THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

February 15, 1995

Dear Colleague:

Thank you for attending last week's meeting to discuss the Paralympic Games and the National Disability Policy Review. As Carol Rasco mentioned, we are sending you the attached draft of the Guiding Principles statement that will serve as a framework for the direction of the Review's work.

If you have any suggestions or questions regarding this statement, please feel free to contact us (Diana Fortuna: 456-5570, Lynn Margherio: 456-5561). We will continue to update you on this Review as your ideas, concerns, and solutions will be critical to the over-all process. We look forward to working with you.

Sincerely,

Lynn Margherio

National Disability Policy Review
Guiding Principles

DRAFT

The fundamental role of governments in respect to individuals with disabilities should be to assure the right of such persons to enjoy full inclusion and integration in the educational, economic, political, social, and cultural mainstream of American society. In practical terms, therefore, governments must assure that people with disabilities of all ages, ethnic backgrounds, and income levels have the equal opportunity to exercise their full rights and responsibilities to live as independently as possible; to enjoy self-determination; to make choices; and, to be productive throughout their lives. It is, therefore, in the nation's interest that public policies, programs, benefits, and activities affecting such individuals be designed and implemented to:

- o End discrimination against Americans with disabilities and strengthen our nation's communities and economy by providing strong, effective, and fair enforcement of the Americans with Disabilities Act, Title V of the Rehabilitation Act, the Fair Housing Act Amendments, and the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act.
- o Strengthen the capacities of such persons and assure that needed services and supports are provided in a coordinated fashion which maximizes their control over their own lives and futures in the mainstream of American life.
- o Assure that any assistance provided to such a person is carried out in an individualized manner, consistent with the unique strengths, resources, priorities, concerns, choices, abilities, and capabilities of that individual.
- o Support the efforts of families with children with disabilities to raise their sons and daughters at home and to include them in every facet of family and community life.
- o Assist individuals with disabilities of all ages, including those 65 and older, to play valued roles as participating members of their families and communities.
- o Expand the ability and flexibility of states and local governments to work directly with people with disabilities and their families to fashion more effective and responsive solutions to the challenges we face as a nation.
- o Improve access to the assistance, technology, and supports that enable these individuals to have greater control over their lives and contribute more fully to their home, family, school, work, and community life.
- o Assure that all current and future programs and activities are designed and implemented to meet the needs of those eligible members of the public who have disabilities.
- o Make it pay for such citizens to work by creating incentives rather than disincentives to work and to pursue careers.
