JUSTIFICATIONS FOR RECOMMENDED VISITS

STATE/OFFICIAL VISITS

President Menem of Argentina State Visit

President Menem is a key ally of your Administration; under him Argentina has become a model of economic reform and positive participation in regional and global affairs. With its upcoming deployment to Western Sahara, Argentina will be the single largest contributor of troops and police to UN peacekeeping efforts. Argentina has supported you in pursuing our human rights concerns vis-a-vis Cuba and on nuclear nonproliferation, post-India/Pakistan.

President Benjamin Mkapa of Tanzania State Visit

Tanzania has taken large and sometimes very difficult economic and political reform steps over the past six years. President Mkapa has encouraged a free and more vocal press, has improved tolerance of political dissent, has helped lead efforts to expand regional cooperation in East and Central Africa, and has been instrumental in reforming the economic system from a state-controlled socialist system to a free-market system. Mkapa attended the Entebbe Heads of State Summit, and Tanzania is key to regional issues that are of concern to us. Mkapa and his government have cooperated closely with us in the aftermath of the August 7 bombings at our embassies in Tanzania and Kenya.

Prime Minister Obuchi of Japan Official Visit

The security and economic well being of Asia depends on a healthy U.S.-Japan relationship. We have had continuing series of meetings and discussions with senior Japanese officials including regular meetings between you and the Japanese Prime Minister on the issue of Asian and Japanese economic recovery efforts. As part of that regular contact, you invited former Prime Minister Hashimoto for an Official Visit to Washington. When Hashimoto had to cancel the Official Visit last July, you telephonically reissued the invitation to Hashimoto's successor, Obuchi. In a recent working meeting in NYC, you issued a more formal invitation to Obuchi for an Official Visit in early 1999.

The Japanese have indicated that the Diet schedule will probably permit Obuchi to visit Washington in either very early January or late April-early May of 1999. A first-week in May visit fits the current pace of meetings between you and the Prime Minister.

President Goncz of Hungary Official Visit

This visit would allow you to celebrate Hungary as a new NATO ally, one that has been highly supportive of the President's efforts to bring peace to the Balkans and to combat international organized crime. It would also allow you to honor President Arpad Goncz, a playwright and veteran of the 1956 uprising, who has been instrumental in pressing Hungary's reintegration into the family of democratic nations. Goncz served hard time in jail in the 1950s and early '60s, before becoming a leader of the democratic reform movement in Hungary in the '70s and '80s. He is one of the most beloved figures in Hungarian politics and commands considerable respect among Hungarian-Americans.

OFFICIAL WORKING VISITS

President Ben Ali of Tunisia
Official Working Visit

You had agreed to this visit for the last half of 1998 but a date could not be arranged. We should host the visit early in the year.

President Chirac of France
Official Working Visit

A Chirac visit would strengthen ties with our oldest and one of our most important allies, advance our interests on European and key regional issues in advance of the NATO summit and solidify your already close ties with the French President. In addition to achieving progress on NATO-France issues, it would serve to reduce French resistance to the U.S.-EU relationship.

Tripartite Presidency of Bosnia and Herzegovina
Official Working Visit

Bosnia has just completed its third round of elections since the signing of the Dayton Accords in late 1995. At the national level, Bosnia has a tripartite presidency. Alija Izetbegovic, the holder of the Muslim seat) was re-elected to the presidency. Croat Ante Jelavic and Serb Zivko Radisic were elected for the first time to the joint presidency.

Given that two of the members of the joint presidency are new to the office, we believe it is imperative that we instill in them early on, along with Izetbegovic, the necessity of close cooperation. All three are uniquely placed to strengthen common institutions, promote refugee returns, and other important Dayton goals.

The United States has made a significant investment in bringing peace to Bosnia. It is extremely important to keep the momentum going to ensure that Dayton's goals are fulfilled. A presidential visit would underscore the critical importance that the United States places on cooperation within the joint presidency in Bosnia, and is so doing would advance U.S. policy interests on a high priority matter.

President Arzu of Guatemala
Official Working Visit

An Arzu visit would reinforce U.S. support for Arzu's success in implementation of the political-military dimensions of the 1996 peace accord ending Guatemala's 36-year internal struggle. The implementation included the demobilization of approximately 3,000 guerrillas and a significant improvement in the human rights situation in Guatemala. Additionally, this year will be a turning point for the economic phase of peace accord implementation, particularly the tax reform needed to boost the government's spending on social programs and infrastructure. Guatemala is a USG policy priority for the region; we have pledged $260 million in additional assistance over four years to support the peace process. A visit would underscore U.S. interest in Guatemalan enactment of economic reforms pledged by the government.

Premier Zhu Rongji of the People's Republic of China
Official Working Visit

During your recent visit to China, you invited Premier Zhu Rongji to visit the United States to continue our strategic engagement with China. Zhu accepted your invitation in principle. The Vice President has also invited Zhu to co-chair a session of the U.S.-China Environment and Development Forum during such a visit. Zhu's visit would carry forward the momentum in U.S.-China relations generated by the two summits which have taken place over the last year, and continue our policy of making high-level meetings with China a regular feature of our relationship. A visit by Zhu would especially help to further key U.S. goals such as China's accession to WTO, financial sector reform, climate change, and cooperation on the Asian financial Crisis.

WORKING VISITS

President Lucinschi of Moldova
Working Visit

A visit would showcase Moldova's achievements in democratic and market reforms. In the past four years, Moldova has held two democratic elections judged to be free and fair. Moldova's land reform program, financed by USAID, is the most far reaching in the NIS. Also, as with other NIS countries, Moldova is a potential source of weapons of mass destruction technology. The transfer in 1997 of 21 nuclear-capable MIG aircraft to the United States rather than rogue states demonstrated responsible behavior, which we need to extend to other areas. A White House meeting would recognize Moldova's achievements, which are a model for the other NIS, and improve our chances of resolving future problems as they arise.

Prime Minister Panday of Trinidad and Tobago
Working Visit

Trinidad and Tobago, a multiethnic two-island nation of 1.3 million people, is a strong and reliable friend of the United States. Its oil-based economy -- the second largest in the Caribbean -- has attracted significant U.S. investment, continues to diversify and has remained strong despite the slump in world oil prices. Prime Minister Panday has intensified counternarcotics cooperation across the board and well beyond levels we have achieved elsewhere in the Caribbean. Our relationship on climate change is more difficult, with Trinidad and Tobago complicating efforts within the Summit of Americas process and elsewhere to promote the meaningful participation of developing countries. A meeting with you would demonstrate our political support for the very positive actions T&T has taken on counternarcotics and allow us to drive home your message regarding developing country participation in reducing greenhouse gas emissions.

First Lady International Travel

May 19, 1999

The President, with the support of the Secretary of State, often asks the First Lady to undertake overseas missions to promote American values and interests around the world. Since 1993, she has visited more than 60 countries. When Mrs. Clinton visits various countries, her travel is geared to achieve particular U.S. foreign policy objectives.

Mrs. Clinton has visited refugee camps and underscored our commitment to United Nations objectives; advocated for women's empowerment; emphasized the significance of improved educational opportunities for women; supported our troops stationed abroad and peace process efforts; discussed small business development and the value of microcredit loans to enhance the economic independence of working; encouraged public private partnership models; and, stressed the critical elements of a civil society: health care for women and children, educational opportunity for all, respect for human rights, and expanding economic opportunity.

As with the international travel of other senior government officials, relevant governmental agencies support the First Lady's overseas travel. Thus, Mrs. Clinton travels onboard DoD aircraft and the State Department and local embassies pay all other travel-related costs of the mission (e.g., hotel, ground transportation, per diem, etc.).

United States Secret Service Protection for First Ladies

By law [18 U.S.C. § 3056], the First Lady receives the protection of the United States Secret Service because she is the spouse of the President. This protection is 24 hours a day, without regard to her activities -- official, political or personal. Like former First Ladies, this protection is authorized for life for Mrs. Clinton. Thus, for the remainder of her life, whether as a private citizen or as a potential or successful candidate for the Senate, the Secret Service will continue to provide protection to Mrs. Clinton as the current or former spouse of the President.

Qs&As:

- Q: Can the First Lady decline Secret Service protection?
A: As a legal matter, yes; as a practical matter no. The First Lady has consistently heeded the experienced advice of the Service in security matters.
- Q: How much does this protection cost the taxpayers?
A: We don't know. [The Service answers questions about the protection of the protectees].
- Q: Don't you think the Service protection unfairly disadvantages her opponents by bringing the "trappings of the White House," thereby elevating her?
A: Secret Service protection of a First Lady is a fact of life; voters vote based upon the issues, not on their mode of transportation or level of protection.
- Q: If the First Lady takes up residence in New York, do the taxpayers have to pay for Secret Service protection of that residence?
A: Yes, consistent with their statutory obligation to provide protection.

Use of Government Aircraft

The Secret Service has consistently recommended that the First Lady travel on government aircraft for security reasons. Pursuant to that recommendation Mrs. Clinton travels by government aircraft without regard to the nature of her travel -- official, political or personal. When the First Lady travels for official business, the government pays for her travel; when the First Lady travels for political events, the government is reimbursed by the host political committee based upon the formula set forth in the FEC regulations or the Hatch Act regulations, as required. (When the First Lady travels personally, the Clintons reimburse the government based upon the formula set forth in OMB A-126). [Additional Background: The FEC regulations govern her travel on behalf of Presidential candidates, i.e., POTUS, VPOTUS, and would likewise govern her travel as a candidate for the Senate should she run; the Hatch Act regulations govern government officials' travel for non-campaign political events, i.e., party building events, other candidate's campaign events, other political events].

Qs&As:

- Q: Why does the First Lady travel on government aircraft?
A: The Secret Service has recommended that she travel on government aircraft and the First Lady has followed its advice.
- Q: Other First Ladies traveled on commercial aircraft, why can't Mrs. Clinton?
A: The Secret Service has recommended against the First Lady traveling on commercial aircraft for a host of security reasons; Mrs. Clinton obviously respects their expertise in these types of matters.
- Q: Are the taxpayers fully reimbursed for the costs of the First Lady's travel for political travels?
A: The First Lady complies with the government regulations that set forth specific reimbursement requirements for political travel on government aircraft.
[Additional Background: These requirements are similar to those apply to travel by other Senate candidates on corporate aircraft - thus, the First Lady is not advantaged by her government role since other candidates flying on corporate aircraft make the same level of reimbursement for their travel.]
- Q: How will the taxpayers be reimbursed for Mrs. Clinton's campaign travel?
A: The FEC regulations require candidates' campaign committees, which would include Mrs. Clinton's campaign should she run, to reimburse the government at the first class rate for the candidate's travel and at the commercial coach rate for the travel of others who accompany the candidate for the purposes of engaging in political activity.
- Q: Who pays for the costs of Chelsea Clinton's travel when she travels with the First Lady?
A: If Ms. Clinton accompanies the First Lady on a campaign trip, the FEC regulations require the campaign committee to reimburse the government for her travel-related costs.
[Additional Note: When the First Lady travels officially, any additional costs incurred because of Ms. Clinton's travel is paid by the Clintons personally].
- Q: It appears that the First Lady has taken an unusually high number of foreign trips, particularly to countries with strong ethnic representations in New York (i.e., Ireland, Israel, and soon Italy). Aren't these trips politically motivated and why should the taxpayers have to pay for such travel?
A: Since 1993, Mrs. Clinton has traveled to over 65 countries. She travels to further democracy and American values overseas. She has and will continue to serve as one of the most able advocates for the American interests abroad and for the fair and enlightened treatment of women and children's rights world-wide. The First Lady's international efforts long pre-dated any consideration of whether she should seek elected office.

White House Staff and Use of Government Resources

Employees of the Executive Office of the President, including White House employees, may engage in political activity during the business day and in a federal building. White House policy requires employees to perform a minimum of forty hours of official work each week (unless they are on vacation time) in addition to any political activity in which they elect to engage on their own time. Thus, White House employees only may assist the First Lady, if she decides to run for office, on their own time. Federal employees also are prohibited from using government resources (without reimbursement) for political activity. To ensure compliance with this law, there is a limited amount of political equipment (non-government resources) at the White House.

Qs&As

- Q: Does the First Lady intend to use any federal employees to support her Senate campaign?
A: If Mrs. Clinton decides to run, she will hire a campaign staff. To the extent that White House employees want to help on her campaign, they must do so on their own time, while putting in forty hours of official work. Mrs. Clinton obviously will not prohibit White House employees from volunteering their own time on behalf of her campaign effort.
- Q: What about right now, when she is not a candidate -- is she using White House to assist in her exploration of a candidacy?
A: The First Lady is not a candidate and any costs directly related to her exploration, will be properly paid for by the Exploratory Committee, including travel-related costs. [The Committee has/will hire(d) a spokesperson to address press inquiries related to her potential candidacy for the Senate.]
- Q: Doesn't using White House staff raise a significant appearance problem in any event, since it will look like taxpayers are being asked to pay for work on her campaign?
A: No. The Hatch Act has always anticipated political activity by White House employees -- they have never been prohibited from working on campaigns or engaging in political activity, provided they did not use government resources to assist in those activities and otherwise put in a full week's work. Moreover, White House staffers work far in excess of a standard work week; they take their obligation to perform forty hours of official work each week seriously.

White House Staff Traveling with the First Lady

When the First Lady travels, she has one aide who travels officially, without regard to the nature of the trip (i.e., official, political or personal). This aide coordinates the logistics of the First Lady's travel and other movements with the Secret Service and others during the trip. In addition, the First Lady traditionally travels with a press spokesperson and a senior staff member to ensure that issues that arise from her role as First Lady are properly addressed and there is effective liaison with the White House on official matters during the travel. The costs of these individuals' travel is determined based upon the nature of the trip (i.e., if the trip is official, the government pays their travel-related costs; if the trip is political, the host political committee pays their travel-related costs). Other individuals travel with the First Lady depending upon the purpose and extent of the trip, as well as the matters she will address.

Qs&As

- Q: Does the First Lady intend to have federal employees travel with her during her Senate candidacy?

A: When the First Lady travels on political or official trips, she always travels with a trip director[, who coordinates her movements with the Secret Service and others] and with a senior staff member [who serves as a liaison to the White House to coordinate and ensure the First Lady is able to remain abreast of her on-going duties while she is traveling]. These individuals will continue travel should Mrs. Clinton campaign for the Senate. Other travelers will likely be campaign staff unless her trip also involves official events, in which case other appropriate White House staff will also travel.

- Q: Do the taxpayers have to pay for federal employees' travel costs when they travel with the First Lady on campaign trips?

A: Taxpayers pay the travel-related costs of only one staff member; others are paid for by the host political committee. Because the role of the trip director is to coordinate the First Lady's movements with the Secret Service and others, the White House must pay that staff member's travel-related costs; travel-related costs for all other travelers who accompany the First Lady are paid based upon the nature of the trip (i.e., for political trips, the host political committee pays the travel-related costs of the other travelers; for official trips, the government pays these costs).
