RE: San Francisco police officer's next of kin.

DATE: December 9, 1994

As requested, I have tracked down the phone numbers of the next of kin of San Francisco Police Officer James Guelff (pronounced "Gulf") who was killed in the line of duty in San Francisco on Sunday, November 15, 1994.

Officer Guelff, 38, is survived by his ex-wife, Diane Heath, and two young children. Ms. Heath's phone number is 415/435-5126. Mr. Guelff was very close with his brother, Lee Guelff. Lee Guelff can be reached at 408/466-4482.

Mr. Guelff was killed after he was the first to respond to reported gun fire. He found Victor Boutwell, a 37-year-old drifter from San Jose, spraying semiautomatic gunfire at passers-by for 25 minutes near the wealthy Pacific Heights section of San Francisco. Mr. Guelff was fatally shot before Mr. Boutwell was himself shot and killed. According to press reports, Mr. Boutwell was found with two assault weapons, three handguns, and 1,000 rounds of ammunition. The assault weapons were of a type banned in the Violent Crime Control Act.

Mr. Guelff received a Medal of Valor in 1990. He donated his heart, kidneys, and liver for transplant. The transplant recipients are said to be in good condition.

Officer Guelff's funeral was held Friday, November 18, 1994 at St. Mary's Cathedral in San Francisco.

In New York, a funeral was held this week for Raymond R. Cannon, Jr., another police officer killed in the line of duty. Officer Cannon is survived by his wife of only three months, Laura Cannon. She can be reached at 516/467-5996. I believe Jose Cerda has additional information about Ms. Cannon.

Kent,

I wanted to let you know that I think the police captain in San Francisco I spoke with let Guelff's brother and ex-wife know of the President's plans (I don't know why). It seems to me that this has two implications: He should call them both, if possible, and he should probably call them pretty soon.

Thanks for everything you've helped me with over the quarter. See you around.

DROP-BY AND PHOTO OP WITH MAYOR RIORDAN

DATE:	October 21, 1993
LOCATION:	Oval Office
TIME:	1:30 pm
FROM:	Bruce Reed

I. PURPOSE

Mayor Richard Riordan of Los Angeles is in Washington today to testify at a Schumer subcommittee hearing in favor of the community policing provisions of the crime bill, and to lobby members of the California delegation to vote for the bill.

Mayor Riordan was elected last year on a promise to put 3,000 more police on the street. He has offered to do anything to help pass the crime bill, and will be a valuable ally in showing bipartisan support.

II. BACKGROUND

Los Angeles may be the most underpoliced city in the country, with about half as many cops per capita as New York or Chicago, less than one patrolling officer per square mile, and more than 9 violent crimes per sworn officer -- 2-3 times the national average. A ballot proposition to earmark new taxes for new police received 62% in the 1992 election, but fell short of the two-thirds vote required for a tax increase. Last week, Riordan announced a plan called Project Safety L.A. to reorganize and expand the police force by 3,000 over the next four years.

Mayor Riordan may bring along Police Chief Willie Williams, who is also here to testify for the crime bill. As you know, Chief Williams was a community policing pioneer in Philadelphia, and has made great strides in Los Angeles. Los Angeles has demonstrated that more cops can reduce crime: The weekend of the King verdicts, LAPD increased police presence by 600 officers -- which not only helped keep the peace, but reduced violent crime by 12% across the city.

Mayor Riordan's only concern about the bill may be a desire to put even more money into policing. The current version of the bill authorizes $3.4 billion over six years for 50,000 new officers. It requires a local match of 25-50%, and puts a $75,000 cap on what a city can spend per cop over the life of the grant. (The Attorney General has authority to waive these provisions.) The average cost of salary and benefits for a new cop in Los Angeles is $50,000. We are open to suggestions about putting more money in the bill, so long as it means more cops.

Dear Bruce:

Enclosed is a memorandum on the issue about which I spoke with you yesterday, concerning the use of surplus funds from Los Angeles International Airport to hire additional police in Los Angeles.

It seems to me that this proposal provides a non-budgetary means of getting badly needed funds to Los Angeles.

I have also sent a copy of the memorandum to Ron Brown.

Use of Surplus LAX Funds by LA to Hire Additional Police

Los Angeles International Airport (LAX) and the City of Los Angeles seek authority, after all airport obligations have been met, for the transfer of excess airport concession revenues from LAX to the City for the express purpose of hiring additional police in the most underpoliced major city in the U.S.

Background:

For forty years, LAX landing fees were set on a "residual basis", meaning that concession revenue was applied to the operating costs of the airport, and the airlines were obligated to make up the difference. With the proliferation of services at modern airports, such as parking and car rental concessions, landing fees at LAX have been kept artificially low; indeed, landing fees at LAX are the lowest of any major U.S. airport:

(Fees are charged per 1000 pounds gross landing weight)

LaGuardia	$2.90
Detroit	2.70
Newark	2.50
O'Hare	2.36
JFK	2.30
Denver	1.88
Dallas-Fort Worth	1.75
Phoenix	.93
Atlanta	.80
San Francisco	.75
Los Angeles	.51

With the expiration of the LAX landing fee agreement this summer, LAX sought to negotiate with the airlines to reach agreement on increased landing fees. Those negotiations were unsuccessful. The Airport Commission has now exercised its authority to unilaterally raise landing fees to $1.56, effective in August. While the airlines are now stiffly resisting this tripling of the previous rate, the new rate is now much closer to the average rate charged at other major airports, and still exceeded by seven other major airports.

It is hoped that the new higher rate will create the leverage for the city to enlist the support or acquiescence of the airlines in the effort to secure legal authority to transfer a portion of increased concession revenues to the city for public safety purposes.

Section 511 of the Airport and Airways Improvement Act (49 U.S.C. 2210(a)(12)) presently bars the transfer of any airport revenue "off the airport" to non-airport entities. All airport revenue from any source must be used for operating costs and capital improvements.

As a result, the city presently has no incentive whatsoever to more fully exploit the potential for concession revenue (meaning revenues generated from the sale or lease of goods and services such as transportation services like buses, taxis, and limousines; parking; vehicle rental; food and beverage services; hotels; newsstands; advertising; and gifts and duty free shops.)

But if the law were amended to permit off-airport use by the city for public safety purposes of a portion of concession revenue, both the city and the airlines would benefit. The city would have the incentive to develop enhanced concessions at LAX, and a portion of the increased concession revenue could be applied to decrease the recently increased landing fees.

LA's need to hire more police officers:

Across income, racial, and ethnic lines, the residents of Los Angeles do not feel safe, and little wonder. Los Angeles is the most underpoliced major city in the country.

There are presently only 7700 sworn officers serving a city of three and a half million people. Only 350 patrol cars cover 470 square miles.

* By way of comparison, Chicago has 1 police officer for every 224 residents, and New York City has 1 police officer for every 260 residents. But Los Angeles has only 1 police officer for every 457 residents.

Nothing prevents crime like the likelihood of being caught. In Los Angeles, that likelihood is stunningly slim, and both the law-abiding and the law-breakers know it.

The National Commission to Ensure a Strong Competitive Airline Industry:

The Commission is expected to make a series of recommendations in areas including government regulation, antitrust and bankruptcy law, and federal tax relief (possibly including exemption from the pending gas tax increase), all with the objective of aiding a beleaguered industry. Whatever the specifics of the Commission's recommendations, and the response of the President and the Congress to those recommendations, the result is likely to be substantial financial relief for the industry.

Given the benefits to the industry which are likely to result from the Commission's recommendations, and the relief which the city of Los Angeles would be inclined to grant from the recently imposed landing fee increases, the timing would seem to be propitious to exact from the airlines their acquiescence in the concession revenue transfer proposal.

The specifics of the proposal:

A bill has been drafted along very limited contours, demonstrating a good faith effort to be responsive to the interests of airlines, airports, and the bonding community.

The bill would provide that the prohibition on off-airport use of airport revenues:

"shall not prohibit, if all airport obligations have been met, eligible concession revenues...generated by such airport from being made available by the airport, in its discretion, to any local government or governments that own and operate the airport for use by such government or governments in connection with public safety."

"Eligible concession revenues" is defined to mean:

"with respect to any 12-month period, an amount which bears the same ratio to total concession revenues as such concession revenues bear to total revenues generated by an airport, but in no event to exceed 50 percent of such total concession revenues."

"Airport obligations" are carefully defined to include "annual payments for airport bonds, notes and other indebtedness, airport maintenance and operations, and any safety and security related expenses."

This draft bill is not the only conceivable means of achieving LA's objective, but it reflects a fiscally prudent approach which attempts to be responsive to the interests of all parties.

Why supporting LA's efforts is good politics for the Clinton Administration:

* The Administration has sought visible means of assisting the battered Southern California economy.

* Supporting a measure designed to put more cops on the beat in starkly underpoliced Los Angeles will be seen as a major boost to crime prevention, providing greater safety and security to millions of people, both residents and tourists. Restoring the tourism industry in Los Angeles, badly hurt by the 1992 riots, is no small contribution towards restoring the Southern California economy.

* Amending federal law to allow excess airport concession revenue to be used to hire additional police is a means of supporting law and order and assisting Los Angeles without spending a dime of federal funds.

* While Los Angeles's status as an underpoliced city is particularly stark, the proposal as presently drafted would most likely also be of interest to other big cities who face similar constraints on funding for public safety. In that sense, the proposal would provide a means of providing urban relief at no cost to the federal government.

Conclusion:

The airline industry opposes any weakening of the present prohibition on off-airport use of airport revenues because they fear it will result in cost-shifting to their detriment. Landing fees at LAX, kept artificially low for years, will increase regardless of this proposal. But this proposal in and of itself does not increase airline costs; in fact, it serves the very interests of the airlines.

If a portion of concession revenues could be transferred to a city for public safety purposes, the city would have tremendous incentive to enhance and expand airport concessions. One need only look to the example of the San Francisco Airport. Under a lawsuit settlement which was grandfathered by the Airport and Airway Improvement Act of 1982, the city of San Francisco is able to make use of a percentage of excess SFO concession revenue for municipal purposes. As a result, great effort and creativity has been applied to the full exploitation of concession potential at SFO. Residents of the metropolitan area literally go to the airport to shop and dine, not to speak of the air travellers who spend money as they pass through.

This means more money for airport operations, and naturally depresses what the airlines would otherwise have to pay in landing fees.

The judgment remains to be made whether the limited authorization sought by Los Angeles for the transfer off-airport of excess concession revenues for public safety purposes should be framed generically (as in the present draft proposal) or in terms of Los Angeles-specific relief.

The battered city of Los Angeles would be aided substantially either way. The authorization sought by the city makes sound policy and political sense, and as such can certainly be defended if applied across-the-board. But LA-specific relief could also be tailored if the advantage were thought to lie with a narrower approach.

In either case, this is self-help relief which would allow the full flowering of entrepreneurial talents to raise badly-needed funds for a tragically underpoliced city. It merits the full support of the Clinton Administration.

RE: California Crime Topics

Chris, I have enclosed a one-pager on California crime topics and a recent LA Times article on the LA police. The one-pager was put together by a friend of mine who, as a member of the LAPD, worked throughout California on various drug and gang task forces. Please feel free to call him at 225-3951 if you require more specific field information.

Also, Rana Sampson of the DPC has compiled some brief information for you on the San Diego PD; it is an exemplary PD that would provides a good example of why the President's policing initiatives (100,000 new police and community policing) are good policy -- as well as of "reinventing government." Please follow-up with Rana if you need more information about the San Diego PD.

And please let me know if I can be of further help.

MEMORANDUM FOR VICE PRESIDENT'S STAFF

FROM: RANA SAMPSON, DOMESTIC POLICY COUNCIL

SUBJECT: COMMUNITY POLICING IN SAN DIEGO OR HOW THE SAN DIEGO POLICE DEPARTMENT REINVENTED ITSELF

The San Diego Police Department (SDPD) is one of the model community policing departments in the nation. Approximately five years ago, SDPD faced with rising crime and a declining number of police officers decided to start addressing crime problems differently. Rather than the reactive, 911-driven traditional crime fighting model, SDPD moved to a proactive community-based problem-focused approach to crime problems.

For instance, instead of responding to the same convenience store every evening to take reports of petty thefts, police now work with store owners before crimes occur to prevent them altogether. In addition, SDPD officers work more effectively with citizens. In some communities, both officers and citizens are trained in problem-solving skills and work together to tackle difficult crime problems. Some of the workers in other city agencies have received training as well, and the collaborative between the SDPD, the community and the rest of government has produced some creative results. A trolley stop once controlled by gangs where passengers, plagued by robberies, were afraid to travel is being redesigned based on input from police officers and community members. In other cases, officers work with citizens to close down crack houses and lessen rival gang warfare.

This approach has already produced some very good results and holds much promise. San Diego has had to learn to do more with less. While it is the sixth largest city in the country it has one of the lowest "officer to population" ratios of almost any other major city. These results convinced the San Diego city manager, Jack McGrory, to establish a "problem-oriented government", a government driven by customer needs, interacting and co-relating to provide the most effective and efficient service to its citizens.

MEMORANDUM

June 18, 1993

Street gangs have long plagued California cities such as Los Angeles and San Francisco. In Los Angeles alone there are more than 1,030 distinct gangs with over 150,000 gang members. California street gangs engage in violent activity such as assaults and homicides: (1) during disputes with other gangs over territory; (2) when they compete with other gangs for lucrative markets for their criminal enterprises; and (3) when they commit crimes. In 1992, there were 803 gang related homicides in Los Angeles county alone. Throughout the 1980s, these gangs expanded their criminal activities nationally and internationally. By the early 1990s, it was not uncommon to see Los Angeles gang members in small towns in the mid-west or even in London, England committing homicides, bank robberies, armored car robberies and trafficking illegal drugs. Following the Rodney King incident, the national media reported that the street gangs of Los Angeles had entered into a "truce" which was to result in a dramatic decrease in the violent criminal behavior associated with gang activity. The most recent law enforcement intelligence on this issue indicates that this "truce" may have resulted in a minimal decrease in inter-gang violence. However, it has also resulted in an increase in violence against the general public because gangs once involved in hostile competition have now formed organized confederations which are involved in violent criminal activity throughout various jurisdictions.

The trafficking of illegal drugs is another problem facing California law enforcement. Public opinion polls show Southern Californians believe narcotics to be the single most serious crime problem facing the country. With the crack-down on drugs entering through Miami, drug smuggling activities have shifted and Los Angeles is considered by many law enforcement agencies to be the new major drug distribution hub for the entire nation. Growing criminal drug activity is aggravated by a proliferation of drug fighting agencies with overlapping jurisdictions and differing perspectives and priorities. Tight public budgets only make matters worse, especially when compared with the virtually unlimited resources of major drug organizations.

California law enforcement responded to the problems associated to multi-jurisdictional crime by forming multi-agency task forces to investigate and prosecute major crimes. These task forces provide for coordinated and efficient investigative efforts and provide support to smaller agencies which were traditionally unable to participate in major crime enforcement. To compliment these task forces, California law enforcement officials developed a progressive information management system called the Statewide Integrated Narcotics System which integrates raw law enforcement data from police agencies throughout California and utilizes automated systems technology and professional analysts to maximize the ability of law enforcement to manage and share information. This information clearinghouse provides law enforcement agencies the ability to: (1) retrieve information from multiple sources through a single access point; (2) conduct exhaustive searches for subject information from multiple disassociated sources transparent to the user; (3) access nontraditional sources of investigative information, such as on-line public records subscription services, and terms of probation for identifying potential violators; (4) obtain case specific criminal analyses to aid in prosecution; (5) review status and update geographical information on a real time basis; and (6) improve law enforcement coordination beyond a single county environment.

Chief Credits Extra Police for Drop in Street Crime

■ Law enforcement: Homicide, robbery figures decline significantly in the week before verdicts in the King federal civil rights case. Added security costs have already topped $8 million.

By RICHARD A. SERRANO
TIMES STAFF WRITER

Los Angeles Police Chief Willie L. Williams announced Monday that about $4 million will be needed to pay for overtime costs and other expenditures that went into beefing up police operations at the close of the Rodney G. King civil rights trial.

The chief also disclosed dramatic new crime statistics showing street violence—particularly murders, assaults and robberies—dropped significantly last week as police increased their street presence in anticipation of the verdicts.

According to figures supplied by other major law-enforcement agencies, the cost for the massive deployment ordered as the trial came to its close has already topped $8 million.

During a press conference at the Parker Center police headquarters, Williams used the new crime statistics to urge passage today of Proposition 1 on the city ballot, which would provide the LAPD with 1,000 new officers.

He said the measure would allow him to deploy the same number of patrol officers as he did last week, when he said violent crime fell by 12% across the city.

Homicides dropped by 20% during the first five days of jury deliberations, he said, and assaults and robberies each fell by 10%. In addition, police reported receiving only 15,000 calls for help on Saturday, down from a typical Saturday level of as much as 19,000. The LAPD has not released crime figures for the weekend, when the department went into full mobilization.

"If you put the new officers in uniform and on the streets, in cars, on foot beats, on bicycles, wherever they are necessary, you can make a community safe," Williams said. "It can reduce crime. It can reduce the fear of crime."

When deliberations began, the department added 600 officers to street duty. The 1,000 additional officers promised by Proposition 1 would bring a comparable increase in street patrols, Williams said.

If the proposition fails, he added, it would be impossible to pay for the higher level of uniformed officers. He said it cost between $200,000 and $300,000 to pay for overtime for each of the seven days the jury deliberated the case. Added to that, he said, was about $1.8 million for full police mobilization on Saturday, the day the jury announced guilty verdicts against two of the four officers charged in the King case.

But the civil unrest predicted by many never materialized. Nor, said Williams, were threats against police officers carried out. While the increased deployment was generally applauded by residents, some expressed fears that a massive show of force would heighten tensions.

"Additional officers are not a threat," Williams countered. "We were not there to hold certain segments of our community hostage, to keep people indoors."

Police Chief Willie L. Williams discusses decrease in street crime.

POLICE: Crime Dips Significantly

Instead, people stopped and talked. They greeted each other. They found out some first names. We began to develop some relationships."

Williams closed down his emergency operations center Monday afternoon. And he pledged that overtime paychecks will be given to officers within a month, unlike last year when they were delayed after the riots.

"I did get a commitment from members of the City Council and the mayor that they would pay for this overtime and that was never ever an issue," he said. "I'm really glad to say that dollars never became an issue in providing the level of safety."

Some of the money, he added, will come from the federal government and some from the city.

Other law enforcement agencies were also adding up their overtime cost figures.

The Los Angeles County Sheriff's Department on Monday estimated its costs for overtime alone since the day the King jury began deliberations at $3.4 million.

The department said massive overtime was incurred in the county jails because experience with the first King trial last year indicated that tensions would be particularly high there.

Division Chief Larry Anderson, commander of the emergency operations center, said that, like the LAPD found, violent crime was actually below normal in the communities patrolled by the sheriff.

A spokesman in the National Guard's Sacramento headquarters said the cost of the deployment probably will approach $1 million by the time everything is closed down on Wednesday.

"If you compare that number to what it cost Los Angeles for the riots last year, it's cheap," Col. Roger Goodrich said.

Times staff writers Kenneth Reich and Daniel Weintraub contributed to this article.

Rising Crime in Los Angeles: A Program of Counterattack

OCT 10 1992
If there are any Angelenos who require fresh reminders of the gravity of our regional crime problem, the latest FBI crime report, sadly, will provide them. It suggests that reported crime here is generally higher than elsewhere, and that last year Angelenos were almost one-third more likely than the average American to be a victim of crime.

No doubt the crime epidemic has roots in the current economic slump, which is particularly severe here. Even Orange County, often thought to be a suburban haven, had a crime rate that approximated the worrisome national average. The impact of the large population of illegal immigrants on crime is a factor, obviously, but it is hard to assess: It's true that 13% of state prison inmates are illegal immigrants; it's also true that many more are their crime victims.

Fortunately, some of our top local public officials are committed to change. Los Angeles Mayor Richard Riordan is working hard to add police officers to the LAPD. Chief Willie L. Williams is trying to implement police reform and community policing. On the state level, Gov. Pete Wilson is working with law enforcement officials such as L.A. County Sheriff Sherman Block to maximize resources in very tight economic times.

Private citizens also can help fight crime. Here are some ways:

1. CONSIDER THE UNINTENDED CONSEQUENCES OF BUYING A GUN: You are far more likely to accidentally kill or maim a family member with that new gun than stop an intruder. Indeed, a study published last week in the New England Journal of Medicine found that homicides are almost three times more likely to occur in homes where guns are kept than in those where they are not. You will not be an exception to the rule.

2. VOTE FOR PROPOSITION 172: By not allowing the state sales tax to drop by one-half cent next Jan. 1, you can continue to fund vital public programs, especially law enforcement and police programs. If this sensible measure is defeated, then you can expect further cuts to law enforcement programs that depend on tax money from Sacramento.

3. SUPPORT GUN CONTROL: Write Sen. Dianne Feinstein, Sen. Barbara Boxer or your House representative to say that you support politicians who take on the National Rifle Assn. and fight for strict gun control. For its part, The Times will soon propose a program of tough national measures. Local gun control is ineffective if it is only local.

4. WRITE THE PRESIDENT THAT CALIFORNIA NEEDS MORE HELP: President Clinton has a lot of challenges, with Congress, with Russia, with Somalia, with the North American Free Trade Agreement, with health care reform. But that must not deflect his Administration from focusing on Southern California, the nation's most economically troubled region. We urge Clinton to make the region a pilot for the social programs he advocates, including the police corps (see below), welfare reform and his novel national service program to put more youth workers on the streets.

5. SUPPORT THE BEST ELEMENTS OF CLINTON'S ANTI-CRIME LEGISLATION: This massive legislative package, which still has to work its way through Congress, contains some good and necessary features, including the Brady bill, which requires a five-day wait before a gun can be given to a purchaser. A separate and equally welcome bill contains $100 million for new police officers under the police corps program. Mayor Riordan, though he apparently has abandoned his goal of increasing the LAPD by the exact number of 3,000 officers, has lost none of his fervor for building up police manpower and no doubt hopes that some of that manpower can come from this bill.

6. TELL YOUR LOCAL PUBLIC OFFICIALS THAT YOU WOULD SUPPORT A CAREFULLY DRAWN SPECIAL TAX TO CREATE MORE POLICE: Proposition M, a city measure on last year's ballot, got 63% of the votes. It would have funded 1,000 more police officers through an average property tax increase of less than $100 a year. But a two-thirds vote is required to increase property taxes (the Proposition 13 legacy). That's a high hurdle, indeed—but not an insurmountable one. If you want more policing, tell your elected representatives that you're not only willing to vote for a specifically targeted police revenue measure in your locality but that you're willing to go out and beat the drum in the campaign.

7. VOLUNTEER TO HELP LOCAL POLICE: Ultimately only citizen involvement can reduce crime. We all need to speak out about crime, and get involved. Civilian patrols can discourage criminals and give the police many more eyes and ears.

8. PERSIST WITH EFFORTS TO TAME THE GANG CULTURE: The seemingly overwhelming gang problem need not overwhelm us. All of this region's efforts to improve and reform its schools, improve and reform its police and improve the inner-city economy directly and indirectly affect the gang problem. Better schools, a better local economy, more effective policing—all these help. We also need to support specific programs, such as Los Angeles' ambitious Hope in Youth anti-gang program, to steer young people onto life's right path. Southern California's gang problem threatens to undermine our neighborhoods, our schools, our economy.

Los Angeles must meet the challenge—rising crime—with new programs, revised strategies and a deeply engaged population. With anything less than a major effort, we will fail the test of this crisis.

LAW ENFORCEMENT IN LOS ANGELES

Los Angeles is one of the most under-policed cities in America. Of the nation's major cities, LA spends the fourth largest amount, per resident, and the fifth largest amount, per officer, on its police department. Yet at any one time only 350 officers -- in fewer than 180 police cars -- are on patrol throughout the sprawling 469 square mile city. The other 850 uniformed officers on duty during any one shift are either behind desks or assigned to special task forces.

PUTTING MORE OFFICERS ON THE STREETS

Both Chief of Police Willie Williams and Mayor Richard Riordan have made putting more officers on the street their top priority. Riordan's goal is to hire 3,000 new officers over the next four years. So far, Riordan has not identified funds to pay for these officers. Williams has proposed moving existing sworn personnel out of special units and desk jobs. This plan has been hindered by police union opposition to fewer desk and special task force jobs and by the lack of funds to hire civilians to handle the desk jobs.

FUNDING FOR MORE POLICE OFFICERS

Several options have been discussed:

- Privatization of Los Angeles International Airport: Riordan proposes to sell or lease LAX and use the profits to hire more officers. The Riordan plan would require changes in federal laws and regulations, or the cooperation of the airlines. Neither seems likely. To date the city's efforts in Washington have failed, and the city is now embroiled in a bitter dispute with the airlines over increased landing fees.
- Increasing water and power rates: Riordan floated this idea recently, but it was quickly sunk by City Council opposition.
- Tax increases: Proposition 13 requires all property tax increases to be approved by two-thirds of voters. Twice in the last two years solid majorities of Los Angeles city voters have approved property tax increases to hire 1,000 additional police officers, but both times the approval fell short of the two-thirds required.
- Federal funding: Both Riordan and Williams have enthusiastically supported your efforts to increase federal funding for local police departments. The Department of Justice is in the process of distributing $150 million in funding from the Jobs Bill for local police hiring. Based on their need, California cities should be strong contenders for a portion of this money. The Crime Bill will contain substantial additional funding for more police.

GUN CONTROL

The Los Angeles Times has launched a series of editorials, titled "Taming the Gun Monster," advocating sweeping gun controls, including a near-total ban on handguns. Mayor Riordan has also spoken favorably about some form of gun control. The epidemic of gun violence has spread from the inner city to every part of Southern California: Firearms have killed two children in Los Angeles high schools this year; an elderly man who stopped at a suburban Chatsworth gas station; a bicycle shop owner in Monrovia; a two-year-old Santa Ana boy who was resting in his father's arms; a seven-year-old Long Beach boy visiting a friend who was handling his father's semi-automatic handgun; and an off-duty security guard who went to investigate why someone had shot the family dog; a suburban Northridge mother waiting with her young son to pick up her daughter at a Bible study class; and an eight-year-old caught in an exchange of bullets in a restaurant; a retired nurse who was sitting on her living room sofa; and children walking home on Halloween in Pasadena.

HEADLINE: CRIME RATE IS DOWN IN '94;
SURVEY: THE DECREASE IS DUE TO A SHARP DIP IN BURGLARIES AND CAR THEFTS. SANTA ANA, COSTA MESA POST THE BIGGEST DECLINES.
BYLINE: By NICHOLAS RICCARDI and MARK I. PINSKY, TIMES STAFF WRITERS BODY:

Orange County residents, who cited crime as a paramount concern in a recent Los Angeles Times poll, had some good news and bad news Tuesday: The state attorney general's office reported that property crime here decreased, but violent crime rose in the first six months of 1994.

For Orange County's eight largest cities and unincorporated areas, which are included in the survey, reported crime overall dropped 7.6% during the period. However, that decline largely is due to a sharp dip in burglaries and car thefts. Violent crime -- murder, rape, robbery and assault -- increased almost 4% in the county.

A poll of county residents conducted recently by the Los Angeles Times found that 56% believe that crime, gangs, drugs, graffiti or inadequate police service are the most important problems facing the county.

The study compared the first six months of 1993 and 1994. Statewide, the figures show the number of reported crimes, including homicides, dropped by 7.7% in the most populous cities. It is the first decline in the homicide rate since 1987.

In Orange County, the most dramatic changes were reported in Costa Mesa, where serious crime declined 12.5%, and Santa Ana, where crime was down 11.3%. The crime index is based on the reported numbers of homicides, rapes, robberies, aggravated assaults, burglaries and car thefts.

"We're certainly very pleased with it," said Capt. Bruce R. Carlson, Santa Ana's acting police chief. "It follows up on a 9-plus percent decrease in 1993. We're seeing that downward trend continuing."

Carlson said a combination of increased police activity, citizen involvement and participation of other city departments was responsible for the drop in reported crime.

"Our focus on gangs in Santa Ana has caused a reduction in some of the crime categories," he said.

"It's gratifying to see that decrease has taken place," he said. "Some of that is attributable to some strong neighborhood associations we have in Santa Ana, to community-oriented policing. Citizens have been working very closely with the Police Department to get long-term strategy to prevent and solve crimes."

While property crimes in Santa Ana were down more than 15%, the number of murders increased from 34 in the first six months of 1993 to 39 during the same period in 1994.

Not all cities experienced the same sharp declines as Santa Ana and Costa Mesa in overall crime. Huntington Beach reported a 1.9% crime decrease; Irvine's was down 2%; the Sheriff's Department down 8.8%, and Orange down 3.8%.

Clustered in between were Anaheim, down 5.3%; Fullerton, down 8.4%, and Garden Grove, down 8.9%.

State Atty. Gen. Dan Lungren, who is up for reelection this fall, attributed the drop to the deterrent effects of the "three strikes and you're out" law, adopted in March, and other tough provisions such as a focus on incarceration.

"I don't want to fool anyone -- we still have a major crime problem in our state," Lungren said. "But this shows some things are working and we can't throw out those things."

George Urch, a spokesman for Lungren's opponent, former federal prosecutor Tom Umberg, dismissed the report as an election-year gimmick. Pointing out that crime rose in Lungren's first year in office, Urch said: "I don't think anybody's buying it. Every time you pick up the paper there are crimes in your neighborhood that weren't there a few years ago."

Lungren and a spokesman for Gov. Pete Wilson -- who is in a heated race with state Treasurer Kathleen Brown -- said the public's fear stems from the sense that crime recently has become more random.

"Even if the numbers are looking a little bit better, we've got a long way to go," said Wilson campaign spokesman Dan Schnur.

The Brown and Umberg campaigns discounted the significance of the six-month study. Brown campaign spokesman John Whitehurst said that much of the drop in crime took place in Los Angeles County, and that other counties and cities across the state suffered increases.

"If you took Los Angeles County out of the equation, crime would have gone way up," he said.

In fact, preliminary calculations show that without the crime figures reported by the Los Angeles County Sheriff's Department, Los Angeles Police Department and other city police departments in the county, California would have a 3% decrease in reported crimes. The study surveys the state's 67 largest law enforcement jurisdictions, containing two-thirds of California's population.

Whitehurst repeated a refrain of the Brown campaign in challenging the crime statistics: "Do you feel safer now than you did four years ago?"

Wilson spokesman Schnur said things would look worse if Brown had been in charge over the past four years.

"Pete Wilson has fought tooth and nail to convince the Democratic Legislature to pass a series of tough-on-crime measures that they wouldn't have otherwise," Schnur said. "It's hard to tell how much Kathleen Brown would have put into those efforts."

FELONY AND MISDEMEANOR ARRESTS, 1993
By Race/Ethnic Group of Arrestee

Source: Table 30.

The subjectivity of the classification and labeling process must be considered in the analysis of race/ethnic group data. As commonly used, race refers to large populations which share certain similar physical characteristics such as skin color. Because these physical characteristics can vary greatly within groups as well as between groups, determination of race is frequently, by necessity, subjective. Ethnicity refers to cultural heritage and can cross racial lines. For example, the ethnic designation "Hispanic" includes persons of any race. Most commonly, self-identification of race/ethnicity is used in the labeling process.

Beginning with the Crime and Delinquency in California, 1991 publication, race/ethnic group designations used for data display purposes are the same as California Department of Finance, Demographic Research Unit, designations.

INTRODUCTION

The annual Criminal Justice Profile series supplements and expands on the data provided in the Law Enforcement Information Center (LEIC) "Crime and Delinquency in California." There is a separate Criminal Justice Profile for each county and the state. Most of the data included in these publications are reported to LEIC by state and local agencies. Where other sources are used, those sources are noted.

Each Criminal Justice Profile focuses on a single county or the state as a whole. Each publication has three sections; they are:

- Criminal Justice Trend Data. Trend data are presented for crimes, arrests, arrest dispositions, corrections populations, criminal justice personnel and expenditures for the most recent ten years (1984-1993).
- Current Year Data. The subject matter in this section focuses on the most recent data year. In the Statewide Profile, the current data for each county are given. In each county profile, the data are shown for each contributing jurisdiction.
- Appendix. This section contains: (1) known data limitations and characteristics; (2) a glossary of criminal justice terms used in the publication; and (3) lists of the penal and other statutory codes which are included in each of the felony and misdemeanor arrest offense categories.

SPECIAL NOTES

Crime and arrest rates are calculated using annual population estimates provided by the Demographic Research Unit, California Department of Finance. Population estimates for the '80s were revised based on the 1990 census. Crime and arrest rates for that period have been recalculated using revised intercensal population data and may not match previously published data.

Additionally, the "at-risk" population categories were changed to exclude persons 70 years of age and over.

Status of 1993 Juvenile Justice Information

Information on juvenile felony and misdemeanor arrests is included in the Arrests section of this report. In prior years, this publication included a Juvenile Justice System section. Due to 1990 budgetary constraints, the funds necessary to continue the collection of information from county probation departments on juvenile justice dispositions and caseload data were eliminated. While disposition and caseload data for 1990-93 are not available, data prior to 1990 are available upon request.

Status of 1993 Adult Felony Arrest Dispositions

Disposition of adult felony arrests data for individual counties and agencies are not available for 1993. The recorded number of total felony arrest dispositions in 1993 is lower than normal because of budget constraints that have created backlogs in disposition document processing at the Department of Justice.

Special Requests

Data not provided in this publication may be available from LEIC by special request.

CRIMINAL JUSTICE TREND DATA FOOTNOTES

Tables 1 and 1A: Reported Crimes and Clearances (Pages 5 and 6)

Aggravated assault: A law change in 1986 required reporting domestic violence incidents as criminal conduct. 1990 aggravated assault counts for Oakland P.D. were underreported due to programming problems.

Table 2: Supplemental Detail for Selected Reported Crimes (Pages 7 and 8)

Aggravated assault: A law change in 1986 required reporting domestic violence incidents as criminal conduct.

Tables 3A, 3B, and 3C: Felony Arrests (Pages 9-11)

Homicide and Assault: Assault with intent to commit murder is included in some homicide statistics because of a 1981 law that repealed Penal Code Section 217. As a result, homicide arrests from 1981 to 1985 may be slightly inflated, while assaults may be underreported.

Assault: A law change in 1986 required reporting domestic violence incidents as criminal conduct.

Tables 4A, 4B, and 4C: Misdemeanor Arrests (Pages 12-14)

Disorderly conduct: The 1992 decrease can be attributed to a change in policy by the San Diego Police Department.

Table 5: Total Law Enforcement Dispositions (Page 15)

To other agency: The inflated figures for 1986-1990 for adults were the result of a programming error in the Los Angeles Police Department system.

Tables 6 and 6A: Dispositions of Adult Felony Arrests (Pages 16 and 17)

Disposition data: Adult felony disposition data for individual counties and agencies are not available for 1993. The recorded number of total felony arrest dispositions in 1993 is lower than normal because of budget constraints that have created backlogs in disposition document processing at the Department of Justice. 1991 and 1992 data include dispositions reported to the Department of Justice through August of the following year in order to increase the level of reporting by individual agencies. 1983 through 1990 include dispositions reported to the Department of Justice through April of the following years. To meet publication deadlines, Crime and Delinquency in California disposition tables continue to be based on data through April.

Petition to revoke probation: Prior to 1988, data for this category were included in "Complaints denied" and cannot be extracted.

Combined cases: Prior to 1992 data for this category were included in "complaints denied" and cannot be extracted. Combined cases are cases declined in favor of other counts/cases.

Diversions dismissed: Prior to 1988, data for this category were included with "Dismissed" and cannot be extracted.

Legislation, effective January 1, 1992, provides the option of sentencing noncapital felony cases in lower or superior court when there is a plea of guilty or nolo contendere in lower court.

The "other" category includes no sentence given, sentence suspended and sentence stayed.

Total caseloads: Diversion cases are not included.

Other: Includes deceased, transferred to another county, sentence vacated, and appeal approved.

Table 8: Persons Held in Local Adult Facilities (Page 19)

Held in adult facility: Counts for each category in this table were taken the fourth Thursday in September of each year.

Total personnel: Law enforcement personnel are obtained in a one-day count taken on October 31. Probation department counts are taken January 1, while all other personnel counts are taken June 30. Corrections and Youth Authority are fiscal year counts from the Governor's Budget. In some counties, the fluctuation in 1988 and 1989 sheriff's personnel is the result of the exclusion and subsequent inclusion of custodial personnel. The result of the 1985 revision of the "Number of Full-Time Law Enforcement Employees" reporting form may be discontinuity within some jurisdictions in the reported number of full-time law enforcement personnel for 1985-1987 in comparison with previous years.

Probation/Other: In 1985, a survey form was developed by the Bureau of Criminal Statistics to collect probation department data. Because of the new data collection method, additional classifications may be included in the "other" category.

Note: Personnel for state agencies are shown only in the Statewide Criminal Justice Profile.

Grand total: All amounts shown in this table have been rounded and are shown in thousands. Expenditures include salaries and benefits, services, and supplies. Building construction, capital expenditures and monies derived from federal and state grants are not included. In fiscal year 1984/85, the State Controller's Office revised its method of data collection. These revisions impacted various subcategories.

Notes: Expenditures for state agencies are shown only in the Statewide Criminal Justice Profile.

Expenditure data are based on fiscal year, personnel data on calendar year.

Expenditure data for the Department of Justice and other regulatory agencies are not included.

Statewide expenditure data may differ from those published in "Crime and Delinquency in California, 1993" since the statewide totals are based on the sum of independently rounded county data.

Notes: Rates on California Crime Index crimes, larceny-theft and arson crimes, and arrests are not computed for populations which are less than 100,000.

Rates may not balance because of independent rounding.

Percents may not total 100.0 because of independent rounding.

With the exception of clearance rates (Table 1A), percent distributions are not calculated when the total number upon which those percents are based is less than 50.

See known data limitations and characteristics for additional information located in appendix.

APPENDIX

KNOWN DATA LIMITATIONS AND CHARACTERISTICS

CRIMES

- Anaheim Police Department assaults no longer conform to UCR reporting standards, consequently they are invalid for 1993.
- Coachella Police Department did not report data for April through December 1993.
- Tulelake Police Department did not report data for January through December 1993.

ARRESTS

Arrest and Citation Register

- The analysis of race/ethnic data must be considered in light of the subjectivity of the labeling process and classification changes, such as those of the U.S. Bureau of the Census (1990).
- Felony arrest counts may include some misdemeanor warrants for felony offenses.
- Coachella Police Department did not report data for February through December 1993.
- Tulelake Police Department did not report data for January through December 1993.

ADULT PROBATION

- The data include adults placed on supervised probation only. Court probation, diversion, and summary probation are not included.
- Persons are counted once for each jurisdiction. Thus, data include original grants of probation and do not include subsequent grants of probation to persons already under probation supervision ordered by the same level court in the same county. Also, the probationers under jurisdiction of both superior and lower courts and any who are jurisdictional cases of more than one county are counted more than one time in statewide totals.
- The sources of data are county probation departments' monthly reports of summary data.
