Here is my edit of DOT. Could you run it by them? I have left them a message asking what specifically they will do to reach 1 million children, which is quite a large number. We need to know.

Pam, I am trying to double check there are no money implications here with DOT, but I wanted to bring it to your attention right away. Let me know if you think there is a problem asap.

U.S. Department of Transportation

Garrett A. Morgan Technology & Transportation Futures Program -- The Department of Transportation commits to establish the Garrett A. Morgan Technology & Transportation Futures Program, which will reach 1 million students by the year 2000 through tutoring, mentoring, and education curricula. The goal is to build a bridge between America's youth and the transportation community. All the agencies of the department will contribute, including the Federal Aviation Administration, Federal Highway Administration, U.S. Coast Guard, Federal Railroad Administration, Federal Transit Administration, Maritime Administration, and National Highway Traffic Safety Administration.

Subject: HUD writeup

Can you have the attached sent to HUD to make sure they think it is OK? I need their comments by 11 am or so. Thanks!

Department of Housing and Urban Development

Neighborhood Networks -- HUD commits to expand its Neighborhood Networks to create 500 computer centers in assisted or insured housing by the year 2000, more than doubling its current program. These centers will give more than 50,000 households the chance to gain job skills necessary to enter the workforce, and will educate children through after-school programs, mentoring, and internships. HUD will work in partnership with educational, business, and community groups to create, operate, fund, and sustain these computer learning centers.

HUD will challenge owners of assisted housing properties to provide space, motivation, and involvement in Neighborhood Networks; challenge business leaders to provide equipment and technical assistance, prepare people for the job market, and perhaps most importantly, hire those people motivated to learn and to work; and challenge community organizations to help with fundraising, tutoring, mentoring, and accessing local economic opportunities.

NCAA Partnership -- HUD commits to a partnership to expand the NCAA's Regional Excellence in Academic Preparation (REAP) camps to four empowerment zone/enterprise communities cities next year, with the goal of 25 cities by the year 2000. REAP camps help troubled youth ages 10-13.

Lead Paint Poisoning Prevention -- HUD commits to funding new partnerships with parent and community groups, including United Parents Against Lead, to educate more than 10,000 families about lead hazards over the next two years.

Subject: USDA summit commitment

Here's my edit of USDA. Anne, can you check it out with the Dept?

Keith/Pam: let me know what you think. I hope to ship to Summit by noon.

United States Department of Agriculture

Food Recovery and Gleaning -- USDA commits to increase significantly the amount of excess food that is recovered and distributed to Americans in need, with a particular emphasis on involving young people in gleaning. Secretary Glickman will hold a National Summit on Food Recovery, modeled on the Presidents' Summit, calling on Americans to commit to increase recovery of excess food. The Department will work with youth groups to recover excess food from school lunches and large concerts, and with farmers' markets, rural empowerment zones, and school districts.

This Land is Your Land Environmental Service Initiative -- The Department commits to engage 26,000 more Americans in voluntary environmental service, and to offer conservation education to half a million school children by the year 2000, through a 25% increase in the Forest Service Volunteer Program and an increase of over 40% in the number of volunteers in its Natural Resources Conservation Service Earth Team.

(Melinda: I have a feeling this next one was already announced as a separate 4-H commitment)
Increase After-school Activities -- USDA will work with state cooperative extension services and the National 4-H Foundation to expand the 4-H Program to engage an additional 300,000 youth in after-school activities. To meet this goal, the 4-H program will recruit an additional 20,000 teenage and adult volunteers who will serve as program coordinators and mentors. USDA will also provide assistance to the Future Farmers of America, the National Farmers Union, the Nature Conservancy, and the American Heart Association to help those organizations meet their goals to increase after-school activities that provide mentoring, environmental education, and nutrition education to youth.

this next one may be dropped: Matching Volunteers with Service Opportunities -- USDA will create a new Web site to match up volunteers with service opportunities fighting hunger, improving the environment, and boosting rural communities.

Subject: DOL commitment to summit

DOL sent in one interesting idea for a summit commitment, but I wasn't confident enough of the scope or description to send it in to the Summit tonight. We are trying to make a Monday noon deadline for getting Federal agencies into the "promise book" that will be distributed to all summit delegates, but for the moment I am leaving this one out.

If you have time and want to either ask DOL these questions or e-mail this to them, here is my edited version of what Natalie Wymer sent me, along with a list of questions I felt needed answering before I could include it.

Looks interesting but need more details: what will Dept. actually do? Just a campaign that saving is good, or a specific program/account to save? What does [redacted] local grade/high schools [redacted] mean -- is this only DC or nation-wide? Any sense of how many kids this would reach? Does the ASEC know they will be your partner?

U.S. Department of Labor

[redacted] The New Millenium Savings Club for Kids [redacted] -- The U.S. Department of Labor commits to a campaign directed at grade school and high school students to establish early and positive habits regarding the value of personal financial savings, working in partnership with the American Savings Educational Council.

Subject: EPA summit commitment

Here is my edit of EPA's proposed commitment. Can you run it by them to make sure they agree with my edits? Pam and Keith, let me know of any concerns by noon Monday.

U.S. Environmental Protection Agency

Community Environmental Service Agreement with Senior Citizen Groups -- The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency commits to expand senior citizen volunteer efforts to protect public health and the environment through a Memorandum of Understanding with the National Council on the Aging, the Environmental Alliance for Senior Involvement, the Corporation for National Service, and the Administration on Aging at HHS. Senior citizens, a growing and active segment of our population, have a large stake in protecting the environment, not only because they are ■at risk■ in terms of air and water pollution, but also because they want to protect the health of their grandchildren and provide them with a clean environment. This project will train senior citizens to work with children to teach them how to protect the health and environment of their community.

Subject: DOJ summit commitments

Anne, here's my edited version of DOJ's list of summit commitments. I plan to include them all at this point except for the last one ("Get Involved, America"), which I find a little vague. Could you ship to chief of staff at DOJ to get one last reaction from them?

To the rest of you, let me know if you see any problems asap. The tentative plan is to give this to the Summit people by 11am or so Monday morning, to go into a publication for Summit participants.

Youth Network -- To promote youth service, the Department commits to create a Youth Network to provide a forum for young people, national organizations, and DOJ to exchange ideas about juvenile violence, delinquency prevention, and volunteerism. Through a web site and national meetings, the Network will offer young people a chance to participate in local delinquency and juvenile justice programs and policies, as well as to contribute to the national debate on these issues. Partners will include the National Crime Prevention Council, Boys and Girls Clubs of America, Big Brothers/Big Sisters, National League of Cities, MADD, United National Indian Tribal Youth, Youth Build, and others.

Juvenile Mentoring Program (JUMP) -- The Department will commit $9.6 million to 52 new JUMP sites across the country, many of them in communities attending the Summit, to support one-on-one mentoring for more than 6,500 at-risk young people, more than doubling the number of sites in the JUMP program. The program uses community volunteers as mentors, and grantees coordinate with local schools.

Drug Education for Youth -- The Department of Justice, working in partnership with the Departments of the Navy and the Army, will expand the number of DEFY sites from 3 to 30, reaching 1,000 young people. Using military role models to promote positive life choices and reduce the demand for illegal drugs, each DEFY site offers a summer camp program for about 30 children between the ages of 9 and 12 at a Navy, Marine Corps, or other military facility. In the following ten months, the children are mentored by individuals from the local U.S. Attorney's Office, police department, or local university, taken to special events, and taught the value of education, health, and citizenship.

Public/Private Mentoring Alliance -- The Department of Justice, with the Corporation for National Service, will convene a Public/Private Mentoring Alliance of federal agencies and private national organizations supporting mentoring activities. The alliance will disseminate information nation-wide on the value of and opportunities for mentoring, and explore the possibility of a training and technical assistance initiative to expand effective mentoring programs across the country.

Not planning to include next item at this point:

Get Involved America Initiative -- The Department of Justice commits to help volunteers identify specific, practical steps that they can take to reach out to youth and reduce youth violence. DOJ will partner with community, education, and law enforcement groups to create and distribute materials that will help them assist young people.

DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE DESCRIPTION OF COMMITMENTS

ARMY

- Has committed to expand opportunities for active duty, reserve, and retired military personnel to volunteer time as mentors and tutors in schools in their local communities; and will also expand opportunities for young people to give back to their local communities and contribute to the common good through a community service learning module in the JROTC program.
- America's Army recognizes the importance of community coalitions and the role they play in responding to the needs of our nation's youth. We participate as a partner in a variety of these coalition efforts. There are many individual programs designed to: keep kids off of drugs and out of gangs, mentor young minds, clean our neighborhoods of destructive graffiti and provide worthwhile apprenticeships with local businesses. However, these programs are far more effective when they are part of a coalition effort focused on a specific location. We believe that community coalitions are designed to provide the five fundamental resource goals described in the President's Summit. To this end, America's Army is committed to enhancing our association with these community based coalitions.

Our dedication in this endeavor is best exemplified by our efforts in drafting a Memorandum of Understanding with Community Anti-Drug Coalition of America (CADCA). We will strive to identify through Junior Reserve Officers Training Corps (JROTC) student leaders who will assist in the CADCA National Youth Academies whose goal it is to train and build youth coalitions in more than 100 cities in the United States, involving more than 200,000 youth by the year 2000.

NAVY

- The Department of the Navy is committed to increasing our current efforts in voluntary youth tutoring and mentoring, focusing on literacy and anti-drug education. The Navy and Marine Corps, combined, will establish partnerships reaching well over 600,000 youths through the year 2000.

Through the Navy's "Personal Excellence Partnership Flagship" the Navy will increase our current efforts in youth tutoring and mentoring by establishing partnerships that reach over 400,000 youths through the year 2000. The purpose of this program is to assist America's youth, from pre-school through high school, to become better educated, healthier and more responsible citizens.

Through the Navy's "Campaign Drug Free Flagship" the Navy is committed to increasing our youth mentoring and drug education by establishing partnerships that reach over 200,000 youths through the year 2000. Volunteer teams of Navy and Marine Corps Reservists and active-duty Sailors use specially prepared and age-targeted videotapes to convey anti-drug messages to elementary, middle, and high school students. Posters, brochures and public service announcements provided by this program serve to reinforce the anti-drug abuse message.

Through the Marine Corps' "Adopt-A-School" program, the Marine Corps is committed to tutoring/mentoring over 100,000 students through the year 2000. This program establishes ongoing interaction with Marines and students, educators and parents, concentrating on basic study skills, personal responsibility and citizenship.

Through the "Young Marines of the Marine Corps League," approximately 950 adult volunteers (most of whom are present or former Marines) provide an established curriculum of self-discipline, health education, anti-drug education, personal responsibility and teamwork development. This program reaches out to those children who may be at risk. The Marine Corps is committed to reaching out to over 20,000 youths, who may be at risk, through the year 2000.

The Department of the Navy personnel have an extensive history of performing community service in the communities where they are stationed and as ambassadors of goodwill while deployed. In addition to our commitment to significantly increase our efforts in the voluntary youth tutoring and mentoring in the areas of literacy and anti-drug education, the Navy and Marine Corps will continue our long-standing commitment to America's youth through programs such as "Marine Corps Toys for Tots" program and the "Marine Corps New Parent Program" program, the "Navy Youth Health and Physical Fitness Flagship, Environmental Conservation Flagship, and Sharing Thanksgiving Flagship" which currently touch the lives of over 1 million children annually.

AIR FORCE

- The Air Force is currently involved in a vast array of programs and initiatives that contribute to the goals of the President's Summit for America's Future. The programs address involvement in each of the five fundamental resource areas with a goal to partner with civic and community organizations. The overall goal by the Air Force is to increase our commitment to these programs by at least 10%. This percentage equates to not only the increased number of bases impacted, but additionally the increased number of children impacted.

The Air Force concentrates its efforts on many child development programs that are involved in such areas as special education, literacy and creative arts programs, child care and child care research, child care training programs, and nutrition education programs. Other Air Force programs include Foster Grandparent Programs, Air Force Base Child Development Centers, Air Force Base Youth Programs, Youth Employment Skills Programs, and Air Force involvement in national accreditation of family day care providers.

The success of these Air Force programs can be attributed to the concentration on partnering with local community educators, community family day care providers, state and county agencies, and other local community professionals. Within the Air Force almost 1 million children and youths benefit through these Air Force programs and we commit to increasing that number by approximately 100,000 by the year 2000.

- The Civil Air Patrol (CAP), the official auxiliary of the Air Force, is a very unique organization in that it impacts all five fundamental resource areas. The CAP currently has 33,000 adult members, 500 Air Force Reserve members and 75 active duty personnel involved in mentoring 21,600 Cadets.

The Air Force gives CAP safe locations on military installations for meetings and activities for CAP cadets and assists the CAP in providing hands-on training in emergency services and special activities that expose youth to military occupations and skills, such as flying. The Civil Air Patrol provides a structured physical fitness program for youth and a sound moral leadership program. In addition, the CAP Drug Demand Reduction Program provides drug prevention training and a drug free environment for the cadets.

Much of the success of the Civil Air Patrol can be attributed to the partnerships the 500 CAP units across America have formed with their local communities. This organization is so committed to working with the youth of America that its goal is to increase the membership and community activities by at least 10% by the year 2000.

OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY OF DEFENSE

- OSD is involved in an extensive array of programs and initiatives that contribute to the ensuring that American children and youths have what they need to lead healthy, fulfilling and productive lives.

Pledge the Military Child Development Program personnel will volunteer to assist civilian/state/local child care agencies in efforts to improve the quality of care provided to America's children in order to ensure they get a healthy start. These efforts will be to: assist civilian child care programs to become accredited; work with state/local agencies in efforts to train child care workers/providers; to mentor local programs; and to advise local child care councils and boards. We commit to 5000 hours of volunteer mentoring.

*Is this a summary,
or another thing?*

brain

Expand the DoD Youth Program's alliances with the Boys & Girls Clubs (B&GC) of America, to reach the military youth in local communities and strengthen the youth programs at participating bases. Currently 51 of 90 Air Force youth programs have been granted B&GC charters and are affiliated; the other Services are establishing similar affiliations. We commit to 100 similar alliances.

Mobilize youth of active duty personnel (total of 300,000 + children 6-18) to volunteer 1.5 million hours of service (5 hours per youth) annually in any on-or-off base community service project. This fits the Summit Goal V - "An opportunity to give back through community service."

JROTC Career Academies are designed to address the special academic and other needs of "at-risk" youth. Established by DoD (with assistance from the Department of Education) as an alternative to the regular high school JROTC high school program. Thirty JROTC Career Academies are located primarily in inner-city schools in large urban areas nationwide. DoD commits to a 50% increase in high school student enrollment.

Department of Commerce:

The Department of Commerce is committed to continuing and expanding its many service initiatives, primarily focused on tutoring and mentoring:

- Census: The Census Bureau has entered into a partnership agreement with a Prince George's County School Board -- the Partner's in Education Tutoring Program. Math and science tutoring occurs at Suitland High School and six grade schools. adapt a school
- NIST: NIST staff serve as mentors at Brown Station Elementary School and Quince Orchard High School. X
- NOAA: National Weather Service (NWS) employees serve as mentors for Washington, DC public school children. The agency encourages employee participation in MENTORS INC., a private non-profit organization that matches interested professionals with students in need. The organization provides training and a host of resources to help support and sustain mentor relationships. Informational and training sessions for mentors have been held at NWS facilities.

The National Environmental Satellite Data and Information Service (NESDIS) has established partnership agreements with the Ann Beers Elementary School and Suitland High School.

A Saturday Youth Program was established for "at risk" students in Accomack County, VA. This program consists of mentoring and tutoring.

NESDIS also has a mentoring program for the Washington, DC area. Scientists conduct lectures and informational briefings on site. Tours are provided and scientists serve as advisors for science projects.

- PTO: PTO employees serve as tutors at Sousa Junior High School.

The African Employment Program members serve as tutors and mentors at the J.P. Ryan Elementary School in Waldorf, MD

The Hispanics Employment Office members assist students at the Key Elementary School in Arlington, VA.

The Native Americans Employment Program has entered into a MOU with the Piscataway/County Confederacy, Pomonky, MD. Participants serve as mentors and tutors.

We commit to 5,000 hours of volunteer mentoring.

DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSEDepartment of the Army

- The Army has committed to expand opportunities for active duty, reserve, and retired military personnel to volunteer time as mentors and tutors in schools in their local communities, and will also expand opportunities for young people to give back to their local communities and contribute to the common good through a community service learning module in the Junior Reserve Officer Training Corps (JROTC) program. (This commitment was announced in January.)
- America's Army is committed to enhancing its association with community-based coalitions. America's Army recognizes the importance of community coalitions in responding to the needs of our nation's youth. We participate as a partner in many coalition efforts designed to keep kids off drugs and out of gangs, mentor young minds, clean our neighborhoods of destructive graffiti and provide worthwhile apprenticeships with local businesses. However, these programs are far more effective when they are part of a coalition effort. Our dedication in this endeavor is best exemplified by our new commitment to work with the Community Anti-Drug Coalition of America (CADCA) to identify Junior Reserve Officers Training Corps (JROTC) student leaders to help train more than 200,000 youth in more than 100 cities by the year 2000.

Department of the Navy

- The Department of Navy is committed to increasing our efforts in voluntary youth tutoring and mentoring, focusing on literacy and anti-drug education. The Navy and Marine Corps, combined, will establish partnerships reaching well over ~~500,000~~ youths through the year 2000. 700,000

Through the Navy's "Personal Excellence Partnership Flagship," the Navy will increase our current efforts in youth tutoring and mentoring by establishing partnerships that reach over 400,000 youths through the year 2000. The purpose of this program is to assist America's youth, from pre-school through high school, to become better educated, healthier and more responsible citizens.

Through the Navy's "Campaign Drug Free Flagship," the Navy is committed to increasing our youth mentoring and drug education by establishing partnerships that reach over 200,000 youths through the year 2000. Volunteer teams of Navy and Marine Corps Reservists and active-duty Sailors use specially prepared and age-targeted videotapes to convey anti-drug messages to elementary, middle, and high school students.

Through the Marine Corps "Adopt-A-School" program, the Marine Corps is committed to tutoring/mentoring over 100,000 students through the year 2000.

Through the "Young Marines of the Marine Corps League," approximately 950 adult volunteers (most of whom are present or former Marines) provide an established

Subject: "Computer for Kids" per EO 12999---ACTION

Under Executive Order (EO) 12999, signed by President Clinton on April 12, 1996, Federal agencies have been granted the authority to donate surplus computers and related peripherals to public and private schools and nonprofit educational organizations.

In keeping within the spirit of the EO, the Social Security Administration (SSA) has taken a leadership role in accepting the challenge that ensures American children have the skills they need to succeed in the information-intensive 21st century. Under SSA's national implementation plan, internal guidelines and procedures have been established to allow for the donation of up to an estimated 10,000 excess computers and related tools to classrooms across America during the next 3 years.

State and local education administrators are being contacted and invited to assist in the identification of recipient schools with emphasis on empowerment zones. SSA has begun the transfer of excess computers to many classrooms within the Baltimore metropolitan area and we are happy to report that the reaction to date has been highly positive.

Therefore, SSA will be prepared to lead a national public understanding campaign entitled "Computers for Kids", which would report to the American public. This campaign would be designed to report to the American public on SSA's accomplishments made thus far to improve technology in the classroom through this EO, as well as to serve as an incentive to maximize efforts in the Federal sector. Sharing the "good news" that we are helping the youth of today better prepare for tomorrow is an important message the American public deserves to hear.

The Agency would like to do a press event announcing the donation of the 10,000 computers, celebrating the 1-year anniversary of the EO and the roll-out of events leading up to the Presidents' Summit For America's Future.

Given his interest in technology and improving education for American children, Vice President Gore would be well suited to lead this campaign as we approach the first anniversary of the EO. I would suggest that Richard W. Riley, Secretary of Education and Acting SSA Commissioner, John J. Callahan join him in making this timely report to America.

Please let me know if the Vice President is interested in participating in an official capacity and how we might proceed. SSA's point of contact for this campaign will be Joan Wainwright, Deputy Commissioner for Communications. She can be reached at (410) 965-1720. Thank you.

Department of Health and Human Services

- Girl Power! -- HHS will expand its Girl Power! mentoring campaign by working in partnership with the four African American sororities. The sororities will all announce that they will implement a Girl Power! mentoring program in their undergraduate chapters. The sorority members will work with their local alumni and with national and local organizations like the National Council of Negro Women to mentor young girls in their communities. Secretary Shalala plans to announce this with a ceremony of some sort, including the sorority women, young girls who would be mentored, the national sorority Presidents, and hopefully local youth organizations, probably at Howard University.

In addition, HHS is making a major new commitment to mentorship and teen pregnancy prevention by putting together two new grant programs. They will provide $1 million to national organizations serving boys, and hope to also commit $1 million to organizations serving girls in order to foster mentorship by caring adults and to get young girls and boys to abstain from sex and make the most of their lives. The grants to girl-serving organizations are part of our Girl Power! Campaign. The Secretary may announce this in early May in California.

- Nike PLAYCORPS -- HHS plans to join with Nike to announce that they have vastly expanded their PLAYCORPS program (modeled after AmeriCorps) from 100 coaches in four cities this year to at least 1,000 all over America next year. Piloted last year, PLAYCORPS trains college students and puts them to work in underserved areas to coach/mentor kids all year in recreational leagues. They are paid $500 -- which goes straight toward their tuition. In addition to expanding it, HHS will add a Girl Power! component by training coaches specifically on how to work with and inspire girls. They will also get incentives from Nike to find the barriers keeping girls from participating in sports/physical activity and work with their communities to knock them down. This could be announced in Philadelphia either with the Vice President on April 23 or the President on April 27. We would be joined by Nike, some of the coaches and kids in the program, and possibly a famous athlete to spotlight how important her coach was when she was growing up. In addition to being the site of the Summit, Philadelphia is also the most successful of Nike's four pilot sites for PLAYCORPS.

United States Department of Agriculture

At the Summit, Secretary Glickman, possibly with other Cabinet secretaries, would commit to the following goals by the year 2000 (all goals are still preliminary):

- Food Recovery to Feed the Hungry Initiative -- The amount of excess food that is recovered and gleaned and then distributed to Americans in need will be increased by 25%. This could be announced on April 23, at the first interagency meeting on gleaning.

Department of Veterans Affairs

The VA commits to build upon the success of its initiatives and programs, as well as create new opportunities for service:

- Encourage the expansion -- in number and size -- of the James H. Parke Memorial Youth Scholarship Award designed to provide college funds for student volunteers in VA hospitals (who decides?), and expand VA's participation in the Partnership in Education program at VA facilities across the country. (Is this adopt a school?) How many

Federal Emergency Management Agency

- Spring Break Program for High School Seniors -- FEMA commits to offer service new opportunities to high school seniors. Working with FEMA and a number of partners, these students would help communities prepare for disaster by performing non-structural and minor structural mitigation activities in existing community facilities such as day care centers, schools, and playgrounds, elderly residences and group facilities, and local small businesses. Targeted communities would work with FEMA and state and local emergency officials to identify the natural hazards that threaten their community and at-risk facilities. Local officials would target individual facilities for non-structural and minor structural work each spring. FEMA would coordinate the process and supervise volunteers. Local architects and engineers would volunteer to inspect facilities and design effective non-structural and minor structural mitigation efforts. Local contractors/building trades professionals would volunteer to supervise all structural activities. Local hardware and building supply outlets would donate the materials needed. Local high school seniors would provide the labor during the months of March, April, and May of their senior year. Potential partners include hardware outlets, national architecture and engineering associations, private engineering firms, the AFL-CIO(?), Red Cross, and many others.

School-To-Work

By the year 2001, the School-to-Work program will commit to:

- implement a School-to-Work system in every state in the U.S.
- triple the number of companies involved with School-to-Work, so that approximately 400,000 companies have mentoring initiatives or School-to-Work systems within their organizations and are partnering with their local school districts. These companies will commit to not only having students learn in the workplace but also bringing teachers into the workplace.

Selective Service System

Expand "Serve America" -- Developed last summer through coordination with the Department of Defense and AmeriCorps, Serve America takes advantage of the Selective Service System's routine communication with nearly 5,000 men turning 18 every day to encourage them to serve the Nation. The Selective Service commits to inform young men about service opportunities that arise out of the Summit.

Opportunities for Young People on Selective Service Local Boards -- The Selective Service System commits to offer more young men and women the opportunity to serve as members of Local Boards. Local Board members are uncompensated community volunteers appointed by the Director of Selective Service and acting on behalf of the President. Boards reflect the racial and national origin diversity of the men in the communities they would serve. They train in matters of law, policy, and procedures, standing ready to decide claims for exemptions and deferments should this Nation reinstate a military draft in a crisis. To be a board member, an individual must be at least 18 years old, a citizen of the U.S., not serving on active military duty or in the Reserves, and have good standing in the community.

Department of Justice

- Juvenile Mentoring Program (JUMP) -- The Department will commit $9.6 million to 52 new JUMP sites across the country (27 of these sites are in Summit communities) to support one-on-one mentoring for more than 6,500 at-risk young people. These new awards will more than double the total number of sites funded through DOJ's JUMP program. The program uses community volunteers as mentors, and grantees are required to coordinate their activities with local schools.

- Youth Network -- The Department commits to form a Youth Network, which will provide a forum for young people, national youth-serving organizations, and DOJ to exchange information and ideas about juvenile violence, volunteerism, delinquency prevention and victimization. Through a web site and periodic national meetings, the Network will increase young people's opportunities to participate in local delinquency and juvenile justice programs and policies, as well as to contribute to the national debate on these issues. National organizations involved in the Youth Network will include the National Crime Prevention Council, Boys and Girls Clubs of America, Big Brothers/Big Sisters, National League of Cities, MADD, United National Indian Tribal Youth, Youth Build, and others.

- Public/Private Mentoring Alliance -- The Department of Justice, with the Corporation for National Service, will convene and facilitate a Public/Private Mentoring Alliance of federal agencies and private national organizations supporting mentoring activities. The alliance will coordinate grants and disseminate information nation-wide on the value of and opportunities for mentoring, and explore the possibility of a national training and technical assistance initiative to expand effective mentoring programs across the country.

Community Anti-Drug Coalitions of America with Federal Agencies

The National Youth Academy Community Coalition Building Project is a major initiative that will bring together 200,000 young people, ages 12 to 17, and various sectors of their communities, for the purpose of strategically planning and implementing change both in their environment and in their behavior to reduce substance abuse and substance abuse related violence.

This exciting project will combine CADCA's national network of community coalitions and its established training capacity, with the dynamic peer leadership training methodologies of The City Kids Foundation. The project will also include the integral involvement of five nationally recognized partners:

- Parents' Resource Institute for Drug Education (PRIDE)
- Mothers Against Drunk Driving (MADD)
- National Crime Prevention Council (NCPC)
- Work Group on Health Promotion and Community Development at the University of Kansas.
- The United States Department of Defense (which has committed financial resources as well as the active participation of the Junior R.O.T.C.)
- National Institute on Drug Abuse (NIDA)

The National Youth Academy will train youth and build youth coalitions in more than 100 cities throughout the United States. Intended to be a hard-hitting, far-reaching, peer-based program, this training project will involve more than 20,000 youth -- today's and tomorrow's leaders. It will teach them to become community leaders, challenge them to build local community coalitions, and empower them to create and implement youth-designed projects that directly tackle substance abuse and violence in their communities. The youth leadership training and coalition-building components will be complemented by a one-hour prime time television special; the distribution of educational video curriculums; a ten-city celebration performance tour; and a promotional media campaign highlighting the accomplishments of these youth leaders.

By the year 2000, CADCA and The City Kids Foundation will have provided more than 200,000 young people with community coalition building skills that will allow them to create environmental and behavioral change and to establish community-wide comprehensive responses to the nation's drug and violence problems. An emphasis will be placed on building a diverse and multi-cultural cadre of young people who understand the significance of collaboration and the power of community networking in creating healthy communities.

United States Department of Education

- Commitment: Enlisting Volunteers to be Reading Tutors -- Read*Write*Now! is a summer reading program launched by the Partnership for Family Involvement in Education in the summer of 1995 to prevent a fall-off in reading skills during the summer months. Volunteer reading partners pledge to read and write with a child for 60 minutes a week, and the child pledges to read 30 minutes a day five days a week. Last summer, more than 50 organizations sponsored the reading initiative, and we had over 300,000 volunteer reading partners reading with one million children.

For our commitment, the Department pledges to work with the Partnership to increase both the number of volunteer reading partners and the number of children participating in Read*Write*Now! We are committed to having 450,000 partners reading with 1.5 million children in the summer of 1997. If we succeed, the Department and the partnership will have increased the number of volunteers and the children in the program by one-third. It's Religious organizations who are members of the Department's Partnership for Family Involvement in Education are pursuing opportunities to sign up and organize reading tutors. And the Department plans to have Read*Write*Now! Kits available for the summer to enlist the support of the participants in this summer's challenge.

Additionally, we will use Read*Write*Now! as a springboard to commit the 100,000 work-study tutors called on by President Clinton for his America Reads Challenge. The Department and the Partnership will continue to encourage colleges to enlist their work-study students to serve as reading tutors over the next two years and to sign up additional volunteers for community service. If the America Reads legislation passes, 30,000 reading specialists and tutor coordinates will be available to mobilize and train one million volunteer tutors as part of the America Reads Initiative. (Has this been announced?)

- Commitment: Encouraging Community Service Programs by Increasing the Number of After School Programs -- The Department and the Partnership will work with schools to initiate 1,000 new after-school programs nationwide. This effort will be linked to funding proposed in our FY 1998 budget request of $50 million for the 21st Century Community Learning Centers Program to fund after school, weekend, and summer activities for youth. If the program is funded, we will enlist the support of the business community and community organizations to come together in a school setting to support youth during after-school hours. The program requires significant community involvement. Therefore, the Department and the Partnership will encourage AmeriCorps and Partnership members to volunteer in these after-school programs and help organize them.

Peace Corps

- Through its World Wise Schools program, the Peace Corps will significantly increase its global learning partnerships to at least 10,000 teachers by the year 2000, tripling the current number of partnerships with teachers. World Wise Schools connects currently great serving and returned Peace Corps Volunteers with U.S. students and teachers. The program educates young Americans about the people and cultures of other countries, and exposes them to positive role models who have engaged in public service as Peace Corps Volunteers.

- Every year, thousands of Americans inquire about the possibility of serving as a Peace Corps Volunteer overseas, signaling the tremendous interest among Americans in serving others. The Peace Corps is firmly committed to increasing the opportunities for Americans to serve as Peace Corps Volunteers, and sharing their experiences with fellow Americans. Recognizing that every person may not be immediately suited to overseas service, the Peace Corps will also provide information on domestic service opportunities to those interested in service. An estimated 50,000 people per year will receive information on important service opportunities in the U.S. through the Peace Corps.
- Peace Corps employees, many of whom have served as Peace Corps Volunteers overseas, continue to volunteer in their communities at home. Working in partnership with the Corporation for National Service, more than two dozen Peace Corps employees have recently committed their personal time to serving as literacy tutors to students at Garrison Elementary School in Washington, D.C. Garrison is a participating school in President Clinton's "America Reads" program, an initiative which seeks to insure that every child can read independently by the third grade.

Office of Personnel Management:

- Encourage/develop guidance for flexible work hours for mentoring, etc.; "Success in Workplace" training for students in summer youth-employment; help other agencies with guidance on use of leave, excused absence, flexible work schedules, appropriate use of incentive award authority to recognize employee volunteer service, government-wide recognition.

SUBJECT: Presidents' Summit on America's Future: Department of Justice Commitments

The Department of Justice is making the following commitments in connection with the Presidents' Summit on America's Future. These commitments are in addition to the many ongoing programs and activities that the Department is involved in that encourage and support volunteer and service activities to improve the present and future of our nation's young people.

1. The National "Get Involved America" Initiative

The Department will develop a new, comprehensive, national initiative, "Get Involved America," to reach out to and involve local volunteers in the effort to reduce youth violence in their communities.

"Get Involved America" is based on the premise that many people are looking for opportunities to get involved in the effort to reduce youth violence in their communities, and are seeking answers to the question, "What can I do?" The primary objective of "Get Involved America," therefore, is to help individuals and local organizations learn to recognize and act upon specific opportunities for involvement with youth.

To accomplish this objective, the Department is committing a senior staffperson to work with various national organizations to prepare and distribute through their local affiliates materials targeted at specific audiences, such as public service clubs, religious associations, youth-serving organizations, educational associations and the law enforcement community. These materials will detail a number of specific, practical steps that individuals and organizations can take to reach out to youth, and describe successful efforts undertaken by other, similar organizations. The Department will then continue to support this effort through technical assistance to local organizations.

2. Increased Funds for Juvenile Mentoring Program (JUMP)

The Department of Justice is committing $9.6 million to 52 new JUMP sites across the country (27 of these sites are in Summit communities) to support one-on-one mentoring for more than 6500 at-risk young people. These new awards will more than double the total number of sites funded through DOJ's JUMP program. The program uses community volunteers as mentors, and grantees are required to coordinate their activities with local schools. States will also be encouraged to opt to use state formula funds for mentoring programs.

3. Drug Education for Youth (DEFY)

The Department of Justice will expand the number of DEFY sites that it funds through its Executive Office of Weed and Seed from 3 to 30. DEFY partners DOJ with the Departments of the Navy and the Army to use military role models to promote positive life choices and to reduce the demand for illegal drugs. Each DEFY site offers a summer camp program for about 30 children between the ages of 9 and 12 at a Navy, Marine Corps or other military facility. The camp combines drug education, discipline, self-esteem building and physical fitness. In the following ten months, children who participated in the summer camp are mentored by individuals from the local U.S. Attorneys Office, police department, local university and others, taken to special events, and taught the value of education, health and citizenship. DEFY thus offers young people out of school time activities during the summer and throughout the school year. As expanded, the program will reach 1,000 young people.

4. An Opportunity to Give Back: The Youth Network

As part of its effort to promote youth service, the Department of Justice will be forming a Youth Network. The Youth Network will provide a forum for young people, national youth-serving organizations and DOJ to exchange information and ideas about juvenile violence, volunteerism, delinquency prevention and victimization. Through a web site and periodic national meetings, the Network will increase young people's opportunities to participate in local delinquency and juvenile justice programs and policies, as well as to contribute to the national debate on these issues.

National organizations involved in the Youth Network will include the National Crime Prevention Council, Boys and Girls Clubs of America, Big Brothers/Big Sisters, National League of Cities, MADD, United National Indian Tribal Youth, Youth Build and the Community Anti-Drug Coalition of America.

5. Public/Private Mentoring Alliance

The Department of Justice, with the Corporation for National Service, will convene and facilitate a Public/Private Mentoring Alliance of federal agencies and private national organizations supporting mentoring activities. The Alliance will coordinate grants, disseminate information nationwide on the value of and opportunities for mentoring, and explore a national training and technical assistance initiative to expand effective mentoring programs across the country.

6. Coordinated Technical Assistance for Grantees on Using Volunteers

The Department of Justice will provide technical assistance to Department grantees (and subgrantees) in order to help them recruit, train and retain volunteers. Such technical assistance will include training sessions at grantee conferences, access to resource materials, and other assistance. For example, the Executive Office for Weed and Seed will hold a training session in December, 1997, for its national grantees, which will specifically focus on methods to recruit, train and retain volunteers. This conference will involve approximately 150 volunteer managers, who will in turn reach out to about 1200 additional volunteers. We will also be putting information about volunteer opportunities with our grantees on Department web sites.

For more information, call Nancy Miller at (202) 514-3116 or Katrina Weinig at (202) 514-7473.

PRESIDENTS' SUMMIT ON AMERICA'S FUTUREDepartment of Justice Commitments*1. The National "Get Involved America" Initiative

The Department will develop a new, comprehensive, national initiative, "Get Involved America," based on the premise that many people are looking for opportunities to get involved in the effort to reduce youth violence in their communities, and are seeking answers to the question, "What can I do?" "Get Involved America" will help individuals and local organizations learn to recognize and act upon specific opportunities for involvement with young people.

To accomplish this objective, the Department is committing a senior staffperson to work with various national organizations to prepare and distribute through their local affiliates materials targeted at specific audiences, such as public service clubs, religious associations, youth-serving organizations, educational associations and the law enforcement community. These materials will detail a number of specific, practical steps that individuals and organizations can take to reach out to youth, and describe successful efforts undertaken by other, similar organizations. The Department will then continue to support this effort through technical assistance to local organizations.

2. Increased Funds for Juvenile Mentoring Program (JUMP)

The Department of Justice is committing $9.6 million to 52 new JUMP sites across the country (27 of these sites are in Summit communities) to support one-on-one mentoring for more than 6500 at-risk young people. These new awards will more than double the total number of sites funded through DOJ's JUMP program. The program uses community volunteers as mentors, and grantees are required to coordinate their activities with local schools.

3. Drug Education for Youth (DEFY)

The Department of Justice will expand the number of DEFY sites that it funds through its Executive Office of Weed and Seed from 3 to 30. DEFY partners DOJ with the Departments of the Navy and the Army to use military role models to promote positive life choices and to reduce the demand for illegal drugs. Each DEFY site offers a summer camp program for about 30 children and combines drug education, discipline, self-esteem building and physical fitness.

In the following ten months, the children are mentored by individuals from the local U.S. Attorneys Office, police department, local university and others, taken to special events, and taught the value of education, health and citizenship. As expanded, the program will reach 1,000 young people.

4. An Opportunity to Give Back: The Youth Network

As part of its effort to promote youth service, the Department of Justice will be forming a Youth Network to provide a forum for young people, national youth-serving organizations and DOJ to exchange information and ideas about juvenile violence, volunteerism, delinquency prevention and victimization and to participate in local delinquency and juvenile justice programs and policies, as well as to contribute to the national debate on these issues. The Department will be working with a number of national organizations in this effort.

5. Public/Private Mentoring Alliance

The Department of Justice, with the Corporation for National Service, will convene and facilitate a Public/Private Mentoring Alliance of federal agencies and private national organizations supporting mentoring activities. The Alliance will coordinate grants, disseminate information nationwide on the value of and opportunities for mentoring, and explore a national training and technical assistance initiative to expand effective mentoring programs across the country.

6. Coordinated Technical Assistance for Grantees on Using Volunteers

The Department of Justice will provide technical assistance to Department grantees (and subgrantees) in order to help them recruit, train and retain volunteers. Such technical assistance will include training sessions at grantee conferences, access to resource materials, and other assistance. For example, the Executive Office for Weed and Seed will hold a training session in December, 1997, for its national grantees, which will specifically focus on methods to recruit, train and retain volunteers. This conference will involve approximately 150 volunteer managers, who will in turn reach out to about 1200 additional volunteers. We will also be putting information about volunteer opportunities with our grantees on Department web sites.

For more information, call Nancy Miller at (202) 514-3116 or Katrina Weinig at (202) 514-7473.

- CNS version: To Learn and Grow: A National Partnership for Service and School-Age Care -- Through a large expansion of the To Learn and Grow (TLG) public/private partnership initiative (WHEN NAMED THAT?), the Corporation for National Service will leverage additional resources, promote youth service, and foster new collaborations to expand, enhance, and improve the quality of programs for children and youth during the non-school hours. Specific activities of the TLG partnership include engaging 250,000 children in school-age care programs in a minimum of 100 hours of service each year (ARE THESE INCREASES?), providing a toll-free number and technical assistance materials to every K-12 school in the country, enlisting the help of 10,000 high school and college students to serve as volunteer tutors in programs operating during the non-school hours, and expanding 250 existing national service programs to keep their doors open every weekday after school.

TLG partners include the Department of Health and Human Services' Child Care Bureau, the National Association of Child Care Resource and Referral Agencies, National School-Age Care Alliance, Save the Children, the School-Age Child Care Project at Wellesley College and the YMCA of the USA. (CK W/JOAN)

School-To-Work Program

By the year 2001, the School-to-Work program will commit to:

- implement a School-to-Work system in every state in the U.S.
- triple the number of companies involved with School-to-Work, so that approximately 400,000 companies have mentoring initiatives or School-to-Work systems within their organizations and are partnering with their local school districts. These companies will commit to not only having students learn in the workplace but also bringing teachers into the workplace.
- ensuring that every school district in America has had the opportunity to implement a School-to-Work system within their community.

Department of Justice (go over these with Nancy)

- Juvenile Mentoring Program (JUMP) -- The Department will commit $9.6 million to 52 new JUMP sites across the country ~~(27 of these sites are in Summit communities)~~ to support one-on-one mentoring for more than 6,500 at-risk young people. These new awards will more than double the total number of sites funded through DOJ's JUMP program. The program uses community volunteers as mentors, and grantees are required to coordinate their activities with local schools.
- Youth Network -- The Department commits to form a Youth Network, which will provide a forum for young people, national youth-serving organizations, and DOJ to exchange information and ideas about juvenile violence, volunteerism, delinquency prevention and victimization. Through a web site and periodic national meetings, the Network will increase young people's opportunities to participate in local delinquency and juvenile justice programs and policies, as well as to contribute to the national debate on these issues. National organizations involved in the Youth Network will include the

- Public/Private Mentoring Alliance -- The Department of Justice, with the Corporation for National Service, will convene and facilitate a Public/Private Mentoring Alliance of federal agencies and private national organizations supporting mentoring activities. The alliance will coordinate grants and disseminate information nation-wide on the value of and opportunities for mentoring, and explore the possibility of a national training and technical assistance initiative to expand effective mentoring programs across the country. Several federal agencies, foundations such as the Irvine Foundation and the Pillsbury Foundation, and organizations such as Big Brothers/Big Sisters and 100 Black Men of America will be part of this effort. - Girl Power! -- HHS will expand its Girl Power! mentoring campaign by working in partnership with the four African American sororities. The sororities will all announce that they will implement a Girl Power! mentoring program in their undergraduate chapters. The sorority members will work with their local alumni and with national and local organizations like the National Council of Negro Women to mentor young girls in their communities. In addition, HHS is making a major new commitment to mentorship and teen pregnancy prevention by putting together two new grant programs.
- Nike PLAYCORPS -- HHS will announce with Nike that they will vastly expand their PLAYCORPS program (modeled after AmeriCorps) from 100 coaches in four cities this year to at least 1,000 all over America next year. Piloted last year, PLAYCORPS trains college students and puts them to work in underserved areas to coach/mentor kids all year in recreational leagues. They are paid $500 -- which goes straight toward their tuition. In addition to expanding it, HHS will add a Girl Power! component by training coaches specifically on how to work with and inspire girls. HHS says that this could be announced in Philadelphia either with the Vice President on April 23 or the President on April 27. We would be joined by Nike, some of the coaches and kids in the program, and possibly a famous athlete to spotlight how important her coach was when she was growing up. In addition to being the site of the Summit, Philadelphia is also the most successful of Nike's four pilot sites for PLAYCORPS.

HUD'S COMMITMENT TO SERVICE

ah announced?
how many now?

Neighborhood Networks

HUD will expand its Neighborhood Network Program to create 500 computer centers in assisted or insured housing by the year 2000. These centers will provide the opportunity for more than 50,000 households to gain the necessary job skills to enter the workforce, and expand children's educational skills through a variety of after-school programs, mentoring and internships. HUD will work in partnership with educational, business, and other community organizations to create, operate, fund and sustain these computer learning centers. HUD will help identify resources, coordinate activities, facilitate partnerships, deliver technical assistance, provide information and serve as liaisons between owners, residents, and the local community.

HUD will announce a blanket challenge to owners of assisted housing properties to provide space, motivation and involvement in Neighborhood Networks; America's business leaders to provide equipment and technical assistance to help set up computer centers, prepare people for the job market, and perhaps most importantly, hire those people motivated to learn and to work; and community organizations to help with fundraising, tutoring, mentoring, and accessing local economic opportunities.

NCAA Partnership

HUD has discovered that college campuses can provide enormous resources to inner-city residents. College athletes and coaches are also some of our nation's best role models for young people, particularly America's urban youth. HUD will announce a new partnership with the NCAA to implement a three-tier program in EZ/EC cities: first, National Student Athlete Day; second, Regional Excellence in Academic Preparation camps (REAP) third, Local Community Outreach. Over the next year, a demonstration project of these programs will be put in place in four EZ/EC cities. By the year 2000, HUD and NCAA hope to expand this program to 25 cities. ✓

Building on NCAA's existing 200 REAP camps, HUD will work with the NCAA this summer to expand the REAP Camps in four EZ/ECs to deal with particularly troubled kids, mostly boys, 10-13. HUD will sign a memorandum of understanding solidifying this partnership and will help develop and enlarge this program by attracting volunteers, promoting it within the community, as well as help identify community resources, including additional funding.

HUD Internet Volunteer Center

HUD promotes community service as an integral part of community development. To further that objective, the Department hosts the Federal online "Volunteer Center," a web page clearinghouse that connects citizens with volunteer opportunities in their communities. Available from both HUD's home page and from the White House home page, HUD's Volunteer Center highlights Federal, national, and local community service opportunities. In addition, it allows visitors to submit other volunteer opportunities, for inclusion in the clearinghouse.

Over the next year, HUD will work with other Federal agencies to develop links on their web pages to the HUD Volunteer Center, making it accessible from any web page in the Federal Government, and will continue to expand the local volunteer opportunities listings.

Lead-Based Paint Poisoning Prevention

HUD's Office of Lead Hazard Control will be funding two new initiatives to support parent and community groups to do educational work around lead poisoning. HUD will partner with The Tides Foundation to administer the grants. United Parent's Against Lead, a national association of parents with lead-poisoned children, will lead an educational outreach campaign to ensure that other children are not poisoned. Over the next two years, more than 10,000 families will be educated about lead hazards.

Presidents' Summit for America's Future
P.O. Box 27120
Washington, DC 20038-7120

Dear Ms. Hudson:

Community Anti-Drug Coalitions of America (CADCA) is eager to play a role in the April 1997 Presidents' Summit for America's Future. Our soon-to-be-launched National Youth Academy--Community Coalition Building Project fulfills many of the same objectives as those set forth by the Presidents' Summit, particularly in the area of giving back to the community through community service.

Enclosed you will find the National Youth Academy Concept Paper, along with several publications that detail CADCA's mission and focus. I hope that you will find these materials helpful.

Please feel free to contact me if you have any questions concerning the National Youth Academy project or any of CADCA's other initiatives. We look forward to playing an active role in the Presidents' Summit.

Sincerely,

James E. Copple

THE NATIONAL YOUTH ACADEMY COMMUNITY COALITION BUILDING PROJECT

PRESENTING THE CHALLENGE -- CELEBRATING YOUTH VOICES

The National Youth Academy -- Community Coalition Building Project is a major initiative that will bring together 200,000 young people, ages 12 to 17, and various sectors of their communities, for the purpose of strategically planning and implementing change both in their environment and in their behavior to reduce substance abuse and substance abuse related violence.

This exciting project will combine CADCA's national network of community coalitions and its established training capacity, with the dynamic peer leadership training methodologies of The CityKids Foundation. The project will also include the integral involvement of five nationally recognized partners:

- ☆Parents' Resource Institute for Drug Education (PRIDE)
- ☆Mothers Against Drunk Driving (MADD)
- ☆National Crime Prevention Council (NCPC)
- ☆ Work Group on Health Promotion and Community Development at the University of Kansas.
- ☆The United States Department of Defense (which has committed financial resources as well as the active participation of the Junior R.O.T.C.)
- ☆National Institute on Drug Abuse (NIDA)

The National Youth Academy will train youth and build youth coalitions in more than 100 cities throughout the United States. Intended to be a hard-hitting, far-reaching, peer-based program, this training project will involve more than 200,000 youth -- today's and tomorrow's leaders. It will teach them to become community leaders, challenge them to build local community coalitions, and empower them to create and implement youth-designed projects that directly tackle substance abuse and violence in their communities.

The youth leadership training and coalition-building components will be complemented by a one-hour primetime television special; the distribution of educational video curriculums; a ten-city celebration performance tour; and a promotional media campaign highlighting the accomplishments of these youth leaders.

THE NATIONAL OUTCOME -- A NEW GENERATION OF LEADERSHIP

By the year 2000, CADCA and The CityKids Foundation will have provided more than 200,000 young people with community coalition building skills that will allow them to create environmental and behavioral change and to establish community-wide comprehensive responses to the nation's drug and violence problems. An emphasis will be placed on building a diverse and multi-cultural cadre of young people who understand the significance of collaboration and the power of community networking in creating healthy communities.

THE BACKGROUND -- CALLING YOUTH TO THE CHALLENGE

The partnering institutions recognize that significant and sustainable behavioral and environmental change is essential if we are to tackle the devastating and deeply-rooted problems surrounding substance abuse in our communities. This type of change demands the impassioned involvement of entire communities.

Four years of trend data have pointed to an increase in the use of illicit drugs among America's youth. Now, youth must take the lead within their communities to reverse these trends. Young people are a rich natural resource for change, but they must be provided with the skills to organize and mobilize their peers. If youth are to escape drug use, gang involvement and crime, they need to engage in problem-solving and decision-making processes that include themselves as part of the solution.

Many of the traditional youth-focused drug programs have been designed by adults and have focused on telling youth what they should think. These programs have often failed to provide a mechanism for collaboration among sectors of influence within communities. Now we must provide youth with the tools necessary to effect meaningful and measurable change through partnerships with, and mobilization of, multiple community sectors.

CADCA, CityKids and our other partners will train 200,000 youth to develop a framework for creating and sustaining change in their communities that will contribute to substance abuse and violence prevention. Furthermore, these same skills can then be applied to other arenas of community service involving young people.

PROJECT IMPLEMENTATION -- BUILDING COALITIONS TO EFFECT LASTING CHANGE

The project implementation will include the following components:

♦ National Television Campaign

The first phase of implementation will follow the appearance of a national television special to be aired in the fall of 1997. Capital Cities/ABC is seriously reviewing participation in this effort through either their news or entertainment divisions. The television special will feature young people affected by drug abuse and/or violence and the actions they took to organize their peers to confront their community's drug abuse or violence problem. The special will consist of in-studio and on location segments of youth interviews, as well as segments introducing their compelling personal stories. These stories will serve as examples that highlight both triumphs and tragedies, discourage destructive behavior and stand as beacons of hope for America's youth.

♦ Youth Training and Coalition Building: The National Youth Academies

We will select ten cities for participation in the 1997-98 phase of the project. The components of this phase are as follows:

- Training the Youth Trainers: After the cities are selected, 200 young people from each city will be identified for specialized training in coalition building. These youth will, in turn, be trained as trainers of their local peers. Focusing on leadership skills, training will include intensive sessions on community mobilization, diversity, conflict resolution, addiction and substance abuse and the behavioral and environmental approaches to prevention. Training will take place over a three-month period in each city, and on-going local coalition organization support, technical assistance hotlines and other resources will be provided to these youth through the initiative. A high-powered City Kids Rep performance and training workshop will kick-off the program.
- Building the Youth Coalition: In each city, the 200 core youth will each identify 9 additional youth to be trained, for a total of 2,000 youth to be trained. Over the course of several months, the core group will train the additional youth.
- Local Project Implementation: After the training of the additional youth has been completed, the group of 2000 youth (a core group of 200 trainers and the group of 1,800 they trained) will engage in a community-based project with the assistance of the local community coalition members (including local Junior R.O.T.C., CityKids, and local members of CADCA, NCPC, PRIDE, and MADD groups).

- Celebration Celebrity Concert: Following the project implementation, a celebrity & CityKids concert will be held in each city to celebrate the projects' successes and the youth participants themselves. Each of the 2000 youth will invite their peers to this invitation-only major event. This will create a community-wide enlistment, launch and celebration. CityKids' National Coalition Director-in-Residence, Malik Yoba (star of television series New York Undercover) and CityKids alumnus Donald Faison (star of Clueless television show and film, Waiting to Exhale, and Sugar Hill), Renoly Santiago (star of Dangerous Minds, Hackers, etc.), Dash Mihok (star of the films Sleepers and Romeo and Juliet, Dash can currently be seen on Pearl, the weekly series starring Rhea Perlman), Isaiah Washington (Clockers, Strictly Business), and other celebrity CityKids will be called upon to participate in this high-powered and high-visibility concert.
- Continued Training: Communities will identify key leaders who have emerged during this process so that they may receive further training in the annual youth exercise conducted by the National Crime Prevention Council and by CityKids.
- Television Exposure: ABC News is exploring the chronicling of the projects of the ten tour cities for a fall television special in 1998.

♦ Educational and Outreach Video Distribution

- Short video clips and appropriate curriculums will be distributed to America's secondary schools in conjunction with the airing of the program. The video will be created from the television special and will include a companion teacher/parent guide which will be distributed to 15,000 middle schools and 21,000 high schools across the country. The videos will be rolled out in conjunction with the Training and Celebration Concert Tour phases, described above. The video and discussion guide will include provocative questions to encourage dialogue about substance abuse and violence, and are designed to be used by teachers, parents and youth leaders.

♦ 1998-99 and 1999-2000 One Hundred City Roll-Out

- Following the 1998 special, 50 additional cities will be selected for participation in 1998-99. The training structure utilized in the 1997-98 training phase will be implemented. 100,000 youth will participate in these trainings.
- In 1999-2000, an additional 50 cities will be selected, allowing 100,000 more youth to experience the training.

PROGRAM GOALS -- YOUTH SKILL BUILDING

The National Youth Academy experience and curriculum will focus on specific outcomes. Participants will:

1. Identify and understand their own values related to alcohol, tobacco and other drugs.
2. Identify positive and negative sources of influence related to substance abuse and violence within their own communities.
3. Distinguish between behavioral and environmental change and understand how these two forces interact and influence the other.
4. Identify community assets that will assist in preventing drug use and violence.
5. Identify various sources for change (i.e. business, schools, faith communities, etc.) that must be engaged to produce behavioral and environmental change.
6. Identify the various risk factors that contribute to ATOD use and violence.
7. Access community needs assessments and indicator data that define the nature of the substance abuse and violence problems within their community.
8. Create a collaborative strategic plan involving multiple sectors and implement an appropriate action plan for environmental and community change around a specific area of substance abuse or violence within their community.
9. Identify and implement necessary strategies to mobilize appropriate community sectors for implementation of their community plan.
10. Evaluate the effectiveness of their strategy.
11. Identify appropriate ways to celebrate their successes.

These outcomes can be applied in a variety of community arenas. For example, youth coalitions may want to organize and mobilize around the following areas:

1. Alcohol and illicit drug use in community festivals.
2. Alcohol and tobacco policies that surround school and parent activities.
3. Teenage access to alcohol or tobacco products in their community.
4. Alcohol and tobacco billboard advertising.
5. Explicit and implicit drug and alcohol messages from popular radio stations.

6. Graffiti removal in and around schools.
7. A youth job program.
8. Youth access to recreational facilities.
9. Mentoring programs with business leaders or other community leaders.
10. Reducing the number of retail liquor store outlets in neighborhoods.
11. Youth recognition or award programs.
12. Neighborhood park clean-up activities for non-athletic students in schools.
13. Alternative youth activities for non-athletic students in schools.
14. Parent-youth conferences to enhance cross-generational understanding.
15. Promoting and creating multi-cultural awareness activities and understanding the assets of diversity.

GO-FORWARD

This $8 million project has been designed in specific phases, with foundation and corporate partner involvements in each phase. The Robert Wood Johnson Foundation has committed $500,000 for the creation of the 1997 television special and has expressed an interest in further involvement in the youth academy. The United States Department of Defense has also committed substantial resources to this project. The Work Group on Health Promotion and Community Development at the University of Kansas has committed to the planning and evaluative phases of this initiative.

FEDERAL AGENCY COMMITMENTS TO SUMMIT

All Agencies

Federal agencies will expand their commitment to adopt and establish partnerships with schools in their communities by increasing the number of agency-school relationships from approximately 1,500 schools to 2,000 schools by the year 2000. Working through partnerships established by their agencies with schools across the country, Federal employees work closely with schools in a variety of ways -- such as volunteering as mentors and tutors, purchasing needed equipment for schools, and holding career days.

Department of the Treasury

- GREAT Program -- Treasury commits to increase the number of students educated in the GREAT curriculum by 10 percent -- or more than 35,000 additional students -- each year through the year 2000. GREAT is a Federal, State, and Local partnership that teaches elementary and middle school children to avoid joining gangs and violence. More than 1 million American children have been educated through this program. Currently, GREAT educates 350,000 students annually, and more than 2,000 law enforcement officers have elected to join the program as part of community policing initiatives.

~~Some are doubtful because children's committee is weak.~~

- Voluntary Income Tax Assistance -- Treasury commits to assist 400,000 more taxpayers by the year 2000 through its voluntary income tax assistance program -- more than a 20 percent increase from 1996 levels. For 27 years, the IRS has organized volunteers to assist poor and non-English speaking people in paying their taxes. Last year, at over 8,000 sites across the nation, 47,000 volunteers assisted 1.9 million taxpayers in completing their forms.

including college students and tax profs

Savings Bonds -- Treasury is committed to reaching more Americans through the Savings Bond program by increasing the number of volunteers on its National Volunteer Committee by 10%. Since WWII, savings bonds have been a stable and cost effective source of financing for the Federal Government, while providing a convenient and safe opportunity for consumers to save. Almost half of all savings bonds sales -- several billion dollars a year -- are sold with the support of the Treasury Department's National Volunteer Committee. This committee, formed by President Kennedy in 1963, includes business executives and leaders from labor, education, government and health care. The Committee has been instrumental in making savings bonds available to millions of Americans through the payroll savings plan. In recent years, however, savings bond sales have declined substantially with the proliferation of alternative investment options and the changing nature of the American workforce.

Office of Personnel Management -- OPM commits to give Federal agencies the personnel tools they need to support their employees' participation in community service. OPM will publicize the wide array of family-friendly leave and work scheduling flexibility available to Federal employees and actively encourage their use in support of volunteer service.

Department of Veterans Affairs Volunteer Service

March 25, 1997

- Over the past 50 years, millions of Department of Veterans Affairs Volunteer Service (VAVS) volunteers have donated more than 455 million hours of service.
- Last year, all VAVS volunteers contributed a total of 13.7 million hours, of which 90% (or 12.3 million hours) were from 98,381 regularly scheduled volunteers.
- In 1996, the total number of VAVS volunteer hours equated to 6,569 full-time employee equivalent (FTEE) positions.
- The current monetary worth of the 13,663,755 hours from all VAVS volunteers is over $175 million (Independent Sector formula estimates a calendar year 1995 volunteer hour at $12.84).
- Last year, 10,138 student volunteers donated their time to volunteer service. The monetary worth of these student volunteer hours to the hospitals they served was $130,172.
- Today, almost 11,000 young people volunteer at VA facilities nationwide.
- The VA commits to increasing the number of VAVS student volunteers by 50%, to 15,200 student volunteers by the year 2000.

MEMORANDUM

TO: STEPHEN SILVERMAN
DIANA FORTUNA

FROM: VIRGINIA COX

SUBJECT: Service Summit

4/23-

Just to follow up on a few items. I want to make sure that Melinda and the appropriate people have slots saved for the groups that we are partnering with for Girl Power! As we discussed, these announcements should be held for the Secretary to make.

List of Partners with HHS

1. African American Sororities
Zeta Phi Beta
Sigma Gamma Rho
Alpha Kappa Alpha
Delta Sigma Theta

Zeta is taking the lead on this mentoring project. I do not think that they need to be invited to the summit, but their commitment should definitely be listed. I will double check on this and get back to you.

2. Nike

They are all set to do an announcement in Philadelphia with the Secretary. I think this could get a lot of play. They said they would hire a local pr firm, pull together nice B roll of kids playing basketball, etc.

when 4/23 →

We are also working with the Women's College Basketball Association. I will let you know their commitment so that it can be listed.

Stephen, the Secretary really wants the University of Wisconsin folks (2) invited. Please call me about this. I have not heard back from Melinda and am getting a little nervous. Thanks.

Lastly, I think you both know that the Secretary would like to go to the summit (and is planning on it, actually). She made a commitment to Arianna Huffington to do some event with her on Monday night. Do either of you know what this might be? I can pull together sub cabinet folks to go if you need. Just let me know.

Thanks.

Subject: USDA COMMITMENTS TO BE MADE AT THE SERVICE SUMMIT

This memorandum specifies five concrete ways USDA will begin new efforts, and expand existing efforts, that promote citizen service and volunteerism.

1. Food Recovery and Gleaning Initiative: The Department will set an overall goal of significantly increasing the amount of excess food recovered and distributed to Americans in need. To meet this goal:

- a) USDA will sign a Memorandum of Understanding (M.O.U.) with the National Collaboration of Youth (NCY), an umbrella group for that includes such youth organizations as the Boy and Girl Scouts, Big Brothers/Big Sisters, YMCA of the USA, and the Boys and Girls Clubs; the M.O.U. will specify how the millions of participants in NCY member organizations will be encouraged to volunteer to recover food.
- b) The Secretary will hold a National Summit on Food Recovery, which will be modeled on the President's Summit on America's Future. The Secretary will invite former agriculture secretaries and members of Congress of both parties, as well as leaders from states, counties, cities, Indian tribes, nonprofit organizations, religious groups, large corporations, and small businesses, to come to the National Summit on Food Recovery to make specific commitments as to how they will increase the recovery of excess food.
- c) The Administration will declare a National Week of Food Recovery during the summer, during which food recovery volunteer projects will occur nationally.
- d) The USDA Agricultural Market Service will work with farmers' markets nationally to increase the recovery of food at such markets, including those held at Federal agencies.
- f) USDA will forge a partnership with the non-profit groups Rock & Wrap It Up and Food Chain to enable students to volunteer to recover excess food from the School Lunch Program and from large concerts.
- g) Rural Empowerment Zones and Enterprise Communities will build food recovery activities into the implementation of their strategic plans.
- h) USDA will provide technical assistance to any school district in the nation willing to encourage students to volunteer to recover food.

2. "This Land Is Your Land" Environmental Service Initiative: The Department's overall goal is to engage 26,000 more American a year in voluntary environmental service and to provide conservation education to half a million school children by the year 2000. To achieve these goals, the Department will:

- a) Create an Urban Resources Environmental Initiative in the District of Columbia that will plant trees, increase conservation education, and form an "environmental laboratory" at the John Burroughs Elementary School; this effort will rely heavily on community volunteers.
- b) Increase the number of volunteers serving in the Forest Service Volunteer Program from the current level of 80,095 to 85,095 (a 6% increase) by fiscal year 1997 and to 100,000 by fiscal year 1998 (a 25% increase); volunteers maintain and host campgrounds, plant trees and seed damaged areas, make recreation areas accessible for Americans with disabilities, staff visitor centers, build and repair habitat structures, and restore recreation facilities.
- d) The USDA Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) will increase the number of volunteers in its "Earth Team" program from 14,000 to 20,000 (and increase the diversity of these volunteers) in order to double its current goal of providing conservation education to 250,000 school children by setting a new goal of providing half a million school children with conservation education. actual?
- e) NRCS will improve the neighborhood environment around one million homes through the "Backyard Conservation Campaign" that will encourage homeowners to utilize conservation practices that adapt readily to nearly every backyard; this effort will incorporate a strong inter-generational tie and foster joint conservation activities between adults and children

3. Increase in Structured After-School Activities for Youth: USDA will work with state cooperative extension services and the National 4-H Foundation to expand the 4-H Program to engage an additional 300,000 youth in after-school activities. To meet this goal, the 4-H program will recruit an additional 20,000 teenage and adult volunteers who will serve as program coordinators and mentors. USDA will also provide assistance to the Future Farmers of America, the National Farmers Union, the Nature Conservancy, and the American Heart Association to help those organizations meet their goals to increase after-school activities that provide mentoring, environmental education, and nutrition education to youth.

4. USDA "Volunteer Central" Computer Matching Service: USDA will create a new Web site to match up volunteers with service opportunities fighting hunger, improving the environment, and boosting rural communities.

5. Nationwide employee volunteer program: Secretary Glickman will encourage managers throughout the Department nationally to utilize existing policies that allow flexible work schedules for USDA employees to volunteer for projects such as those aimed at gleaning and recovering excess food, tutoring and mentoring youth, protecting the environment, boosting urban/rural links, promoting youth development and after-school activities, connecting schools to the Internet, and fighting hunger; the Secretary will also encourage agencies to utilize their existing authorities to provide non-monetary awards to recognize employees who perform community service.
