Message from the Administrator

to AID staff

On Tuesday, March 16, USAID will honor our First Lady, Hillary Rodham Clinton, for her unfailing support for international development. The ceremony will occur in the Atrium from 2:00 pm to approximately 3:15 pm.

I invite you to join me in thanking Mrs. Clinton for speaking out for the poor and powerless around the world, and for being a constant friend to this Agency. I am very proud that Mrs. Clinton has understood and publicly praised USAID's work, and I look forward to thanking her in your presence.

The plaque that will be unveiled on March 16 includes the First Lady's statement that, "USAID's humanitarian and development work reflects our nation's most cherished values: the belief that every citizen, regardless of where that man or woman comes from, who their parents might be, what kind of village or family they call home, is entitled to his or her rightful share of personal, political, economic, and civic power." The March 16 ceremony will be an occasion to celebrate these values and our efforts to help make them a reality around the globe.

In addition to the First Lady, Deputy Administrator Hattie Babbitt and myself, others on the program include the Ambassador of Uganda, Dr. Edith Grace Ssempala, Rep. Sonny Callahan (R-AL), and Sen. Patrick Leahy (D-VT). The audience will include USAID staff; members of the diplomatic corps; Agency partners from the U.S. higher education, for-profit, and private voluntary communities; representatives of United Nations and multilateral agencies; members of Congress and their staff; and other members of the foreign affairs community.

I look forward to seeing you on Tuesday in the Atrium. Thank you.

J. Brain Atwood

Point of Contact: Elise Storck, LPA/PL, 2-4408

"USAID'S humanitarian and development work reflects our nation's most cherished values: the belief that every citizen, regardless of where that man or woman comes from, who their parents might be, what kind of village or family they call home, is entitled to his or her rightful share of personal, political, economic, and civic power.

Through USAID, our government is committed to expanding the circle of human dignity to every human being - men and women, boys and girls. There cannot be true democracy unless women are given the opportunity to take responsibility for their own lives. There cannot be true democracy unless all citizens are able to participate fully in the lives of their countries."

May all who pass through these portals recognize the invaluable contribution to world wide development made by the First Lady of the United States, Hillary Rodham Clinton.

Preferred Invitation Letter from the First Lady to CEOs:

Dear [CEO]:

Please join J. Brian Atwood, Administrator of the U.S. Agency for International Development (USAID) and me on March 16, 1999, to officially launch a global public - private Partnership to eliminate vitamin A deficiency. This event will mark the beginning of an important commitment to improving the lives of women and children in developing countries by reducing vitamin A deficiency worldwide.

Over 100 million children under five years of age are vitamin A deficient. As a result, these children suffer dramatically increased risks of death and illness. Improving access to vitamin A can reduce child mortality by up to thirty percent.

The United States, through the U.S. Agency for International Development (USAID), has made vitamin A a child survival priority. Forging new public and private partnerships will advance our capacity to leverage our resources to address this important international public health problem.

I invite you to join us for a lunch in the Polaris Room at the Ronald Reagan Building from 12-2 p.m., as we embark upon a partnership that will establish a united global commitment to save the lives of millions of children.

Please RSVP no later than March 1, 1999 to Nupur Parekh at (202) 712-4007. Invitations are non-transferable.

DRAFT INVITATION LETTER

Dear [CEO]:

I am pleased to invite you to join me for a lunch meeting on March 16, 1999, to officially launch the USAID Global Vitamin A Public - Private Partnership. This event will mark the beginning of an important commitment to improving the lives of women and children in developing countries by reducing vitamin A deficiency worldwide.

Over 100 million children under five years of age are vitamin A deficient. As a result, these children suffer dramatically increased risks of death and illness. Improving the vitamin A status of deficient children can reduce child mortality by up to thirty percent.

The United States, through the U.S. Agency for International Development (USAID), has made vitamin A a child survival priority. Forging new public and private partnerships will advance our capacity to leverage our resources to address this important international public health problem.

I invite you to join us as we embark upon a partnership that will establish a united global commitment to save the lives of millions of children.

Hillary Rodham Clinton

The Global Vitamin A Effort: A Declaration for a Global Alliance
MARCH 1999

Whereas, worldwide more than 100 million young children are vitamin A deficient, increasing their risk of blindness, severe illness and death;

Whereas, the scientific basis of vitamin A in child survival is universally acknowledged, so that increasing vitamin A levels in deficient children can save the lives of more than one million children under the age of five each year;

Whereas, the combined forces of the public and private sector can greatly increase the chances of reaching the targeted goal to eliminate vitamin A deficiency as a public health problem;

Whereas, a unique partnership has been established, comprised of international agencies, private sector food producers and pharmaceutical companies, non-governmental organizations, academic institutions, and civic organizations, combined with donor organizations and developing country governments, to form a global Vitamin A Alliance; and

Whereas, the Global Alliance partners are committed to work together through a global strategy to expand vitamin A delivery through food fortification, supplementation, nutrition education and other dietary strategies in order to maximize child survival.

It is heretofore determined that the undersigned partners are committed to combating vitamin A deficiency by:

- Exploring partnership opportunities that mobilize resources and expertise to increase the availability of vitamin A and reduce child mortality among targeted populations;
- Collaborating with partners to establish sustainable delivery systems which integrate vitamin A with maternal and child health programs in developing countries;
- Collaborating with partners to identify areas of mutual interest in research and technology development;
- Supporting the development of nutrition education campaigns and health messages to promote the consumption of vitamin A-rich foods; and
- Collaborating with partners to promote policies and programs, overcome barriers, and develop strategies to establish or expand the distribution of vitamin A-rich foods that will contribute to health, development, and economic prosperity of populations worldwide.
