PREFACE TO HEALTH CARE CHOICES FOR TODAY'S CONSUMER
by HILLARY RODHAM CLINTON

For nearly two years, Americans from all walks of life have been engaged in a historic discussion about our nation's health care system. No subject resonates so deeply with so many different kinds of people. Our health care system affects parents who worry about their children and aging relatives. It affects workers who worry about their livelihoods and business owners who worry about their companies' productivity. It affects every local, state, and federal official who worries that rising health care costs are consuming our budgets and exploding the deficit.

For all of these reasons we have a collective responsibility as Americans to work for reform in the future. We also have a responsibility as individuals to take greater responsibility for our own well-being.

We can start by becoming better informed health care consumers. This publication provides consumers with valuable information they can use in making decisions about their own health care.

Each of us needs to be involved in the health care decisions affecting our families. Each of us needs to be educated about the quality of the care we receive and how much we pay for it.

7. Is it harder to teach kids values today than it was when you were being raised by your parents?

8. Parenting brings out so many deep-seated emotions, fears, and conflicts. What have been your biggest emotional hurdles?

9. How does your parenting style differ from your husband's? Who's the stricter parent? You or the President?

10. What parenting rules do you break most?

11. If you could turn back the clock, what three things would you change about your life as a mom?

12. What is the appropriate role that the government should play in ensuring a better, safer world for our children? What is a parent's responsibility in achieving this goal?

Thank you.

Sincerely,
