child; and

17 "(II) cannot represent the inter-
18 ests of or be retained or compensated
19 by another party accused of abuse;
20 and

22 the safety of the child or any other family
23 member at risk of domestic violence or

5 (a) STATE COURTS.—Section 40412 of the Violent
6 Crime Control and Law Enforcement act of 1994 is
7 amended—

8 (1) in paragraph 18, by striking “and” after 9 the semicolon;

10 (2) in paragraph (19), by striking the period
11 and inserting “; and”; and

12 (3) by adding at the end the following:

13 “(20) the issues raised by domestic violence and 14 child abuse in the determination of custody and visi-
15 tation, including the legitimate reasons parents may 16 report domestic violence and child abuse, the ways
17 domestic violence may relate to an abuser’s desire to 18 seek custody, the importance of relying on sound,
19 well-documented psychological evidence and well-
20 qualified experts in custody and visitation deter-
21 minations if abuse allegations are raised, the indicia,
22 dynamics and treatment of child sexual abuse, and 23 the current scientifically accepted and peer-reviewed
24 research on domestic violence and child abuse.”.

"(c) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There is authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section $XXX.

II. Supervised Visitation

Safe Visitation Act

Sec. 1. Purposes

- 1) To protect children from the trauma of witnessing or experiencing violence, sexual abuse, neglect, abduction, rape or death during parent/child visitation and/or visitation exchanges.

- 2) To protect victims of domestic violence from experiencing further violence during child visitation or and/or visitation exchanges.
- 3) To provide an ongoing safe haven for parents and children during visitation or visitation exchanges.

Sec. 2. Findings

- 1) Family violence does not necessarily cease when family victims are legally separated by divorce or otherwise not sharing a household.
- 2) During separation and divorce, family violence often escalates, and child custody and visitation become the new forum for the continuation of abuse.
- 3) Current child custody and visitation laws are based on incorrect assumptions that divorcing or separating parents share equal positions of power and control. These assumptions are particularly faulty when there is a history of domestic violence. The abused spouse or intimate partners divorcing and separating under such circumstances may continue to experience violence which is exacerbated by and often escalates during child visitation and/or visitation exchanges.
- 4) Some perpetrators of violence use the children as pawns to control the abused party and to commit more violence during separation and/or divorce.
- 5) Approximately 90 percent of children in homes in which their mothers are abused witness the abuse.
- 6) Women and children are at an elevated risk of violence during the process of separation and/or divorce.
- 7) Fifty to 70 percent of men who abuse their spouses or partners also abuse their children.
- 8) Up to 75 percent of all domestic assaults reported to law enforcement agencies were inflicted after the separation of the couple.
- 9) In one study of spousal homicide, over half of the male defendants were separated from their victims.
- 10) Seventy-three percent of battered women seeking emergency medical services do so after separation.

Sec. 4 Grants to States to Provide for Supervised Visitation Centers

- (a) IN GENERAL. – The Secretary of Health and Human Services (hereafter referred to in the Act as the “Secretary”) is authorized to award grants to states to enable states to enter into contracts and cooperative agreements with public or private nonprofit entities to assist such entities in establishing and operating supervised visitation centers for the purposes of facilitating supervised visitation and visitation exchange.
- (b) CONSIDERATIONS. – In awarding such grants, contracts and cooperative agreements, under subsection (a), the Secretary shall take into account –
 - (1) The number of families to be served by the proposed visitation center to be established under the grant, contract or agreement;
 - (2) the extent to which supervised visitation centers serve underserved populations.
 - (3) the extent to which the applicant demonstrates cooperation and collaboration with advocates in the local community served, including the state domestic violence coalition, state sexual assault coalition, local shelters and programs for domestic violence and sexual assault victims.
- (c) USE OF FUNDS. –
 - (1) IN GENERAL. -- Amounts provided under a grant, contract or cooperative agreement awarded under this section shall be used to establish supervised visitation centers and for the purposes described in section 1. In using such amounts, grantees shall target the economically disadvantaged and those individuals who could not otherwise afford such visitation services. Other individuals shall be permitted to use the services provided by the center on a sliding fee basis.
 - (2) The Secretary shall award grants, contracts and cooperative agreements under this Act in accordance with such regulations as the Secretary may promulgate. The applicant shall:
 - (A) demonstrate recognized expertise in the area of family violence and a record of high quality service to victims of domestic violence and sexual assault; and
 - (B) be an entity located in the state or locality where state law requires the court to consider evidence of domestic violence, whether or not there is a conviction of any offense of domestic violence or child abuse or the existence of an order of protection against domestic violence, in making a custody decision.

- (C) demonstrate collaboration with and support of the state domestic violence coalition, sexual assault coalition and local domestic violence and sexual assault shelter or program in the locality in which the supervised visitation center will be operated.

(d) REPORTING. – Not later than 60 days after the end of each fiscal year, the Secretary shall report to the Congress information concerning:

- (1) number of persons served and number of persons turned away from services categorized by state and type of presenting problem that underlies the need for supervised visitation and/or visitation exchange (eg, domestic violence, child abuse, sexual assault, emotional or other physical abuse, or combinations of factors);
- (2) supervised visitation or visitation exchange ordered by custody determination under a separation or divorce decree or protection order; through child protection services; or social services
- (3) other appropriate information designated in regulations promulgated by the Secretary.
- (4) safety and security problems occurring during the reporting period.

(e) Authorization of Appropriations.

- (1) IN GENERAL. – For the purpose of awarding grants, contracts and cooperative agreements under this Act, there are authorized to be appropriated $75,000,000 for fiscal year 1998, $85,000,000 for fiscal year 1999, $95,000,000 for fiscal year 2000.

- (2) DISTRIBUTION.—Of the amounts appropriated under subsection (1) for each fiscal year, not less than 90 percent shall be used to award grants, contracts, or cooperative agreements.

A BILL

To

1 Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representa-
2 tives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

3 SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

4 (3) it is estimated that at least 5 percent of the 5 nation's elderly are victims of moderate to severe
6 abuse and the rate for all forms of abuse may be as 7 high as 10 percent;

8 (4) elder abuse is severely underreported with 1
9 in 5 cases being reported in 1980 and 1 in 8 cases
10 being reported now;

11 (5) elder abuse takes on many forms, including
12 physical abuse, sexual abuse, psychological (emo-
13 tional) abuse, neglect (active and passive), and fi-
14 nancial abuse;

15 (6) many older persons, particularly women and 16 minorities, fail to report abuse because of shame or 17 previously unsatisfactory experiences with police, dis-
18 trict attorneys, ^{clergy,} or social workers ^{or others} who lacked sensitiv-
19 ity to the concerns or needs of older people;

20 (7) many older persons fail to report abuse be-
21 cause they are dependent on their abusers and fear
22 being abandoned or institutionalized;

23 (8) identification of elder abuse is difficult be-
24 cause ^{many} elders are not tied into ~~many~~ social networks,
25 e.g., schools or jobs; and

1 (9) older persons critically need protection
2 against abuse, neglect, and exploitation.

VIOLENCE AGAINST WOMEN ACT II DRAFT RECOMMENDATIONS ON PROTECTIONS FOR VIOLENCE AGAINST DISABLED WOMEN¹

INTRODUCTION

Women and girls with disabilities live at the intersection of gender and disability bias. As a consequence, they experience higher rates of violence and lower rates of access to services than their non-disabled peers. Research suggests that women with disabilities are 2 to 12 times more likely to be victims of physical and sexual violence than women and children who are not disabled.

Policy makers must recognize that poverty, segregation, low rates of education and employment, as well as a social denial that disabled women and girls are targets of sexual and domestic violence leads to their increased vulnerability. Indeed, it is not a disability itself that creates vulnerability, but the social and political reaction to disability.

Despite the high incidence of violence experienced by women with disabilities, services are frequently non-existent, inaccessible or inadequate to meet their needs. Disability service providers frequently fail to screen clients for abuse histories. In addition, women with disabilities are frequently not believed when they report sexual and domestic violence, or their cases are not taken seriously by either the criminal justice system or service providers.

In consideration of the development of a second Violence Against Women Act, we contacted several people who were contacted around the United States with expertise on violence against women with disabilities. We provide the following recommendations with the hope and belief that their implementation could make a difference in the lives of women with disabilities.

RECOMMENDATIONS

1. The U.S. Attorney General should establish a disabled women's project within the office of Violence Against Women. This project should be staffed by a project director who is a disabled woman with expertise in violence against disabled women, a research associate, and an administrative assistant. This project would act as a clearinghouse as well as provide technical assistance to federal agencies and grantees on policy, procedures, and programs related to violence against disabled women and girls. The project director would also monitor compliance with federal disability rights laws by all Department grantees under VAWA.

2. Recipients of federal crime victim funds must comply with Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act and the Americans with Disabilities Act in all their programs and services. This includes public entities such as the states, counties, and cities, as well as non-profit entities. Priority must be given to the recruitment, training, and hiring of qualified disabled women as employees of programs and agencies that provide services to victims of crime. Program guidelines for grantees must stipulate their legal requirement to comply with these laws.
3. The DOJ should establish data collection systems to be employed by federal grantees of crime victim funding. This data collection effort would track service usage by disabled women and girls, and identify the barriers faced by disabled women and girls to the criminal justice system and victims of crime assistance services. The data would be used to establish future policy and funding priorities.
4. The attorney general should request studies designed and conducted by disabled women who are qualified researchers:
 - a. to determine the types of violent acts experienced by and are unique to the lives of disabled women and girls. Special attention must be paid to court cases (such as the Glen Ridge, New Jersey case) which limit the sexual consent rights of cognitively disabled women;
 - b. to assess states' crime penalties and the efficacy of these penalties when violence is directed at disabled women and girls. Particular attention should be paid to those state statutes which provide no penalties when a disabled wife is considered incompetent or is unable to resist marital rape, battery, or other acts of domestic violence. A task force should be established to study the risks associated with reforming those state laws when their effect is to undermine the sexual privacy and freedom of disabled women;
 - c. to assess the treatment of disabled women and girls by the criminal justice system following a report of violence. Particular attention should be paid to the treatment by police and prosecutors of disabled women and girls with cognitive and sensory disabilities as potential witnesses for the prosecution;
 - d. to develop methodologies to ensure that existing services are relevant for women with disabilities who are victims of violence. It is critical that services are meaningful to meet the needs of women with disabilities who have been victimized. Services such as disability-specific support groups, and treatment within existing services for women with disabilities, may be appropriate options along with existing integrated services. Particular attention should be paid to the necessity for domestic violence shelters to modify their service policies regarding the use of medication by residents, and the need to enable extensively disabled women to utilize personal assistant services within shelter environments; and,

e. to determine the training needs of police officers, victim assistance service providers, prosecutors, and judges to enable them to meet the emergency, personal, social, legal, and disability-related needs of disabled women and girls. Particular attention should be paid to the development of curricula to be included in the education of these social service and criminal justice system professionals throughout the country.

5. The attorney general should establish the authority to receive and perform criminal background checks on those persons who hold themselves out to be personal assistants. These background checks must be performed within 72 hours of the request. A significant amount of violence (including physical, sexual, emotional, and financial) is perpetrated by personal assistants who work in state institutions, nursing homes, group homes, as well as in the private homes of disabled women.

6. Funding should be earmarked for the development by disabled women of a system-wide training effort on sexual assault and domestic violence for disability community service providers (independent living center staff, vocational rehabilitation, special education teachers, residential facility staff, personal service assistants, case managers, etc.). Violence is all too common in a variety of settings within the disability community. These providers need training for the identification and prevention of violence in the lives of their clients.

7. The attorney general should make funds available for a national education campaign by and for disabled women and girls throughout the country. Particular attention should be paid to the development of curricula which train disabled women and girls to identify various types of violent acts and to access crime victim assistance services and programs and the criminal justice system.

8. The attorney general should establish strategies to implement the aforementioned recommendations: 1) set aside a percentage of VAWA funds for accessibility compliance efforts by grantees, as well as system-wide research and training regarding violence against women and girls with disabilities; and, 2) prioritize funding of grant applications that include plans to meet the needs of women with disabilities. This would mean that applicants for VAWA funding would receive more points if they were inclusive of the needs of women with disabilities.

DAUGHTER OF VAWA PROTECTIONS FOR BATTERED IMMIGRANT WOMEN

1. Eligibility

A. Reinstating VAWA Eligibility For Caretakers of Elderly Parents

Many battered immigrant women act as the sole caretakers of their children and also their parents who are senior citizens. Under the Violence Against Women Act's original suspension of deportation provisions, battered immigrant women were permitted to show extreme hardship to themselves, their children, or their parents as an element of their VAWA suspension case. Battered immigrant women who were caretakers of their parents, many of whom might be U.S. citizens or lawful permanent residents, should be able to show that their deportation would result in extreme hardship for their parents or children who remain in the United States. IIRIRA, in preserving VAWA suspension for battered immigrants, amended this section to make the ability to prove extreme hardship to a parent available only to battered immigrant children.

Section 240A(b)(2) should be amended to allow battered immigrant women to present evidence of extreme hardship to themselves, their children, or their parents as part of their cancellation of removal case in the same manner in which they could in a suspension of deportation case. The purpose of VAWA was to grant immigration relief to battered immigrant women married to U.S. citizens or lawful permanent residents who were locked into abusive relationships by immigration laws. This proposed change returns VAWA eligibility to a narrow but needy group of women and helps guarantee that and that their U.S. citizen- or permanent resident-parents will not experience extreme hardship.

§240A(b)(2)(E) should be amended as follows:

"The Attorney General may cancel removal in the case of an alien who is inadmissible or deportable from the United States if the alien demonstrates that -

(E) the removal would result in extreme hardship to the alien, the alien's child, or ~~(in the case of an alien who is a child) parent.~~"

Section 212(a)(9)(A)(iii) should be amended by adding at the end the following:

Clauses (i) and (ii) shall not apply to an alien seeking admission within a period if, prior to the date of the alien's reembarkation at a place outside the United States or attempt to be admitted from foreign contiguous territory, the Attorney General has consented to the alien's reapplying for admission. Clause (i) and (ii) shall also not apply to aliens granted status under sections 204(A)(1)(a)(iii) or (iv) or classification under sections 204(a)(1)(B)(ii) or

(iii) when the alien demonstrates extreme hardship to the alien or the alien's spouse, parent or child.

B. Battered Women Who Otherwise Qualify for VAWA Who May Have Criminal Convictions

Since IIRIRA made crimes of domestic violence deportable offenses, some women who might otherwise qualify for VAWA relief are being denied protection because they were subject to a dual arrest or were prosecuted for violating their own protection orders. This amendment would allow the Attorney General to waive the required finding of "good moral character" in appropriate cases where battered women were either convicted of, or had pled guilty to, crimes they committed under duress from their abuser or to domestic violence-related crimes if they acted in self-defense or violated their own protection orders.

Additionally, the INS in the VAWA regulations has correctly defined battering or extreme cruelty to include forced prostitution. In light of this, it is important to allow the Attorney General to waive the bar to issuing a finding of "good moral character" in cases of immigrant women who have been forced into prostitution and are currently applying for suspension of deportation/cancellation of removal or self-petitioning.

At §204(a)(1)(A) add the following new section:

"(v) For the purposes of making good moral character determinations under Sections 204(a)(1)(A)(iii) and (iv) the Attorney General may waive the bar to issuing a finding of 'good moral character' in the case of an alien who otherwise qualifies for VAWA relief, but who has also committed or pled guilty to being forced into prostitution, to committing a crime under duress from the person who battered or subjected the alien to extreme cruelty, to violating his/her own protection order, or to committing a domestic violence-related crime, if the Attorney General determines that the alien acted in self-defense. After finding that an alien has been battered or subjected to extreme cruelty and is otherwise eligible for relief under sections 204(a)(1)(A)(iii) and (iv), the Attorney General may enter a finding of 'good moral character' despite the existence of a criminal conviction."

At § 204(a)(1)(B) add the following new section:

"(iv) For the purposes of making good moral character determinations under Sections 204(a)(1)(B)(ii) and (iii) the Attorney General may waive the bar to issuing a finding of good moral character in the case of an alien who otherwise qualifies for VAWA relief, but committed or pled guilty to forced prostitution, to committing a crime under duress from the person who battered or subjected the alien to extreme cruelty, to violating his/her own protection order, or to committing a domestic violence related crime, if the Attorney General determines that the alien acted in self defense. After finding that an alien has been battered or subjected to extreme cruelty and would be otherwise eligible for relief under sections 204(a)(1)(B)(ii) and (iii), the Attorney General may in his or her sole discretion enter a finding of good moral character despite the existence of a criminal conviction."

Amend Section 244(a)(3) as in effect for aliens whose deportations proceedings commenced prior to 4/1/97 by adding at the end after "result in extreme hardship to the alien or the alien's parent or child." the following new language:

"For the purposes of making good moral character determinations under this section, the Attorney General may waive the bar to issuing a finding of good moral character in the case of an alien who has been battered or subjected to extreme cruelty but who has also been convicted of, or who plead guilty to, violating a court order issued to protect the alien or forced prostitution, to committing a crime under duress from the person who battered or subjected the alien to extreme cruelty, or who was convicted of or plead guilty to a domestic violence-related crime if the Attorney General determines that the alien acted in self defense. After finding that an alien has been battered or subjected to extreme cruelty and would otherwise qualify for relief under this section, the Attorney General may in his or her sole discretion enter a finding of good moral character despite the existence of a criminal conviction."

At § 240A(b)(2) add the following new section:

"(F) For the purposes of making 'good moral character' determinations under this section, the Attorney General may waive the bar to issuing a finding of good moral character in the case of an alien who has been battered or subjected to extreme cruelty, but who has also been convicted of, or who plead guilty to, violating a court order issued to protect the alien or forced prostitution, or who was convicted of or plead guilty, to committing a crime under duress from the person who battered or subjected the alien to extreme cruelty, or to a domestic violence-related crime when the Attorney General determines that the alien acted in self defense."

Amend § 240A(b)(2)(D) as follows:

"...(A)nd has not been convicted of an aggravated felony unless the Attorney General waives application of this subparagraph for humanitarian purposes in the exercise of discretion."

At § 237 (a)(2)(e) add the following new section:

"(iii) The Attorney General may, upon determination that the alien was acting in self-defense, that the alien was not the primary perpetrator of violence in the relationship, that the alien was convicted of violating the alien's own protection order, that the alien was convicted of committing a crime under duress from the person who subjected the alien to battering or extreme cruelty or for humanitarian purposes waive application of clause (i) and clause (ii)."

C. Exempt Women Battered By their U.S. Citizen Spouses From the Marriage Within 90 Days Requirement When Their Citizen Spouse Brought Them To the United States on a Fiancée Visa

Some abusive U.S. citizens bring their spouses to the U.S. on fiancé visas, but fail to marry them within the required 90 day period. When an alien fiancé is battered or subjected to extreme cruelty by his/her U.S. citizen fiancé, this 90-day requirement prevents the abuse victim from having access to any legal remedy. Section 245(d) of the Immigration and Nationality Act limits adjustment of status so that fiancées can only be adjusted to conditional spouse status. The following amendment seeks to waive this for immigrant fiancées and children battered by U.S. citizens.

Amend § 245(d) of the Immigration and Nationality Act to include the following:

"The Attorney General may not adjust, under subsection (a), the status of an alien lawfully admitted to the United States for permanent residence on a conditional basis under section 216. The Attorney General may not adjust, under subsection (a), the status of a non-immigrant alien described in section 101(a)(15)(K) (relating to an alien fiancée or fiancé or the minor child of such an alien) except to that of an alien lawfully admitted to the United States on a conditional basis under section 216 as a result of the marriage of the non-immigrant (or, in the case of a minor child, the parent) to the citizen who filed the petition to accord that alien's non-immigrant status under section 101(a)(15)(K). Aliens who are self-petitioning for permanent resident status under sections 204(a)(1)(A)(iii); 204(a)(1)(A)(iv); 204(a)(1)(B)(ii); 204(a)(1)(B)(iii) are exempt the application of this subsection."

D. Preserving and Upgrading of Abuser's Status

The regulations issued by INS implementing VAWA offer no protection to VAWA applicants against loss of the abuser's immigration status that occurs between filing of the self-petition and approval of the petition by INS. Loss of an abuser's immigration status could happen quite rapidly, for example when the abuser is deported because of the abuse. This amendment would require that, for the purposes of VAWA applicants, once the petition has been approved, that approval relates back to the date of filing so the status of the lawful permanent resident or the United States citizen spouse is determined as of the filing date for purposes of the spouse or children's eligibility under VAWA. This ensures the alien spouse's self-petition will not be undermined if the status of the United State citizen or lawful permanent resident spouse forfeits or loses his immigration status for any reason, including the abusive spouse's deportation, or decision to give up his/her immigration status or citizenship.

Additionally, cases of VAWA applicants whose spouses are U.S. citizens are processed much faster than cases of VAWA applicants whose spouses or parents are lawful permanent residents. Cases of abuse victims married to citizens can be completed in 6 months where as cases of those married to lawful permanent residents can take up to 4 years. Some lawful permanent resident spouses will upgrade their immigration status to that of a citizen while the VAWA applications filed while the spouse was a lawful permanent resident were pending. Qualified applicants for VAWA should be able to benefit from that upgrade in status through an automatic conversion of their VAWA petition to that of a spouse of a citizen in the same way they would have benefitted if the abusive lawful permanent resident spouse had filed a petition on the victim's behalf. VAWA applicants should be able to benefit from an upgrade in status whether or not a divorce has been finalized before the upgrade occurs, so long as the parties were married when the original VAWA petition was filed.

At § 204(1)(A)(1) add the following new section:

"(vi) For the purposes of petitions filed under Sections 204(a)(1)(A)(iii) and (iv) loss or renunciation or changes to the abuser's citizenship status after filing of the petition shall not preclude the categorization of the self-petitioning spouse or children as an immediate relative."

At section 204(a)(1)(B) add the following new section:

"(v) For the purposes of petitions filed under Sections 204(a)(1)(B)(ii) and (iii) changes in the immigration status of a lawful permanent resident spouse or parent subsequent to the filing of a petition under these sections shall not adversely effect adjudication of the petition. Upgrades in the immigration status of a lawful permanent resident spouse to that of a United States citizen shall result in consideration of any petition filed with the Immigration and Naturalization Service and pending under section 204(a)(1)(B) on behalf of an alien who has been battered or subjected to extreme cruelty to automatically reclassified as a petition filed under Section 204(a)(1)(A) of this Act even if the upgrade occurs after divorce."

2. Extended VAWA Protections

A. Abusers of Fiancée

VAWA eligibility should be created for victims who were brought into the United States by U.S. citizen batterers under fiancée visas when the citizen never married the fiancée but subjected her to battering or extreme cruelty. Such provisions would offer protection to a limited category of immigrants battered by United States citizens who brought the alien to the United States on a fiancée visa, never married her, but subjected her to battering or extreme cruelty. Such a provision would help ensure that these U.S. citizen abusers can be prosecuted for the crimes they commit against their fiancées by allowing fiancées brought here and abused to testify against their abuser without fear of deportation. This provision may also help deter citizens from bringing multiple fiancées to the United States and abusing them.

B. Spouses of U.S. Citizen or Lawful Permanent Resident Bigamists

Domestic violence advocacy programs have been receiving calls from battered immigrant women who are married to U.S. citizens and lawful permanent residents who can prove that they have been battered or subjected to extreme cruelty, that they are of good moral character and that their deportation would cause extreme hardship, but in investigating the VAWA case the abuse victim discovers that her abusive husband never divorced his previous wife. Battered immigrant spouses of U.S. citizens and lawful permanent residents whose husbands have committed bigamy should be able obtain relief under VAWA as they would if their husband had not committed bigamy. Denying immigrant women and children who have been battered or subjected to extreme cruelty by bigamists access to VAWA encourages bigamy and abuse and shields bigamists who are also abusers from criminal prosecution. U.S. citizen abusers and lawful permanent residents should not be able to escape criminal liability for their actions through bigamy when immigrant victims fear testifying against their batterers in court because they are afraid that testifying will result in even more abuse or deportation.

Amend §240A(b)(2) to add the following:

"The Attorney General may cancel removal in the case of an alien who is inadmissible or deportable from the United States if the alien demonstrates that -

(A) the alien has been battered or subjected to extreme cruelty in the United States by a spouse, parent or individual who has brought the alien into the country under a fiancée visa and has not married the alien or the batterers has committed bigamy against the alien and is a United States citizen or lawful permanent resident (or is the alien child of a United States citizen or lawful permanent resident and the child has been battered or subjected to extreme cruelty in the United States by such citizen or permanent resident parent)...."

and Amend §204(a)(1)(A)(iii)40701(a)(1)(C)(iii) of IIRIRA:

"An alien who is the spouse of a citizen of the United States or who has been brought into the country by and United States citizen on a fiancée visa but never married the citizen or is an illegitimate spouse due to the citizen's bigamy, and is not legally married to the citizen, who is a person of good moral character, who is eligible to be classified as an immediate relative under section 201(b)(2)(A)(i) or who would have been so classified but for the actions of the U.S. citizen with whom the alien intended to legally marry, and who has resided in the United States with the alien's spouse or intended spouse may file a petition with the Attorney General under this subparagraph for classification of the alien (and any child of the alien if such a child has not been classified under clause (iv)) under such section if the alien demonstrates to the Attorney General that....

(A) the alien is residing in the United States, the marriage or relationship between the alien and the batterers, or their intention to marry was entered into in good faith by the alien, and during the marriage or relationship intended by the alien to be legally a marriage, the alien or a child of the alien has been battered by or has been the subject of extreme cruelty perpetrated by the alien's spouse or intended spouse; and”

C. Non-Immigrant Visa Derivatives

Alien spouses and children who are not unlawfully present in the United States are often abused by the spouse or parent on whose non-immigrant status their ability to stay in the U.S. is based. Derivative spouses and children of non-immigrant visa holders are not eligible for VAWA because the visa holder is not a United States citizen or a lawful permanent resident. Since they have no relief under VAWA, these victims often remain silent about the abuse they are experiencing because they fear that they will suffer even greater abuse, or that they will be deported (along with the abuser) if they report their abuser to the proper authorities and the abuser is convicted of a domestic violence-related crime. These women should be protected by VAWA as battered abuse victims who are in this country legally but whose ability to remain here is derivative to an abuser.

Amend § 240A(b)(2)(A):

or “the alien has been battered or subjected to extreme cruelty in the United States by a spouse or parent who is a United States citizen, or lawful permanent resident or a non-immigrant visa holder (or is the parent of....”

D. Protection for Spouses of Members of the United States Military

The frequency of abuse in military families is proportionately much greater than in civilian families. Various stresses associated with military life contribute to increased risk of battery¹. Under current VAWA provisions, non-citizen spouses and children of U.S. military members who often reside outside of the United States are not eligible for immigration relief as this statute only applies to those residing within the continental United States, Alaska, Hawaii, Guam and the Virgin Islands. Consequently, these victims of domestic violence are left without protection afforded to other non-citizen spouses and children of U.S. citizens or lawful permanent residents by virtue of their place of residence. Many spouses and children of abusive U.S. citizen or lawful permanent residents who are members of the U.S. armed forces may have resided in the United States for short periods of time and were send out of the United States on one or more occasions as their spouse was transferred between bases or assignments. Women and children who are living with spouses or parents who are members of the U.S. military living outside of the United States are not necessarily living in the countries of their nationality. Thus for those who are abused they are extremely isolated and totally dependant on their U.S. citizen or lawful permanent resident abusive spouse or parent. In such circumstances they will not have community contacts of support systems that can help them.

This provision would allow spouses and children of U.S. military personnel stationed overseas who are battered or subjected to extreme cruelty by their U.S. citizen and lawful permanent resident spouse or parent who is a member of the U.S. Armed Forces to be eligible for VAWA relief. Requirements that applicants be residing in the United States should include waivers for these victims of domestic violence and U.S. consulate should be authorized to access applications for VAWA relief. Self-petitions could be accepted at consulates abroad and forwarded to the Vermont Service Center for processing.

Amend §204(a)(1)(A)(iii) to state:

“...(A)nd who has resided in the United States with the alien’s spouse (unless the alien’s spouse is a member of the U.S. military), may file a petition in the United States or at a United States Consulate abroad with the Attorney General....”

Amend subsection (I) of §204(a)(1)(A)(iii) to state:

“...(T)he alien is residing in the United States (unless the alien’s spouse is a member of the U.S. military), the marriage between the alien and the spouse....”

Amend §204(a)(1)(A)(iii) to state:

“An alien who is the spouse of a citizen of the United States...and who has resided in the United States with the citizen spouse (unless the alien’s spouse is a member of the U.S. military), may file a petition in the United States or at a United States Consulate abroad with the Attorney General....”

Amend §204(a)(1)(A)(iv) to state:

"An alien who is the child of a citizen of the United States...and who has resided in the United States with the citizen parent (unless the alien's parent is a member of the U.S. military), may file a petition in the United States or at a United States Consulate abroad with the Attorney General...."

Amend subsection (I) of §204(a)(1)(iv) to state:

"...(T)he alien is residing in the United States (unless the alien's parent is a member of the U.S. military) and during the period of residence...."

Amend §-204(a)(1)(B)(ii) to state:

"An alien who is the spouse of an alien lawfully admitted for permanent residence...and who has resided in the United States with the alien's legal permanent resident spouse (unless the alien's spouse is a member of the U.S. military), may file a petition in the United States or at a United States Consulate abroad with the Attorney General...."

Amend §204(a)(1)(B)(iii) to state:

"An alien who is the child of an alien lawfully admitted for permanent residence...and who has resided in the United States with the alien's permanent resident alien parent (unless the parent is a member of the U.S. military), may file a petition in the United States or at a United States Consulate abroad with the Attorney General...."

E. Elder Abuse

Elder abuse is a significant problem affecting many individuals in the United States. Some elder abuse is perpetrated by adult children against their aging parents. Elder abuse victims who are U.S. citizens or lawful permanent residents can avail themselves of the criminal and civil court protections available to protect victims of elder abuse. Many elder immigrants come to the United States in the first place because their sons or daughters who are in the United States legally bring them here. However, when the son or daughter is a citizen and is abusive to the elder parent the son or daughter may never file an immigration petition for the parent. These elder abuse victims who have no legal status in this country and are abused by their sons or daughters, are afraid to seek court protection orders because they fear that if they do so, their sons or daughters will have them deported. Parents who are abused by United States citizen sons or daughters should be able to obtain protection from elder abuse under VAWA.

Amend §204(a)(1)(A) by adding at the end:

"(v) An alien who is the parent of a citizen of the United States, who is a person of good moral character, who is eligible to be classified as an immediate relative under section 201(b)(2)(A)(i), and who has resided in the United States with citizen daughter or son may file a petition with the Attorney General under this subparagraph for classification of the alien under such section if the alien demonstrates to the Attorney General that--

(I) the alien is residing in the United States and during the period of residence with the citizen son or daughter the alien has been battered by or has been the subject of extreme cruelty perpetrated by the alien's citizen son or daughter; and

(II) the alien is a person whose removal, in the opinion of the Attorney General, would result in extreme hardship to the alien or a spouse or child of the alien."

3. Exclusion and Inadmissibility

A. Granting the Attorney General The Discretion to Waive Substantial Connection for Battered Immigrant Women Who Otherwise Qualify for VAWA Who Enter After 4/1/97

Several new grounds of inadmissibility pose barriers to gaining lawful permanent resident status for many VAWA applicants. The only way for battered immigrant women to overcome these barriers is to show a substantial connection between the domestic violence suffered and the reason they are inadmissible. Battered women who enter the United States after April 1, 1997 will be eligible for VAWA only if they can show that their unlawful entry into the country was substantially connected to their abuse. This provision will, over time, create a category of battered immigrant women and children who are spouses and children of U.S. citizens and lawful permanent residents but cannot receive VAWA protection. These women and children will again be locked in exactly the types of relationships with abusive citizen and lawful permanent resident spouses and parents that VAWA sought to end. Without providing the Attorney General the discretion to waive the substantial connection requirement for humanitarian purposes, the Attorney General would be forced to deny VAWA protection to the following battered immigrant.

A battered immigrant woman enters the United States after April 1, 1997 and later married a U.S. citizen with whom she has two children. The citizen spouse abuses her resulting in her hospitalization on several occasions, one of which was for injuries which were inflicted during her second pregnancy. The most recent incident was an assault with intent to kill which occurred in front of several witnesses. The state wishes to prosecute the U.S. citizen abuser spouse for his crimes and wishes to help the abuse victim obtain legal permanent resident status through VAWA so that she can cooperate in the prosecution without fear of deportation.

The Attorney General should for humanitarian purposes have the discretion to waive the requirement that this abuse victim demonstrate a substantial connection between the abuse and the victim's unlawful entry into the United States for abuse victims who in all other ways qualify for relief under VAWA.

Changing the language of INA Section 212(a)(6)(ii)(III) will give the Attorney General the discretion to waive the substantial connection requirement for some needy battered immigrants who entered or reentered the United States after April 1, 1997. It will also give the Attorney General the same discretion to waive this requirement for battered immigrants who may have entered the country legally but who have overstayed their visas and who have received voluntary departure from the United States. Voluntary departure was the only workable avenue before IIRIRA for many applicants to obtain work authorization under the VAWA immigration regulations. However voluntary departure was strictly curtailed under IIRIRA and VAWA applicants who obtained work authorization in this way could be potentially harmed by the provisions of Section 212(a)(9)(B).

Many VAWA-eligible battered immigrants entered the United States legally and then later married U.S. citizen or lawful permanent resident spouses who because of abuse refused to obtain permanent residency for the immigrant spouse or child as a means of perpetrating abuse. Over time the immigrant was forced by the abuser's behavior to violate the terms of their visa and go out of legal immigration status. Section 212(a)(9)(B) provides a VAWA exemption for these abuse victims when there was a substantial connection between the abuse and the victims going out of legal immigration status. Here too in some cases such as the one described above the victim may have gone out of legal immigration status before she married the abuser. Even in the most compelling cases the Attorney General under the current law would be unable to offer VAWA protection.

VAWA originally offered protection to all abuse immigrant victims who were abused by their U.S. citizen or lawful permanent resident spouses or parents. VAWA did this recognizing that this group of battered immigrants were particularly at risk for abuse and their abusers were protected from prosecution for their crimes because they could deport their abuse victims. Granting the Attorney General the ability to waive substantial connection for humanitarian purposes in appropriate cases would provide the kind of protection VAWA intended for the most needy and endangered battered immigrant women and children.

Amend § 212(a)(6)(A)(ii)(III) of the Immigration and Nationality Act to include the following:

"(III) there was a substantial connection between the battery or cruelty described in subclause (I) or (II) and the alien's unlawful entry into the United States or the alien's unlawful presence in the United States. In appropriate cases, for humanitarian purposes the Attorney General may waive this requirement if the alien is otherwise eligible to receive Lawful Permanent Resident Status under Sections 204(a)(1)(A)(iii) or (iv) or 204(a)(1)(B)(ii) or (iii) or 244(a) or 240A of the Immigration and Nationality Act.."

B. Public Charge Exclusion Not Applicable to Cases of Battered Immigrant Women

IIRIRA clarified that aliens who have been battered or subjected to extreme cruelty who qualify for self petitioning for lawful permanent resident status under sections 204(a)(1)(A)(iii) and (iv) or 204(a)(1)(B)(ii) and (iii) are exempted from the obligation of submitting an "affidavit of support" from their abuser. This provision also appears to appropriately exempt VAWA applicants from being excluded on public charge grounds, but the INS has not interpreted this provision to exempt battered immigrant women and children from exclusion on public charge grounds.

IIRIRA granted battered immigrant women and children limited access to certain public benefits that they must rely on to survive when they flee their abusers. An amendment is needed to clarify that battered immigrants who are allowed to receive benefits to escape abuse will not then be deemed inadmissible because of their reliance on these public benefits on public charge grounds. This amendment is particularly necessary since many VAWA applicants who are spouses of lawful permanent residents who should be eligible to receive work authorization under VAWA based on INS regulations and instructions to the field are still not being granted work authorization although INS began in May of 1997 to authorize access to public benefits for this group of applicants. Until INS begins granting the work authorization they have authorized VAWA applicants will not be able to work legally and will in some cases have no choice but to rely on public benefits.

At § 212(a)(4) add the following new section:

EXCEPTION

"(E) The spouse or child of an alien who qualifies for status as a spouse or child of a United States citizen pursuant to clause (ii), (iii) or (iv) of section 204(a)(1)(A) or clause (i), (ii) or (iii) of Section 204(a)(1)(B) who have been battered or subjected to extreme cruelty shall be exempted from the provisions of Section (A) of this section.

C. Preserving VAWA Eligibility for Battered Immigrants in Light of IIRIRA's New Grounds of Inadmissibility

Three new Sections of IIRIRA that are intended to deter people from remaining unlawfully in the United States. Battered immigrant women and children married to U.S. citizens and Lawful permanent residents are often unlawfully present in the U.S.. For extended periods of time because their abuser has made sure they did not gain lawful immigration status and used that unlawful status as a tool to continue perpetrating abuse. For this reason battered immigrants eligible for VAWA are exempted from inadmissibility under two of the three new inadmissibility sections (212(a)(6)(A) and 212(a)(9)(B)). A similar exemption was omitted in 212(a)(9)(C). An exemption is also needed because in addition to the problems described above, U.S. citizen and lawful permanent resident abusers who wish their family violence victims to remain undocumented will prevent battered immigrants from learning about or attending immigration proceedings by threats, intimidation, coercion or providing misinformation.

Section 212(a)(9)(C)(ii) should be amended by adding at the end the following

Clause (i) shall not apply to an alien described in paragraph (6)(A)(ii)(I) and (II).

D. Admission of Immigrant Excludable for Fraud or Willful Misrepresentation of Material Fact

The INA recognizes that it is appropriate, particularly in the cases of immigrant spouses and children of U.S. citizens and lawful permanent residents, that the Attorney General have the discretion to waive the fraud and misrepresentation grounds of inadmissibility. As the statute currently exists, the Attorney General does not have this discretion in cases of battered immigrant women and children who otherwise qualify for relief under VAWA, who deserve the same access to waivers for fraud or misrepresentation they would have if their U.S. citizen or lawful permanent resident spouse had petitioned for them. As a result, there are otherwise-qualified VAWA applicants who can prove that they were abused by a U.S. citizen or lawful permanent resident spouse or parent and who can prove that their deportation would cause extreme hardship still do not receive discretionary review regarding permanent residency through VAWA. Battered women and children should be eligible to apply for waivers a manner similar to what is authorized for spouses and children of citizens and residents.

Amend § 212(i)(1) as follows:

“The Attorney General may waive the application of clause (i) of subsection (a)(6)(C) in the case of an immigrant who is the spouse, parent, son, or daughter of a United States citizen or of an alien lawfully admitted for permanent residence, if it is established to the satisfaction of the Attorney General that the refusal of admission to the United States of such immigrant alien would result in extreme hardship to the citizen or lawfully resident spouse, ~~or parent, son or daughter~~ of such an alien or in the case of an alien granted status under sections 04(a)(1)(A)(ii) or (iii) or classification under sections 204(a)(1)(B)(ii) or (iii), the alien demonstrates extreme hardship to the alien or the alien's United States citizen or lawful permanent resident parent, child, son or daughter.

D. Student Visa Holders Married to U.S. Citizen or Lawful Permanent Resident Abusers

Many students who marry U.S. citizens and lawful permanent residents allow their student visas to expire or otherwise violate the conditions of their student visas because their spouses promise to file family-based petitions for them. Citizens and lawful permanent residents who marry students who are in the United States on student visa and who subject their spouses to battering or extreme cruelty will often through threats, coercion, power and control force their spouses on student visas to violate the terms of their visa by changing schools, working or quitting school. If the citizen or lawful permanent resident spouse fails to pursue a family visa petition on behalf of a non-immigrant spouse who relies on the citizen or lawful permanent resident to obtain permanent residency and the spouse never acts on the petition, the non-immigrant on a student visas now will face IIRIRA's now face a five-year bar to gaining lawful permanent residence. For battered immigrant spouses who had student visas but who otherwise qualify for VAWA, the Attorney General should have discretion to waive this bar for humanitarian purposes.

Amend § 212(a)(6)(G) to add at the end:

“unless the non-immigrant qualifies for relief because of battering or extreme cruelty under sections 204(a)(1)(A)(iii) or (iv), 204(a)(1)(B)(ii) or (iii), or section 240A(b)(2).

E. Domestic Violence And Substance Use

Some victims of domestic violence resort to temporary use of drugs to diminish the pain they feel as a consequence of domestic violence. Others are forced to use drugs by their abusers who threaten continued abuse if they do not partake. Some battered immigrant women who are married to U.S. citizen or lawful permanent resident abusers who have otherwise strong, compelling VAWA cases will have no access to this relief under current law because of such activities. Under current law, even those who can show that they are rehabilitated or who only used drugs on a single occasion may be barred from gaining lawful permanent residence. The Attorney General should have the discretion to waive this harsh consequence in cases where the drug use was associated with domestic violence.

At § 212(g), add at the end the following new section:

“(4) subsection (a)(1)(iv) in the case of any alien granted status under sections 204(a)(1)(A)(ii) or (iii) or classification under sections 204(a)(1)(B)(ii) or (iii) when the alien demonstrates a substantial connection between the battering or extreme cruelty and use of substances.”

4. Adjustment of Status Under § 245(i)

Currently section 245(i) provides VAWA self-petitioners with a mechanism, however imperfect, to obtain permanent resident status without leaving the United States. Section 245(i) is a provision of the INA that allows persons who are eligible to receive permanent residency but who entered the country illegally or are not currently in legal immigration status to pay a penalty of $1,000 and adjust to permanent resident status without being required to leave the U.S.. This provision of law, however, is due to sunset in September of 1997.

If section 245(i) is allowed to sunset, many battered women and their children will be placed in grave danger if they are required to leave the country to obtain lawful permanent residency under VAWA. Their protection orders will no longer protect them when they leave the borders of the United States. In fact, all VAWA applicants will have already demonstrated that they will suffer extreme hardship if returned to their home country. It is incongruous and dangerous to require battered women and children to return to such places after they have proven that returning to that country will cause extreme hardship to themselves, their children or their parents.

It is inappropriate to make battered VAWA applicants who have already proven extreme hardship leave the United States to obtain permanent residency, just as it would be inappropriate to require asylees to return to their home country to obtain permanent resident visas. In the cases of both asylees and battered immigrants gaining permanent residency through VAWA both groups should receive equivalent protection and be allowed to obtain their permanent residency status without being required to leave the protections of the United States. Battered immigrants are the only category of immigrants who will be affected by the sunset of 245(i) that will have already proven to INS's satisfaction that their deportation will cause extreme hardship. Battered immigrants whom INS has already agreed in granting their VAWA cases will be at risk if deported should not be required to leave the country and remain abroad for three months in order to obtain their lawful permanent residency.

Even the current system that allows battered VAWA self-petitioners who are undocumented at the time they file their immigration petition to pay a $1,000 fine to be able to adjust their status without leaving the United States is dangerous for some petitioners. Since abusers often control all of the family's financial assets, it may be impossible for battered immigrant women to pay the Section 245(i) penalty. Across the country, some VAWA eligible women and children are returning to abusive relationships because they cannot pay the Section 245(i) adjustment penalty. The following amendment ensures that battered immigrant women and children who are granted permanent residency through VAWA self-petitions will not be forced to leave the United States or remain outside of the United States to obtain their residency status.

Amend §245(a) as follows:

"The status of an alien applying under sections 204(a)(1)(A)(iii); 204(a)(1)(A)(iv); 204(a)(1)(B)(ii) and (iii) or the status of an alien or an alien who was inspected and admitted...."

Amend §245(c)(2) as follows:

“...(A)n alien (other than an immediate relative as defined in section 1151(b) of this title, an alien applying under sections: 204(a)(1)(A)(iii); 204(a)(1)(A)(iv); 204(a)(1)(B)(ii) and (iii) or a special immigrant as...”

Amend §245(c),(4) as follows:

“...(other than an immediate relative as defined in section 1151(b) of this title, an alien applying under sections: 204(a)(1)(A)(iii); 204(a)(1)(A)(iv); 204(a)(1)(B)(ii) and (iii) who was admitted...”

Amend §245(c),(5) by adding to the end as follows:

“...(other than an alien applying under sections: 204(a)(1)(A)(iii); 204(a)(1)(A)(iv); 204(a)(1)(B)(ii) and (iii).”

Amend §245(c),(6) by adding to the end as follows:

“...(other than an alien applying under sections: 204(a)(1)(A)(iii); 204(a)(1)(A)(iv); 204(a)(1)(B)(ii) and (iii).”

Amend §245(c),(7) by adding to the end as follows:

“...(other than an alien applying under sections: 204(a)(1)(A)(iii); 204(a)(1)(A)(iv); 204(a)(1)(B)(ii) and (iii).”

Amend §245(c),(8) by adding to the end as follows:

“...(other than an alien applying under sections: 204(a)(1)(A)(iii); 204(a)(1)(A)(iv); 204(a)(1)(B)(ii) and (iii).”

5. Problems With VAWA Suspension/Cancellation

A. Lack of Access to VAWA Suspension/Cancellation

VAWA contained two alternative forms of immigration relief that were to be available to battered women and children who are the spouses and children of U.S. citizens and lawful permanent residents: (1) self-petitioning for immigrant visa status, and (2) suspension of deportation/cancellation of removal. INS has implemented a system for granting self-petitions. However, as discussed below, some VAWA eligible applicants are not qualified to file self-petitions and can only file for VAWA suspension of deportation/cancellation of removal. Applications for VAWA suspension/cancellation must be filed in immigration proceedings with the permission of the immigration judge. INS has the discretion to decide whether or not to initiate deportation proceedings against VAWA eligible applicants. If INS refuses to institute removal proceedings against VAWA-eligible applicants, they are effectively barred from access to VAWA relief. In several jurisdictions INS has refused to initiate removal proceedings against VAWA applicants, and in others INS has only commenced proceedings after substantial delay.

Two groups of women who are unable to self-petition and can only apply for suspension of deportation or cancellation of removal are battered immigrant women whose spouses obtained a divorce before they could file a VAWA self petition, and battered women who needed to divorce their spouse in order to end continuing abuse and were divorced before they learned about or could file a VAWA self-petition. For either of these groups, suspension of deportation is the only VAWA option available to them. Additionally, IIRIRA created a limited access to crucial public benefits only for battered immigrant women and children eligible under VAWA who had already filed a case with the INS. Since in many parts of the country there is no practical mechanism to file for suspension of deportation/cancellation of removal, many VAWA applicants are not able to file for immigration relief and are also barred from the access they potentially were supposed to have to public benefits.

One way to resolve this problem would be to amend VAWA provisions to make self-petitioning available to certain battered immigrant women, and their children, who otherwise qualify but were divorced from their spouses before they could file their self-petitions. Victims of domestic violence should be able to continue to file VAWA self-petitions for up to five years after the date of their divorce from a U.S. citizen or lawful permanent resident spouse.

§204(a)(1)(a)(iii) should be amended to read:

"An alien who is the spouse of a citizen of the United States, who is a person of good moral character, who is or would have been eligible to be classified as an immediate relative under Section 201(b)(2)(A)(i) or who could have been so classified within 5 years prior to petitioning for immigration status as an immediate relative under section 201(b)(2)(A)(i). and who has resided in the United States with the alien's spouse may file a petition with the Attorney General under this subparagraph"

§204(a)(1)(a)(iv) should be amended to read:

"An alien who is the child of a citizen of the United States, who is a person of good moral character, who is or would have been eligible to be classified as an immediate relative under Section 201(b)(2)(A)(i) or who could have been so classified within 5 years prior to petitioning for immigration status as an immediate relative under section 201(b)(2)(A)(i).

and who has resided in the United States with the citizen parent may file a petition with the Attorney General under this subparagraph”

§204(a)(1)(B)(ii) should read:

"An alien who is the spouse or, within 5 years prior to petitioning, was the spouse of an alien lawfully admitted for permanent residence, who is a person of good moral character, who is or would have been eligible for classification under section 203(a)(2)(A), and who has resided in the United States with the alien legal permanent resident spouse may file a petition with the Attorney General under this subparagraph for classification....”

§204(a)(1)(B)(iii) should read:

"An alien who is the child or, within 5 years prior to petitioning, was the child of an alien lawfully admitted for permanent residence, who is a person of good moral character, who is or would have been eligible for classification under section 203(a)(2)(A), and who has resided in the United States with the alien legal permanent resident spouse may file a petition with the Attorney General under this subparagraph for classification....”

B. The 90/180 day continuous presence requirement

In suspension of deportation cases under VAWA (in cases instituted before April 1, 1997) battered women need only prove that their absence from the United States was brief, casual and innocent a standard that gave immigration judges some latitude to provide humanitarian relief to battered immigrant women fully considering the exigencies of their cases and the effect of the abuser's violence. IIRIRA however, imposes strict time limitations that will place some VAWA cancellation of removal applicants at increased risk because there is no flexibility in the new standard. Section 240A(d)(2) of the INA mandates that during the three year period required for VAWA cancellation eligibility, VAWA cancellation of removal applicants must maintain continuous physical presence in the United States by limiting their absences from the country to no more than 90 days, or 180 days in the aggregate.

This new inflexible standard increases the abuser's control over his battered immigrant spouse or child. An abuser who wishes to undermine his abuse victim's cooperation with authorities in his criminal prosecution for domestic violence need only remove the victim from the country for a period of more than 90 days to make her ineligible for VAWA immigration benefits and the likelihood that he will be able to avoid prosecution and perhaps the loss of his own permanent residency status will be secure. Such departure under duress may easily exceed 90/180 days and would prevent a successful VAWA claim. The following amendment to the existing provision allows the Attorney General to waive the 90/180 statutory cap on breaks in continuous presence for humanitarian purposes when the applicant for suspension of deportation has been a victim of battering or extreme cruelty.

§240A(d)(2) should be amended to state:

"An alien shall be considered to have failed to maintain continuous physical presence in the United States under subsections (b)(1) and (b)(2) if the alien has departed from the United States for any period in excess of 90 days or for periods in the aggregate exceeding 180 days. In the case of an alien who has been battered or subjected to extreme cruelty the Attorney General may waive the provisions of this section for humanitarian purposes".

Amend Section 244(b)(1) as in effect for aliens whose deportations proceedings commenced prior to 4/1/97 to state:

"The requirement of continuous physical presence in the United States specified in paragraphs (1)(2) and (3) of subsection (a)...

C. Provisions for Children

For many battered women who are divorced from their abusive spouses, but have undocumented children who may or may not themselves be victims of abuse, the only immigration relief for which they may be eligible is suspension of deportation or cancellation of removal. Current law does not, however, permit battered immigrant women with undocumented children to include their children as applicants on their suspension of deportation or cancellation of removal petitions. Instead, these women must wait until they have received lawful permanent residency through suspension of deportation/cancellation of removal before they complete separate petitions for legal permanent residency for their children. This presents several problems.

First there are several areas of the country where VAWA suspension applicants cannot get INS to initiate a VAWA case against them. These severe delays can and do adversely affect their children who may turn 21 before their mother can petition for them or while a petition is pending that their mother can only file once she has received permanent residency through VAWA causing significant additional delays because of the long backlog of persons waiting for family related visas. VAWA self-petitioning allows battered immigrant women to include their minor, unmarried children in their own petitions so that the amount of delay for children and the risk of aging out of family 2A eligibility is reduced. The same is not true for VAWA suspension. Since suspension of deportation is the only VAWA option for women whose abusers divorced them before they could file for relief, their children are by the current provisions needlessly disadvantaged. Children who will benefit from this provision generally could have obtained their lawful permanent residency through the abusive citizen or resident spouse had he chosen to petition for them. The proposed change would also streamline the process for immigration judges granting relief, to family members victimized by citizens and lawful permanent residents.

Amend Section 240A(b)(2) by adding at the end the following:

(F) "An alien applying for relief under Section 244(a)(3) or Section 240A(b)(2) may include alien children, sons or daughters in their petitions."

D. Issuance of Notices to Appear Will Not Toll 3 Year Period of Continuous Presence or the Aliens's Unlawful Presence in the United States.

The Violence Against Women Act sought to ensure that all battered immigrant women and children who were married to or the children of U.S. citizens and lawful permanent residents who had been battered or subjected to extreme cruelty could file for their lawful permanent residency without the cooperation of their abusive spouse. IIRIRA included provisions intended to preserve VAWA's protections for battered immigrants. However, the Board of Immigration Appeals recently issued an opinion in In the matter of NJB that could significantly harm battered immigrant women who otherwise qualified for VAWA to lose their ability to apply. It could harm both VAWA eligible battered immigrant women and children who had orders to show cause issued before April 1, 1997 and will also harm VAWA eligible battered immigrant women and children who had notices to appear issued against them on or after April 1, 1997. The law should be amended to preserve the original intent of VAWA to provide relief from deportation to battered immigrants who had been continuously present in the United States for more than three years and who can show that they were subjected to battering or extreme cruelty in the United States by a U.S. citizen or lawful permanent resident spouse or parent. To achieve this the time for accruing the three years continuous presence should not stop artificially as of the date of the issuance of an order to show cause or a notice to appear by INS.

What NJB means for battered immigrant women and children who would otherwise qualify for VAWA suspension of deportation or cancellation of removal is that abuse victims will not be able to count towards the three years they must be in the United States to file for suspension of deportation or cancellation of removal time accrued after they received an order to show cause or a notice to appear in deportation or removal proceedings. Allowing the issuance of an order to show cause to cut a battered immigrant women's ability to accrue the three years she needs for VAWA suspension of deportation leaves many women who were to benefit from VAWA without relief.

For many battered immigrant women whose spouses divorced them before they could file their VAWA self-petitions, NJB and the permanent IIRIRA amendments to the INA cut them off from all relief and condemns them to a life on ongoing abuse. They cannot benefit from VAWA and their citizen and resident husbands will be difficult to prosecute for the crimes they commit. These women may have had orders to show cause issued against them that their spouses never informed them of because the abusive spouse controls what mail the abused wife receives. She may have known about a deportation hearing and was prevented from going by her citizen or lawful permanent resident abusive spouse. In other cases the spouse may have told her that he took care of everything with INS and she has nothing to worry about. Any aspect of immigration law, its interpretation or its implementation that undermines that ability of an immigrant battered woman or child who would otherwise be able to prove eligibility for VAWA-- because they can prove that they were abused by a citizen or resident spouse, are of good moral character and would suffer extreme hardship if deported-- is an unconscionable retraction of the protection VAWA was intended to offer.

At § 240A(b)(2) add the following new section:

“(B)(i) the alien has been physically present in the United States for a continuous period of not less than three years immediately preceding the date of such application;
(ii) for purposes of this subsection the issuance of a charging document removal proceedings shall not toll the 3 year period of continuous physical presence in the United States.”

Amend Section 244(1)(b) as in effect for aliens whose deportations proceedings commenced prior to 4/1/97 as follows:

“(B)(i) the alien has been physically present in the United States for a continuous period of not less than three years immediately preceding the date of such application;
(ii) for purposes of this subsection the issuance of a charging document in deportation proceedings shall not toll the 3 year period of continuous physical presence in the United States.”

E. Motions to Reopen

IIRIRA enacted harsh new time limits for the filing of motions to reopen in removal proceedings. Many victims of domestic violence who are now eligible for VAWA are barred from applying for VAWA cancellation of removal because their spouses turned them into INS years ago and they have had final orders of deportation entered against them, sometimes without their knowledge. In addition, if the deportation order was entered in absentia, these otherwise VAWA eligible applicants would have to leave the United States in order to obtain their permanent residency. Once they have left the country to obtain their immigrant visas they become inadmissible for 10 years under Section 212(a)(9)(A)(ii)(II) because they have departed the United States while an order of removal was outstanding. These battered immigrants could potentially obtain for the Attorney General permission to reapply, but processing that permission is likely to require weeks or months during which the battered immigrant who has already proved that her deportation would result in extreme hardship is stranded outside of the United States and potentially unable to protect her children from ongoing abuse. Given the various waivers for battered immigrants contained in IIRIRA this result was clearly not intended by Congress. Like asylum seekers who in several important instances are permitted file late motions to reopen, VAWA-eligible applicants should not be barred from relief merely because they have failed to file motions to reopen in a timely fashion, especially since this failure often is the result of the violence they have suffered. An exception for VAWA applicants should be added that parallels the exception for asylum seekers.

Amend §240(c)(6)(ii) to add the following:

“sections 204(a)(1)(A)(iii) or (iv), sections 204(a)(1)(B)(ii) or (iii), section 240A(b)(2), or to apply for relief under” before “sections 208 or 241(b)(3)....”

6. Work Authorization

All VAWA applicants need to be able to survive economically if they are to be able to leave their abusers. Obtaining legal permission from INS to work is a key prerequisite to a VAWA applicant's ability to leave the abuser. While both the INS VAWA regulations and the directive to the INS field offices that were issued in May of 1997 authorize District Directors and INS service centers to grant deferred action status and work authorization to VAWA applicants married to lawful permanent resident abusers, INS officials across the country have refused to act on deferred action requests for VAWA applicants. Deferred action is a prerequisite to receiving work authorization.

Congress should express its will in a sense of Congress resolution that clarifies that 8 C.F.R. Section 274a.12(a) must be amended to add at the end the following subsection:

(13) an alien who has properly filed an application for relief under 204(a)(1)(A)(iii) or (iv) or 204(a)(1)(B)(ii) or (iii).

7. Preserving Battered Immigrant Women's Ability to Naturalize

Under the INA as it is currently drafted, battered immigrant women and children who are the spouses and children of United States citizens are entitled, as are all immigrant spouses and children of U.S. Citizens, to file for naturalization after 3 years of lawful permanent residency. However, battered immigrant women whose abusive citizen spouses divorce them before they naturalize are currently penalized as they must wait 5 years before they can naturalize. There is no reason that battered immigrant spouses and children of U.S. citizens should not have the same advantages that all spouses and children of U.S. citizens are granted. Even widows or widowers of U.S. citizen spouses who die retain their ability to naturalize after three years. Battered immigrant women married to U.S. citizen abusers should retain their eligibility to naturalize after 3 years even if they divorce their abusers. This change would benefit battered immigrants who apply under VAWA and who are sponsored by their spouses or parents.

Section 8 U.S.C. 1430, § 319(a) should be amended as follows:

"Any person whose spouse is a citizen of the United States, or any person who obtained status as a Lawful Permanent Resident because they were married to, or are the child of a U.S. citizen spouse who battered them or subjected them to extreme cruelty, may be naturalized...."

8. Amendments to the Privacy Act

Battered immigrant women and children who may be eligible for relief under VAWA must be able to confirm before they can file for VAWA relief that their spouse is a U.S. citizen or lawful permanent resident. When the abusive spouse is a naturalized citizen or lawful permanent resident, the INS keeps files containing the information an abuse victim needs to obtain in order to find out the immigration status of the abuser. Some abusers who have told their spouses that they are lawful permanent residents and have lied about this status in order to maintain power and control over their spouses and children, so that they remain able to continue to perpetrate the abuse. Battered immigrant women and children who may be eligible for VAWA should be able to verify their abuser's immigration status before filing their VAWA petition.

In addition, the INS prefers that VAWA victims submit primary evidence which often consists of official or public records wherever possible to support their VAWA case. Often these records are already in INS files as part of the abuser's immigration file and may be difficult, impossible or inordinately expensive for the abuse victim to obtain from another source. These documents might include the abuser's birth certificate, a divorce decree from a prior marriage, or a green card. Battered women need access to these documents. It is also important however that information contained in the naturalization or permanent resident's file of a citizen or lawful permanent resident who is a victim of abuse be protected so that their abusers cannot use INS records to track their abuse victims or to continue to perpetrate abuse against them. The following amendment to the Privacy Act grants access to INS files on the immigration status of abusive U.S. citizens or legal permanent residents for their spouses and children who need this information to protect themselves without endangering others who need such information protected.

Amend the Privacy Act, 5 U.S.C. §522a(b) by adding the following:

"(13) to the spouse or child of a naturalized U.S. citizen or lawful permanent resident who requests information from the INS regarding the immigration status of their spouse or parent, or who needs to obtain documentation in the form of official or public records or copies thereof contained in the immigration file of a spouse or parent for the purpose of an immigration case or other domestic violence-related court or administrative court hearing; unless the records are those of a person who has presented to the INS evidence in the form of a judicial finding, administrative determination, or a police report demonstrating that the naturalized citizen or lawful permanent resident has been battered or subjected to extreme cruelty by their spouse or parent."

9. Legal Services

Battered immigrant women and children eligible under state law to obtain protection orders need to be able to access assistance from Legal Services attorneys who can represent them in protection order cases and other matters, including immigration cases and facilitate their freedom from domestic violence. Legal Services programs should be able to use non-federal funds to represent battered women and children without regard to their immigration status.

Public Law 104 should be amended as follows:

"Section 504 of Public Law 104-134 (110 Stat. 1321-132 et seq.) shall not be construed to prohibit a recipient (as that term is used in that section) from using funds derived from a source other than the Legal Services Corporation to provide related legal assistance to any person with whom an alien (as that term is used in subsection (a)(11) of that section) has a relationship covered by the domestic violence laws of the State in which the alien resides or in which an incidence of violence occurred."

10. Access to SSI and Food Stamps for Battered Immigrant Women and Children

Battered women fall into a precarious position with respect to public benefits in light of their non-citizen status. Many benefits that are available to victims of abuse who are U.S. citizens are denied to immigrant women. Due to the unique needs of battered immigrant women, IIRIRA granted VAWA eligible battered immigrant women access to Medicaid and TANF.

But for some battered immigrant women, particularly those who have become disabled because of domestic violence, access to TANF and Medicaid is not enough. Domestic violence interferes with their ability to work and they need access to SSI. For other battered women access to TANF may not be sufficient, without access to Food Stamps, to be able to create a safe home apart from her abuser. Some battered immigrant women, particularly those eligible only for suspension of deportation who live in a region of the country where the local INS office has refused to file their cases, cannot obtain work authorization and must be able to get TANF and Food Stamps to escape violence.

By extending the access to SSI and Food Stamps to battered immigrant women, a relatively modest sub-group of people most desperately in need of assistance, hope and peace can be restored to their lives.

Amend § 402 Limited Eligibility of the Qualified Aliens for Certain Federal Programs (8 USC 1612) by adding at the end of 402(D) the following new subsection:

"(E) CERTAIN BATTERED ALIENS-- Paragraph 1 shall not apply to an alien who- has been battered or subjected to extreme cruelty in the United States by a spouse, parent, son or daughter or by a member of the spouse or parent's family residing in the same household as the alien, and the spouse or parent consented to, or acquiesced in, such battery or cruelty but only if (in the opinion of the Attorney General, which opinion is not subjected to review by any court) there is a substantial connection between such battery or cruelty and the need for benefits provided."

11. Training

A. Training For INS and Immigration Judges

Amend § 40421 of the Violence Against Women Act to make grant money available for training of federal judges, including Executive Officer of Immigration Review judges, officers who work for the Immigration and Naturalization Service and the INS asylum officers and others at the Department of Justice who work on welfare and immigration issues affecting battered immigrant women and children on the nature of and types of laws related to domestic violence. These judges need to be aware of all information, studies, and data in order to form an accurate and informed opinions.

The new changes to the Immigration and Nationality Act pose new risks to VAWA applicants. And creates a need for expanded funding to states to be used for training justice system personnel of VAWA's immigration provisions and the immigration consequences of pleas and convictions. Current funding is limited to law enforcement and prosecution training, but should be expanded to ensure that all officials are properly informed of the nature of existing laws affecting battered immigrant spouses and children.

VAWA also should be amended to include mandatory training programs for military officials on VAWA provisions. Such training needs to be implemented in order to ensure that all members of the U.S. military are fully aware of the VAWA rules and regulations protecting abuse victims and prosecuting batterers.

Add the following new section at the end of VAWA § 40121:

"Section 2007: Each branch of the United States military is required to train its supervisory military officers on domestic violence, the dynamics of domestic violence in military families, the types of protection available for battered immigrant women in the Violence Against Women Act, and the problems of domestic violence in families in which a U.S. citizen or lawful permanent resident member of the military is married to a non-U.S. citizen."

Amend § 40121 of VAWA 42 U.S.C. 3711-- Sec 2001 (a):

"The purpose of this part is to assist States, Indian tribal governments, the Immigration and Naturalization Service and the Executive Office of Immigration Review, and units of local government...."

Amend § 40121 of VAWA 42 U.S.C. 3711-- Sec 2001 (b)(1):

"...(T)raining law enforcement officers, immigration and asylum officers, immigration judges, and prosecutors...."

Amend § 40121 of VAWA 42 U.S.C. 3711-- Sec 2001 (b) by adding the following:

"(8) training justice system personnel on the immigration provisions of the Violence Against Women Act and their ramifications for victims of domestic violence appearing in civil and criminal court proceedings and potential immigration consequences for the perpetrators of domestic violence."

Restrictions of VAWA Prosecution and Law Enforcement Grants

Battered immigrant women who are eligible for relief under the VAWA must be able to prove the immigration status of their abuser in order to obtain VAWA relief. It is often difficult for abuse victims to obtain information about their abuser's immigration status. VAWA should encourage prosecutors and law enforcement officers to cooperate with immigrant domestic violence victims by providing battered immigrant women and children with information about the immigration status of their abusive spouse or parent.

Amend § 40121 of VAWA Section 2101(c) to add at the end:

"...(C)ertify that their laws, policies and practices do not discourage or prohibit prosecutors and law enforcement officers from denying access to information about the immigration status of a domestic violence perpetrator to the victim, the child, or their advocate."

B. The State Department:

Battered immigrant women applying for relief under the Violence Against Women Act's immigration provisions must, as part of their VAWA case, present evidence to the Immigration and Naturalization Service about the conditions in their home country with respect to domestic violence. Funding should be provided to the State Department to work with non-governmental organizations and women's groups to obtain information on domestic violence programs, services, and laws to include in their country reports on human rights and gender issues. Such information can be used by VAWA applicants in helping to establish extreme hardship. Additionally, State Department consular officials are increasingly being called to address issues that arise in domestic violence cases including international child abduction cases under the Hague Convention. Officers untrained in domestic violence have on several occasions taken action that placed U.S. citizen women and children at risk of being denied their rightful legal recourse. Funding should be provided to train consular officers on domestic violence. Such training will also be needed if consular officers are called upon to handle VAWA cases filed by spouses of members of the military living abroad and to provide information about domestic violence laws to persons immigrating as spouses of U.S. citizens and lawful permanent residents.

Amend section: (I was not sure what to amend for this one. If some one could point us in the right direction I would be happy to draft it.).

CRIME VICTIMS' EMPLOYMENT NON-DISCRIMINATION ACT

Sec. 1: Short Title

This bill may be cited as the "Crime Victims' Employment Non-discrimination Act."

Sec. 2: Findings and Purposes

(a). Findings. Congress finds that--

(1) Violent crime has a substantial impact on interstate commerce. This impact is well-documented and includes the following:

(A) According to the National Institute of Justice, crime costs an estimated $450 billion annually in medical expenses, lost earnings, social service costs, pain, suffering, and reduced quality of life for victims, all of which harm our nation's productivity and drain our nation's resources. Violent crime accounts for $426 billion of this amount.

(C) Rape exacts the highest costs-per-victim of any criminal offense, at an estimated total of $127 billion per year. In 1992, an estimated 607,000 rapes and sexual assaults occurred in the United States. Other violent offenses take unacceptably high tolls on the economy as well, including assault ($93 billion), murder ($71 billion), drunk driving (excluding fatalities) ($61 billion), and child abuse ($56 billion);

(D) Violence is the leading cause of injury to women in the United States, and in the workplace, homicide is the leading cause of death to women; [* will get more figures documenting crime and costs against other groups and its impact on the workplace]

(E) Violent crime results in wage losses equivalent to 1 percent of all American earnings;

(F) Violent crime causes 3 percent of the nation's medical spending and 14

JUL 07 1997 02:16PM NOW LEGAL DEFENSE P.4 percent of injury-related medical spending;

(F) Employers pay nearly $5 billion annually to cover the cost of crimes against employees and their families;

(2) In addition to the impact of crime on the economy as a whole, victims and their families suffer from crime and its effects on a daily basis:

(A) Domestic crime against adults accounts for approximately 15 percent of total crime costs in the United States each year;

(B) Between 1987-1990, people and households in the United States faced more than 49 million crime attempts annually, including more than 16 million violent crimes;

(3) American workers who have been victims of crime too often suffer adverse consequences in the workplace as a result of their experiences as crime victims. Crime victims are particularly vulnerable to changes in employment, pay, and benefits as a result of their victimization, and are therefore in need of legal protection:

(A) Nearly 50% of rape victims lose their employment or are forced to quit their jobs following the crime;

(B) One-quarter of battered women surveyed have lost a job due in part to the effects of domestic violence, and over half were harassed by their abusers at work;

[add other studies and cases: from victims' groups]

(4) Only twelve States have enacted statutes forbidding employers from taking adverse action against employees who have been victims of crime and must participate in the criminal justice process during working hours. No state explicitly protects crime victims from other adverse action which may result from their experiences and status as crime victims; and

(5) Existing Federal law does not explicitly protect crime victims from retaliation, discharge, or other penalties in the workplace which may result from their experiences and status as crime victims.

(b) Purposes. Pursuant to the affirmative power of Congress to enact this Act under section 5 of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution, as well as under clause 3, section 8 of Article I of the Constitution, the purposes of this Act are—

(1) to promote the national interest in ensuring that crime victims can recover from the effects of crime and participate in the criminal justice process without fear of adverse economic consequences from their employers;

(2) to minimize the negative impact on interstate commerce from dislocations of employees and decreases in productivity that may arise when employees are victimized by crime;

(3) to promote the purposes of the Fourteenth Amendment by protecting the rights of victims of crime and by furthering the right of crime victims to employment free from equal protection and due process violations;

(4) to accomplish the purposes set forth in subsections (1), (2), and (3) of this section in a manner that accommodates the legitimate interests of employers and protects the safety of all of those in the workplace.

Sec. 3: Discrimination

(a) General rule: An employer shall not take or threaten to take any adverse job action against any employee who is or has been a victim of crime based upon that employee's status, experience, or condition as a victim of crime.

(b) Definitions: For the purposes of this Act:

(1) an "employer" includes any person acting directly or indirectly in the interest of an employer in relation to an employee, and includes a public agency, but does not include any labor organization (other than when acting as an employer) or anyone acting in the capacity of officer or agent of such labor organization.

(2) "Employ" includes to suffer or permit to work for wages, benefits, or other compensation.

(3) an "employee" means any person employed by an employer. This term includes full- or part-time persons employed for a fixed time period, temporary or leased basis, independent contractors, and persons participating in work assignments as a condition of receipt of state or federal welfare benefits.

(4) "victim of crime" includes any employee whom an employer knows or has reason to know has been the target of an act or series of acts that would constitute a crime under applicable State or Federal penal law, or that would form the basis for obtaining an Order of Protection under applicable State or local law. This term also includes those employees against whom threats to commit such criminal offenses have been made, provided the employer knows or has reason to know that such threats have occurred. Evidence that such incidents were reported to the employer, by the alleged victim or by any other employee, shall create a presumption that the employer knows that the employee has been a "victim of crime" under this subsection.

(5) "adverse job action" means any action adversely affecting the employment status, wages, or benefits payable to the victim, including:

- (A) demotion or suspension;
- (B) dismissal from employment;
- (C) refusal to hire;
- (D) involuntary transfers;
- (E) failure to make a reasonable accommodation of the victim's health and safety needs arising from the offense; and
- (F) loss of pay or benefits. This provision shall not interfere with lawful employment policies providing for unpaid leave, except where state or federal law or the employer's existing leave policies provide for paid leave or continued benefits, that can lawfully be exercised to attend court proceedings or other activities related to the criminal offense.

(6) "based upon" the employee's status, condition, or experience as a crime victim means any action affecting the terms or conditions of employment, as defined in part (b)(4) of this section, which would not have been made in the absence of the employee's status, condition, or experience as a crime victim, and which does not qualify for the exemptions allowed by Section 6 of this Act.

(7) "reasonable accommodation" may include—

(A) job restructuring, part-time or modified work schedules, or reassignment to a vacant position or to another department or facility with equivalent wages and benefits, if necessary to protect the health or safety of the crime victim,

(B) making adjustments to existing facilities, for example, installing locks or alarms, which are necessary to protect the safety of the crime victim and others in the workplace.

(8) "undue hardship" means an action requiring significant difficulty or expense, or any action that would be unduly costly, extensive, substantial, or disruptive, or that would fundamentally alter the nature of operation of the business, when considered in light of the following factors--

(A) the nature and cost of the accommodation needed under this chapter;

(B) the overall financial resources of the employer; the number of persons employed at the facility; the effect on expenses and resources, or the impact otherwise of such accommodation upon the operation of the facility; and

(C) the relationship between the seriousness of the crime and injuries suffered by the employee, or threatened to be made against the employee, and the proposed accommodation. In cases where the employee is a victim of domestic violence, the employer shall take into account the fact that incidents of domestic violence frequently escalate in seriousness, and that threats against the employee may result in violence.

(c) Construction.

(1) No disqualification for failure to prosecute: An employee who otherwise meets the definition of "crime victim" under part (b)(3) of this section shall not be disqualified from this Act's protections if the crime alleged does not result in criminal prosecution or conviction of the perpetrator, provided the employer's actions otherwise fall within the prohibitions of this Act.

(2) No limitation to victims of workplace crimes: A crime victim shall be eligible for the protections of this Act regardless of the location of the crime or threats to commit crime which have been perpetrated against the employee.

(3) No adverse job action for participation in criminal justice or civil proceedings:

It shall be unlawful under this section to take an adverse job action against an employee who has been a victim of crime because that employee was absent from work to testify in a criminal or civil proceeding or to assist in the preparation of a criminal or civil proceeding arising from the offense, and that testimony or preparation could not be made outside the employee's regular working hours. An employee who seeks protection from adverse job actions under this subsection must provide the employer with a minimum of twenty-four (24) hours notice prior to any such absences, and should make all good-faith efforts to provide as much notice as possible.

Sec. 4: Enforcement

(a) Civil action by employees

(1) Liability: Any employer who violates the provisions of this Act shall be liable to any eligible employee affected for--

(A) damages equal to the amount of any wages, salary, employment benefits, or other compensation denied or lost to such employee by reason of the violation, and any interest on that amount calculated at the prevailing rate; and

(B) any punitive damages, up to three times the amount of actual damages sustained, as the finder of fact shall deem appropriate; and

(C) equitable relief as the court may deem appropriate, including employment, reinstatement, transfer, promotion, and adoption of policies to prevent future violations.

(b) Action by Department of Justice: The Department of Justice may bring a civil action in any court of competent jurisdiction to recover the damages described in subsection (a)(1) of this section.

(c) Exclusivity of Remedies: These remedies shall be the exclusive remedies applicable to a claim under this title, unless after such claim arises the claimant voluntarily enters into an agreement to resolve the claim through arbitration or another procedure.

Section 5: Attorney's fees. Section 722 of the Revised Statutes (42 U.S.C. § 1988) is amended in the last sentence--[add language to effect technical amendment]

Sec.6: Defenses

(a) Extraordinary threats to workplace safety: It may be a defense to liability under this Act if an adverse job action was necessary to protect the safety of an employee or other persons at the place of employment; provided, to qualify for this exception, an employer must prove:

(1) That the employer took all reasonable steps to protect the safety of the crime victim and others at the workplace which, if successful, would not have required the adverse job action; and

(2) No less detrimental action was reasonably possible without endangering the safety of the employee or others at the workplace.

(b) Essential job functions impaired: It may be a defense to liability under this Act if, despite reasonable accommodation by the employer, the employee's experience as a crime victim has left the employee unable to perform the essential functions of the employee's job. For purposes of this chapter, consideration shall be given to the employer's judgment as to what functions of a job are essential.

(c) Undue hardship: It may be a defense to liability under this Act if the employer can demonstrate that reasonably accommodating the health and safety of the crime victim would impose an undue hardship on the operation of the business of the employer. To qualify for this exemption, an employer shall make good faith efforts to implement the employee's proposals for such reasonable accommodations.

(d) Restoration to position. An employee who is lawfully discharged, transferred, or suspended under subsection (a) of this section shall be entitled to restoration to the employee's former position provided the conditions necessitating the change in employment no longer persist, and provided that restoration does not constitute an undue burden. The employee shall be entitled--

(1) to be restored by the employer to the position of employment held by the employee when the discharge, transfer, or suspension commenced; or

(2) to be restored to an equivalent position with equivalent employment benefits, pay, and other terms and conditions of employment.

(c) Burden of Proof: Once an employee establishes that an employer took an adverse job action against the employee after it knew or had reason to know that the employee had been a victim of crime, it shall be the employer's burden to prove:

(1) that the adverse job action was not based upon the employee's status,
